MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

28 APRIL 1986

Libya

Libya is "seriously" considering joining the Warsaw Pact because the U.S. air raids have made neutrality "useless" for a small country, Information Secretary Muhammad Sharaf al-Din al-Fayturi stated in a 27 April interview with AFP. The Soviet Union has invited Libya's foreign liaison secretary to visit Moscow, Tripoli television disclosed earlier. As for Soviet arms supplies, the UAE's AL-ITTIHAD reported 26 April that Libya recently received new batteries of "improved" SAM-5's which are more accurate and have greater anti-jamming capability than the SAM-5's supplied to Libya before the U.S. raids, according to WAM. In the Soviet Union, a commentary in the 27 April edition of SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA sharply denied Western reports that the USSR knew in advance of the U.S. attack but did nothing to prevent it.

In another development, the Foreign Liaison Bureau informed EEC ambassadors 26 April that Libya has "no option but to reciprocate" the measures adopted by EEC countries, Tripoli television reported. The Europeans were told that Libya sees no justification for the EEC measures and that Libya has "no links" with terrorism. Reporting the arrival in Tripoli of Libyan students expelled from the United Kingdom, Voice of Greater Arab Homeland radio accused the British Government of waging a "racist campaign" against Arabs in general and Libyans in particular.

On Libyan-Egyptian relations, MENA cited a 26 April Cairo AL-AHRAM report that Egypt has given a "negative" reply to a Libyan request that Egypt supply Libya with "huge quantities" of weapons. The request was reportedly made by a Libyan officer who visited Egypt 19-23 April. JANA subsequently claimed that high-level Egyptian "personalities" had secretly offered to give Libya weapons but they were "exposed" and subjected to "fierce hostility" from other Egyptian leaders. This is why the Egyptians publicized the topic, JANA contended, adding that they believed this would protect Egypt from U.S. "anger." An Egyptian source cited by MENA described JANA's report as "nonsense" and "ridiculous," asserting that JANA's director has "low standards and a sick mind."

Regarding relations with Tunisia, the UAE's AL-ITTIHAD reported 27 April that Libya has asked PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat to mediate between Libya and Tunisia in an attempt to secure the restoration of diplomatic relations, WAM noted. Meanwhile, Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi received a number of Palestinian leaders 27 April, Tripoli radio reported.

Arab Summit

The Arab League "officially" announced in Tunis 27 April that a preparatory meeting of Arab foreign ministers will be held in Fes 30 April to be followed by an emergency Arab summit conference in Fes 3 May, Abu Dhabi radio reported, noting that the preparatory meeting will draw up an agenda to include the U.S. "aggression" against Libya, although an AFP report asserted that there are "already signs of dispute" regarding what issue should top the agenda. According to KUNA, Syria, Libya, Algeria, the PDRY, and Sudan continue "to insist" that the conference should limit itself to discussing the U.S. "aggression" against Libya, while the remainder of Arab League member states favor a discussion encompassing "all aggressions against the Arab nation," including the Iran-Iraq war, and Israel's "repeated aggressions" against the Palestinians, Lebanese, and Syrians.

Syria

Israel wants to intimidate Syria and undermine its morale as a prelude to launching a "military aggression," President Hafiz al-Asad maintained in an interview with Soviet journalists carried by SANA 27 April. However, Syria is not afraid and is "prepared for an invasion," he added. Al-Asad strongly criticized U.S. international and Mideast policies, and he accused the United States of using its influence in Lebanon to prevent the implementation of the Syrian-sponsored tripartite agreement. He predicted, however, that Syria will eventually achieve reconciliation in Lebanon, warning that if the civil war is not ended through Syria's assistance, then "no one" will be able to end the war.

Meanwhile, Radio Monte Carlo reported that Al-Asad "postponed" an expected visit to Jordan, while TANJUG noted that the Syrian leader will visit Yugoslavia 28-30 April.

As for Syria's military capability, the UAE paper AL-ITTIHAD reported 26 April that Syria will begin receiving MiG-29 aircraft this summer, according to Abu Dhabi radio. A Syrian tank officer has told Kuwait's AL-QABAS that Syrian forces in Lebanon are on a high alert in preparation for a possible Israeli operation, the clandestine Radio Free Lebanon reported, and eyewitnesses have seen Syrian vehicles carrying "long-range missiles" into Lebanon. At a 23 April reception for a visiting Austrian delegation, Defense Minister Mustafa Talas acknowledged that recent "terrorist" acts in northern Syria caused 73 casualties, WIENER ZEITUNG reported.

Israel

A British tourist was shot and killed in East Jerusalem 27 April, Jerusalem radio reported, adding that the police "suspect" the attack to be of a "terrorist nature."

In other developments, while acknowledging that "an agreement in principle" was worked out last year, Jerusalem sources nevertheless denied reports that Israel and Poland will exchange diplomatic representatives in May, adding that several details "remain to be clarified," according to Jerusalem radio. The sources also affirmed that Israel and the Soviet Union are not engaged in contacts regarding the possibility of renewing diplomatic ties.

Further with regard to the two Israelis "detained" in Bermuda on suspicion of conspiring to smuggle U.S. arms to Iran, Jerusalem radio reported that the Israeli Embassy in the Dominican Republic has provided them with "aid," which sources at the Israeli Embassy in Washington asserted was "nothing exceptional."

PLO

PLO Executive Committee Chairman 'Arafat arrived in Cairo 27 April, MENA reported, adding that the PLO chairman will hold "important" talks with Egyptian officials during his stay there.

In other developments, the Soviet ambassador in Baghdad conveyed an "important message" from the Soviet leadership to 'Arafat on recent Israeli military moves "in preparation for new aggression" against the Palestinian people, Baghdad Voice of PLO and Algiers Voice of Palestine reported, adding that the message simultaneously stressed the USSR's "firm support" for the Palestinian people's struggle under the PLO, their "sole and legitimate" representative. Meanwhile, TASS cited reports emanating from the United States that Israel, in "agreement" with the United States, "is preparing" to launch air and land attacks on Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon in the "near future."

Lebanon

Artillery exchanges across the Muslim-Christian contact lines 25 April killed 5 people and wounded 34 others, according to security sources cited by Voice of Lebanon radio. A hitherto unknown group claimed responsibility for a bomb explosion that damaged a British bank in West Beirut the following day, the radio noted.

Bahrain-Qatar: Territorial Dispute

Gulf shipping sources cited by Bahrain's GULF DAILY NEWS reported that both Qatar and Bahrain were making military preparations in the wake of Qatar's 26 April seizure of Fasht al-Dibal, one of the small islands between the two countries whose ownership is disputed. The paper's sources disclosed that Qatari soldiers occupied the island after landing from helicopters, capturing 29 men working for companies which were constructing a Bahraini Coast Guard station on Fasht al-Dibal. The Qataris reportedly fired at a Bahraini tugboat in the area.

The Qatari move followed Doha radio's announcement of an official Qatari declaration that Fasht al-Dibal was an "exclusion" zone as of 1000 GMT 26 April and that "those wanting to go to the area must keep out" until further notice. Doha radio did not, however, mention the Qatari move into the island, which was first announced by Cairo radio. In a subsequent development, Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan held talks with the Qatari amir in Doha and with the Bahraini amir in Manama 27 April, according to Doha and Manama radios. Neither radio mentioned the Qatari-Bahraini dispute in connection with his visit, but diplomatic sources cited by the GULF DAILY NEWS said there is little doubt that Saudi Arabia is acting as a mediator between the two countries. An Omani envoy left for Qatar and Bahrain the following day to "get acquainted" with the dispute between the two countries, according to Muscat radio.

Iran-Iraq War

An Iraqi military communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio announced that the Iraqi III Army Corps recaptured "considerable parts" of the southern Majnun oilfield in a "resolute lightning attack" 26 April, killing 1,950 Iranian troops and wounding "a large number." The Iranian command, however, stated that Iranian forces repulsed a "futile" Iraqi attack in the area, killing a "large number" of enemy troops, according to Tehran radio. As for the Al-Faw front, where Iran recently claimed successes, an Iraqi communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses asserted that Iraq's VII Army Corps repelled four Iranian attacks 24 April, killing 460 enemy soldiers. The communique also stated that 1,100 Iranians were killed or wounded in the area the night of 19-20 April. A 27 April communique carried by the radio reported that Iraqi troops defeated three more Iranian attacks, though IRNA claimed that Iranian troops killed over 200 Iraqis in an attack that morning. The Iraqi communique also announced that Iraq's V Army Corps scored successes in the northern Sirawan-Mazin mountain area 25-27 April, killing "massive" numbers of enemy troops.

The Iraqi communiques reported that Iraqi planes raided Khark Island and hit two maritime targets in the Gulf over the weekend. GULF DAILY NEWS said an Iranian tanker was set ablaze in an "apparent" Exocet attack south of Bushehr 27 April. For Iran's part, communiques and reports cited by Tehran radio and IRNA announced Iranian air raids on Zobeydah 25 April and on targets in the Al-Faw sector 26-27 April.

Iranian Warning to United States

In a Friday sermon reported by IRNA, Majlis Speaker 'Ali Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani warned the United States against taking military action against Iran, asserting that "if you do such a thing, which of course you do not dare to, you will know the real meaning of terror." The Iranian Armed Forces will increase from several hundred thousand to "several million" if Iranians know they have to face a U.S. attack, he contended. The Iranian Navy commander subsequently told a Tehran paper that two U.S. warships are currently patrolling near the Strait of Hormuz, IRNA reported, and he disclosed that a U.S. cargo vessel was among the ships inspected by the Iranian Navy 25 April.

DRA

Karmal Whereabouts — Moscow radio broadcast a statement — although not specifying the date or venue — by PDPA General Secretary Babrak Karmal in which he extolled the achievements of the April Revolution which succeeded "8 years ago." In other anniversary-related reportage, Kabul radio carried a live relay of celebrations at Kabul's festival parade ground 27 April and noted the presence of various government and party officials, although not Karmal's. The sole reference to Karmal was made when the radio reported that some marchers were carrying photographs of the PDPA leader. A TASS report on the festivities also did not refer to him. In other reportage, Karmal was not mentioned attending a 25 April PDPA Politburo session which heard a report by DRA Council of Ministers Chairman Soltan 'Ali Keshtmand on his recent visit to the USSR.

Mujahidin Fighting — An Afghan rebel leader claimed that Afghan guerrillas launched a counterattack against the joint DRA-Soviet forces' garrison and airbase in Khowst 22 April following the rebels' recapture of Zhawar base, the Tokyo KYODO news agency reported. The rebel leader asserted that the joint forces had "completely failed" in interrupting the guerrillas' supply lines. Nevertheless, DRA party and government leaders, including Keshtmand, on 25 April in Kabul welcomed Army units that had participated in "crushing a major nest" of rebels in Zhawar, according to Kabul radio.

Sudan

General 'Abd al-Rahman Siwar al-Dhahab announced the dissolution of the TMC and the Council of Ministers 26 April during the Constituent Assembly's inaugural session, SUNA reported, although noting that the Assembly entrusted the TMC and the Council of Ministers "to continue their constitutional obligations" until 6 May. Siwar al-Dhahab also emphasized the "need" to convene a national constitutional conference, which he viewed as the "sole solution" to the problems confronting Sudan. In related reportage, SPLM-SPLA sources revealed to the clandestine SPLA Radio that the movement "attaches great importance" to such a conference, and sees it as an "essential step" toward "peaceful and meaningful" change in Sudan. Meanwhile, an AFP report, citing a press statement issued in Addis Ababa following talks between the SPLM and a delegation of the Al-Ummah National Party, announced the SPLM's refusal to "recognize or participate" in any government formed on the basis of "partial" elections. The SPLM reaffirmed its adherence to the Koka Dam Declaration of 24 March agreed to between the SPLM and the National Alliance for Salvation in which the Al-Ummah Party was represented.

In a related development, a "top-level" official of the National Islamic Front professed that group's support for the National Unity Charter which calls for, among other things, the abolition of the Shari'ah laws, SUNA reported citing AL-SAHAFAH.

In action in the south, the SPLA captured the "strategically important" Army garrison in Ler in the Upper Nile 23 April following a month-long siege, and also took control of a town near Torit in Eastern Equatoria, according to SPLA radio reports.

YAR

The shooting of a U.S. Embassy employee 25 April was an "individual" act that does not entail any serious consequences, according to a YAR Interior Ministry spokesman cited by Kuwait radio.

Arab States Reportedly Agree To Convene Summit

Syria Requests 3 May Start

LD251916 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1734 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis, 25 Apr (KUNA) — A high-ranking diplomatic source affirmed here today that the contacts made by the Arab League Secretariat General in coordination with the Moroccan Government indicate a high possibility for holding the emergency Arab summit conference called for by King Hassan II of Morocco.

The source, which asked not to be named, told KUNA that all Arab countries have agreed to attend the Arab summit conference in Morocco Monday [28 April], with the exception of Syria, which asked for the meeting to be postponed until Saturday [3 May].

The source pointed out that Iraq, Jordan, and Kuwait have asked for a preliminary meeting by the Arab foreign ministers to prepare the agenda for the proposed summit, while Morocco insisted the summit be held immediately at the level of kings and presidents. Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi contacted King Hassan II by telephone this afternoon to discuss the proposed summit. But the contents of the telephone conversation were not revealed. An Arab League informed source confined itself to telling KUNA that Klibi's intended visit to Rabat tomorrow is still on.

There is no indication that the Arab countries have agreed on the agenda. Syria, Libya, Algeria, the PDRY, and Sudan still insist that the agenda should be confined to a discussion of the U.S. aggression on the Libyan Jamahiriyah; the other countries of the 17-member Arab League asked that the meeting should discuss all aggressions against the Arab nation, including the Iranian aggression against Iraq, Israel's repeated aggressions against the Palestinians, the Lebanese, and the Syrians.

The situation concerning the convening of the Arab summit conference, which has been meeting with difficulties since 16 April, is expected to be resolved tomorrow.

Moroccan Envoy Confirms 3 May Date

NC261504 Paris AFP in English 1456 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Djibouti, April 26 (AFP) — The Arab League will hold a summit in Fes, Morocco, next Saturday [3 May] to discuss the April 15 U.S. air raids on Libya, Moroccan Government envoy Ahmed Bensouda said here Saturday. Mr. Bensouda said a preparatory meeting of Arab foreign ministers would be held next week. But as he continued a diplomatic tour, there were already signs of dispute over what issue should top the agenda.

Djibouti President Hassan Gouled Apidon, who talked with Mr. Bensouda, said the summit would focus not only on "American aggression against Libya" — which Tripoli has cited as the motive for the meeting — but also the Gulf war, the Palestinian problem and the possible return of Egypt to the Arab League as a full member.

In Amman, Jordanian Foreign Minister Tahir Nash'at al-Masri said Saturday that the summit should concentrate on the 67-month war between Iran and Iraq. He said that the holding and success of the summit depended on the agenda, which is to be decided at the foreign ministers' meeting, whose date has not yet been officially announced. Mr. Masri said most Arab countries, including Jordan, think the summit should concentrate "seriously" on the Gulf war and perceived aggression against the Arab nation in general.

"If Libya has been the object of aggression, Iraq has been the target of a far more dangerous war for more than six years," he said. He added that Arab leaders would "certainly" discuss recent reports of the unauthorised sale of U.S. arms to Iran via Israel. Diplomatic sources in Amman said that Syria was opposed to the holding of a foreign ministers' preparatory meeting because it did not want the Gulf war to be discussed at the summit. Both Syria and Libya have supported Iran in the war, while most other Arab nations have favoured Iraq.

Foreign Ministers Meet 30 April

[Text] We have just received the following: It was officially announced in Tunis a short time ago that the preliminary meeting of the Arab foreign ministers will be held in Fes, Morocco next Wednesday [30 April], and the emergency Arab summit conference will be held next Saturday [3 May]. Arab League sources have said that Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi last night ended contacts on this matter with King Hassan II of Morocco and a number of Arab foreign ministers.

The foreign ministers will discuss the agenda of the emergency Arab summit conference which will discuss the present Arab situation and the aggressions to which the Arab homeland is subjected, including the recent U.S. aggression against Libya.

Abu Nidal Claims Killing of Briton in Jerusalem

[Text] Beirut, April 28 (AFP) — Pro-Libyan Palestinian renegade Abu Nidal on Monday claimed responsibility for the killing on Sunday [27 April] of a Briton in Jerusalem, saying the attack was in response to the April 15 U.S. raid on Libya.

Paul Appleby, 28, described by British diplomatic sources in Jerusalem as a tourist, was shot in the head at the Garden Tomb, believed by Protestants to be the location of Christ's tomb. The Fatah Revolutionary Council, headed by Abu Nidal, claimed in a letter received here that Mr. Appleby was a "British intelligence officer" assassinated in reprisal for the British-backed bombing raid on Tripoli and Banghazi.

The letter, typewritten but without the group's logo, said he was killed by the Munzir Qadri Commando, "operating in Jerusalem."

'Arafat Receives Soviet Letter Envisaging Attack

LD261812 Algiers Voice of Palestine in Arabic
1702 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Brother leader Abu 'Ammar [Yasir 'Arafat], chairman of the PLO Executive Committee and commander in chief of the Palestine Revolution Forces, has received a letter from the Soviet leaders which a responsible Palestinian source in Baghdad described as very important.

The source said that the Soviet ambassador to Baghdad conveyed this letter to brother leader Abu 'Ammar, adding the letter is connected with the warning given by Abu 'Ammar and the supreme Palestine Military Council about a Zionist-imperialist plan to commit aggression against our Palestinian people and the Arab nation.

According to the source, the Soviet letter contains lengthy explanations about recent Zionist military moves that are part of a plan for a large-scale vicious attack by the Zionists against our Palestinian people and the Arab nation. In their letter the Soviet leaders affirmed their support for and solidarity with the just struggle of the Palestinian Arab people led by the PLO, the sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people in their struggle for the establishment of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, the liberation of the Palestinian territories, and the establishment of an independent Palestinian state.

Radio Comments on 'Arafat's Warning

[Text] Brothers, the warning made by Yasir 'Arafat, based on a message from the Soviet leadership, that the Zionist enemy is preparing an aggression against Syria will be the leading report in the near future. This does not mean U.S. aggression against Libya will stop. On the contrary, it means this aggression will expand. This aggression has two major dimensions: To carry out one aggression after another against Arab countries and to prepare for the Zionist entity's participation in the U.S.-Israeli aggression.

Yasir 'Arafat has issued similar warnings in the past. Following the Israeli raid on the Palestinian headquarters in Tunis and the U.S. piracy against the Egyptian plane, 'Arafat said this was the beginning of direct U.S. military involvement in the region and the form of this involvement was U.S.-Zionist. Yasir 'Arafat did not predict the events of an invisible world, as he himself put it, but analyzed events as they really are. 'Arafat even warned the American people against this military involvement. However, 'Arafat's warning was mainly directed to the Arab peoples and states which are the target of the aggression. 'Arafat called on the Arabs to be aware of the aggression before it is too late and at a time when the Arabs stumble over their differences, both small and fatal differences.

'Arafat's warning now, based on a message from the Soviet leadership, is a similar warning. If the first target of the aggression was the Palestinian headquarters, the second target was the Libyan leadership's headquarters and the Libyan citizens' houses. And if the third target will be Syria, the fact is all Arabs will be the target of the aggression. If the Arab leaders are hesitating to hold a summit, then they must abandon this hesitation and meet. Their meeting must be successful.

What is required is not to settle the Middle East crisis at one session, to end the Iraq-Iran war immediately, or to punish the United States or Israel because, following their deep sleep and chronic disease, the Arab leaders do not even have the courage to think of such matters. What is required is that they should pay attention to the warning because the danger is horrible, real, and very close. What is required is to mobilize the Arab forces as they exist now. This will be sufficient to give the Arab citizen a respite. Then there will be appropriate talk about each incident.

It is not difficult to write a long agenda to include all our problems. However, the beginning is to be aware of the danger and to heed the warning.

Saudi Paper Says 'Arafat Cuts PLO's Tunis Staff

GF252154 Riyadh AL-RIYAD in Arabic 24 Apr 86 p 22

[Dispatch from Athens by Samir Sa'd al-Din]

[Text] In a new reduction of Palestinian personnel in Tunisia, it was learned yesterday the office of Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, has asked a number of senior officers to depart [Tunis] with their families. This comes within a new policy of reducing the number of Palestinians working in the Tunisian capital to one-third of their present number.

A directive has been issued to PLO offices abroad requiring Palestinians who visit Tunisia to report to the concerned organs and departments so they may request the PLO office to facilitate their entry. It has been learned the Tunis office is making the necessary arrangements with the airport authorities.

AL-RIYAD has learned from 'Arafat's office that the PLO is trying to restrict its personnel working in Tunisia to those individuals working in the political and media fields. The PLO closed down its camp in Tunisia 18 months ago, and sent its officers and men to Iraq, Algeria, and the YAR. 'Arafat issued orders 2 days ago to the Fatah media and organizational organs requiring them not to comment on the issue of 'Atallah 'Atallah, alias Abu al-Za'im, who has dissented from Fatah.

'Arafat has expressed dismay over the content of an internal directive issued by Fatah mobilization and organizational organs. It appears that a decision was made 2 days ago by the Fatah Central Committee providing for resolving the issue of the military in Jordan "in a quiet manner away from the scenes and without recriminations" in order not to harm the PLO's reputation.

Communist, Workers Parties' Statement Raps U.S.

JN271816 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic

[Text] Damascus — The communist and workers parties in the Arab countries have condemned the policy of comrehensive domination and state terrorism pursued by the United States with the aim of spreading U.S. hegemony in wide regions of the world, including our Arab countries, and holding them ransom to U.S. mercy — politically and economically. In a statement distributed in Damascus today, the parties said that following the Suez aggression [in 1956] and after the shelling of Lebanese national forces by the Marines and U.S. fleet units and their bombing by U.S. planes, U.S. warplanes and ships attacked the Libyan coast, shelled Tripoli and Banghazi, and threatened to bomb Damascus and Tehran.

The Arab communist and workers parties voiced full support for Syria and the Libyan Jamahiriyah in the battle of steadfastness against the imperialist-Zionist aggression. They called for boycotting the United States politically and economically.

At the end of their statement, the parties warned against the dangers of the intensifying U.S. military presence in the region and against the establishment of the so-called Central Command of the Rapid Deployment Force. The parties said: Out of the policy of the comprehensive domination of the region and the world, the United States has rejected all Soviet proposals to disarm and ban the use of nuclear weapons, as well as to end nuclear tests, achieve detente, and bolster peaceful coexistence among peoples.

'Atallah Calls Fatah Session on 'Arafat 'Excesses'

BAHRAIN

29 Workers Held Following Island Raid

GF280426 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 28 Apr 86 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Qatar was last night holding 29 men after helicopters raided an island 18 kms from Bahrain.

The men are said by diplomatic sources to be safe and well but details of their exact whereabouts are unknown.

They were taken prisoner after troops leapt from the helicopters and opened fire.

Qatari soldiers are now said by shipping sources to have occupied the tiny Fasht Al-Dibal island.

The Dutch Government last night described the disappearance of the 29 men, some of whom are employed by the Dutch Ballast Nedam firm, as 'abduction'.

A spokesman in The Hague said he could not confirm reports of any injuries.

Meanwhile diplomatic sources in the Gulf said there was little doubt Saudi Arabia was acting as a mediator following the Qatari attack on the Bahraini island on Saturday.

Details of the clash were scant but shipping sources said the Bahrain tug "Seahawk" was peppered with machine gun fire as her Filipino captain attempted to flee the troops.

He was captured after the Qataris commandeered a speedbout and raced after him.

His last message on the radio said he was "going below decks" to take cover.

Seconds earlier the final message from the men on the island said: "Four helicopters have landed on the island...we are being fired at."

Since then diplomatic efforts have been underway to try to free the men — two Britons, a Dutchman, two Thais and 21 Filipinos.

Last night the British Embassy in Bahrain said as far as it was aware the men were safe and well in Doha.

Most of the men are employed by Ballast Nedam but others were subcontracted towork on the Fasht project by Gray MacKenzie and Al-Muharraq Engineering, whose boat the Seahawk came under attack.

Ballast Nedam have been working on the Fasht for three weeks, filling in the coral reef to build a Coast Guard station.

Meanwhile it was reported by Gulf shipping sources that intense military activity was taking place on Qatar's coast.

Bahrain was said to be reinforcing its military units.

Iranian Tanker Set Ablaze in Exocet Attack

GF280440 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 28 Apr 86 p 1

[Text] An Iranian tanker was set ablaze in an apparent Exocet attack about 60 kms south of the mainland port of Bushehr.

The 25,000 metric ton Minab was said to be on fire and badly damaged after putting out a Mayday call yesterday morning.

Shipping sources said they thought the tanker — on the Khark-to-Sirri shuttle run — had been close to the Iranian mainland when hit by an air-launched Exocet missile.

Salvage vessels from Bushehr were said to be fighting the blaze, although last night there was no news on the extent of the damage or casualties.

'Isolated Incident' Occurs Between Bahrain, Qatar

LD271053 Kuwait KUNA in English 0905 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait, April 27 (KUNA) — Daily AL-ANBA' Sunday expressed full confidence that yesterday's attack on the Fasht al-Dibil reef between Qatar and Bahrain was an isolated incident which would not repeat itself in light of the deep relations between the two GCC member-states.

Describing the incident as a 'passing summer cloud', the daily in a front page editorial said that the wisdom of the brotherly countries would help overcome such sudden tension, and hoped relations would return to normal.

The paper wished that the incident had not happened in the first place, although it was very small, and would have hoped for dialogue between the two brothers.

Meanwhile, Qatar yesterday declared Fasht al-Dibil in the Arabian Gulf as a restricted zone. The island is about 12 miles northeast of the mainland, radio Qatar said.

The radio added the declaration will be effective from Saturday but gave no reasons for declaring Qatar's coral reef a 'restricted zone'.

In conclusion the daily expressed full confidence that Qatar and Bahrain would be the first to overcome yesterday's incident in the framework of deep brotherly relations that link the people of the Gulf states.

'All Hopes' Centered on Arab Summit Conference

[Text[Kuwait, April 28 (KUNA) — Kuwaiti daily AL-RA'Y AL-'AMM Monday expressed hope that the forthcoming Arab summit conference, expected next week to convene in Fes, Morocco, will unite the Arab countries to confront all challenges facing the nation.

The paper said that the Arab world has realized that it is targetted by foreign powers, adding that the recent escalation of the Iraq-Iran war, the American aggression on Libya and the attempts to paralyze the Palestine Liberation Organization movement had prompted Arab countries to agree on holding the summit.

All hopes are centered on the summit conference, the paper said and called on Arab leaders to realize the consequences of failing to take action to counter the foreign aggression of the Arab nation.

"If the (Arab) leaders did not do what is required at the regional and international levels, then the Fes summit will be the beginning of an end to all (Arab) summit conferences and will usher in a new arab era that could be much worse and harsher than the present period," the newspaper warned.

Paper Says Arab Rapid Deployment Force Required

[Editorial: "Required Only an Arab Rapid Deployment Force"]

[Excerpts] There is no doubt that the semi-Arab unanimity on convening an extraordinary Arab summit in Fes during the next few days demonstrates a general understanding of the circumstances in the Arab world which is now witnessing a state of continued aggression against its land, sovereignty, rights, and economy. There is no doubt that there is semi-unanimity that the state of continued aggression is manifested in phenomena, some permanent and others temporary. These phenomena include the aggression on Palestine, Lebanon, Iraq, and the Libyan people.

Amid conflicting Arab trends in the Arab countries, can we hope for a practical Arab resolution that will rise to the level of our painful circumstances? This resolution may require much courage and little sacrifices in order to reach an agreement on implementing a basic principle to which all will be committed in practice and theory, regardless of the differences of opinion on the source of aggression. Let us agree that the Arab land and safeguarding it is the basis, and that whoever commits an aggression against any part of it is the enemy, whoever he may be and regardless of the relations of our countries' relations with him. Consequently, defending this part of the Arab land is an incumbent national duty.

This resolution may also require forming an Arab rapid deployment force, well prepared, well armed, and large in number, which will move where an aggression is made in order to repel it, without the need for a dtcision from a higher authority. We do not believe that two differ on defining aggression and therefore moving this force will only require an "administrative" decision, provided that this force avoids inter-Arab wars.

This task is simultaneously easy and difficult. But circumstances require the formation of this force without delay. Otherwise, there is no need to cry over any aggression.

OMAN

Minister on Arab Summit, Relations with PDRY

GF261100 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0915 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Muscat, 26 Apr (WAKH) — Yusuf al-'Alawi 'Abdallah, Omani minister of state for foreign affairs, has stated that consultations on convening the extraordinary Arab summit which were held recently revealed differences in views and that many doubts are still cast on the possibility of convening this summit.

In a statement published today in the Omani newspaper 'UMAN, the Omani minister said: If the extraordinary summit is held, it should discuss all Arab issues because Arab solidarity, which should be proposed at the summit, means all causes and not a single issue. He said that convening the summit will expand the confrontation between Arab and Western countries. If the idea to hold the Arab summit is to adopt measures against the Western countries as a reaction to their measures against Libya, this means that the Arab summit would be a means of expanding the circle of confrontation.

Concerning the Iraq-Iran war and the GCC countries' stand on peaceful efforts toward ending this war, Yusuf al-'Alawi said: The stands of Iraq and Iran are clear and mediation has become useless because each side knows the stand of the other. He affirmed that the GCC countries are still committed to their policy of halting the war by making efforts to reduce tension, guarantee the security of member countries, and prevent the expansion of the war.

Concerning his country's relations with the PDRY, the Omani minister emphasized that these relations have not been affected by the recent events in the PDRY. He described these relations as normal and said that Oman feels that the response and the level of contacts between the two sides has risen to a better level. He noted that contacts are underway to hold a meeting between the border demarcation committees of the two countries.

Concerning his country's relations with the USSR, the Omani minister said: The two countries agreed to appoint their ambassadors to Jordan as nonresident ambassadors. It is expected that the Omani ambassador to Jordan will present his credentials to the Soviet Government as nonresident ambassador to the USSR in the near future. Also, the USSR ambassador to Jordan will present his credentials to His Majesty Sultan Qabus ibn Sa'id.

Al-'Attas Agrees To Attend Arab Summit

GF251943 Aden Domestic Service in Arabic 1900 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Brother Engineer Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas, member of the YSP Political Bureau and chairman of the Supreme People's Council Presidium, received this evening Brother Ahmed Bensouda, adviser to King Hassan II. Ahmed Bensouda has conveyed a message concerning an invitation to attend the emergency Arab summit called to discuss the U.S. military aggression on Libya and the means to consolidate Arab solidarity to confront the danger of imperialist-Zionist aggression.

Brother Engineer Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas has affirmed the importance of the summit during the current Arab situation to discuss ways to confront the U.S.-Zionist plots designed to undermine the sovereignty of our Arab people and their national rights, the most recent of which is the U.S. aggression against Libya. Such plots require Arab solidarity to confront all kinds of challenges.

Brother al-'Attas has asked the Moroccan envoy to convey his greetings to His Majesty King Hassan II.

ANA has learned that the PDRY has agreed to attend the emergency Arab summit. The meeting was attended by brother Dr 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Dali, member of the YSP Political Bureau and foreign minister; and 'Abd al-Wasi' Sallam, minister of justice and awqaf.

The Moroccan envoy left Aden this evening following a short working visit to the PDRY.

Prior to his departure, he made a statement to ANA in which he said: During my visit, I met with His Excellency Brother Engineer Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas and conveyed to him the greetings of His Majesty King Hassan II and expressed his good wishes for success in his duties as chairman of the Supreme People's Council. I have also informed him about the invitation of the Moroccan monarch to attend the emergency Arab summit scheduled to convene in Fes next Monday.

He added that his visit to the PDRY allowed him to review the situation of the Arab world, the need to unite the ranks, and the rejections of the minor differences to save our efforts and our capabilities to develop our Arab nation.

He said that Brother Engineer Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas has asked him to convey his greeting to his brother King Hassan II, affirming that the PDRY would participate in the emergency Arab summit with a delegation to be led by Brother Engineer Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas, member of the YSP Political Bureau and chairman of the Supreme People's Council Presidium.

He was seen off by Brother 'Abd al-Wasi' Sallam, minister of justice and Awqaf; and Yasin Ahmad Salih, director of the Arab Homeland Department at the Foreign Ministry.

Receives Al-Qadhdhafi Message

GF261701 Aden Domestic Service in Arabic 1630 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Brother Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas, member of the YSP Political Bureau and chairman of the Supreme People's Council Presidium, received in his office today Brother Ahmad 'Abd al-Salam, secretary of the Libyan People's Bureau in Aden, who delivered to him a message from Brother Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of the 1 September Revolution. The message concerns recent developments, the situation in the Libyan arena, the Arab arena in general, and preparations for the emergency Arab summit conference following the U.S. military aggression against Libya.

Brother al-'Attas reiterated the PDRY's stance alongside the fraternal Libyan people in confronting the hostile imperialist plans designed against the sovereignty of their homeland. He also affirmed the importance of holding an emergency Arab summit conference to adopt a unified Arab stance against the imperialist-Zionist threats and to exert efforts to create more solidarity to bolster the Arab rank.

For his part, Brother Ahmad 'Abd al-Salam appreciated our country's stance alongside the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah and alongside our fraternal national and pan-Arab issues.

PDRY Figures Reportedly Deported to USSR

GF270640 Abu Dhabi WAM in Arabic 0600 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 27 Apr (WAM) — The newspaper AL-ITTIHAD has reported that two leading YSP figures in the PDRY were deported to Moscow in early March. They are Muhammad 'Abdallah al-Batani, member of the YSP Central Committee and former interior minister; and Sulayman Nasir Muhammad, member of the YSP Central Committee and commander of the People's Defense Committees.

In today's issue, the paper says that the deportation of the two PDRY officials took place following consultations between Moscow and Aden and that it has been determined that they will reside in the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic after they pledged not to carry out any political activity.

Al-Batani and Sulayman represented former PDRY Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad in the peaceful negotiations held under the auspices of the USSR during the 13 January events in the PDRY.

SABA' learned that the brother leader approved of our country's participation in this conference — to discuss the aggressions on the Arab nation — scheduled to be held next week in the Moroccan city of Fes. He stressed the need for attendance to this conference to be on the level of Arab kings and leaders. The audience was attended by Husayn al-Maqdimi, member of the Consultative Council and member of the Standing Committee, in addition to Brother Abubaker Balouna, Moroccan ambassador in Sanaa.

Meanwhile, Moroccan envoy Brother Ahmed Bensouda left Sanaa today. In a statement to SABA' he said: I had the honor of meeting with the brother leader president and secretary general of the General People's Congress, who was among the foremost leaders to call for the convocation of an extraordinary Arab summit to discuss the current Arab issues. He indicated that the brother leader welcomed this idea, approved of it, and announced that the YAR would take part in the sessions of the conference and effectively take part in all of the conference deliberations.

Brother Ahmed Bensouda stated that there are four points to be discussed by the summit conference due to be held next Monday in the Moroccan Kingdom. They are: The U.S. aggression against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, the developments in the Iraqi-Iranian war, the Palestinian issue, and the Lebanese war.

Concluding his statement, Bensouda announced that the UAE, Qatar, Bahrain, and the Sultanate of Oman have approved of the convocation of the extraordinary Arab summit proposed by Morocco.

Upon departure he was seen off by Brother Husaym al-Maqdimi, member of the Consultative Council; His Excellency Brother Abubakr Balouna, the Moroccan ambassador in Sanaa, and a representative of the presidency (?secretariat).

Libyan Officer Visits, Presents Demands

[Text] Cairo, 25 Apr (MENA) — The newspaper AL-AHRAM reports that Egyptian leaders allowed a Libyan private plane carrying a Libyan military figure to land at Al-Mazah military airport last Saturday.

In tomorrow's edition, AL-AHRAM says that the military figure told those who received him at the airport that he would like to meet with President Mubarak to convey a message, which he described as very important, from Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi.

The paper notes that the message, which was carried by Lieutenant Colonel 'Abd al-Fattah Yunis, an officer of the Libyan revolution, contained three principal demands. Al-Qadhdhafi requested that Egypt supply Libya with huge quantities of Eastern-or Western-made weapons, including submarines, various types of missiles, armored cars, and any otehr hardware. The amounts have not been specified.

The second demand called for Egypt to provide some of these weapons as a gift, with the rest being paid for at a date which was not set. The third demand was for President Mubarak to telephone Al-Qadhdhafi to inform him that Egypt approved Libya's conditions.

AL-AHRAM goes on to say that Lt Col 'Abd al-Fattah Yunis, who returned to Libya aboard a military aircraft last Wednesday, took Egypt's reply to these demands with him. The paper says that Egypt's answer was negative in any case, as it has reasons and demands of its own.

The paper adds that Egypt's studied assessment of these demands was as follow:

First, it is evident to Egypt that Libya possesses huge stockpiles of arms which are greater than Libya's military manpower. Furthermore, there are large numbers of additional weapons in emergency warehouses that have become rusty due to a shortage of men to use them.

Second, under the current circumstances in the Arab world, Libya's demand had nothing in common with what could be called an appeal for help to enhance its defensive capability or to deal with any immediate danger. Rather, it was a demand of great political significance that sought to drive a wedge between Egypt and the United States. As is known, the United States is the leading supplier of Egyptian arms, and is financing food and economic projects through grants.

Third, Libya is already aware of the fact that Egypt imports most of its strategic weapons. As such, the transfer of military hardware to Libya would certainly weaken Egypt's own military power until these arms were either replaced with purchases from the world market or through domestic production.

AL-AHRAM questions the real motives behind Libya's demands, as the Libyan Armed Forces have been threatening Egypt's western borders for a long time.

AL-AHRAM writes: Nevertheless, Lt Col 'Abd al-Fattah Yunis was told that Egypt may endure pain in times of hardship and tolerate excesses in certain cases. Egypt can always try to turn a new page with its Arab brothers, even with those who have attacked its borders or accused its president, Armed Forces, and people of treason. However, Egypt has its dignity. It also has its demands, which may be summed up as follows:

1. The nature of any future relations between Egypt and Libya should be discussed before any military cooperation.

2. Libya's Col al-Qadhdhafi should stop interfering in Egypt's internal affairs and foreign policy, as Egypt does not meddle in the internal affairs of Arab states.

3. Col al-Qadhdhafi should renounce terrorism and close all terrorist camps in Libya, as Egypt condemns all forms of terrorism and does not view it as a factor beneficial to the resolution of problems.

4. Col al-Qadhdhafi should stop interfering in the internal affairs of Sudan, which Egypt sees as its strategic backyard. He should also end his meddling in Chad's affairs, which spill over and influence the situation in Sudan.

Col al-Qadhdhafi should channel his efforts into supporting the central cause of the Arab nation, and should help the PLO instead of interfering in neighboring Arab and African states.

5. Egypt believes that secret visits and talks which are contradictory to declared stands are not the best way of achieving Arab solidarity. It is unacceptable for Col al-Qadhdhafi to remain openly hostile toward the leaders and people of Egypt while trying to build bridges with Egypt. He who wants to cooperate with Egypt and who wants to cooperate with him must say so openly and in broad daylight. His public positions must also be in unison with this.

AL-AHRAM points out: It is obvious that a request for Egyptian aid was not the aim of the Libyan envoy's visit. For all intents and purposes, it was an attempt to embarass Egypt and plant thorns in the way of its efforts for peace, development, and the relief of its people's suffering. Ultimately, it is a new link in the chain of Col al-Qadhdhafi's incomprehensible and illogical behavior.

Mubarak Delivers Address on Sinai Liberation Day

[Text] Cairo, 25 Apr (MENA) — President Husni Mubarak delivered the following address on radio and television this morning to mark the occasion of the anniversary of the liberation of Sinai:

In the name of God, the merciful, and the compassionate. Compatriots, on the fourth anniversary of the liberation of Sinai, land spoken of by God in his holy book, we direct our eyes and hearts to Him with humility, humbleness, gratitude, and praise. He granted success to our great national action and enabled us to protect the sacred land of Egypt and to free it from foreign occupation and domination. Only pure Egyptian feet may tread upon it, only the blood of honorable Egyptians and the seat of the noble toilers may irrigate it, only the flags of triumphant Egypt may wave over it, and only right, justice, and peace may prevail on its land.

On this glorious day, we direct our hearts and sentiments to our heroic martyrs. They have sacrificed their souls for the sake of God and the homeland and have irrigated the soil of ancient Sinai with their pure blood. Their actions have given rise to magnificent stories of heroism and sacrifice. They have proved that the sons of Egypt believe that giving is the essence of commitment and that sacrifice for the sake of ideals constitutes both the acme of human eminence and a glowing torch to illuminate the path for Egypt's future generations.

We direct our thoughts to Al-Sadat, the great hero of liberation who achieved a major accomplishment, and the leader of the peace process who spent his life struggling for the sake of his homeland and nation and who sacrificed his soul for his country and its sanctity.

With affection and gratitude we direct our attention to the valiant sons of our armed forces. By offering their lives to their people and to the principles they have sworn to uphold, they have achieved the glorious liberation and the song of their immortality will be recorded in illuminated letters. On every occasion, the armed forces have proven that they are the protective shield of our triumphant Egypt. They are the lofty mountain against which the ambitions of invaders and the malevolent founder and over which the beacon of science and knowledge shines and the flags of freedom and dignity fly.

Brother compatriots, our celebration of the liberation of Sinai has a profound effect on our hearts and minds. This liberation is an illustrious landmark in our national history and a shining page in the annals of the Egyptian people's struggle for a better life. It is an indication of their destiny to lead effectively.

The liberation of land is a significant national act which goes beyond the elimination of foreign occupation and domination. In essence, it frees the national will and enables Egyptians to become the masters of their own fate and the creators of their own future. Successive experiences and events in our region have proven to us that free will is the most precious thing a people can possess in a world that is full of conflict and sedition. Free will is the life buoy in a stormy sea.

For us, liberation is the way to development and a solid foundation that will guarantee the future. This is why the state and people are interested in developing the Sinai. They want to breathe life into every inch of its land so that it will not remain a distant area in the northeastern part of our homeland but will become a focal point of prosperity, a center for cultural development, and a source of production. Its peaks and valleys will be linked by towns, farms, factories, schools, and tourist centers.

I wish every Egyptian could have been with me during my 2-day visit to the lofty peninsula to see what Egyptian hands and brains have accomplished on its pure, ancient soil. I was overwhelmed by feelings of hope and pride as I saw multitudes of Egyptian youth sowing life, spreading culture and civilization everywhere, and breaking through rock with determination and national pride. They prove to the entire world and to future generations of Egyptians that our attachment to the land is not a mere slogan but a comprehensive human commitment deeply rooted in our history, heritage, and civilization. They seek to show that the mission we are fulfilling on every inch of Egyptian soil is a great responsibility which can only be shouldered by those who are pure.

In these moments which are bursting with national feeling, we can only look forward to the time when the remaining occupied Arab territories will be liberated. We pray that God will grant success to our brothers and our partners with whom we have occupied the same trench. We pray that He will give them the ability to accomplish what we have accomplished and guide them along the correct path. May God grant us success. May God's peace, blessing, and mercy be upon you.

[Text] Cairo, 27 Apr (MENA) — Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti arrived in Cairo this afternoon. This is the first visit to Egypt by an Uruguayan president. He and Mrs Sanguinetti were received at Cairo airport by President and Mrs Mubarak, who then accompanied the guest to the Al-Qubbah presidential palace for an official reception.

Leaders Exchange Toasts

NC272019 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 1830 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] President Husni Mubarak hosted a dinner banquet at the Al-Qubbah Palace this evening in honor of Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti and his wife, and the accompanying delegation.

President Mubarak made a speech in which he welcomed the Uruguayan guest and praised his political and intellectual accomplishments. He also lauded his guest's role in strengthening his country's democratic foundations and reviving its deep-rooted traditions of parliamentary rule and freedom of speech. President Mubarak also commended Urugay's major role as a center of culture and civilization in Latin America and as an effective force in promoting regional cooperation and settling differences among states with common interests and destiny.

President Mubarak said: We find a great deal of similarity between our countries in terms of the issues that concern us, the efforts to relieve tension, halt the arms race, lessen the risk of a devastating nuclear war, and establish an international economic system that would provide the highest possible level of justice and equality for all states. This similarity is also evident in the endeavors to bolster cooperation among developing countries, as well as in the steps undertaken to reach a fair settlement of the indebtedness of developing countries.

President Mubarak referred to Uruguay's efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East and its support for the Palestinians' right to self-determination.

President Mubarak said: You agree with us on the need to end the Iraq-Iran war and to save the peoples of the region from its destructive effects.

In conclusion, President Mubarak hailed bilateral relations, and said: The talks that we will hold during your visit will help increase cooperation between our two countries.

The Uruguayan president replied, expressing appreciation for the warm welcome the Egyptian leaders and people had given him. He also praised Egyptian achievements in various fields and Egypt's balanced policy, saying: We have high regard for the spirit of balanced and calm moderation that guides the steps of the Egyptian Government to overcome the difficulties that stand in your way, both in the economic and international fields. He added: We also appreciate your government's efforts to give momentum to the Middle East peace process.

The Uruguayan president continued: We are deeply troubled about events in this area of crisis, and in similar areas in our part of the world. Our common concern with peace underscores our complete agreement on the principles that constitute the pivot of our foreign policies.

Ghali Comments on Sinai Liberation, Tabah Conflict

[Text] Cairo, 26 Apr (MENA) — Dr Butrus Ghali, minister of state for foreign affairs, has said that the final withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Sinai on 25 April 1982 was the result of an enormous effort on the part of Egyptian deplomacy. He stated that this achievement is not only a victory for Egypt, but for moderation and diplomacy as well. It is affirmation of the fact that dialogue and negotiation can achieve far moe than violence and military confrontation.

In an interview with the AL-JUMHURIYAH newspaper, published today on the occasion of Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai and the celebration commemorating the liberation of this land, Dr Ghali asserted Egypt's belief in a complete and comprehensive peace. Egypt has never believed in a separate peace, he added, knowing full well that peace is indivisible and that Egypt itself is part of the Arab world.

Dr Ghali continued: If there is to be a lasting peace, it must be comprehensive, complete, and just. And we want a lasting peace.

Dr Ghali noted that the provisions of the Egyptian-Israeli peace accord stipulate that the treaty will become a basis for peace, not only between Egypt and Israel, but between Israel and its otehr Arab neighbors as well.

Dr Ghali reiterated Egypt's intention to continue its efforts to achieve a comprehensive peace based on UN Security Council Resolution 242 and the legitimate rights of the Palestinians. The fact that the peace process has not made any progress during its 9-year existence should not discourage us or cause us to reduce our efforts to achieve such a goal.

Dr Ghali reaffirmed Egypt's assertion that the Palestinian issue is at the core of the Middle East conflict. Solving this problem is our key to a comprehensive peace, he added.

Dr Ghali called on the United States, Europe, and the Soviet Union to contribute their efforts to and to play their role in establishing peace in the region and putting an end to the conflict.

Dr Ghali also touched on the Tabah conflict between Egypt and Israel. He said: By creating the Tabah problem, Israel sought to halt the peace process and to distract attention from the Palestinian issue.

Dr Ghali asserted that Ari'el Sharon, the Israeli defense minister at the time, was the person responsible for creating this crisis.

The Likud Government later adopted Sharon's stand.

Dr Ghali said that the Israeli-fabricated effects of the Tabah crisis are far more serious than Tabah itself. These effects continue to reflect passively on both Egyptian-Israeli relations and the peace process itself, he noted.

Dr Ghali affirmed Egypt's rejection of any joint projects with Israel in the Sinai until a just solution to the Palestinian issue has been attained. As a part of Sinai, this applies to Tabah as well, he added.

Interviewed on Talks With Israel

PM251452 Cairo AL-AKHBAR in Arabic 17 Apr 86 p 3

[Interview with Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Dr Butrus Ghali by Muhammad Barakat in Cairo; date not given]

[Excerpts] Question: The NDP'S participation in the Israeli Labor Party's Fourth Congress was a great surprise. What was the motive behind that participation?

Answer: The NDP attended the Labor Party's last congress in December 1981 with a delegation headed by Mustafa Khalil. So attending this congress is not a new development. The motive is that the Israeli Labor Party occupies a significant space on Israel's political map and is in a position to take decisions which could influence the issue of peace and the settlement of the Palestinian question and which could have a bearing on the region's future. [passage omitted] Question: Did your discussions at the congress produce positive results for the cause of peace and the Palestinian question?

Answer: Party leader Peres' declarations in his statement to the congress about the need to recognize the Palestinian people were an encouraging step in the right direction but statements and declarations are one thing and executive steps quite another. I hope that the statements will be translated into practical policies. During my 48 hours in Israel I made a point of holding as many meetings and contacts as possible.

Question: What were the most important topics discussed in those meetings?

Answer: In all my meetings I raised and stressed the Palestinian people's rights, especially their right to self-determination. I pointed out that there can be no progress towards peace without participation of the Palestinian people in the peace process and I explained how the Palestinian question affects Egyptian-Israeli relations.

Question: You must have discussed the Tabah issue with the Israelis.

Answer: I discussed Tabah on several occasions and with various leaders. The Israelis claim that their acceptance of the principle of arbitration was in itself a move forward on their part. The truth is that the talks on the terms of arbitration have so far achieved no satisfactory results. I explained my viewpoint, which I have been reiterating since 1982 when I was in charge of the Tabah negotiations, namely that Egypt's right and legal grounds are clear beyond doubt and that what is needed is some Israeli good will that would enable the settlement of the Tabah issue in less than 2 hours. I also said that settlement of that issue would enable us to discuss other more important issues related to comprehensive peace and to the core of the problem which is the Palestinian questions. I pointed out that delaying tactics and procrastination are bound to negatively affect Egyptian-Israeli relations and prevent them from shifting from the phase of cold peace into a phase of warmer peace. I emphasized that settlement of the Tabah question would open the way for a new peace process and for improvement of relations between Cairo and Tel Aviv.

Question: It is clear that Egypt would rather deal with the Labor Party than with the Likud.

Answer: That is not true and I prefer not to answer this question because answering it implies interference in Israel's internal affairs. The Egyptian diplomacy is prepared to deal with any government in power and it judges the Israeli Government on the basis of its attitude irrespective of party affiliation or ideology. We do not claim that we have a right to choose whom to deal with in Israel just as we do not expect Israel to claim a right to choose the people who should speak or negotiate on behalf of the Palestinians.

Israel Reportedly Seeks Egyptian-Made Helicopters

NC280908 Beirut AL-SAFIR in Arabic 26 Apr pp 1,12

[Report from Cairo by Amin Radwan: "Israel Seeks To Buy Egyptian Planes, the Industrialization Organization Refuses...and the Government Interferes" — date not given]

[Text] Informed sources have disclosed that Israel has embarked on a new policy to achieve "normalization" of its relations with Egypt. Initial indications are that Egypt is responding favorably.

The new policy aims at undertaking joint Egyptian-Israeli economic projects that would at the same time damage existing economic relations between Egypt and other Arab countries.

There have recently been two important developments along these lines in two different areas of the Egyptian economy.

AL-SAFIR has learned that some time ago Israel filed a request with the "Arab Organization for Military Industrialization" to buy 60 Gazelle helicopters. The Gazelles are manufactured by the organization under license from France. The request was turned down, and Israel subsequently complained to the Egyptian Government about what it called the "obstinacy" [ta'annut] of the organization, stating that there is a large production capacity for this type of helicopter.

The industrialization organization, in its turn, answered a government inquiry by noting that a part of its capital comes from Arab sources and might be withdrawn should there be such a deal. In addition, sales to Israel could lead to Arab markets being closed to the organization's products.

AL-SAFIR has learned that the Egyptian Government is thinking of purchasing the helicopters from the military industrialization organization in its own name and then delivering them to Israel.

In another development, President Mubarak toured Southern Sinai accompanied by Israel's Tourism Minister Abraham Sharir. During this tour, Mubarak expressed his dismay at the low rate of international tourism to the area. Sharir then remarked that tourist installations built during the Israeli occupation had been turned over by the Egyptian Government to the public sector. Mubarak immediately turned to the Egyptian tourism officials accompanying him and asked them to examine the possibility of letting the private sector take over the tourist industry in the area. He also asked them to look into an Israeli proposal to set up a joint Egyptian-Israeli tourist venture for Sinai.

The remarkable thing here is the fact that the tour of Mubarak and Sharir also included the Tabah area, thus generating speculation that Egypt is predisposed to accept the "freedom of entry" principle which was listed among the 14 conditions made by Israel for its acceptance of arbitration on Tabah.

There has also been speculation that the Egyptian Government is planning to approve a project proposed by Saudi businessman 'Adnan Khashuqji. The latter had suggested that the tourist areas in Sinai be developed jointly by Egypt, Israel, and the United States.

Cabinet Approves Draft State General Budget

[Text] In its meeting today, presided over by Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi, the Cabinet approved a draft state general budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year, amounting to 20,246,000,000 pounds. In a statement, Information Minister Safwat al-Sharif said that the government will present the draft budget before the People's Assembly prior to 1 May, which is within the constitutional period. He added that the new budget is committed to the objectives of the investment plan in this final year of the 5-year plan, which starts in July.

The information minister said that according to the new budget, foreign financing will be limited, foreign debts will be lessened, and the burden of debt will be paid. The new budget will also be committed to a 40-percent rationalization of government expenditure. The budget will provide the allocations needed for the wages, increments, allowances, and operational requirements. It will also take into account the developments of the state's resources in a bid to achieve social justice, and to decrease the approximately 900-million-pound deficit in the current budget.

The information minsiter added that the cabinet today reviewed the monetary balance of the state's general budget in light of the amount of funds needed for projects in the final year of the 5-year plan. The minister of economy has pointed out that the monetary balance takes into consideration the trend of world prices, domestic production estimates, the consumption of commodities, and production requirements.

On the other hand, the deputy prime minister and minister of planning has pointed out that the development plan for the new fiscal year is aimed at increasing gross national production to 26,686,000,000 pounds, rather than 24,268,000,000, which is the amount of the gross national product in the current fiscal year. He added that the investment volume of the government, public, and private sectors in the new fiscal year will reach 7.7 billion pounds, of which 70 percent will be allocated to government and public sectors, and 30 percent to the private sector.

The information minister added that the new budget will create 4[illegible]2,000 new jobs, most of which will be in the productive sector.

Also in today's meeting, the Cabinet approved a draft law to protect desert lands and lands in the new communities from seizure or frauds. According to the draft law, violators may be imprisoned and fined.

[Communique No 2,201 issued by the Armed Forces General Command on 25 April 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Our valiant Armed Forces continue to march along the path of glory, reinforcing their victories and inflicting massive losses on the aggressors.

The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today: 1. The despotic enemy made four successive attempts to attack our valiant forces at the heroic VII Army Corps front, but our brave soldiers in the VII Army Corps repelled them with their wellknown courage, perfect planning, and efficient performance. They inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The confirmed losses last night amounted to 460 soldiers killed and a large number wounded. Our forces imposed full control over the situation and forced the rest of the enemy's attacking forces to retreat and withdraw in disappointment and total defeat.

It has been confirmed that the enemy losses on the night of 19 to 20 April 1986 amounted to 1,100 soldiers killed or wounded. An armor sub-unit, three shovels, and several vehicles and engineering equipment were destroyed. Elsewhere in the same sector, the following was achieved: 23 enemy soldiers were killed and 1 armored personnel carrier, 1 shovel, 1 excavator, 4 infantry positions, 2 vehicles, 4 ammunition dumps, 1 four-barrelled machinegun, 3 observation posts, and 1 machinegun emplacement were destroyed. One shovel and one bulldozer were damaged. God bless the tough men, the soldiers of the heroic VII Army Corps.

2. A brave force from the heroic V Army Corps mounted a lightning attack on enemy positions on Heights 2,038 and 2,032 and adjacent rocky areas, destroying the enemy forces, controlling their positions, and capturing enemy survivors, including an Army officer. The situation was settled in favor of our forces in their new positions. God bless the loyal soldiers of the heroic VI Army Corps.

3. Our units in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah managed to inflict the following losses on the enemy: 1 tank destroyed; 2 enemy soldiers killed; 10 infantry positions destroyed and some of their occupants killed; 1 machinegun destroyed and its crewmen killed; and 1 boat destroyed.

4. The following was achieved in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan : one armored personnel carrier, one vehicle, and one ammunition dump were destroyed and two enemy soldiers were killed.

5. Six enemy soldiers were killed and one vehicle and one large ammunition dump were destroyed in the I Army Corps northern sector, eight observation posts were destroyed and their occupants either killed or wounded, and one machinegun was destroyed in the II Army Corps central sector.

6. The forces of the malicious clique shelled Biyarah, Tawilah, and Al-Shihabi with long-range artillery.

[Excerpts] Through precise planning and competent field supervision and implementation by the heroic III Army Corps under the command of Staff Major General Diya' al-Din Jamal and by the valiant Al-Husayn Forces under the command of Staff Brigadier General Yalshin 'Adil, our heroic units carried out a resolute lightning attack on enemy positions in the southern Majnun oilfield from 0400 to 1145 [0100-0845 GMT] today.

Our units, strongly backed by our brave artillery, succeeded in forging their way on the heads of the enemies, killing them in their positions. With God's help, considerable parts of the western, central, and eastern areas were liberated. This is in addition to areas liberated in previous battles. The enemy sustained heavy losses in personnel. Confirmed enemy losses are 1,950 dead and a large number of wounded. Moreover, large quantities of arms, boats, and equipment were destroyed and other usable quantities were seized.

Although the enemy made several desperate attempts to regain these areas, our brave forces confronted them resolutely and courageously and foiled all their attempts, thereby proving complete superiority and the enemy's collapse and absolute inability to face the heroic advance of our triumphant forces. The situation was settled in favor of our brave fighters, sons of great Iraq.

The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. Planes of our gigantic Air Force continue their raids on enemy troop concentrations, supply lines, and vital installations. Our planes today carried out 94 combat missions. At 0845 [0545 GMT] today, our planes made a precise, effective hit on a large maritime target off the Iranian coast. Having carried out all their missions, the brave eagles returned to their bases with their planes safely, God be praised.

2. An enemy force estimated that an infantry company tried to approach positions of our units in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan. Our brave fighters confronted the enemy force with all their weapons and forced it to flee after inflicting on it several dead and wounded. In several other areas in the same sector, an enemy tank, excavator, and ammunition dump were destroyed and several enemy personnel were killed.

3. Our units in the VII Army Corps sector succeeded in inflicting the following losses on the enemy: 11 infantry positions and 9 ammunition dumps destroyed; 4 enemy personnel killed and 4 others wounded; 4 vehicles destroyed and another vehicle and 1 excavator damaged; and 1 observation post and one machinegun emplacement destroyed.

4. Seven infantry positions, one machinegun emplacement, and one observation post were destroyed in the II Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah. Two infantry positions were destroyed and all their occupants were killed in the I Army Corps northern sector.

5. A number of Iranian soldiers defected to our forward units in the battle fronts. They were safely evacuated to the rear lines.

[Communique No 2,204 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 27 April 1986]

[Excerpt] The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. The heroic V Army Corps — commanders, officers, and other ranks — are stationed at the peaks of glory and are celebrating the leader's birthday by scoring great victories, destroying the aggressors, repulsing treason, and demonstrating unique courage and heroic enthusiasm in the battlefield. The heroic V Army Corps forces carried out a series of lightning, resolute offensives from 2330 [1930 GMT] on 25 April until 1830 [1430 GMT] yesterday. With meticulous planning by the corps command under Staff Major General Tali' Khalil Ruhayyim al-Duri and efficient field supervision, our forces rushed toward enemy positions like a roaring river, pounding them one after another, and wiping out the enemy remants until they succeeded, with God's help, in liberating the Sirawan-Mazin mountain chain, the Sirawan- Mazin village, the (Dani) mountain chain, the (Hubi) junction, and the (Hubi) village. The men of our brave artillery and our helicopter gunships force supported our ground forces. The knights of the helicopters demonstrated unique courage and exerted huge efforts. The loyal men of our Kurdish people also participated in these offensives. The aggressors were repulsed after sustaining massive losses in life; the rest of the aggressors fled.

The following huge quantities of serviceable weapons and military hardware were captured in the victorious battles our fighters waged from 23 April 1986 until 27 April; 230 GC rifles; 56 Strella launchers; 51 RPG-7 launchers; 49 GC machineguns; 13 SPG-9 guns; 23 81-mm mortars, some manufactured in the Zionist entity; 8 105-mm guns; 2 106-mm guns; 6 120-mm mortars; 6 100-mm mortars; 4 60-mm mortars; 4 tubular launchers; 9 DShK machineguns; 8 one-barrel machineguns; 2 23-mm antiaircraft guns; 1 57-mm antiaircraft gun; 3 RBK machineguns, 1 one-barrel Demyatrov machinegun; 1 double-barrel machinegun; 6 Kalashnikov rifles; 124 radios; 6 telephone exchanges; 1 medium machinegun; 52 field telephones; 12 vehicles of various types; 6 tractors; 2 (?searchlights); 8 binoculars; 4 flare guns; 6 120-mm mortar launchers; 2 DShK gun barrels; 167 gas rifle grenades; 113 rocket launchers; 74 81-mm mortar shells; and large quantities of military hardware of various types, equivalent to 36 large truckloads. Blessed be your hands, O men of the heroic I Army Corps — commanders, officers, and other ranks. May God guide your steps on the road to good. Remain an unsheathed sword in the face of any evil aggressor.

2. An enemy group, estimated at more than 100 soldiers, tried to approach our positions in the VII Army Corps sector. Our brave fighters confronted it, pouring hellish fire on the group from all types of weapons. Supported by the fire of our able artillery, the enemy group sustained heavy losses in life while the remaining force fled.

For the second time, another enemy group, estimated at one infantry detachment, approached our positions in the same sector. The brave VII Army Corps men were lying in wait for it, destroyed most of this group, while the few that remained fled.

In a third frustrated attempt, another enemy group, estimated at 30 soldiers, tried to approach our positions in the same sector. Our brave fighters confronted this group, killing most of its members while the rest fled, defeated and humiliated.

Elsewhere in the same sector, the following was achieved: One enemy soldier was killed, two vehicles were destroyed, three vehicles were damaged, one excavator and one ammunition dump were destroyed, and one machinegun and light launcher were destroyed. May God bless the brave men of the heroic VII Army Corps.

3. In addition to the losses the evil aggressor sustained in the southern Majnun sector and reported in our Communique No 2,202 issued yesterday evening [as heard], our brave forces from the III Army Corps captured the following weapons and military hardware: 13 Kalashnikov rifles, 4 light machineguns, 1 motorboat, 2 RBK machineguns, 1 gas-operated rifle, 1 RPG-7 launcher, 1 GC rifle, and many mines.

An enemy group, estimated at more than one infantry company, tried to approach our forward positions in the same sector. The brave soldiers of the III Army Corps confronted it, wiping out the enemy attempt and inflicting heavy losses in life and equipment on the attacking force, while the remaining soldiers fled pursued by the fire of our artillery.

Elsewhere in the same sector, our courageous units achieved the following: 28 enemy soldiers were killed and many others were wounded and the enemy was seen evacuating its losses by boat; 2 vehicles, one carrying personnel, were destroyed and a third vehicle was damaged; 8 infantry positions were destroyed and many of their crews were killed and the enemy was seen evacuating its losses in ambulances; and 1 boat; 3 machineguns, and 3 firing points were destroyed. May God bless the loyal men, the soldiers of the heroic III Army Corps.

4. To inflict further losses on the suspect Iranian regime and to sever its communications lines and strike at its vital targets, our brave Air Force planes carried out a successful raid against a large maritime target near the Iranian coast at 1015 today, scoring an accurate and effective hit. At 1436 [1046 GMT] today, other planes of our Air Force carried out a successful raid against Khark Island facilities, hitting their targets and setting them ablaze. After carrying out these two missions, the brave eagles safely returned with their planes to the homeland, protected by God.

5. While carrying out its duties in no-man's-land in the VI Army Corps sector east of the Tigris, one of our brave patrols captured two hovercraft carrying a steel shelter and quantities of military hardware. The patrol then safely returned to its position. Elsewhere in the same sector, the following was achieved: 51 enemy soldiers were killed; 3 boats, one carrying a medium machinegun, were destroyed; 3 boats were hit; and 2 ammunition dumps were destroyed. A brave patrol in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan captured one serviceable enemy (?bulldozer). One mortar, two ammunition dumps, and two observation posts were also destroyed elsewhere in the same sector.

King Husayn Delivers Lecture on Pan-Arab Security

JN271904 Amman Television Service in Arabic
1700 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] His Majesty King Husayn has stressed the need to tackle the deteriorating situation regarding pan-Arab security as well as the various internal and external factors that contributed to creating this situation. In a lecture delivered at the International Affairs Society this evening on pan-Arab security, his majesty said: We have always been against the policy of foreign alliances. We insist on cooperating with East and West alike within the framework of mutual respect and noninterference in our affairs.

His majesty focused on the dangers arising from the schemes of international polarization — schemes that take place at the expense of the Arab nation's independence and freedom. His majesty added: World Zionists and Israel want to internationalize the Arab-Israeli conflict so that, with the passage of time, Israel will be an extension of the United States and the European states, while the Arab countries will find themselves under Soviet influence. King Husayn asserted that Jordan has resisted and is resisting such a situation because it means selling out the future of our coming generations.

His majesty touched on the external and internal dangers threatening the Arab homeland. He pointed out that the Israeli aggression against the Arab nation, the Iranian aggression against Iraq, the Ethiopian aggression against Somalia, and the separatist movement in southern Sudan, which receives support from East and West, represent the most important threats.

His majesty noted that the continuing war in the Western Sahara and the Lebanese tragedy are foremost among the internal dangers posed to the Arab nation, in addition to the attempts at sectarian fragmentation in the region.

King Husayn reviewed the state of affairs of the Palestine question and the Arab-Israeli conflict. He explained the firm pan-Arab pillars of Jordan's policy aimed at reaching a just, comprehensive solution to the Middle East issue.

King Husayn explained that, in order to confront these dangers that threaten the Arab nation, a comprehensive Arab design should be drawn which would allow building our own power and enable us to contain and confront these dangers. In this regard, his majesty stressed the need to discuss all issues and dangers the Arab nation is facing at the forthcoming Arab summit conference. His majesty said that Jordan has a special, distinguished status in the world thanks to the Jordanians' awareness, production, and continuous contribution to confronting challenges.

Attending the lecture were the prime minister, the Senate president, the Royal Hashemite Court chief, the court minister, the Armed Forces commander in chief, a number of senior officials, and members of the International Affairs Society.

At the conclusion of the lecture, His Majesty King Husayn responded to questions posed by the audience.

Ready for Israeli Attack in Al-Biqa'

NC251537 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic 1445 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] The Kuwaiti paper AL-QABAS cites Syrian military sources in the Al-Biqa' Valley as saying that the Israelis may launch a lightning strike against vital Syrian targets there. This prompted the Syrian forces to go on a very high state of alert. AL-QABAS quotes an officer in the Syrian tank corps who stressed that the Syrians have information confirming that the Israelis may carry out an operation at any time against SAM sites or assembly points for armor and infantry.

The Syrian officer announced that the Israeli forces, particularly their tank and helicopter corps, are conducting maneuvers on a more or less constant basis along the confrontation lines in the Al-Biqa' Valley. AL-QABAS reveals that the Syrians have brought additional helicopters into the area and have established secret hideouts. They have also set up new field hospitals, and have strengthened their armored presence.

Goulding, Birri Meet

NC261356 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1300 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] After arriving at Beirut International Airport at 1130 today, UN Under Secretary General Marrack Goulding and his deputy, Jean Claude-Aime, visited Nabih Birri, minister of state for the south and reconstruction affairs. They held a 1-hour meeting during which they discussed the current situation in the south following the renewal of UNIFIL's mandate for 3 more months.

Afterward, the UN official said: I am here to meet with Minister Birri and the other Lebanese leaders to discuss with them the new situation following the Security Council's renewal of the UNIFIL mandate for another 3 months.

Goulding was told that there were repeated reports that Israel would withdraw from the south, and his answer was: I hope this is true. Asked whether he has brought with him specific ideas, Goulding said: If I have any, I will not disclose them now.

Minister Birri stated: It appears that the Security Council's resolution to extend the UNIFIL mandate for 3 more months has given only 2 months to UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar to submit a report on the UNFIL mission.

Minister Birri added: We affirmed our support for UNFIL, the implementation of Resolution 425, and the truce agreement between Lebanon and Israel. Birri said he saw in the French position an impetus to efforts to bring about the implementation of Resolution 425.

Minister Birri went on: We affirmed to the UN under secretary general that the Amal Movement and the Lebanese people in the south view the Lahd army as an appendage of the Israeli army, and therefore the Lahd army should be included in the withdrawal. Birri declared that the dignity of the international community is now being tested in southern Lebanon.

Birri Discusses Goulding, Fighting

NC261625 (Clandestine) Voice of the Mountain in Arabic to Lebanon 1400 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Nabih Birri, minister of state for the south and reconstruction affairs, today met with Marrack Goulding, UN under secretary general. They discussed the condition of UNIFIL in the south.

Following the meeting, Minister Birri said: We have told Goulding that the Lebanese people in the south believe that the Lahd army is a satellite of the Israeli occupation forces.

Asked about the recent flare-up of fighting, Minister Birri said: In brief, and to avoid any interpretations or speculations, what has taken place is that the army and the Lebanese Forces's tanks opened fire on the suburb the day before yesterday. We committed ourselves to the cease-fire for 6 hours, following which, we gave orders to shell military positions in East Beirut and Kasrawan. He added: I hoped that would constitute a deterrent and put an end to the fighting.

Concluding his statement, Minister Birri warned that if the suburb and West Beirut are ever shelled again, the response will be against the heart of Kasrawan. He added: This is an act of self-defense. We regret being compelled to resort to this because we do not wish for any flare-up along the combat lines. We will be committed to the cease-fire only if the other party does not violate it.

Goulding Meets al-Jumayyil

[Text] The meeting between President Shaykh Amin al-Jumayyil and UN Under Secretary General Marrack Goulding and his deputy, Jean Claude-Aime, ended at 1415 today.

Goulding maintained that his visit to Lebanon was not unexpected; it was a routine one on the instructions of the UN secretary general, who had asked him to hold consultations with the president of the Republic and a number of ministers concerning the new situation emerging from the Security Council's decision to renew UNIFIL's mandate for 3 months instead of 6.

Goulding said he does not think that the French UNIFIL contingent will leave the area at the conclusion of the 3 month-period. The UN secretary general, he said, is making efforts to find out whether Alex Collett is still alive, and to determine where he is being held and what his condition is. Goulding expressed hopes that Collett was still alive.

Asked if he thought that the murder of Collett would affect the presence of the UN forces in Lebanon, Goulding replied: We hope that Mr Collett has not been murdered. However, his case and the threats against foreign nationals will not affect the UN forces and their mission.

Afterward, President al-Jumayyil and Mr Goulding met in private for 30 minutes.

Goulding Meets Karami

[Text] Prime minister Rashid Karami received UN Under Secretary General Marrack Goulding and his assistant Jean Claude-Aime in Tripoli this morning.

Following the approximately 50-minute meeting, Goulding said: We came to Tripoli to meet with Prime Minister Karami and to discuss current conditions with him, particularly those which pertain to the position of UNIFIL. We explained our view regarding the region's future and the possibility of implementing the UN Security Council resolutions which provide for the total withdrawal of Israeli forces from south Lebanon and the imposition of the legitimate Lebanese authority there.

Commenting on his impressions in the wake of discussions with Lebanese officials, Goulding stated: The objective of our talks is to achieve full cooperation in serving mutual interests and in implementing the UN Security Council resolutions pertaining to south Lebanon. Asked to what extent proponents of the Papal initiative are coordinating their efforts with the United Nations, Goulding replied: Although I believe that the problems being addressed by us are interlinked, they differ in terms of scope. Our problem is south Lebanon and the implementation of UN Security Council resolutions there. The Vatican initiative deals with a broader issue — the problem of Lebanon as a whole.

Lebanese Forces Call for Truce, Prepare New Plan

[Text] On behalf of the Lebanese Forces, the deputy chairman of the Forces' Executive Committee has called for a comprehensive truce to be enacted throughout the country. The Lebanese Forces have also demanded the Lebanization of the dialogue and have authorized the Maronite patriarch to begin efforts in this direction.

Karim Paqraduni noted that the Lebanese Forces have been formulating a political plan since 15 December. However, he did not disclose its contents, saying only that draft committees have begun to work on it. He added: We have agreed on five [as heard] principles. These are as follows:ensuring Lebanon's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity; liberating Lebanon from all non-Lebanese military forces located on its land; implementing a solution achieved through a Lebanese dialogue in which all parties concerned will participate; and preparing a new charter and a new constitution to end this war.

Paqraduni confirmed that the Halat Airport will be opened in May. Replying to a question, he said: We will respond in kind if the operation of Halat Airport is obstructed.

Militia Head Urges Factions To Release All Hostages

HK250130 Hong Kong AFP in English 0006 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Beirut, April 25 (AFP) — The leader of a key militia in Lebanon's civil war said Thursday [24 April] that his group had released all its hostages and he urged other factions to do likewise.

The statement by Samir Geagea, head of the Lebanese Forces (FL), a Christian group, was broadcast on television hours after the FL released 33 people, some of whom it had held for years. Mr Geagea, speaking over the FL network, Lebanese Broadcasting Corporation, said his militia was holding no one else and called on all parties in Lebanon to release their hostages because "it is inconceivable to detain someone because of his political or communal persuasion."

Lebanon's Committee for Kidnapped and Missing People says 2,500 people have been kidnapped since the June 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon. But various militia have admitted to holding only a few dozen.

(A Lebanese newspaper, AL-NAHAR, received a video cassette from a group on Wednesday showing a hanging body, allegedly Alec Collet, executed in revenge for the U.S. attack on Libya.

(Mr Collet, a UNCA member, was kidnapped more than a year ago in Lebanon while reporting on Palestinian refugee camps there.)

Karami Sees Legitimate Authority as Only Solution

NC261930 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1630 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Speaking this afaternoon at a reception held in his honor by the bar association in Tripoli, Prime Minister Rashid Karami said: We are looking to the future with hope and confidence. There is determination to work toward salvation and to rescue this country from the evil octopus trying to strangel it.

The prime minister said: We are confident that these people and their faith, and the efforts of good individuals among these people who are working persistently and tirelessly, will put an end to this vicious plot to destroy every aspect of life in this country. Karami asserted that the plotters have failed to achieve any of their despicable aims in the past 11 years.

He declared: I want to emphasize that our salvation is in our hands. If the Lebanese come together around a common stand to achieve their dignity and unity, no force under the sky can stand in the way of their will and determination.

Karami added: We want to make clear that the only solution, to which there is no alternative, is for the legitimate authority to reassume its full role because the legitimate authority embodies the will and interests of the people. Only the legitimate authority can defend these interests. There is no alternative to state institutions and administration. Differences have arisen about and because of the state. For the sake of reforms and for the sake of revising the system and the constitution, we were about to lose the entire homeland. We must, therefore, consider what happened so we will not lose everything in the end.

Karami said in conclusion: We affirm that justice is the basis of rule. Therefore, rule cannot be established without justice and law. A structure built on feeble foundations cannot stand and survive.

'No Way to Salvation' Seen

NC272031 (Clandestine) Voice of the Mountain in Arabic to Lebanon 2000 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Prime Minister Rashid Karami, speaking at a meeting of the Northern Coordination Committee this evening, has affirmed that so far he sees no way to salvation. He maintained that developments now taking place are indications that some people are seeking to perpetuate the existing division by inaugurating the Halat Airport, aggravating the situation on the contact lines, and closing the crossing points.

Referring to the release of some of the kidnapped people by the Phalangist forces, Karami said he regarded this step, and the way it was carried out, as a political maneuver that hides unsound intentions and goals.

Development Board Member in Juniyah Abducted

[Text] Gunmen entered the house of Sa'd Abu Zayd, representative of the Development and Reconstruction Board, in Juniyah at 0200 this morning and took him to an unknown destination. Board Chairman Malik Salam has deplored this incident and announced that he will suspend his activities at the board until Abu Zayd is returned. Board members and senior officials have expressed their solidarity with the chairman.

There is questioning within national circles about what has become of the promises made by Samir Ja'ja' over television and radio and in the press last Thursday in which he swore that he would no longer kidnap people for sectarian or political reasons. People are wondering about the reasons which prompted Abu Zayd's abduction and about the ultimate fate of promises which were kept for less than 3 days.

5 Killed, 34 Wounded During Night Clashes

[Excerpts] Artillery emplacements and launchers deployed in upper Al-Matn opened fire on the Al-Matn and Kisrawan areas at 0015. Shells and rockets fell at a rate of five per minute. The shelling lasted approximately 2 hours and caused heavy material damage. A number of fires also broke out, but they were later extinguished.

Competent security sources have pinpointed a number of emplacements and launchers in upper Al-Matn towns and villages, particularly in Majdal Tarshish, 'Uyun al-Rubban, Al-Tuwaytah, Wadi al-Amin, the Al-Qattarah area, and Mahafir al-Za'rur.

Between 0001 and 0100, renewed shelling was directed at the areas of Al-Fayyadiyah, B'abda, and the Defense Ministry from the (Kokodi) and the Great Prophet Mosque on the [Beirut] airport road. Fire was accurately directed against the source of this shelling in upper Al-Matn and the southern suburb. Security sources have estimated that 5 people were killed and 34 others wounded in the eastern and western areas.

ASL Deals 'Tough Blows' to 'Terrorist Groups'

JN260733 Lebanon Marj 'Uyun Voice of Hope in Arabic 0600 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] The Army of Southern Lebanon [ASL] has dealt tough blows to the terrorist groups which tried to advance toward ASL positions. Two terrorists were killed, two others were wounded, one terrorist was captured, and one jeep was damaged while one ASL element was slightly injured.

Yesterday evening, a terorist group tried to advance toward the Al-Surayri ASL position while firing at it. The ASL position responded and forced the aggressors to withdraw after destroying a jeep. Their human losses are not known, and our forces suffered no casualties.

In the (Barashit Kawnin) area, an ASL patrol engaged a group of terrorists, killing two, and wounding two others, in addition to capturing one. Our patrol suffered no losses.

After a series of unsuccessful attacks, the terrorists shelled the ASL position in Jabal Sujud with about 120 60mm and 80mm mortar shells from the (Al-Luwayfah) area. The ASL artillery fiercely shelled the sources of the aggression. One of our elements was slighlty wounded in the shelling. Enemy losses were not known.

Woman Killed, Teacher Wounded at Roadblock

Al-Asad Interview to Soviet TV Reported

JN271622 Damascus SANA in Arabic 1244 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, 27 Apr (SANA) — President Hafiz al-Asad has granted an interview to Soviet television correspondents Farid Seyful-Mulyukov and Kasyik Basiyev. The following is the text of the questions and answers:

Question: The 27th CPSU Congress proposed a comprehensive and integrated program for the incremental liquidation of mass extermination weapons, warding off the perils of a new world war, and safeguarding world security. How do you assess this program?

Al-Asad: I have read the 27th CPSU Congress Program. It is a very important and comprehensive program and contains bases in the political, economic, military, and humanitarian fields. In my opinion, the bases and ideas in this program fully respond to the desires and interests of the peoples of the world. I believe that this program will in time be widely welcomed by international public opinion because it safeguards peace, achieves security for the peoples of the world, and will ultimately raise mankind's standard of living. This program is comprehensive and, given its importance, it deserves a protracted and persistent struggle to attain it.

Question: The United States has rejected the recent Soviet initiatives, pursued its course toward exacerbating international relations, continued its nuclear experiments, and carried out its barbaric aggression against Libya. What is your opinion of this U.S. trend toward the issue of the people's peace and freedom?

Al-Asad: The USSR has had many initiatives, all aimed at safeguarding peace, entrenching world peace and security, and eliminating the danger of a new war. The USSR unilaterally implemented some of these initiatives. For example, the USSR withdrew weapons, or removed some of the missile bases in the GDR a few years ago, as a sign of goodwill on its part, out of its desire to establish world peace on solid foundations and out of its desire to have others reciprocate with similar measures. We also recall how the USSR announced the suspension of nuclear experiments for a specific period of time, how it extended this period, as well as CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev's announcement in the GDR a few days ago about arms reduction, not to mention other Soviet initiatives in this respect, thus reaffirming the USSR's desire to limit or suspend the production of nuclear weapons or to reduce existing weapons prior to completely eliminating them, and working to reduce conventional weapons to create more opportune circumstances for preventing future wars. Regrettably, the United States, in light of what it announces and what it practises, has not responded to these initiatives. On the contrary, it has worked to excacerbate the international situation and has carried out more than one aggression here or there, as in Latin America and against Libya in the past few days.

The United States committed aggression against Libya, carried out air raids agaisnt its cities, bombarded houses and residential areas, and killed children and old people under the pretext that Libya perpetrates terrorist operations. Libya has affirmed more than once that it has nothing to do with any terrorist operations in this or that European country. Even if we completely ignore Libya's denial of its involvement in these terrorist operations, under what logic does the United States arrogate to itself the right to punish others and the right to take peoples and countries to account? If we suppose that such actions need to be combatted internationally, then there must be international institutions to discuss such issues and to set rules for them, including rules for punishment. There must be punishment.

Regardless of how big or small that state is, it cannot give itself the right to punish other states or peoples in accordance with its whims and opinion, because this is illogical and violates the norms of our contemporary life. And even if we can say that this is logical, then it is backward logic which belongs to the old ages. We cannot accept this logic these days.

As a result of the United States' rejection of the USSR's several peace initiatives and its continuous aggressive acts against several states in the world, particularly small states, peace continues to be threatened.

At any rate, we have no option but to struggle doing all that we can in cooperation with all advocates of peace and freedom in the world to avert the dangers of war, despite the fact that there is no hope that others will stop at a certain point regarding the pursuit of this aggressive trend.

However, our concern about peace and the maintenance of security does not mean we will retreat before threats or abandon our principles in life or relinquish our freedom of decisions as a state and people. On the contrary, we must insist on adhering to the way of life we have chosen and on sticking to the freedom and independence of our decisionmaking. Moreover, we must build our life according to our wishes without being affected by what others want. In this regard, the United States will not achieve its aims, whether against Syria or the Third World peoples who were liberated from the yoke of colonialism earlier and who decided to continue their political liberation and social progress.

Question: Syria and other Arab states, particularly Libya, are once again being subjected to a campaign of military and political pressures by the United States and its strategic ally, Israel, within the framework of the new international policy of the United States. How do you assess this course and its objectives in the Arab world?

Al-Asad: The problem is clear: Israel wants to expand and the United States seeks hegemony. These Israeli-Zionist expansionist designs and this imperialist U.S. desire to dominate the region are the reasons for the tension. The United States, in cooperation with Israel, wants to make this region in which we live serve its plans and strategy. It also seeks to impose on us the regime or regimes it wishes and to define for us our way of life. This is rejected. We have not responded or submitted, and we will not respond or submit to it in the future. We will fight.

It is overall an aggressive policy which we have no choice but to oppose. We believe that in the long run the aggressive designs will not triumph and that victory will be only for peoples and their just causes as well as for their desire to shape their lives in accordance with their interests and wishes.

Question: Israel's rulers are escalating tension about the subject of the Golan and talking about a war with Syria. What stands behind these threats?

Al-Asad: Within the same framework, Israel wants to intimidate us in advance and shake our determination, will, and firmness before launching an aggression. We strongly believe that this is a prelude to military aggression against Syria. But Syria is not afraid, as it is prepared for an invasion. Hence, Syria must be strong, of course, and its strength is based on the power and firmness of its people, as well as on the strength of the Arab and world liberation movements and on its friends in the world, led by the Soviet Union.

Question: Syria has exerted efforts to end the civil war and halt the Israeli-imperialist interference in Lebanon's affairs, but the situation there is still delicate and tense. In your opinion, what are the factors that have so far prevented the return of peace, security, and national accord to Lebanon?

Al-Asad: As you know, we have for years offered genuine sacrifices to help Lebanon and to stop the civil war in Lebanon, which still exists in one form or another. We have always viewed that the best way to extend such help and to extricate Lebanon from its problem is accord among the Lebanese, but we have always collided with U.S.-Israeli interference. Good developments took place last year and this year and we reached a direct agreement among the warring parties. U.S. and Israeli efforts to prevent the implementation of this agreement escalated. We told the United States directly: You Americans are exerting efforts and contacting many persons in Lebanon to prevent the implementation of the agreed document that constitutes a base which will make Lebanon proceed toward security and internal peace. We also said this to them following the bloody events that took place within the context of plotting against the agreement in East Beirut. They managed to create obstacles that still exist, but we believe we will achieve accord, although we need more time.

[Al-Asad continues] At any rate, if reconciliation is not achieved in Lebanon with Syria's help, then no one will be able to achieve reconciliation. Further, if civil war in Lebanon is not ended through Syria's assistance, then no one will be able to end the war. The important thing is that the other sides should realize that no matter how long it takes, regardless of the heavy losses in Lebanon, and regardless of the fact that the Lebanese are killing each other, Syria will eventually help them find a way out of this impasse. Those who are prolonging the current situation are the Lebanese people's malignant foes. Regrettably, some Lebanese do not realize where their own interests lie, and consequently they are paying a dear price.

We are optimistic. Reconciliation will be achieve in Lebanon. We will continue to exert efforts, and will succeed.

Question: The USSR has always supported the establishment of a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and our proposals in this regard are known. Mr President, how do you view a solution to the tense situation in the Middle East?

Al-Asad: Yes, the whole world knows of the Soviet proposals. We have supported them. These proposals are similar to the Arab proposals which we approved at the Arab summit in Fes. The problem is undoubtedly represented in the U.S.-Israeli rejection of the Soviet and Arab proposals. I cannot see any other means to achieve peace in this region except through an international conference under UN auspices and to be attended by the USSR and the United States. The strange thing is that they reject this international conference and Soviet participation in it, while we do not reject the United States' participation in this conference despite its blind bias toward Israel, which has occupied Arab territory and expelled millions of Arabs.

Despite this, and for objective reasons, we say that the United States should attend this conference while they reject the USSR's participation. I believe that this rejection proves hostile intent and the lack of desire by Israel and the United States to achieve peace. It is known that the peace process needs guarantees, and it is impossible for the United States to offer guarantees while it is completely biased toward Israel. Soviet participation in this conference means the existence of a sound guarantee of peace. However, they do not want such a sound guarantee, and therefore, they do not want the USSR to participate. By proposing this, they are placing the region at a deadend. The peace process should have objective pillars, chief of which is that the USSR should participate in and be a guarantor of the peace process; otherwise, peace cannot be achieved in the region.

Question: And now let us talk about Syria-Soviet relations. You signed the treaty of cooperation and friendship between the Syrian Arab Republic and the USSR. How is this treaty actually being implemented, and what is its role in promoting and expanding our traditional ties?

Al-Asad: Syrian-Soviet relations have long experience, and the friendship and cooperation treaty between the USSR and Syria has come to entrench these relations and our cooperation and to lay strong and firm foundations for them. This treaty has undoubtedly crystallized and promoted the relations of friendship and cooperation between Syria and the USSR. Cooperation between us is strong and extends to all political, economic, cultural, and other fields. Our approach in Syria and that of our friends in the USSR is to further promote cooperation and friendship, proceeding fromt he bases contained in this treaty. In addition, contacts between us are effective and dynamic.

Question: Forty years have passed since Syria gained independence, and Syria has adopted a clear-cut progressive method and a hostile attitude toward imperialism under the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party. What are Syria's main achievements, in your opinion?

Al-Asad: As is known, Syria can be considered one of the first countries to be dominated by a form of colonialism. Syria was also the first among the Third World countries to end colonialism. The Third World suffered from this colonialist burden under different names. Syria liberated itself and obtained full independence. Since then, the Syrian masses have been struggling to achieve political liberation and social progress. Syria has played an important role in resisting imperialist foriegn alliances, as is known, especially in toppling the Baghdad Pact, in undermining the arms monopoly, and in opening the door for dealing with the socialist countries in the early 1950's.

Syria, under the Ba'th Party, now constitutes an important entity in the Arab and international liberation movement. It is playing an important role and has a distinguished position, as its friends put it. Basic and important changes have taken place in domestic life in Syria. Syria has achieved important socialist progress, significant social progress, and progress in political, cultural, and economic areas. I say it has achieved economic progress despite the big burden imposed on us by the current circumstances in the region, by the aggression, and by international economic and security developments. In the cultural area, I can say that Syria is among the vanguard states in the Third World with regard to cultural institutions, schools, universities, the number of students in these institutions, and the number of specialists.

What is important is that we managed to establish popular organizations in Syria, and they are occupying their natural position and playing an effective role. The Syrian General Federation of Trade Unions, the Syrian peasants trade union, the Youth Federation, the teachers union, the women's union, and the students union have reached high organizational and educational levels. They can strongly defend their interests and those of the people and can play an effective role in the political, economic, and cultural life in the country. As is known, every labor issue is settled by workers conferences and every agricultural issue is settled by peasants conferences. In our opinion, this is a very important development.

As you know, our party exists in every quarter and in every village. Our party is widespread, strongly organized, and based on strong ideology. We have also built the Progressive National Front, which is made up of all nationalist and progressive parties. It is a model experiment for the Third World countries. We are trying to develop this experiment through the lessons of the labor march in our country. It is a successful experiment through which the people's potential can be mobilized by creating a strong and effective formula. It also can achieve cooperation between progressive popular forces in any country, especially when that country is exposed to invasion and aggression by foreign forces, as is the case in this region. During this short period, it is difficult to list all the achievements. I referred to only some of them.

Question: Would you like to address a word to viewers of the Vremya program of Soviet television?

Al-Asad: This is a good chance for me to greet the Soviet citizens over Soviet television. I affirm that we in Syria appreciate and respect the Soviet citizens. We in Syria maintain a strong, friendly relationship with the Soviet citizens and we feel that the Soviet people have a great international responsibility and are playing an effective role in supporting peoples who are struggling to achieve freedom and sovereignty. I also affirm that we adhere to the deep friendship between Syria and the Soviet Union and I wish the friendly Soviet people further progress, success, and prosperity.

2 Submarines Received; MIG-29's To Arrive in Summer

[Text] The newspaper AL-ITTIHAD reports today that the Syrian Air Force will receive the first batch of the most advanced fighter planes — the MIG-29 — in the summer in order to assimilate them into actual service and to form the first working combat squadron of these fighter planes by the end of the current year.

The newspaper notes that in receiving these fighter planes, Syria will become the second country after India to receive the MIG-29 fighters, considered the Soviet counterpart of current Western fighters like the F-16, F-18, and Mirage-2000.

AL-ITTIHAD said that the Syrian naval forces recently received two out of three foxtrot attack [as heard] submarines Syria is expected to receive from the USSR during the current year. Informed military sources affirmed this will be a new turning point in the level of Syrian naval armament and capabilities.

Al-Asad's Proposed Visit to Jordan Postponed

[Text] Informed sources in Amman have stated that the visit Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad was expected to pay to Jordan has been postponed to a later date. The sources added that the visit was originally scheduled by the two countries to take place between 25-26 April. The Jordanian and Syrian sources have not yet commented on this postponement or its causes.

Measures Following Explosions in Tartus Reported

NC251347 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic

[Text] The Voice of Lebanon has received new information about the situation in Syria after the series of explosions that occurred in a number of Syrian towns. The latest of these were three explosions that took place in Tartus last Wednesday [24 April]. According to this information, gunmen assassinated Captain Hikmat al-'Id, an officer in the political security force.

In view of the increasing number of explosions and assassinations, the Syrian military command has adopted a series of measures affecting many senior officers. Several officers from a certain sect have been newly assigned to the Damascus barracks. The military measures also affect foreign nationals in Syria, Palestinians in the camps, and parts of northern Lebanon. The Syrian forces increased their roadblocks in Tripoli after reports were received that members of the Islamic Unification Movement, the Muslim Brotherhood, and the Fatah movement had been involved in coordination work with some Syrian officers.

The information also indicated that Raji al-Najmah, the Fatah security official in Lebanon, is now being held in the 'Ajar area [in Al-Biqa']. He was detained by Syrian intelligence in the Al-Awza'i area [south of Beirut] as he was travelling in the vehicle of Shaykh Husayn Fadlallah. It has been learned that an influential Arab state has intervened with the Syrians, at the request of ‘Arafat, for the release of Al-Najmah. Syria accuses Al-Najmah of involvement in the explosions.

A responsible Syrian source has confirmed that some military men were implicated in the explosions which recently took place in Syrian towns.

According to information received by our radio, the PFLP and the revolutionary council of Abu Nidal have begun recruiting Palestinian and Lebanese nationals in the Al-Baddawi camp, and have offered them financial inducements to go to Libya. Some 300 gunmen from the dissident groups recently left the Palestinian camps in northern Lebanon for Libya, via Damascus and Larnaca. The operation was carried out with the approval of Syria, which facilitated the departure of the Palestinians for Libya to support Colonel Al-Qadhdhafi.

In an attempt to limit the exodus, the Palestinian command has circulated instructions among all its members to prevent Palestinians from leaving the camps without its approval.

[Text] In Damascus Comrade Dr Sulayman Qaddah, assistant secretary of the Regional Command of the Arab Socialist Ba‘th Party, at noon today received the delegation of the Soviet Friendship Society led by Comrade Kazevich Brazauskas, member of the Lithuanian SSR Communist Party Central Committee. Attending the meeting were Comrade Dr Wahib Tannus, member of the Regional Command and head of the Syrian-Soviet Friendship Society, and the USSR charge d'affaires in Damascus.

At the beginning of the meeting, Dr Qaddah welcomed the guest delegation. He then explained current circumstances and political developments in the region. He pointed out the imperialist and Zionist onslaught on fraternal Libya. He stressed Syria's firm stand under President Hafiz al-Asad in confronting the aggressive policy and the imperialist and Zionist threats.

The comrade head of the delegation expressed his pleasure at this meeting. He pointed to the importance of other meetings through which he could see the great achievements the Ba‘th Party has made in all fields. He reaffirmed his country's stand of supporting the Arab causes against all forms of imperialist hegemony.

Damascus Views Reagan Threats of Attacking Syria

JN261718 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
1530 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Palestine Broadcast: "Talks of the Return" program]

[Text] Brother Strugglers: Although President Reagan is launching his armed aggression on the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, he has not yet done anything new because aggression is the constant U.S. stand toward the Arab nation, whether against Libya, Syria, or other Arab countries. All that President Reagan has done is transfer permanent, ready-made U.S. plans from U.S. Army lockers to the battlefield, or rather, to the field of aggression. This time, the field was in Libya.

However, President Reagan brought something new to this aggression. In other words, President Reagan tore off the mask behind which the United States has long hidden, namely, Israel. Reagan removed from his face, America's face, the mask called Israel. Reagan spoke from Washington as if he were speaking from Tel Aviv or even from the occupied Golan Heights. He announced he will launch aggression against Syria, exactly as he did against Libya.

What has encouraged President Reagan regarding this new announcement, even if it is only a formality? First, President Reagan and his administration molded U.S. public opinion, which is ready for aggression anywhere, into a more aggressive shape.

Second, President Reagan falsely represented the Palestine question before U.S. public opinion so that there is no longer a Palestine question or a Middle East issue or an Israeli occupation of Arab territories. Instead, Reagan made Americans believe that U.S. citizens have become victims and that Reagan will protect them under the guise of combating international terrorism.

Third, President Reagan is currently serving his second presidential term and he has no third term. Hence, Reagan does not care about a future defeat in elections as a result of his adventures because he will not run again.

This means that Reagan will become a strong president in the eyes of Americans. Moreover, even when the U.S. people find out how much harm their false hero Ronald Reagan has done to the U.S. presence worldwide, Reagan will not be obliged to submit a statement of account because he will then not be in a position of responsibility.

These facts have encouraged Reagan to carry out his aggressive adventures. Do we have to reply to President Reagan who threatened to bomb Damascus and strike at Syria? There is no need for a reply because former British Prime Minister Edward Heath relieved us of the need for such a reply when he criticized Margaret Thatcher's contribution to President Reagan's aggression on Libya.

Edward Heath said that if Thatcher joins President Reagan in another attack on Libya, then that will be the last time Thatcher will rule Britain. This means that British interests in the Arab homeland will be removed. As a result, Britons will topple Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

The same applies to Reagan or to his successor. If Reagan attacks Syria, then his future successors at the White House will not find U.S. interests, or even a U.S. presence, in the Arab homeland following such aggression.

Criticizes U.S. 'Hostile Statements'

JN261331 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1132 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Gentlemen: President Ronald Reagan and other senior and junior U.S. officials have deliberately involved Syria's name in their provocative, hostile statements, ridiculous claims, and trite justifications for their policy of aggression, terrorism, violation of international law and the UN Charter, and war crimes. Needless to say, Syria and the world public know that Syria's policy, which upholds principles of the UN Charter and international law, the right of all peoples to determine their own destiny, and Syria's right to support national liberation movements which fight imperialist domination and persecution, does not please the U.S. rulers since it is not in line with the aims of U.S. policy, especially in the Middle East.

Syria does not care whether or not the United States is pleased with its policy, because it knows that adherence to freedom, self-determination, national willpower, and freedom of national decisionmaking cannot but lead to a collision with U.S. strategy, which seeks to create world tension, push the world to the brink of war, and reestablish imperialist domination in areas which have already been freed from imperialist domination within the framework of the worldwide process of dismantling colonial rule. Therefore, the responsibility for this collision falls solely on the U.S. rulers who are living in the past, dreaming of pushing the wheel of progress backward, and thinking of the possibility of using a gunboat-and-iron fist policy against national liberation movements.

What Syria cares about is the satisfaction of the Arab masses and the forces of liberation, progress, and peace in the world. This satisfaction is only possible by adhering to freedom and independence, defending territory, rights, and honor, and confronting U.S. and Israeli plans of domination and hegemony.

As President Hafiz al-Asad said on more than one occasion, Syria is determined to strongly defend itself and the territory and rights of its nation with all available means. Syria will not give in to threats and is not scared of the threats of aggression coming directly from Washington or through the Tel Aviv rulers. He who has chosen freedom must fight for it and he who has chosen aggression must pay the price for his crimes. The price will be very dear. In today's world, the aggressor will have to pay the price no matter how strong he is.

The war with imperialism and Israel is a long one. It will not be decided in one battle, a blitzkreig, or one preemptive strike, as they say. There will be no lightning war. No aggressor will escape the consequences of his crimes and no criminal will present himself as a hero.

The excuses the aggressors are using to conceal their aggressive plans are too feeble and vulnerable to conceal the facts from the world public, especially the fact that the United States and Israel are carrying out a policy of official terrorism on a large scale and are creating in this region and in the world an atmosphere of tension and conflict.

No matter how the proponents of the policy of aggression and violation of law try to shroud their acts and preparations in secrecy and conceal their plans behind ridiculous claims, these preparations are now obvious and are being carefully watched. Furthermore, their plans have been exposed. Syria will not retreat or be intimidated or abandon its principled stands. It knows how to defend itself strongly and competently. It feels that it is strong because it defends itself and its nation and fights for a just cause.

Peres Reveals 'Secret Diplomacy' With Jordan
HK280118 Hong Kong AFP in English 0022 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Jerusalem, April 28 (AFP) — Secret diplomacy based on mutual "understanding" is underway between Israel and Jordan, Israeli Premier and Labor Party leader Shim'on Peres said in a television interview here Sunday.

Yitzhak Shamir, the foreign minister and leader of the rightwing Likud Bloc which governs in coalition with labor, said in another TV interview that there were "contacts" between the two countries.

Mr Shamir, describing Israeli-Jordanian relations as amounting to "de facto peace," said without further explanation that he was not opposed to the contacts "provided they do not deviate from the agreed principles on which the coalition government is based."

Premier Peres said in his TV appearance that "as far as Jordan is concerned, a way has been opened, conducted at this stage through secret diplomacy, and for the moment it is characterized by understanding, more than by agreement," he said without elaborating.

He also said that the break between King Hussein of Jordan and Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) leader Yassar 'Arafat was the first time a major Arab leader had rejected Mr 'Arafat for being "an impossible partner."

Mr Peres repeated the Israeli view that the PLO was the main obstacle to peace, adding that PLO splits and internal dissension "work in Israel's favor."

Israel and the United States have refused to open talks with the PLO until it formally renounces violence and recognizes Israel.

Shamir Comments on Talks' Progress

[Text] Foreign Minister Shamir last night also commented on the possibility of progress in peace talks with Jordan. He did not think a breakthrough was involved. Shamir was interviewed by reporter Jerry Cheslow at a dinner in Hebron last night for the Gush Emunim settlement movement.

[Begin recording] [Shamir] I see a great progress we have made in these 18 years. We are in all parts of Israel, of the land of Israel. The presence of Israel is everywhere and it is very important for our security and for peace in the future.

[Cheslow] Mr Peres spoke about a breakthrough today in negotiations with Jordan. Your reaction, sir.

[Shamir] I don't think he said something about a breakthrough. He mentioned some openings in his conversations. I don't think that we are very near to a peace treaty or a similar development. [end recording]

Paper on No 'Tangible' Breakthrough
TA280812 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English
28 Apr 86 pp 1, 2

[Report by Middle East editor Yehuda Litani]

[Excerpts] The recent contacts between Israel and Jordan revealed last night by Prime Minister Peres have failed so far to yield any tangible breakthrough, sources in Jerusalem said.

In spite of the optimism implied by the prime minister, one Jerusalem source said that in recent contacts with Israel, "Jordan had moved very hesitantly. The Jordanians have been moving one step forward and two steps backwards."

The Israelis were encouraged by the fact that their proposals for Palestinian self-rule under "Jordanian-Israeli condominium" in the territories did not run counter to the Jordanian demand that the Gaza Strip be included with the West Bank in any possible agreement, the sources said.

According to the Jerusalem sources, Israel is now prepared to consider simultaneous implementation of autonomy on both the West Bank and Gaza Strip, although it has not entirely ruled out the idea previously favoured by Peres of autonomy in Gaza first.

In this context, Israeli officials reportedly attempted to encourage Jordan to become more directly involved in West Bank activities, including increased investment in development projects.

The Jerusalem sources said that in the talks the Israelis were encouraged by Jordanian disclosures that the rift between Amman and the PLO had widened since Husayn announced on February 19 that he was ending joint efforts with the organization to begin Middle East peace talks. But the breakdown with the PLO has in itself not been enough to inspire the Jordanians to a more practical position vis-a-vis Israel and progress towards an arrangement.

The sources attributed Amman's tepid response to concerns about how the Palestinian population in the territories and abroad would respond to cooperation with Israel. Jordan was shaken by the negative reaction in the territories to Husayn's February 19 speech on PLO talks.

The new Israeli-Jordanian dialogue comes as the U.S. State Department is making fresh efforts to promote dialogue between Israel and Jordan, sources in Jerusalem disclosed last night.

The efforts, being coordinated by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy and special U.S. envoy Wat Cluverius, are reported to comprise a last ditch attempt to revive the peace process.

The State Department initiative has met a rather cool reception in the White House, where advisers to President Reagan contend there is little hope of any major political breakthrough. U.S. efforts should focus on promoting economic growth as a way of preparing an acceptable environment for peace talks, White House officials are saying.

The State Department, Jerusalem sources say, aims to show some tangible progress on the peace front before the scheduled October cabinet rotation in Israel. The Jerusalem sources said the State Department believes that once Peres is replaced by Vice Premier Shamir there will be no hope of major progress towards a settlement.

Peres on Inflation, Regional Peace Issues

TA271630 Jerusalem Television Service in Hebrew 1500 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Interview with Prime Minister Shim'on Peres by Dan Margalit in the prime minister's office in Jerusalem — live]

[Excerpts] [Margalit] Mr prime minister, according to what I heard from friends, the shops were crowded on the eve of the Passover holiday, with the impression being that the recession is over and that celebrations are about to begin anew. Is it correct to say that we have in fact discontinued the tightening of the belt in recent weeks?

[Peres] No, I think this was expected in advance, namely, that the buying power of the new shekel would rise, as it indeed has. I am happy that people can buy more commodities with fewer shekels.

[Margalit] Does this not contain the danger of renewed inflation, of renewed printing of money? You met with the new finance minister, Moshe Nisim, today. Is there no danger of renewed inflation?

[Peres] According to all the opinions I have heard, there is no such danger. It appears that there is no latent inflation. By October we are going to lift all price controls. So far controls have been lifted from 50 percent of all commodities, but prices have remained stable, and some are even below the officially published ceiling.

[Margalit] Nevertheless, there is some feeling of a parliamentary uprising on the part of the opposition parties. It is on this subject that you met with Minister Nisim. What will happen if they refuse to approve the economic decrees in the Knesset? How will you find the funds for the budget?

[Peres] By way of dialogue and persuasion. Let me tell you: I was told by the economic experts, those who prepared the previous economic plan, that toward the end of this year it will be possible to reach an inflation rate of 6 percent per year. This is our main goal now, namely, to get rid of the abnormal inflation rates which were the case in Israel in the past. I, at any event, will do everything I can to convince my colleagues, the Knesset members, to go for a goal of 6 percent inflation. This will give the people security and stability, and will enable us to deal more with exports.

[Margalit] Mr Peres, you said that in a possible television confrontation with Mr Shamir during the next election campaign, you will take exceptions with him on the issue of peace. Am I to understand from this that we either failed with regard to this issue now due to the tie in the government, or that you were perhaps given a long enough rope for action but that we should be very disappointed with the reaction of even the moderate Arab leaders?

[Peres] I do not know about being disappointed. I surely admit this is a difficult issue, though. Things have happened in our efforts for peace which I do not underrate.

[Margalit] Positive things?

[Peres] Yes. First, there is no war in Lebanon. This too is part of peace. Second, a dialogue with Egypt began after a period of deadlock prior to the establishment of this government. Third, a very considerable improvement in Israel's international status has come about. Fourth, with Jordan too, a road has opened. This road is at the stage of quiet diplomacy and now involves understanding rather than agreement. However, very interesting things have taken place here, too...

[Peres, interrupting] I do not want to excite too much. Let us talk about the visible things first. What we can see is an open, clear-cut rift between King Husayn and 'Arafat. This can be seen by all. It is the first time that an important Arab leader said that 'Arafat is impossible, that he is no partner. Take note that this is not the end of the process. There is a split currently between the 'Arafat Fatah and those Fatah forces located in Jordan, in addition to the rift which occurred in Syria at the time. Since I consider 'Arafat as the greatest obstacle to peace, I can liken the situation to a stone which breaks a little, which gets ground somewhat. Pay attention to another point which we cannot take credit for, but which definitely helps us: the antiterror war. Is it such a simple thing that the United States, with its political, economic, and even military power, has publicly come out with an unequivocal battle against international terrorism? Did you think, 1 and 1/2 years ago, that we would reach a situation where Libya would be bombed, that European countries would begin to expel some Libyans from embassies on their territory? In other words...

[Margalit, interrupting] Are you optimistic enough to believe that the Americans will pursue this?

[Peres] When this harms U.S. honor, interests, and principles?

Yes. They have launched a war. We are no longer isolated in our struggle. One good morning we woke up to see we were not the chief, surely not the sole, fighter against terror. All of the above are processes. Let me add, my friend, that I am also quite happy that the United States has adopted a plan, the initiative for which, let us say, emanated from here: the Middle East Marshall plan. You know, when I traveled to the United States a few weeks ago, the Israeli press classified this as another fantasy which the United States would not accept, and so on and so forth. In the meantime, a person of only modest importance, named Ronald Reagan, the U.S. President, stood up and said he was going to raise this plan in Japan. He hinted that countries whose strength we need in this area are involved. So, this may not sound important to some. In my opinion, though, the above moves are moves in the right direction, showing that progress has been made despite the numerous difficulties.

[Margalit] You view this as part of the achievements scored thanks to the government's policy for the past 1 and 1/2 years. If and when the rotation takes place and you become the vice prime minister and foreign minister do you think that these moves will be continued by the Israeli Government then?

[Peres] I would say this: if these moves are not continued, the government will not be able to exist. A government must have a reason, a logic for its existence. There is no government for the sake of government, or rule for sake of rule, the way I view things. Therefore, I surely hope these moves will continue. Otherwise, there will not be a reason for continuing.

[Margalit] Perhaps there is already no logic for maintaining the rotation, except that the point of honoring agreements is surely very important, per se. In addition, allow me to introduce the personal aspect here, it is perhaps very important for you to remain credible in the political sphere. You signed an agreement and you want to maintain it.

[Peres] The point of maintaining an agreement is a legitimate consideration which I do not deny. One should still remember that an agreement deals with a series of issues, not with a single subject, in both the political and economic fields. I will honor all agreements if all agreements are honored. I do not intend to violate any clause, nor do I intend to regard the violation of any clause as a nonviolation. This is an important point and it must be clear.

[Margalit] The way your partners are maintaining the agreement now — is it good enough to go through with the rotation?

[Peres] There are difficulties which I do not conceal, but I feel that progress has been made. You know, I may not have been spoiled by fate. I am constantly thrown into a difficult situation and have to find a way to emerge from it. I am not complaining and am not rash. Patience and long-term vision are necessary. If I see that matters can be promoted I will be glad to implement the rotation since this is in the interest of the peopoe and the country.

[Margalit] Mr Peres, you earlier mentioned the achievements of the policy of your government regarding King Husayn, his relations with the PLO. On the other hand, we see, and this is in the wake of your remarks on the U.S. antiterror war, that Syria may also turn into a target for the U.S. operation. Do we take a positive view of this?

[Peres] Look, Syria is more cunning than Libya. It has managed to hide its role in terrorism better. However, this is gradually being exposed to the eyes of the public around the world. It will not be long before Syria will have to either stop its terrorist activity or defend its activity and accept the risks involved. Al-Asad is undoubtedly a very sly, very talented leader. I do not want to underrate this, but we sometimes ignore the troubles of our neighbor. We sometimes attribute too many achievements to him. He has after all emerged the loser in Lebanon, on both its Muslim and Christian fronts, and he does not know how to move forward. He succeeded us and inherited all our troubles there. I am not really envious of him for that. As for the economic situation in Syria — this is indescribably difficult. Last year the Syrians lost 10 percent of their GNP. They never had a large GNP in the first place. Their agricultural exports declined as well. Now, Syria is quite infuriated about the fact that Al-Qadhdhafi stole the show from it, that he has suddenly become the hero of the Arab world. In my opinion, Al-Asad is struggling to become the recognized, sole leader of the Arab world, more than he ever struggled for the recovery of the Golan Heights. His dream is a great one, and dangerous. Al-Asad's advantage is that he does not daydream, but his disadvantage is that his night dreams are very dangerous.

[Margalit] In the meantime, some bombs are planted on buses in Damascus. Do we know who does this?

[Peres] No, we really do not. We only know who does not do this: We have no role in this.

Peres, Nisim Discuss Budget Cuts, Economic Measures

TA271248 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1200 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] In a discussion held at the Prime Minister's Office about expenditures not provided for in next year's state budget, it was decided that the government will take firm action to carry out past resolutions. It was also decided that in view of expected extraordinary expenditures of hundreds of millions of dollars, the Treasury will draw up proposals for further budget cuts. The discussion was attended by the prime minister, the finance minister and his senior aides, and Professors Bruno and Berglass.

Finance Minister Moshe Nisim said that in order to finance extraordinary expenditures made already worth over $200 million, additional resources should be found, the budget should be cut further, or some other alternative should be found. Implementation of the government's resolutions would raise $400 million, about half of the extraordinary expenditures that are expected. Minister Nisim noted that any deviation from the budget approved by the Knesset might bring about a recurrence of inflation. He was speaking to our correspondent Me'ir Einstein.

[Text] Speaking to journalists at the opening of the Jewish Film Festival in Tiberias, the prime minister reacted to Housing Minister David Levi's announcement that the Ministry of Construction is to begin building homes in the center of Hebron for Jewish residents. Peres said there is a coalition agreement that every new building requires a special decision and we will insure that the terms of the coalition will be adhered to. When asked if this meant that the minister of housing cannot go ahead and build using his ministry's budget, Peres answered that he did not want to respond to an announcement he had not himself heard.

Shamir Supports Hebron Settlement

TA271755 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1705 GMT 27 Apr 36

[Text] Vice Prime Minister Yitzhaq Shamir this evening came to Hebron to join with those who are celebrating 18 years of Jewish settlement in Hebron. He will participate in the special dinner for the occasion. Our correspondent spoke with Yitzhaq Shamir in Hebron a short time ago:

[Begin Shamir recording] This is an event that should be celebrated. Jewish Hebron is marking 18 years since its establishment. This was a historic imperative following the bloody riots in 1929, during which the Jewish settlement was annihilated. This was a historic imperative in order to erase this victory of Arab terrorism, and therefore it is appropriately being celebrated. Moreover, all that is being done in Hebron is in the framework of the operations of the Israeli Government until today. The basic guidelines of the national unity government clearly state that the government will continue to develop and support all the settlements established by the Israeli Government in Eretz Yisra'el, and therefore I am not only entitled to be here, I am required to be here.

[Unidentified correspondent] Will you support the continuation of the development...

[Shamir — interrupting] Doubtlessly, doubtlessly. We must develop the Jewish settlement in this important place. [end recording]

Reports on Diplomat Exchange With Poland Denied

TA280521 Jerusalem Domestic Service in English
0500 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Jerusalem sources have denied reports that Israel and Poland are to exchange diplomatic representatives next month. The sources said that an agreement in principle had been worked out last year but some details remain to be clarified. The sources also said that there were no contacts with the Soviet Union on the possibility of renewing diplomatic relations. The original report on relations between Israel and Poland came out of a meeting between Israel's ambassador to Bonn and Polish diplomats.

Israeli Denies Involvement in Iranian Arms Affair

TA270800 Tel Aviv HADASHOT in Hebrew 27 Apr 86 p 2

[Report by Ya'ir Fidel and Eli'ezer Strauch from Bermuda, Ilan Kfir, and Avi Gan'or from Detroit]

[Excerpt] Yitzhaq Hevroni, head of the Hebron yeshiva, is one of two Israelis still wanted by the United States in connection with the arms smuggling deal to Iran. U.S. prosecutor Rudolph Giuliani has declared that wo Israeli citizens are still wanted for questioning: Yitzhaq Hevroni and (Ompoza).

Hevroni is a financier and partner in the BIT Corporation, which is suspected of trying to carry out the deal with the Iranians. The Eisenberg family, whose members were arrested in Bermuda, are also partners in the company. According to information received from New York, Hevroni has met with Iranians connected to the deal. He recently returned from abroad.

Hevroni denies meeting with Iranians. "The Americans are looking for me only because I am the corporation's treasurer. But I tell you that I never had any connection to the arms affair," he said.

"I am only a financier and have no interest in the trading of arms. My only involvement in the company is in sitting in the offices and knowing what goes on. No money has been received from this deal. I would have been active only if the company had received money from the deal. In any event, I would not have touched the deal had the company not received all the permits from the United States and Israel."

EEC Mission Heads Told Measures To Be 'Reciprocated'

LD262006 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic
1930 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] The People's Committee of People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison this afternoon summoned the heads of EEC diplomatic missions accredited to the Jamahiriyah — the heads of the Italian, French, Greek, Spanish, Belgian, Federal Germany, Danish, and Dutch missions. The committee told the heads of these missions the following:

First, Libya rejects the measures adopted by the EEC countries.

Second, Libya cannot see any justification for these measures which can only be interpreted as submission to U.S. pressure.

Third, Libya reaffirms that it has no links or any kind of relations with terrorism and defies anyone to produce such evidence.

Fourth, we have no option but to reciprocate these measures which have been adopted without any justification.

Tripoli on 'Subservience', Sanctions of EEC

LD252113 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1930 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] The EEC has again confirmed its subservience to the terrorist U.S. Administration in its rabid campaign against the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. The EEC has begun to implement the order from child murderer Reagan to expel Libyan citizens — whether they are members of the People's Bureaus or students in universities or institutes. They have been arrested and are to be deported with their families to the Jamahiriyah.

The Spanish Foreign Ministry announced today that it will expel 11 libyan citizens including eight teachers and students.

The Government of Thatcher, the child murderer, announced that it will expel 22 Libyan students whom it detained last week after an oppressive storming of their residence. Later today the British Government issued official instructions banning the Libyan students studying air navigation — whose number exceeds 300 — from continuing their studies and specialized training as a prelude to deporting them. While this measure is not surprising since it comes from the EEC which is known for its subservience to the U.S. colonialist influence and for its collaboration with the barbaric U.S. aggression against the people of the Jamahiriyah, which resulted in the murder of children, women, old people, and innocent civilians, we consider the fact that the EEC is collectively towing the line in the rabid campaign, orchestrated by the United States and the UK, to be a very grave matter. The EEC, neither collectively or individually, held any consultations or contacts with the Jamahiriyah concerning bilateral or collective relations, and held a meeting for its members to decide these matters. This matter, as much as it contradicts the international traditions and the principle of good intentions in international relations, shows the extent of the U.S. hegemony and its sabotaging role in international relations — and in the Arab-European relations in particular. It also shows the extent of the premeditated intentions of the two child murderers, Reagan and Thatcher, to create an atmosphere of confusion to distract attention from the appalling crime which they committed against the innocent; the crime which violates international laws.

The measures adopted by the EEC against the Jamahiriyah show that the EEC members and their master, the child murderer, have become members of a species between the pigs and humans. They have not yet developed to the level of normal humans. They are just pigs in farms. The methods and morals of the NATO members, by virtue of their measures and methods, have reached a level which is too low for them to be human.

The Great Jamahiriyah reserves its internationally guaranteed right to adopt suitable measures in the face of the implementation of the stated EEC resolution.

JANA's political editor, in his commentary on this behavior, warned the EEC of the consequences of the measures, which it adopted or will adopt, against the Great Jamahiriyah and its people, who will not be affected by such measures. The bad effects of these measures will definitely be reflected on those ruling regimes, and the European peoples will have to punish their rulers who went along with Reagan, the child murderer and insignificant actor, who lost his mind and became a war criminal, who will be punished by the U.S. people and who will be thrown into the dust bin of history in the same way as other peoples threw away their rulers such as the shah of Iran, the entombed Al-Sadat, the lackey Numayri, Haile Selassie, Marcos, Idris al-Sunusi, Lon Nol, Batista; and there will be others too.

AFP Cites Al-Din on Considering Joining Warsaw Pact

[By Rene Naba]

[Text]Tripoli, April 27 (AFP) — Libya is "seriously" considering joining the Warsaw Pact because the U.S. air raids had made "neutrality useless for a small country," Libyan Information Minister Muhammad Sharaf al-Din said here on Sunday.

"Neutrality becomes useless for a small country like the Jamahiriyah from the moment that a superpower such as the United States blows the principle to pieces," he said in an interview with AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE.

Mr Sharaf al-Din also accused Washington of trying to force Tripoli to "break its neutrality" and called the alleged effort "a fatal mistake."

Stressing that Libya was ready to face the United States or any other attacker, Mr Sharaf al-Din said that, despite their sophisticated electronic equipment, U.S. F-111 planes had not escaped Libyan anti-aircraft defences.

A mobile exhibition of U.S. aircraft downed during the air raids on January [as received] 15, and of debris of fragmentation bombs dropped by U.S. planes, Mr Sharaf al-Din said, will be shown in several Libyan cities.

He said the bombs had been dropped on Banghazi, Libya's second largest city, situated 850 kilometers (270 miles) east of Tripoli. Mr Sharaf al-Din refused, however, to say whether a U.S. missile reportedly found unexploded after the raids had been sent to the Soviet Union for study, as Libyan Leader Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi had promised, or whether Soviet experts had been allowed to study the debris of U.S. aircraft.

Libya claims it downed 24 U.S. F-111 warplanes and Soviet Union reports say 12 U.S. planes were hit by Libyan anti-aircraft batteries, but Washington maintains that only one plane did not return to its base in Britain.

Mr Sharaf al-Din also refused to comment [on] reports that Moscow would send Tripoli sophisticated weaponry, especially for anti-aircraft defence, stressing only that Libya had the Soviet Union's support.

He would not comment either on reports that Libya would reciprocate restrictions imposed on Libyan citizens and diplomats by several European countries, saying only that any such retaliation would have to be decided by the "popular committees."

UAE Paper Reports Soviet Arms, Equipment 'Obtained'

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 26 Apr (WAM) — In today's issue, the newspaper AL-ITTIHAD discloses that Libya has obtained reinforcements of Soviet arms and equipment following the recent U.S. aggression on it. The paper also discloses that negotiations are under way between Libya and the Warsaw Pact countries on the kind of military aid the Pact can extend to Libya and that the Warsaw Pact countries have shown readiness to supply Libya with any kind of military aid that would strengthen its defenses against any new U.S. aggression.

Quoting its correspondents in London and Moscow, the newspaper reports that the arms and equipment Libya obtained recently included monitoring and warning systems, radar systems, antijamming systems, and new batteries of the improved SAM B-5 [as received] missiles — Gammon — which Libya did not have before. AL-ITTIHAD reports that these missiles are completely different in their combat capability and range from the SAM-5 missiles which were used in Libya before the aggression. The new missiles are distinguished for their accuracy and for their greater ability in antijamming and electronic blurring tasks.

Informed British sources explained to the newspaper that the Soviet step to strengthen Libya's defense capabilities is a direct and accelerated Soviet entry into the U.S.-Libyan confrontation, both on political and military levels.

Military sources told the newspaper that the Soviet naval units which are currently in Libyan ports include ships primarily assigned for air defense tasks and a number of patrol boats and frigates. This is a reminder to Washington that it should recognize the Soviet Navy's right to navigate, cruise, and station in the U.S.-Libyan disputed waters. The Soviet presence in the Libyan ports is a sign by Moscow that it does not intend to abandon its security and strategic interests in the Mediterranean even if this requires the Soviet fleet to be permanently stationed opposite the U.S. fleet in Libya's eastern waters.

JANA Claims Egypt Offered Military Aid, Information

LD271514 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1400 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 27 Apr (JANA) — After the U.S.-NATO assault began, high level Egyptian personalities made contact — their contacts are recorded and when it is necessary they will be made public to the world — declaring their support for Libya and insisting on their readiness to extend military facilities to the Libyan against the U.S. 6th Fleet in addition to providing Libya with information.

These personalities offered to give weapons to resist the U.S. assault and this took place in total secrecy.

These personalities expressed their desire to take revenge against the United States, which was behind the Israelis and helped the Israelis triumph over the Egyptians causing them consecutive defeats; however it transpired that the matter was exposed and the Egyptian leaders feared for themselves from the United States and Israel.

After they were exposed there was fierce hostility from civilian and military leaders at the highest echelons of power culminating threats of murder, exposure of secrets, and turning one against the other.

This is why the Egyptians made the topic public in the way they wanted and they believed that this would protect them against U.S. anger and in a way that would prevent the truth of the matter coming out.

By our brief publication of this fact we want to make it clear to their master, the United States, and to explain to the Egyptian Army and people the truth about their leadership and what takes place inside the Republican Palace.

Ministers Cited at UN Security Council Session

LD251646 Tripoli JANA in English 1400 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] New York, Shaban 15, April 25, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The UN Security Council resumed yesterday afternoon in New York its emergency sessions to consider the armed U.S. barbarous aggression on the Libyan Arab people as was called for by the Non-aligned Movement delegation which arrived in New York yesterday.

In yesterday's session foreign ministers of India, Yugoslavia, Cuba, Congo and Ghana delivered their speeches, denouncing the same U.S. aggression against Great al-Jamahiriyah as an aggression against an independent and sovereign member-state of United Nations and Non-aligned Movement and of other international organizations.

Mention should be made that the members of the Non-aligned Movement expressed their full solidarity with the Libyan Arab people and displayed their sorrow for the great number of civilian martyrs-victims of these savage bombing air raids.

Speaking in the name of the Non-alignment Movement, India's foreign minister denounced the barbarous, hostile American act against Great Jamahiriyah. He considered it completely in contradiction with the principles and aims of the UN Charter, international law and an aggression on the sovereignty and independence of a state member of the Non-aligned Movement.

Describing what he saw in Tripoli last week, the Indian foreign minister said that "those memories are still vivid in our minds. Our delegation came straight from Tripoli where it saw with its own eyes the nature of the destruction and lives and property loss caused by the U.S. bombing raid. Many buildings in residential areas were destroyed, whole families wiped out, many people killed and injured mostly children, women and old people.

The Indian foreign minister denounced the U.S. aggression saying that there is no justification to the use of mighty power or [words indistinct] an independent state. He confirmed that standing of the Non-aligned Movement firmly and solidly against the policy of aggression and against acts that violate the principles of independence and sovereignty of any state and the use of force regardless of which state uses it.

He confirmed the full solidarity of the Non-aligned Movement with the Libyan Arab people pointing out that the movement unanimously stands to defend the independence and sovereignty of Jamahiriyah.

He warned against allowing such aggressions to pass without denounciation and condemnation. He said: "Those who fail to reply properly today will have no right to do that tomorrow."

He pointed out that the nonaligned delegation has come to the UN Security Council to stress the grave concern of the movement about the dangerous developments in the centre of the Mediterranean Sea which threaten the world peace and security in the region and the world over.

He demanded that the Security Council practice its basic duties and responsibilities to preserve world security and peace.

In the end he confirmed that the negative votes in the UN Security Council — including the use of veto — has robbed the council the opportunity to register its adherence to the important principles contained in the draft resolution put forward.

The foreign minister of Yugoslavia, in his address yesterday afternoon, to the emergency session of the UN Security Council, denounced the barbarous U.S. aggression on Great Jamahiriyah. He confirmed his country's solidarity with the Libya Arab people in its defense of its freedom, independence and the sovereignty of its territories.

The Yugoslav minister, member of the nonaligned delegation dispatched by the UN, spoke in detail about what destruction and victims of U.S. terrorism he saw among the civilians.

He said: "What we saw there gives our demands strength. We saw traces [words indistinct] death scenes of women, children, wounded and dead men. We saw the traces of destruction amongst the residential buildings. We felt what the innocents had suffered. We saw that the aim of the attack was the home of the Libyan leader, his own life and that of his family.

He went on to say: "We witnessed justified anger, we heard expressions of condemnation of both the popular and official levels."

The foriegn minister of Yugoslavia confirmed that this tragic picture must make the UN Security Council more adherent to its responsibilities in condemning those actions that violate the principles of independence and the sovereign state — against the policy of threat and the use of force regardless what state uses it.

In the end he demanded that the UN Security Council take emergency measures and condemn the act of aggression and act not to make it happen again.

Soviet, Czech Statement Condemns U.S. Aggression

[Text] French Minister of External Affairs Jean-Bernard Raimond has received the brother secretary of the People's Committee of the Libyan Arab People's Bureau in Paris. The French minister reaffirmed the independent French stand at this meeting, adding that there is no truth to what some media are reporting that French President Mitterrand said regarding the U.S.-Atlantic [as heard] aggression against the Great Jamahiriyah's people. Raimond said that France is interested in eliminating all tension in the Mediterranean, adding that France appreciates the Great Jamahiriyah's announcement that it will not strike any targets in southern Europe. We consider this to be a responsible stance, Raimond said. The French minister also stressed the importance of dialogue as a means for resolving all problems in the region.

Tripoli TV Reports on Students' Expulsion From UK

LD260150 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic
2220 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Libyan Arab students arrived in Tripoli this evening following children murderer Thatcher's decision to prevent them from continuing their studies in Britain. These students joined with a large number of citizens who welcomed them at Tripoli International Airport and organized a demonstration condemning the hostile stand of the British authorities. The protestors chanted slogans that expressed their denunciation of the stance of the British Government and affirmed the willingness of the Libyan Arab people to safeguard the revolution of the Great Al-Fatih and its historic leadership. [Video shows Libyan students chanting slogans at the Tripoli airport while being greeted by their families and friends]

[Unidentified correspondent at Tripoli airport] As we confront the crusade being led by the United States, Britain and the Zionist enemy against the Arab nation and against the Jamihiriyah — which represents the loftiness of the Arab nation and its dignity — fascist Britain, the enemy of progress, Islam and the Arab nation, has deported Libyan Arab students from Britain, where they were studying technological sciences. They did so because of the crusade of hatred toward Islam that opposes any progress in the Arab nation. We are going now to meet these students who have been ordered out by the British authorities. We now meet Dr (Sru Saffar) who will speak to us about the deportation decision, and the way Libyan Arab students have been treated by the British police.

[Saffar] In fact, the series of measures that were carried out by the British authorities against Libyan students are extremely barbarous and savage. They are devoid of any human and civilized principles. Even if these students are a revolutionary force shouldering the responsibility of preaching the people's revolution — the revolution of tomorrow — they are not terrorists as they are portrayed by the British media. What is especially shameful is that some of the students who arrived today were arrested in hospitals while they were performing humanitarian services; some were waited for outside operating theaters; some were arrested inside their laboratories. Some of the police measures were extremely savage. They themselves used an extremely terroristic style because they entered children's homes using all bestial means, even dogs. This created great anxiety for the Libyan families.

[Saffar] Dentistry.

[Correspondent] What is the relation between dentistry and terrorism as they claim?

[Saffar] In reality this is just a cover up for the political and military failure of all of NATO, and Britain in particular. It is kind of face-saving before the opposition in Britain. A proof of this is that some policemen, when asked if there is any material proof of the involvement of any of these young people in any action, answered that even the police themselves are not convinced that there is. They said that this decision came from higher authorities and that they are but policemen who execute the orders.

I think that this despicable action is part of a big plan to influence the steadfastness of the Jamahiriyah. I believe that this aggression or this act is part of a series of military actions that began days ago.

In reality, we now feel that all progressive forces, Arab and British, as well as the British left wing parties, back the Libyan people. I believe that Britain especially has made a historic mistake and will pay its price very soon, God willing.

Students Interviewed on Expulsion

LD262255 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 1955 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Brothers and sisters, the correspondent of the Voice of Greater Arab Homeland, the voice of the revolutionary committees, interviewed some of the brother Libyan Arab students expelled by the child killer Thatcher on their arrival at Tripoli International Airport yesterday. We now present a recording of this interview:

[Begin recording] Brothers of Arabism everywhere, among the decisions of the Libyan Arab people at their basic people's congresses was to turn the wheel of development at maximum speed. Considering that there is no development without mastering the means of science and technology and arising from the teachings of our tolerant religion Islam, the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah has sent many of its youth and sons to various parts of the world to study the sciences. This is to be the foundation for the establishement of peace in the world and according to the theses of the new civilizational and human thought, the Third Universal Theory, that is, the establishment of relations between the peoples which will lead to the establishment of relations between the peoples which will lead to the establishment of new rules for human intercourse.

However, the colonialist imperialist governments deny the people these noble objectives. And the child killers are seeking to destroy any civilization that brings the tidings of a human future in which peace and security prevail, particularly if this civilization emanates from the Arab land and in the form put forward by the 1 September Revolution. Therefore, after the savage U.S.-British-NATO aggression on the Jamahiriyah the terrorists and the child killers have decided to continue practicing crime and terrorism, even against the seekers of knowledge. And now, after the U.S. Administration of ignorance had earlier expelled our Libyan Arab students, comes the old child killer Thatcher to practice the same crime against our students in Britain on the pretext of lies and rumours persistently spread by her against our Libyan Arab people and their great humanitarian revolution.

Within this framework we have met, brothers of Arabism, with some of the brother students who were affected by the criminal hand, at Tripoli International Airport to speak to us about their impressions and their revolutionary response to the reckless and ignorant decision. Here is Dr Sayfi al-Tahir: In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. In fact, the expulsion of Libyan Arab students from their various specializations in the United Kingdom during the last 2 days is part of the vicious plan aimed at imposing a siege on the Jamahiriyah which represents the genuine Arab cry and which is an obstacle in the path of the U.S. plan which aims at the entire Arab region through political and economic hegemony. It seems that this plan, which is being implemented by NATO, includes several roles. Some of them, directly or indirectly participated in the military aggression on the Libyan cities and some of them are now carrying out minor roles in an attempt to impose a complete siege on the Jamahiriyah in the scientific, cultural, and economic spheres. It seems that NATO countries have distributed the roles and the tasks among themselves and they are now carrying them out.

In fact, the sum total of the false pretexts under which the British authorities justify the expulsion of the students is that they are practicing revolutionary activities which harm British security. This is false because even if those students were members of the Revolutionary Committees Movement — which is a new universal movement and, judged by its historical objectives, a humanitatian movement that stresses the values of justice, right, and good — however, they try now to brand this movement as a terrorist movement and as a movement seeking to undermine security in other countries. These are all false pretexts through which they attempt to mislead public opinion through the media and radio to impose a siege, as I said in the beginning, round the Jamahiriyah after all other options have failed, whether political isolation or economic isolation or propaganda, and now even direct military aggression has failed.

The students were expelled from a country which boasts about democracy. And whatever the students did in Britain, it did not contradict British law at all. But this campaign is part of a racist campaign directed against the Arabs in general and the Libyans — who represent the pride of the Arab nation and the dignity of the Arab nation — in particular.

[Correspondent] Thank you. Now we meet with brother...?

[Student] Engineer [name indistinct] PH.D. student at Birmingham University. I agree with what my colleague has said. The only pretext which the British Government had for expelling the Libyan Arab students while we were in our universities was to save face before the political indignation against the Thatcher government inside Britain as a result of its participation in the aggression on the Jamahiriyah, because the British people mostly oppose or reject the use of the British bases by the American forces. So, the last card available in Thatcher's hand was the expulsion of the Libyan students and accusing them and trying to imply that they are terrorists and are planning terrorist operations so that she could prove to the public opinion that her participation in the aggression on the Jamahiriyah was sound. However, what happened was the reverse. The evidence was that the British people demonstrated outside police stations and outside the places where the Libyan students were arrested, while shouting: Down With the Thatcher government, and calling for the building of friendship with the Arab peoples based on respect and cooperation. There is no other justification for the British Government to take this measure except to save face in front of Reagan and the U.S. Administration. Most regrettably, I do not think there is a British Government there in Britain: It is an administration from the American Black House administration or even a third class administration which implements not only Reagan's orders but also the orders of the U.S. State Department officials. Thank you.

[Correspondent] After what Thatcher has committed in this crime, the crime of deception or the practice of terrorism against knowledge and the Libyan Arab students, can we say that Thatcher and Reagan and those who followed their course can really achieve what they aim at in depriving the Libyan Arab people?

[Unidentified student] I think that the Libyan people enjoy a rare steadfastness on which all the U.S. Administration's proposals for striking at the Jamahiriyah and for obstructing the revolutionary movement were broken. These attempts have failed. Just like the failure of all previous attempts, any new attempt will be broken on the rock of the steadfastness of the Libyan Arab people.

On our departure we heard on the news that they are also going to deport about 300 more Libyan Arab students who are studying civilian aviation, in all branches of specialization of aviation and engineering. This means that now [sentence not completed]. Actually, we said to them: If your pretext for expelling these students is only that they are members of revolutionary committees, then the historic direction of the Libyan Arab people is not only the direction of Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, but it is also the direction of the popular masses of Libya as a whole, a direction represented by declaring the establishment of the people's authority, and which stressed all the values and issues which they now [words indistinct]. In the declaration of people's authority it was stressed that defending freedom everywhere and standing by those who struggle for it are sacred causes which we will never abandon and whose responsibility is shouldered by all Libyans — not only by a specific person as they now try to present the case, as if the battle is between Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi personally and Reagan. This is not true. Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi is a leader in an international conflict; he is an international leader. In fact, the only thing now which the masses at home do not fully realize is that we, as students abroad, actually felt that Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi does not only belong to the Libyans and that the Jamahiriyah does not only belong to the Libyans, because Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and the Jamahiriyah now represent a base for the international liberation movement. He is actually an international leader.

Going back to the question, I think that just like the failure of all previous attempts, this attempt will also be broken. We, Libyans, when we opted for this choice and this path, from the beginning we were ready to bear all the consequences. This was for reaching the liberation and unity of the Arab nation. Since we mentioned the unity of the Arab nation and the liberation of the usurped Arab territories, the Arab revolution in Libya, in addition to leading the international liberation movement for peace and security in the world, shoulders another sacred duty which is uniting the Arab nation. Uniting the Arab nation means constructing a new civilization which will restore the glories of the Arab nation and restore the light of the Arab nation to the world and humanity as it was in the past. This is a danger which imperialism does not want.

[Correspondent] From this starting point, is there some advice you would like to give to Arab youth in the greater Arab homeland from the ocean to the gulf?

[Student] What we realized in Britain is the great Arab solidarity with the Libyan revolution and its leader, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. What was proved in Britain is the fact that the Arab peoples reject U.S. hegemony; reject the occupation of their land; reject the division of their land; and reject the gates and borders. This was confirmed by the solidarity of the Arabs with all political organizations which condemned the aggression and rejected the aggression. On the contrary, they showed readiness, and asked us to start enlisting volunteers to fight on the side of the Jamahiriyah.

I would like to stress that Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi is not only a national and pan-Arab leader, he is also an international leader. Proof of this is the fact that the poltiical organizations and the communities in Britain respect Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi very much, and are looking forward to carrying out their role in destroying the strongholds of imperialism. We were surprised by the demonstrations in Britain, which were led by Englishmen, Asians, Africans, Latin Americans, and Europeans condemning the aggression; condemning NATO and its policies; and considering Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi as the symbol of defiance and confrontation of imperialism. Large groups asked us to open the doors for them to enlist and to be given the chance to come to the Jamahiriyah to participate in the historic conflict with imperialism and to contribute, even with a small part.

We shoulder the responsibility for unity. We Libyans, bear the consequences, all the consequences. We shoulder the responsibilities of liberation. We shoulder all the responsibilities of [words indistinct] in the Arab homeland.

[Another student interrupts] [Words indistinct] after Reagan or Thatcher expelled some Libyan Arab students. This increases our pride and defiance of all the coming attempts which might be carried out by the United States and Thatcher. We would like to stress that we will remain loyal and steadfast in the face of all the attempts, whether large or small, by either the old man Reagan or Thatcher the child murderer, we Libyans whether at home or abroad. In the end we are all students raising the banner of pan-Arabism and the banner of Arab unity for the liberation of the Arab homeland from the ocean to the gulf. This is in solidarity with our brother Libyan Arab students abroad, and in defiance of these false and (?barbaric) resolutions. [end recording]

[Announcer] Arab brothers, that was the interview we conducted with some Libyan Arab student brothers who were expelled from Britain thus preventing them from continuing their studies. So, the child murderer Thatcher and her master, the old child murderer Reagan, show that they not only practice terrorism but they also commit the most appalling crimes agianst science, progress, and humanity.

Student Pilots Also Expelled

AU251401 Paris AFP in English 1358 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] London, April 25 (AFP) — Prime Minister Thatcher Friday ordered the expulsion of all Libyan student pilots and apprentice aircraft mechanics training in Britain — nearly 300 in all.

Earlier, the Transport Ministry banned solo flights by the student pilots and access to aircraft by the apprentice mechanics.

"Such trainees," Mrs Thatcher said in a letter to Parliament, "will be unable to complete their course or obtain qualifications.

"In that event their current basis of stay will no longer exist and they will be expected to leave. The home secretary Mr Douglas Hurd, will not hesitate to use his powers to curtail their stay or initiate deportation action in appropriate cases if they fail to leave voluntarily."

Most air training schools in Britain have already grounded their Libyan student pilots, and British Airways (BA), which is training some 150 Libyan mechanics at Heathrow Airport, announced last Tuesday that the Libyans would no longer be allowed inside BA workshops.

Officials said the measures were taken because of Libya's threat of reprisals after it was attacked by British-based U.S. bombers on April 15.

The home office meanwhile announced that 22 Libyans expelled from Britain would be leaving Friday.

The Libyans, mainly students, are being expelled "in the national interest," it was earlier announced.

In a radio interview, Transport Minister Nicholas Ridley said the measures against the trainee pilots and mechanics was for "security reasons."

It was "a risk," he said, to allow Libyans to pilot aircaft or take part in their maintenance.

"I don't think the public would understand," he said, "if Libyan pilots were flying solo around Britain, able to go to any part of the country they choose."

He admitted that some of the Libyans concerned might put forward various reasons for not leaving Britain. In such an event, he said, their requests would be studied on a case by case basis by the home office.

Spain's Foreign Ministry To Expel 'Diplomat', Others

AU251255 Paris AFP in English 1249 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Madrid, April 25 (AFP) — Spain Friday decided to expel 11 Libyans, including one diplomat and two officials of the People's Bureau (embassy) here, the Foreign Ministry announced.

The eight others are teachers or students, according to press reports. The 11 were not identified.

A communique said that the decision was in line with the April 21 agreement by European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers at Luxembourg to impose certain sanctions on Libya.

It continued: "The Spanish Government, conforming to the application of the Convention of Vienna on diplomatic relations, has decided that three officials of the People's Bureau of Libya in Madrid must leave the country."

It said that three were being expelled for "activities incompatible with their status."

The communique said that the government had also decided to expel "eight other Libyans whose activities were a threat to state security"

The Friday edition of the Madrid daily EL PAIS identified them as eight professors and teachers at the Libyan AL Fatah School.

[Text] The U.S. Government has begun evacuation of its nationals from the Yemeni capital of Sanaa. It evacuated 250 U.S. nationals last week from Sudan, now they are leaving Yemen. They also fled from Lebanon to the sea in their escape from Beirut because Arab soil has started to burn under their feet as a result of their hostile actions. Arab soil has become an unbearable fire under the feet of Americans. This fire is also burning in many capitals because of the peoples' anger and their categorical rejection of U.S. presence and arrogance. The U.S. Administration has made the sons of the American people the targets for all the people who are angry and discontented with the dictatorship and terrorism of Reagan, the killer of children.

'Secret' Talks With Tunisia Reportedly Held

23 Apr 86 pp 1, 25

[Excerpt] Paris — Highly-informed diplomatic Arab sources have disclosed to AL-QABAS that secret Tunisian-Libyan talks were held in Paris a few days ago. The talks were the first of their kind for more than 2 months and were designed to contain the renewed crisis between the two countries in the wake of the latest U.S. aggression against Tripoli and Banghazi.

The sources affirmed that a secret meeting was held in Paris between Tunisian Ambassador Hedi Mabrouk and Hamid al-Khudayri, secretary of the Libyan People's Bureau, following a surprise visit to the French capital last weekend by Tunisian Prime Minister Mohamed Mzali and the talks he held with French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

'Arafat Sought To Mediate in Relations With Tunisia

GF270614 Abu Dhabi WAM in Arabic 0555 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 27 Apr (WAM) — The newspaper AL-ITTIHAD today says that the Libyan Government has charged [kallafat] Yasir 'Arafat, chairman of the PLO Executive Committee, with mediation between it and the Tunisian Government in order to turn over a new leaf between the two countries and restore the diplomatic relations which were severed after Libya deported 30,000 Tunisians last year.

The newspaper says that the Libyan request came in a message which was delivered to the PLO office in Nicosia to be given to 'Arafat. The paper says that the message also includes a desire to clear up rumors concerning the use of Tunisian airspace by U.S. planes during their aggression against Libya.

AL-ITTIHAD added that the Tunisian Government has absolutely denied these rumors and requested patience with regard to the restoration of diplomatic relations.

At the airport, the minister gave a statement to the Mauritanian news agency in which he said: I am returning from a mission commissioned by the president to his brother Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, leader of 1 September Revolution, to whom I handed a message of solidarity and support to the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah following the aggressive raids to which the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah was exposed in recent weeks.

MOROCCO

French Foreign Minister Arrives, Opens Talks

LD252225 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic
2000 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Moroccan-French talks at the level of foreign ministers started immediately after the arrival in Rabat today of Jean-Bernard Raimond, the French foreign minister. He is on a 2-day visit to Morocco. This visit is the first to be undertaken by the head of French diplomacy outside EEC countries since his appointment as foreign minister. It is also the first of its kind to an Arab-African state. Jean-Bernard Raimond pointed out this fact in a press statement he made to the national and international media at Sale Airport.

Jean-Bernard Raimond said that he made sure that the first external mission should be in the Maghreb, at its forefront, Morocco, which is strongly linked to France, and which enjoys great respect of France. The French foreign minister recalled his personal ties with Morocco, particularly as he spent 4 years as ambassador of his country to Rabat.

He stated that he will convey a message from the French prime minister, Jaques Chirac, to His Majesty King Hassan II.

In his statement, Jean-Bernard Raimond said that his talks with Moroccan officials will be an opportunity to discuss the most important issues of the hour, at the forefront the current situation in the Mediterranean and the Maghreb region as well as topics of mutual interest.

Jean-Bernard Raimond will also discuss matters related to Moroccan-EEC relations and ways of consolidating the existing cooperation and friendship between Morocco and France, which he described as excellent.

The head of French diplomacy was welcomed at Sale Airport by Abdellatif Filali, minister of foreign affairs and cooperation, Moroccan Ambassador to France Dr Yousef Ben Abbes, the French ambassador to Morocco, Philippe Cuvillier, and a number of other personalities.

[Text] His Majesty King Hassan II today at the Royal Palace in Fes received French Minister of External Relations Jean-Bernard Raimond, who conveyed a personal message from French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac. After the meeting, which was attended by Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Abdellatif Filali, Moroccan Ambassador to Paris Dr Yousef Benabbas, and the French ambassador to Rabat, Jean-Bernard Raimond made a statement to Rabat radio; in it he said that his visit to our country was the first he has made outside of the EEC countries. His choosing of Morocco stems from the exceptional relations that link France with Morocco and the Arab Maghreb countries in general, Raimond said.

Regarding his discussions with the King, the French external affairs minister said that the talks focused on bilateral relations, as well as a number of global issues of mutual concern, foremost among them the situation in the Mediterranean.

The French diplomatic head held friendly talks with Speaker of the House of Deputies Ahmed Osman immediately after his arrival in Fes.

Received by Prime Minister Lamrani

[Excerpt] French Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond described the results of his visit to Morocco as being beneficial and constructive. He said in a statement prior to his departure from Rabat-Sale Airport this morning that this visit, despite its brevity, was full with meetings with Moroccan officials.

Jean-Bernard Raimond underlined the welcome accorded to him by His Majesty King Hassan II. He announced that his majesty the king extended an invitation to French prime minister Jacques Chirac to pay an official visit to Morocco. The French foreign minister spoke about the talks he held with the prime minister and the foreign minister and about the cooperation which he said enabled the exchange of viewpoints regarding international issues and bilateral relations, which he described as excellent.

Regarding these issues, the head of French diplomacy explained that attention was devoted in particular to the current problems in the Mediterranean Sea. He expressed his hope that Moroccan-French relations will continue to improve for the benefit of both countries. He extended an invitation to his Moroccan counterpart to pay a visit to Paris to continue the consultations.

The French foreign minister concluded his statement by expressing his profound appreciation for the hospitable welcome accorded to him and the accompanying delegation during their visit to Morocco, which is considered to be the first visit he carried out to a country outside the European Economic Community.

Hassan II Receives European Parliament Group

LD251507 Rabat MAP in English 1200 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Fes, April 25 (MAP) — King Hassan II of Morocco received here Thursday morning the twelve member delegation from the European Parliament for the relations with the Maghreb, headed by Christian de la Malene.

The European delegation, which started last Sunday a five day visit to Morocco aimed at discussing with Moroccan officials and MP's and EEC-Moroccan relations and the state of the two parties' negotiations of the 1976 cooperation accord, was accompanied by a Moroccan delegation led by speaker of the Moroccan House of Representatives Ahmed Osman.

The audience was also attended by Moroccan Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Abdellatif Filali; Minister of the Interior and Information Driss Basri; and Minister of Protocol and the Royal Household General Moulay Abdelhafid Alaoui.

On the other hand, the delegation held here Thursday afternoon a press conference which mainly dealt with the Moroccan-EEC relations, the Sahara affair and the Sebta and Mellilia issue (two northern towns still under Spanish rule).

After he recalled the identity of views between Morocco and the EEC on political and economic problems, De La Malene indicated the Europeans are convinced there must not be any barrier south of Europe and subsequently between Morocco and Europe. Given the proximity of Morocco to Europe it is fundamental traditional economic exchanges be maintained and even developed, he added.

Other European MP's answered questions stressing that Europe should take into account Mediterranean countries' interests.

Envoy Returns From EC Negotiations in Tunisia

LD261356 Rabat MAP in English 1206 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Rabat, April 26 (MAP) — Moroccan minister delegate in charge of relations with the European Community EC Azzeddine Guessous returned home Friday after a few day visit to Tunisia.

Guessous told newsmen upon arrival that his talks with Tunisian officials had centered on reinforcing bilateral cooperation in various fields and coordinating both countries' stances in their ongoing negotiations with EC officials with a view to preserving their interests following the community's enlargement to Spain and Portugal.

Aware of the negative impact its enlargement would have on economies of Mediterranean "associate" countries including Maghreban countries and of their "legitimate" concern, the European Community had started negotiations with these countries with a view to preserving the "traditional trade flow" between the community and the said countries.

Morocco and Tunisia, however, consider the new EC proposition as unfair and are negotiating better terms after Spain and Portugal's entry, both countries producing similar goods as other Mediterranean countries, especially in agriculture. And with the preferential treatment they now enjoy, their goods would be too competitive unless the new EC trading terms were to be fair for non-member-associate countries.

To this effect, Guessous, specified, he had conferred with Tunisian ministers of foreign affairs, economy, planning and international cooperation, and was received by Premier Mohamed Mzali.

The Moroccan minister also revealed, in a statement to the Tunisian news agency TAP before flying back home, that the two countries had decided to set up joint agricultural, industrial and touristic ventures, and are to shortly create a free zone permitting free exchanges of their products in both countries.

While in Tunis, Guessous had also met with Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi for discussions on inter-Arab economic relations as well as economic relations between Arab countries and European, Asian and American regional groups.

Al-Mahdi on Government Consultations To Be Completed

JN261805 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1710 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, 26 Apr (SUNA) — Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, leader of the Al-Ummah National Party, has announced that consultations to form a new government will be completed during the next 4 days. In a statement today, Al-Mahdi said that formation of the government depends on the completion of the final draft of the proposed charter, whose basic features, he said, are clear now. He added that there currently are consultations with political functionaries, especially of the southern parties which have a large presence outside the Constituent Assembly and which must be involved in consultations.

Al-Sadiq pointed out that the 25-member committee, which is composed of members of the Al-Ummah Party and which is entrusted with representing the southern region, will work out a formula on both future administration in the southern region and the region's participation in the forthcoming constitutional conference.

Al-Sadiq added that the current consultations include political forces which did not find means of expression or represenation in the assembly. He said that this move was made for the sake of unity and for achieving national unity. He pointed out that there is an available opportunity for all political forces to participate in the government unless they choose to isolate themselves. Al-Sadiq attributed the delay of results of the current consultations to the delay of the arrival of some regional assembly deputies because they, he said, have a major role in decision-making and should be involved in these consultations.

[Text] Khartoum, 27 Apr (SUNA) — Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, leader of the Al-Ummah National Party, today sent a message to Colonel John Garang, leader of the Sudanese People's Liberation Movement, through the party delegation which is currently holding negotiations with the movement in Addis Ababa on participation in political activity and the forthcoming government as well as on ways to stop the fighting in the south. A source in the Al-Ummah Party announced this, pointing out that the delegation will stay several more days to hold talks on the message.

The source also said that the charter, worked out in cooperation with the Democratic Unionist Party, was submitted to all the political parties, and no one expressed any opposition to it. If the agreement is completed, the parties will discuss the charter in detail and endorse it.

The same source said that the committee entrusted with the task of distributing posts has not yet reached any agreement or specific points.

Al-Turabi Agrees To Abolition of Shari'ah Laws

JN271019 Khartoum SUNA in English 0955 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Khartoum, April 27 (SUNA) — The Islamic National Front (INF) led by Dr 'Abdallah Hasan al-Turabi has agreed on the national unity charter, which calls for the abolition of September 1983 laws, better known as shari'ah laws, the daily AL-SAHAFAH today reported. The charter, which was worked out by a joint committee set up by the Democratic Unionist Party and Al-Ummah right-wing Party, is the sole proposed instrument that determines participation of political parties in the new government.

Before this surprising move, the INF had long insisted on retaining shari'ah laws whose rescinding was comprised in the said charter, the paper said. The paper, quoting a top level official of the INF said the INF had agreed on the proposed charter although it made marginal reserves on some of the charter's articles.

SPLA Spokesman on Constitutional Conference

[Text] Sources close to SPLM-SPLA political-military high command have disclosed to Radio SPLA that the movement attaches great importance to the prospective national constitutional conference.

We consider the conference an essential step towards any peaceful and meaningful change in Sudan and, consequently, we believe the intended conference deserves the attention of all, the spokesman declared. He, however, stressed that the SPLM-SPLA envisaged that any national conference on Sudan's basic problems should culminate in the formation of a new and genuinely broad-based interim government. Such a government, the spokesman pointed out, would be well-placed to lay the necessary groundwork for construction of a new Sudan in accordance with the national democratic consensus that may be reached on means and ways of solving Sudan's chronic problems.

[Text] Addis Ababa, April 27 (AFP) — Talks between representatives of Sudan's leading Al-Ummah Party and the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Movement (SPLM) formally ended here Sunday, with the rebels refusing to "recognize or participate in any government that will be formed in Khartoum".

In a final press statement here, the SPLM said it would only abide by the Koka Dam Declaration of March 24, the document signed in the Ethiopian town of Koka between the SPLM and the National Alliance for Salvation, the powerful grouping of Sudanese political parties and trade unions. That declaration outlined the "essential prerequisites" for convening a national constitutional conference in June that would determine Sudan's political future.

The statement said the SPLM and its armed wing, the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) told the Ummah delegation that "the SPLA/SPLM will not recognize or participate in any government that will be formed in Khartoum, as a result of the partial elections which were conducted by the Transitional Military Council (TMC) in the country".

The rejection represented a rebuff to Al-Ummah leader Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi who sent a two-man delegation to the Ethiopian capital last Wednesday to invite the rebels to share power in a new government in Khartoum.

Al-Ummah won 99 seats in elections for a Constitutional Assembly and is likely to lead any coalition government being formed in Khartoum. The rebels boycotted the elections, and rebel activity in the south prevented polling taking place in 37 constituencies.

In their statement, the rebels said that senior Al-Ummah delegates Sayyid Idris al-Banna and Professor Hammad 'Umar Bajadi had brought only "a verbal message" from Mr al-Mahdi. Al-Ummah wanted their views on the constitutional, administrative and security arrangements to be made between now and the national consitutional conference.

It also wanted SPLM views on the measures needed to create a conducive climate for the conference, on the prospect of the SPLM joining an incoming government in Khartoum at both national and regional levels, and the possibility of a meeting between Mr al-Mahdi and SPLM leader Col John Garang.

While the SPLM said it welcomed the initiative taken by the Ummah Party, it nevertheless affirmed its decision to stand firmly by the provisions of the Koka Declaration. In the declaration, signed by the SPLM and the alliance in which the Ummah was represented, the two sides agreed on six "essential prerequisites" that would foster an atmosphere conducive for the convening of the national constitutional conference.

These included the lifting of the present state of emergency in Sudan, the repeal of the Islamic Sharia laws imposed by ex-president Ja'far Numayri even on non-Moslems and the abrogation of military pacts with foreign powers which "impinged" on Sudan's national sovereignty.

The other conditions were safe conduct for an SPLM delegation attending the conference, the adoption of the 1956 Sudanese Constitution as amended in 1964 with the incorporation of "regional government", and a commitment by all political forces to discuss not just a "southern problem" but the "basic problems of Sudan".

The declaration also recognized the need for a "continuous endeavour by the two sides to take the necessary steps and measures to effect a ceasefire" in the fighting in south Sudan.

To that end, the two sides had established a joint liaison committee of ten, which is still expected to meet in the Ethiopian capital on May 7. At the same time, the SPLM insisted, unsuccessfully as it turned out, for a commitment by "the government of the day" in Khartoum to step down in favour of an interim administration — with SPLM participation — that the conference would name.

In that event, the SPLA had pledged it would lay down its arms and return fully to the peace process.

However, the alliance, not representing the government, was unable to commit itself and that point had to be "deferred" for further consultations. It appears even more unlikely after this month's elections that a new coalition government in Khartoum will accede to the SPLM's demands and agree to step down in advance of the conference, in the view of analysts here.

The only positive outcome of this week's talks appears to be the agreement by the rebels of a meeting between Col Garang and Mr al-Mahdi.

The statement said the SPLM welcomed the idea "in principle" and that details could be worked out later.

In the Koka Declaration, the two sides also agreed on an agenda for the constitutional conference which is to cover foreign policy, the armed and security services, the nationalities and religious questions, basic human rights, the system of government, development and uneven development, natural resources and the cultural question relating especially to education and the mass media.

Al-Mahdi Delays Visits to Egypt, Syria, Libya

[Text] Khartoum, April 2 (MENA) — Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, chairman of the Al-Ummah Party, which has been nominated to form the new government, told MENA today that his visit to Egypt, which was due on April 9, was postponed because of the elections and current consultations on the formation of the new government.

Al-Mahdi added that his visits to Syria and Libya were also put off and that his visit to Egypt came upon a personal invitation, not official and had no political character.

Initially Accepts Libya Merger

[Text] Khartoum, April 25 — Leader of Ummah Party Mr al-Sadiq al-Mahdi warned, at a press conference held here Thursday, certain foreign circles from utilising Sudan as an arena for dealing with their hostilities, pointing out that defending foreign guests and diplomats falls within the scope of Sudanese sovereignty.

On the other hand, Al-Mahdi hailed as historical the relations between Sudan and Egypt and called for boosting them on more realistic and objective grounds.

Al-Mahdi has also expressed the initial acceptance of his party for (?a) merger with Libya, indicating that this issue could better be tackled by the forthcoming Constituent Assembly (parliament)

The expected prime minister finally condemned the Camp David accord and called upon the Arab states to come together to a consensus that would guarantee the minimum level of solidarity.

Eritrean Official Expects Government Military Campaign

GF271434 Manama WAKH in Arabic 1150 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 27 Apr (WAKH) — 'Uthman Salih Sabbe, chairman of the Eritrean Liberation Front Executive Committee, has called on the Arab countries to offer political and material assistance to the Eritrean people to enable them to confront the annihilation war launched by the Ethiopian regime against their achievements and property. In a press conference in Abu Dhabi at noon today Sabbe said that Ethiopia is preparing to launch its 10th military campaign against Eritrea by concentrating thousands of soldiers and modern weapons backed by about 4,000 Soviet military experts.

The Eritrean leader welcomed the meeting held 2 months ago between the Somali and Ethiopian leaders in Djibouti. He said that the meeting may contribute to easing tension in the Horn of Africa. He pointed out that the Eritrean Liberation Front wished to participate in resolving the region's problems through political dialogue and unconditional negotiations and on the basis of the Eritrean people's right to self-determination.

'Uthman Salih Sibi revealed that large quantities of weapons for Eritreans are available in Sudanese stores. He demanded these weapons from Sudan to defend the Eritrean people, who are being subjected to annihilation by Ethiopia.

In his press conference, the Eritrean leader reviewed the political and military situation in Eritrea and the positions of Western and Eastern Europe toward the Eritrean problem. He said that the Eritrean problem and the sufferings of the Eritrean people are part of an international design and part of the struggles and ambitions of the major powers in the entire Middle East region. He pointed out that the Eritrean problem can only be resolved through a solution based on civilization and culture and through unconditional dialogue and negotiations. He said that as the Eritrean people are linked to the Arab nation by historical and cultural relations the Arabs should offer humanitarian assistance to the Eritreans to save them from hunger and from the Ethiopian annihilation war.

TIMES Approves Moi Refusal of Swazi Invitation

[Leading article entitled: "Comment"]

[Excerpt] Today is the coronation of Swaziland's 18-year-old Crown Prince Makhositive at a gathering to which Swaziland found it fit to invite South Africa's President Pieter Botha. Botha is of course elated by the invitation in that it will provide him a most sought-for opportunity meet African leaders and perhaps lure them to come to terms with his racist regime.

We as a nation will not give him that opportunity, because President Daniel arap Moi has turned down the invitation and recalled Kenya's advance party from Mbabane, the Swazi capital, upon learning of Botha's invitation. This is because we believe in the dignity of an African and we can only hope that those who share this belief with us will also stand up to be counted — that is of course, if they are concerned that truth should prevail.

Kenyans are proud that the president turned down the invitation in the interest of humanity and of our principles. In doing so, the president has once again enhanced our image as a nation of forthrightness and uprightness. A nation of honest leaders. We have hope in the struggles for independence in southern Africa and we know that the horizon is clear for the majority of the people of South Africa.

It took principles and right-mindedness to make the Kenyan decision. Our stand on the apartheid question is clear, and we stand above board. We will not shake hands with Botha anywhere. His hands are stained with the blood of innocent men, women,and children. Our hands will remain unstained.

University Expels, Fines 'Violent' Students

[By STANDARD reporter: "Varsity Expels Riot Leaders"]

[Excerpt] Kenyatta University students who were the ringleaders during last months's campus disturbances will not be re-admitted. The vice-chancellor, Prof Peter Gacii, said yesterday those who would not be re-admitted when the university re-opens on May 5 were students who planned, organised, and incited others not to attend lectures and generally disobeyed university rules and regulations. He added they also included violent students who beat up their colleagues and destroyed property belonging to the university and other students as well as stoning cars and buses on the main Nairobi-Thika road blocking a train which runs behind the campus.

The vice-chancellor declined to give the number of the students who will not be re-admitted.

Students who have been accepted back have been told to take with them 2,000 shillings. The money will go towards repairs and other costs related to the closure of the university on March 13. Prof Gacii said no student would be registered without paying the fine.

Museveni Promises Better Security, Conditions in East

EA271750 Kampala Domestic Service in English

[Text] President Yoweri Museveni has completed a tour of eastern Uganda where he assured the people of Moroto and Soroti districts that his government is determined to provide adequate security to stop cattle raiding in the region Addressing a rally at (Kokomo) ground in Moroto, the president said a large contingent of NRA personnel, would be deployed throughout Karamoja, East Lango, East Acholi, Mbale, and Kapchorwa Districts to maintain effective stability in the area. He told the people that the insecurity prevailing in the region had been created and aided by the failure of the past regimes. He told the gathering that the NRM is a government of a new type which seriously works to solve the basic problems in the region. He promised that the government would try and reopen dams and bore holes to supply water and (?appealed) to the natives to resettle with enough food to eat and other essential services. The president said projects would be worked out to improve the economic base of the Karamojong to increase production and reduce idleness and mischief.

He advised the people to work closely with the troops who will be deployed there and he stressed that the troops will not go to attack the Karamojong but to protect the people from harassment by armed gangs. He said that the troops are to ensure that there is no raiding either by the Karamojong or against the Karamojong. He announced that militias in neighboring districts had been dissolved and the people of Karamoja should not fear any attack from them. A well-organized government, he said, cannot be defeated by raiders.

Later the president met elders at Mount Moroto Hotel to explain to him the seriousness of the water shortage, looting of government properties, animal drugs, and absence of salaries for civil servants. They assured the president that they would support the NRM government's efforts to bring stability and development in the region.

They further informed him that the raiders have no support from elders, the educated group, women, and children. The president told them that the NRM believes in explaining to the people the basic problems and coming to an understanding on the solutions to them. He was optimistic that with their cooperation the situation in Karamoja will soon normalize.

Earlier the president addressed troops of the 23d Battalion in Moroto. He urged them to maintain strong discipline and keep a strong political line when dealing with civilians in order to forge unity and understanding. He explained to them that the urgent question now is to increase the number of troops to provide security and not to supply imported luxuries to a few soldiers.

On his way back to Kampala the president told a rally in the independence gardens in Soroti that troops deployed along the border with Karamoja had already dispersed large groups of raiders and recovered animals in two encounters. He assured them that more troops will be sent in and with the cooperation of the people, he noted, the situation will be contained. He warned them against using the Karamojong as scapegoats, explaining that the NRM had arrested five Itelo attempting to raid under the cover of being Karamojong. The president called on the people to hand in all the guns in order to help the security personnel identify the bad elements coming from outside. He said the NRM follows a line of clear politics which had given it strength uniting all the people against bad elements. He said the correctness of NRM's policies is indicated by the level of unity now prevailing throughout the country. Because of not revenging and supporting the right thing, President Museveni warned them against the dangers of taking the law into their hands, citing reports that buses from Moroto had been stopped and the Karamojong travelling in them killed. He said many of the Karamojong are government allies against cattle raiding and such acts only escalate tribal hostilities.

On the shortage of essential commodities, the president said arrangements to import these commodities have already been made and they would be arriving soon. He also disclosed that a plan had been drawn up to supply food at district centers in disturbed areas by the prime minister's office and the Ministry of Rehabilitation. He explained that such food was only for short term for genuine relief cases to enable such people to begin production in a short time. The president also disclosed that the government is in the process of surveying areas where government projects can be set up profitably. He said plans are under way to revive the meat packers factory so that other products like soap and leather can be processed.

The elders in Soroti district who met the president at Soroti Hotel informed him that cattle rustling was encouraged by foreign dealers in cattle and gold. They assured him the the people of Soroti will support the NRM government to ensure that stability and security is restored. He also clarified that only orphans of victims of political upheavals will get free education. On the dissolution of the militia, the president said the decision had been taken because they were formed on tribal bases and were promoting tribal hostilities.

Before leaving Soroti for Mbale the president visited the meat packers canning factory now under control of the prisons department. He was glad to learn from the officers in charge that the machinery is intact and in working condition, although production stopped in 1978 because of lack of money to purchase cattle. President Museveni commended them highly for diligence in preserving this machinery and gave the assurance that serious consideration will be given to the resumption of production. The factory can employ up to 2,000 workers.

Government Says Libyan-Backed Rebels Surrendering

[Text] Ndjamena, April 27 (AFP) — Chad's Western-backed government presented to the press here Saturday 10 alleged defectors from Libyan-backed rebel forces controlling the north of the country and said more and more rebels were "returning to legality" by surrendering.

The group, brought from the eastern town of Fada and including a deputy company commander and several military police, said that after the failure of a rebel offensive early last month they had concluded that Libyans were in charge of the rebel forces, not ousted President Goukouni Weddeye.

They said up to 5,000 mercenaries of Libya's Islamic Legion were now hiding in the mountains in the Fada area and that two senior officers of Mr Goukouni's army, Moussa Sogui and Goukouni Guet, had been "deported" to Libya.

Bongo Calls for Tighter Immigration Controls

NC271853 Paris AFP in English 1847 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Libreville, April 27 (AFP) — Gabonese President Omar Bongo called today for tighter controls on immigration and the "return to the land" of migrants to the cities, and hinted at measures against foreigners.

"We can not continue putting our destiny in the hands of foreigners, however honest they may be", he said at the close of a four-day session of the Central Committee of the Gabonese Democratic Party.

The committee itself attacked "European immigrants with behaviour verging on racism and apartheid", linking them to "the introduction into Gabon of certain forms of crime", blamed corruption on the practices of Syrian, Lebanese, and North African traders, and accused arrivals from other African states of bringing in "serious crime and sorcery".

The committee urged that Gabon's development policy be concentrated on "fixing populations in their natural habitat", in order to avoid "uprooting caused by the attraction of towns and industrial centres".

It called for tougher security measures to combat crime, including rape, drug trafficking, poaching, theft, hold-ups, corrution, begging, prostitution, witchcraft, faking, and fetishism.

The committee recommended that joint regional commissions of the party, the authorities, and the security forces should meet twice a month to decide strategy.

The committee said that uncontrolled immigration had "gone beyond the point of toleration", and called for the systematic registration of all foreigners, and the expulsion of all illegal immigrants.

It also urged the installation of a plan to "Gabonise" jobs and reduce foreign personnel and fix quotas for the admission of foreigners, as well as set up a committee to review the country's foreign policy.

Gabon's relations should be reconsidered "case by case, without taking into account ideological, linguistic, cultural, or geographical considerations". A policy of aid and co-operation should be adopted "based on mutual advantages and interests", it said.

The foreign community which would suffer most if the committee's "Gabonisation" call is put into effect would be the 25,000 French citizens in the country, many of whom still hold the posts they occupied before independence.

AZAP Comments on Belgian-Zairian Talks in Kinshasa

AB251123 Kinshasa AZAP in French 0810 GMT 25 Apr 86

[AZAP commentary: "Zaire/Belgium: Beyond the Diplomatic Language"]

[Text] Kinshasa, 25 Apr (AZAP) — Once again, Belgians and Zairians have just held discussions at a high level in order to determine the situation of the Belgian-Zairian relations following the recent incidents which concerned mainly the air communications sector. The Belgian delegation was led by Minister of Foreign Relations Tindemans who came here at the special invitation of his Zairian counterpart, the state commissioner for foreign affairs.

The ZAIRIAN NEWS AGENCY [AZAP], which followed attentively and assiduously the last episode of the somewhat too frequent quarrels between Kinshasa and Brussels, has shown the same interest in the discussions which have just taken place in the Zairian capital and which were followed by a final communique that stresses the success achieved by the meeting — success with which both parties have expressed pleasure.

So, the diplomats are happy. So much the better! And let us have confidence that they will safeguard the real interests of Zaire and Belgium.

As far as we are concerned, we are happy to note that Zaire has again been able to honor its traditional virtues of hospitality and — as we wrote in the past — there was no need to try to force the hand of the Zairian host. Mr Tindemans and his delegation were accorded a reception that was worthy of their rank and of the Belgian-Zairian friendship which both parties have been trying to safeguard by all means. All is well that ends well, it is said. The storm is over and there is every sign that the Belgians and the Zairians are starting again on a good footing.

For us — AZAP — who are the vehicle of our country's public opinion, this is not the time for euphoria. On the contrary, we believe that this is the right time for a dramatic questioning. In fact, we have been asking ourselves the delicate questions as to whether the diplomats — who now seem so satified — have really during their discussions tackled the crux of the problem which seems to us to be more a matter of mental condition. We persist in our belief that as long as the traditional complex that has always characterized the Belgian-Zairian relations is not removed, we will continue to go from incident to incident and from show of reconciliation to show of reconciliation.

To mention only one example, as long as the Belgian partner continues to consider Sabena [the Belgian airline company] as the company of the white master and Air Zaire as a sort of tinkered-up affair that emerged from the imagination of a formerly oppressed people, there will always be painful events followed too easily by some hours of discussions, even if these are frank and direct as we were told the recent discussions were.

No, the dispute between the Belgians and the Zairians is too deep-seated. We must have the courage to admit that it is a veritable dispute, an immense ice berg whose visible part we take pleasure in caressing from time to time.

At the height of the crisis which has just ended, AZAP had suggested the organization of a Belgian-Zairian roundtable conference during which everything would be discussed and a lot of things thoroughly criticized. Contrary to what some Belgian newspapers have written, the recent Kinshasa discussions are far from being the roundtable conference suggested by AZAP. The Belgians and Zairians must hold this roundtable conference if they want to establish their relations on a really solid bases. We are convinced that this conference will take place one day because the time will come when both parties will be tired with these too frequent quarrels which certain people willingly describe as squabbles between husband and wife. We consider these terms too familiar and improper to describe differences between two sovereign partners.

In their articles datelined Kinshasa, the Belgian journalists in Mr Tindemans' entourage reported the alleged reactions of the Zairian authorities concerning the positions adopted by AZAP throughout the recent Belgian-Zairian incidents. We leave these newspapers with the responsibility of their interpretation of these reactions. We will simply say that although it does not express the diplomats' point of view, AZAP — which is working at its own level — is certainly in a good position to explain Zairian public opinion. It is good to add that in Zaire, the authorities and the press serve one and the same cause — that of a nation seeking its happiness and its development in all fields.

Finally, it should be well understood that the sweet words and good intentions that have just been exchanged between the Belgians and the Zairians in Kinshasa will never blunt our sense of criticism nor discourage our determination to defend at all costs the noble ideals pursued by a leader — Marshal Mobutu Sese Seko, a man who is particularly touchy concerning Zaire's independence, sovereignty, and dignity.

MPR Delegation Leaves for Beijing, Bucharest

Parliamentarians End USSR Visit; Communique Issued

AB260748 Cotonou Domestic Service in French

[Text] Relations of friendship between the USSR and the People's Republic of Benin have been strengthened. This has been demonstrated by the visit of a delegation of our country's Revolutionary National Assembly to the USSR from 16 to 23 April. The delegation was led by Joseph Deguela, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Revolutionary Party of Benin [PRPB] and second vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the Revolutionary National Assembly. It held very fruitful discussions at various levels as emphasized in the joint communique which was issued at the conclusion of the visit to Moscow and the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic.

After examining the life and works of the Soviet people, their sociopolitical and economic achievements, the delegation led by Mr Deguela held two important meetings. First of all, it was received by the deputy chairman of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet, Comrade Kholov. It also held discussions with Comrade Voss, chairman of the Soviet of Nationalities of the USSR Supreme Soviet. These meetings, of a general nature, permitted the two parties to exchange information on the activities of the supreme organs of the state power of the two countries. The reciprocity in the exchange of information was also manifested at the Supreme Soviet where the Soviet parliamentarians informed their Beninese counterparts of the important decisions of the 27th CPSU Congress. In return, the Beninese delegation reported on the decisions of the second ordinary national congress of the PRPB.

Concerning bilateral relations, the Beninese and Soviet parliamentarians expressed satisfaction with the development of cooperation between the two countries, which is based on the strict respect of the sovereignty and noninterference in the internal affairs of each country.

On world issues, the two parties expressed their attachment to peace and strongly deplored the grave tension which is arising due to the aggressive policies of imperialism. In this regard, they expressed their strong support to the martyr people of Libya, vehemently condemning the American imperialist recourse to state terrorism, and called for an immediate halt to it. This same concern for the preservation of peace characterized the position of the two parties on disarmament and the nuclear threat. On this issue, the Beninese delegation highly appreciated the vast program of concrete action announced by the CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in his 15 January address on the elimination of the threat of nuclear war.

On Africa, the situation in the south where Pretoria is creating a multitude of conflicts was strongly condemned. The rights of the Namibian people were reaffirmed.

On the world economic situation, the two parties praised the convening of the special session of the UN General Assembly on the critical economic situation prevailing in the continent.

The parliamentarians of the two countries expressed their satisfaction with the positive results of the official visit by the Beninese delegation.

GHANA

Commentary Calls for Oil, Consumer Boycott of U.S.

AB261500 Accra Domestic Service in English

[Iddrisu Saddick commentary]

[Text] There have been worldwide condemnations of the United States of America and expressions of solidarity with Libya since the Reagan administration launched air raids on the two Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi over a week ago, leaving in their trail widespread destruction of life and property. The condemnations and expressions of solidarity generally took the form of mammoth demonstrations characterized by anti-Reagan slogans. It is significant to note that as a Third world country, Libya has won the sympathy and understanding of both Eastern and Western Bloc countries in the wake of the U.S. attack. Even in countries usually described as the U.S.' traditional NATO allies like France, Italy, and the Federal Republic of Germany, the protestors marched to U.S. diplomatic missions to register their deep concern against the resort to military action to settle an international dispute. But nobody seems to have thought about what the world community could do beyond the demonstrations, protests, and placards. It is in this regard that one considers as appropriate Chairman Rawlings' view expressed in an interview with the GBC [Ghana Broadcasting Corporation] on the subject. The chairman revealed in the interview that he told the Libyan leader in a telephone conversation that the U.S. threats and attack calls for a more meaningful concerted action than mere words of support.

To many people, it is a realistic posture to recognize the limitations of these demonstrations of support. Although there is a psychological plus in favor of the underdog Libya and a minus against the aggressor, the warmonger that he is, President Reagan does not look like he has sufficient conscience to be disturbed by demonstrations and protests. Reagan seems to be poised for further military action as he prepares the minds of his reluctant European allies by his determination to find an alibi even where there is none for attacking the Libyan people in their oil-rich democracy. By his stand, the chairman seems to be wishing that all the anger expressed across the length and breadth of the globe be harnessed into a defense against the forces which reverse the progress of mankind centuries backward.

It is indeed sad that in the 20th century, mankind should resort to might instead of reason to deal with concrete problems. In the 20th century when reason should reign over might and force, the Reagan administration still had recourse to military might against a country which is not comparable to it in that respect. Unless Third World countries, with the support of the entire civilized world, find a permanent solution to the [words indistinct], the Reagan administration, supported by the military-industrial complex, will try to reverse the clock of progress. Another issue related to Reagan's aggression which the chairman addressed, is the political role the Western media played in collaboration with security services and multinational companies, and imperialism's grand design of defending its (?vested) interests. The most insidious side of the aggression is its implications for other weak countries. Third World countries, which do not see the wisdom in the Western system of democracy, will continue to live in danger and terror of the U.S. for as long as they take no collective action when one of them is attacked. This is therefore the time to consider the oil weapon again, and possibly to try the idea of consumer boycott of American goods with the view to teaching President Reagan that gangsterism does not pay. The oil weapon happens to be in the hands of Al-Qadhdhafi's Arab brothers and cousins, and it is worth mentioning that the Libyan leader did not hesitate to ask them to use it to bring the oppressor to his knees. As for the consumer boycott, we in Africa have it, because the African market is the most formidable in the world. And there is no doubt that African countries together can (?stretch) their muscles to force the Reagan administration to stop further acts of aggression against the Libyan people.

Going by the spontaneity and scale of protests throughout the world, it is clear that this time, America, by attacking Libya, has bitten more than she can chew, for if all the anger could be transformed into oil and consumer boycott of America, the world would have proved that the unjust use of force does not pay.

Stringent Security Measures Introduced Around Castle

[Text] The Brong Ahafo Regional Security Council has imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew on Takyiman and its surrounding areas from 6 pm to 6 am each day. A statement by the council in Sunyani yesterday said the decision has become necessary in view of the mounting tension over a chieftaincy dispute at Takyiman. The statement ordered all persons in possession of firearms to surrender them to the nearest police station immediately. It explained that this measure has become necessary in order to preserve life and property and to maintain a normal atmosphere in Takyiman and its surrounding villages.

AB271355 Dakar PANA in French 1338 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Conakry, 27 Apr (AGP-GUI/PANA) — The Lebanese Government has decided to close its embassy in Conakry due to "the difficulties currently facing Lebanon." General Lansana Conte was informed of this decision on Saturday by the Lebanese ambassador to Guinea. A consulate will be opened to handle the affairs of Lebanese nationals in Guinea, estimated at more than 3,000, most of whom are merchants.

IVORY COAST

President Receives Message From Malian Leader

AB251845 Abidjan Domestic Service in French
1245 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] The head of state this morning received in audience an emissary of General Moussa Traore, president of the Republic of Mali. The emissary is Djibril Diallo, political secretary of the Central Executive Bureau of the UDPM [Democratic Union of Malian People] and minister of state charged with industrial development and tourism. He was accompanied by Dr Ngolo Traore, permanent undersecretary to President Moussa Traore. After the audience, the Malian emissary did not reveal the real purpose of his mission:

[Begin Diallo recording] The audience which the president of the Republic of Ivory Coast granted me falls within the framework of the strengthening of the excellent cooperation happily existing between Ivory Coast and Mali. I think this cooperation is multifaceted, as you may know. It concerns all fields — political, economic, cultural and social. Each time one is lucky to be received by President Houphouet-Boigny, be it at the level of a head of state or at the level of a minister, the talks always cover extensive areas. He also gives very wise advice on peace and subregional solidarity in particular. [end recording]

It should be pointed out that Minister Ehui Bernard [Ivorian minister of industry] attended this audience.

LIBERIA

Pro-U.S. Liberians Reported Tortured, Killed in Libya

AB251745 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English

[Text] The Government of Liberia has been informed through its diplomatic mission in Rome that Liberians working in Libya were tortured to death and some put on firing squad for being pro-American. The Liberian charge d'affaires in Rome, Italy, Mr Prince Porte sent a telex message to Foreign Minister J. Bernard Blamo, that two Liberians working in Libya had told him that they saw some of their fellow Liberians being tortured to death while some were put on firing squad. The telex message, a copy of which was issued at the Information Ministry today, further reported that the Liberian victims were identified by their passports.

The message said the Liberian Chancery in Italy has meanwhile stopped flying the Liberian flag in an effort to avoid possible sabotage action and safeguard life and properties. The report comes in the wake of the recent American-Libyan crisis.

Meanwhile, the Ministry of Information is asking Liberians who have relatives and friends in Libya to bring photographs of those relatives and friends so that the government could pursue the matter through diplomatic channels.

The text of the message reads: Have honor [to] advise in wake of Libyan-American crisis, two Liberians working in Libya went to Italy after the American raid. Reported seeing fellow Liberians tortured to death and some put on firing squad. Was identified by passports and accused of being pro-American. In an effort to avoid possible sabotage action and safeguard life and property, we have stopped flying national flag on chancery during official working hours as is done by most embassies, and mission is identified by coat of arms only.

Coalition Chairman Kpolleh Arrested for 'Sedition'

AB251805 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 1710 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] The chairman of the Grand Coalition, William Gabriel Kpolleh, has been arrested and detained at the central prison in Monrovia on charges of sedition. The arrest of Mr Kpolleh comes only a day after a five-man committee set to investigate allegations he made against government, recommended that the probe against Chairman Kpolleh be waived in the name of peace, unity, and reconciliation. Mr Kpolleh had earlier alleged that the government was planning a fake coup to implicate the leaders of the grand coalition.

The committee's recommendation followed Mr Kpolleh's refusal to appear before it on the grounds that he made the allegations as chairman of the Grand Coalition and any reaction growing out of these remarks should be directed to the coalition for its appropriate attention. However, the committee said if the government so desired to continue the probe, the judicial process could be an alternative.

Meanwhile, the Grand Coalition has demanded the immediate release of its chairman, Gabriel Kpolleh. The Executive Committee of the coalition said it believed this action on the part of government does not exhibit [word indistinct] of justice and fair play. According to the statement by the Executive Committee today, the coalition recalled that high officials of government including Colonel Harry (Seni-Pennel) had made statements that constitute what it called more of a hideous crime of sedition than the statements made by the Grand Coalition.

Opposition Leaders Charged

AB270755 Paris AFP in English 0742 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Monrovia, April 27 (AFP) — The second vice-chairman of Liberia's four-party opposition coalition, Edward B. Kessely, has been charged along with its secretary-general, Peter Bonner Jallah, with criminal mischief, the SUN TIMES newspaper reported Saturday. The paper said three residents of the capital claimed that the opposition politicians had attacked their vehicle, deflating a tyre and damaging a door. The coalition has often complained that unmarked vehicles follow their leaders at night with criminal motives.

Mr Jallah and another opposition member, William Clarke, were arrested last Wednesday, but later freed on bail after they were charged with Mr Kessely, who was not arrested.

The STANDARD newspaper meanwhile said four students of the Monrovia consolidated schools system, which has been closed by the government, were arrested Friday after the detention of the chairman of the opposition coalition, William Gabriel Kpolleh, who has been charged with sedition.

Army Officer, SUNTIMES Editor Arrested

[Text] Monrovia, April 25 (AFP) — The former speaker of the now dissolved Military People's Redemption Council, Brigadier General Jeffrey Gbartu has been arrested for refusing a security search and assaulting a security officer at the airport, the independent daily THE STANDARD reported Friday.

The paper said Gen Gbartu was arrested on Monday when he arrived from abroad at Liberia's Roberts International Airport and refused to be searched. When security officials insisted, Gen Gbartu took off his [word indistinct] cap and threw it on the floor, a situation which led to his arrest, the paper said.

The incident was said to have been referred to President Samuel Doe. Meanwhile, the news editor of the independent SUN TIMES newspaper, Westmore Dahn was briefly detained Thursday in connection with the paper's lead story headlined, "Halt Aid to Present Government, Liberian Women Urge U.S." The paper quoted a group of "concerned women of Liberia" as saying the U.S. Government should halt all military assistance to President Doe's government because the aid was "being used against unarmed civilians, including women, men and children."

According to the paper, the statement was presented to U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Chester Crocker during his two-day visit here last week.

Four Senior Finance Ministry Officials Fired

[Text] Monrovia, April 27 (AFP) — President Samuel Doe has sacked four top officials at the Liberian Finance Ministry for alleged corruption, state television reported here. Those dismissed were the Deputy Minister of Finance for Revenues Eddie Manley, Assistant Minister of Finance for Revenues Miley Gray, and two deputy commissioners of customs, Joseph Cole and Lucine Kamaqa.

The television quoted Mr Doe as saying the four men were sacked following completion of an investigation into "fraud and irregularities" at the Finance Ministry. He said the probe committee would continue investigating possible fraud at the ministry.

When setting up the committee three weeks ago, Mr Doe said only that a "significant sum" of money had been embezzled by finance officials. But a subsequent report in the state-owned NEW LIBERIAN newspaper said $13 million had been embezzled through manipulation of customs receipts involving firms importing goods into Monrovia's free port. The paper said those implicated included a deputy commissioner of customs, two deputy ministers and an assistant minister.

SDAR Presidential Envoy Delivers Message for Traore

AB250825 Bamako Domestic Service in French
1500 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] General Amadou Baba Diarra, acting on behalf of the president, has received Mr Omar Hadrani, member of the Political Bureau of the Polisario Front. Mr Hadrani delivered a message from Mr Mohamed Abdel Aziz, the SDAR president, to President Moussa Traore. After his talks with the BEC [Central Executive Bureau] deputy secretary general, the special envoy of the SDAR president stated, in discussing the indirect negotiations between Morocco and SDAR, that the least expensive concession to make is to listen to one's adversary.

[Begin Hadrani recording] President Mohamed Abdel Aziz, has always briefed his brothers, in particular President Moussa Traore of Mali, on developments concerning the Western Saharan question, which is of concern to all of Africa and in particular to Mali, which has always sided with just causes in Africa. As you know, negotiations are currently under way between the Polisario Front and Morocco in New York under the auspices of the UN secretary general and President Abdou Diouf, the current OAU chairman; and, as you also know, Mali was the first to offer its good offices in 1979 but since then so much time has unfortunately been lost, as we did not continue in the direction proposed by Mali. Today we are here as bearers of a message that concerns developments in these negotiations, which we hope will bear fruit. Nevertheless, we regret that the Moroccan side is still unable to accept totally the resolution adopted by the OAU and the United Nations which demands direct negotiations and discussions. In our view, the least expensive concession is to listen to one's adversary. [end recording]

Present at the audience were M'bouille Siby, the BEC organization secretary; Alhouseyni Toure, secretary general at the Presidency; and Tidiani Guisse, the political adviser at the Presidency.

[Text] Determined to reinforce the struggle against imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism, Zionism, apartheid, racism, and all the other forms of oppression and domination; reaffirming their solidarity with and support to the national liberation movements in Africa and throughout the world; and conscious of the need to safeguard and reinforce cohesion within the OAU and help their peoples to achieve social and economic progress and development, the PAICV and the UDPM agree to adopt and implement the present draft agreement on cooperation for 1986 and (?1987).

1. Consultations
The PAICV and the UDPM will regularly exchange delegations of (?officials) and hold discussions and exchange views and information on the regional and international situation. In the political and organizational fields, the two parties — at the initiative of either party — can agree to (?harmonize) their views through previous consultations in order to take common actions in regional and international meetings.

2. (?Cooperation) between mass organizations
The two parties (?express their strong desire) to organize meetings between the respective mass organizations of their countries in order to develop bilateral cooperation.

3. Exchange of documents and information
Considering that the exchange of documents and information will help (?solve their problems), the two parties will send their journalists [words indistinct] and technicians to report onpolitical, economic, and cultural events in either country. The two parties will encourage (?journalists) to participate in the symposia, conferences, and seminars which will be organized under their auspices.

4. Relations between the two states
The two parties will work toward strengthening and expanding the political, economic, social, and cultural cooperation existing between the two states for a better implementation of the agreements signed between the two countries. [no signatures given]

NIGERIA

Foreigners To Be Charged $100 To Enter Country

AB280950 Dakar PANA in English 0933 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Lagos, 28 April (NAN/PANA) — The Nigerian Government has imposed a fee of 100 naira (about $100) on all foreigners entering the country, the SUNDAY VANGUARD, a privately-owned newspaper reported yesterday, quoting Director of Immigration Munammadu Damulak. The report said that visitors from OAU member-countries would, however, pay only 50 naira (about $50).

All payments are to be made in foreign currency, the VANGUARD said.

The newspaper quoted Mr Damulak as saying that the entry fee was introduced early this year and that, "All we have done is to implement government's directives."

National Planning Minister Kalu Idika Kaul said at a news conference at which he gave details of the 1986 federal budget in January that the payment of the entry fee was "without prejudice to the existing policy which requires foreign visitors to pay hotel bills in foreign currency."

He said that foreign diplomats were exempted from payment of the entry levy.

PANA: ECOWAS Ministerial Committee Meets in Lagos

AB261013 Dakar PANA in English 0950 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Lagos, 26 April (NAN/PANA) — Members of a six-nation ECOWAS (Economic Community of West African States) ad hoc ministerial committee began a two-day meeting in Lagos yesterday to consider financial proposals for the construction of the community's headquarters in Abuja and the ECOWAS Fund Headquarters in Lome.

A source close to the Fund Headquarters told the NEWS AGENCY OF NIGERIA (NAN) that the meeting, presided over by Nigeria, would consider the financial contributions of each of the 16 member-countries to the building of the two structures, as well as determine the volume of external loan required.

She said that the Abuja, which was to cost about 30 million Naira (about 30 million U.S. dollars) originally, had now been scaled down to about 10 million naira (about 10 million U.S. dollars), while the ECOWAS Fund head of offices would cost about 10 million naira (about 10 million U.S. dollars).

The meeting which is expected to consider a memorandum on total payments by the Fund and appraise progress report on the projects, will adopt a report of the committee of experts set up for both projects today. Other members of the Headquarters Building Committee are Republic of Benin, Guinea, Senegal, Sierra Leone, and Togo.

Meanwhile, the Community has cancelled the meetings of its ad hoc ministerial committees on economic recovery and evaluation, ministers of finance, board of directors of the Fund, council of ministers, and the summit, scheduled to be held in Lagos between 26 April and 7 May. No explanation was given for the cancellation.

This was revealed in a press release from the Angolan Ministry of External Relations.

ANGOP Says RSA Preparing Angolan Invasion

MB251928 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1600 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] According to a report from the Portuguese capital, Lisbon, South Africa is preparing for an invasion of Angola and possibly other developing countries. The official Angolan news agency ANGOP claims Pretoria is planning a new series of crossborder raids. The agency says an enormous concentration of SADF troops is poised along the Angolan-Namibian border, and adds that some South African units have taken up positions inside Angola's southeastern Cuando-Cubango Province. The Luanda government has been facing increeased pressure recently following the decision by the Reagan administration to provide military aid to Jonas Savimbi and his rebel UNITA movement.

Botha: Political Rights 'Necessary' to Negotiation

MB251858 Johannesburg Television Service in Afrikaans 1800 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] The state president says that political rights for all is necessary for the negotiation process in South Africa. President Botha said at a public meeting in Vereeniging that political rights must be given to those who do have them so that leaders with the government can negotiate could be identified.

[Begin video] [Correspondent Marius Kleynhans] President Botha, who placed strong emphasis on negotiation and cooperation,said there is an obligation on those who say that justice is good and Christian. These people should set the example of cooperation and to bring about peace and development in South Africa.

[Botha]... We will have to give political rights to those people who do not have them today so that we can get the leaders with whom to negotiate on the joint interest of South Africa. You cannot talk to a bunch of people. You must get leaders who will come from the ranks of communities, duly elected. I say to the Afrikaner tonight: [switches to English] and I am saying it to the English-speaking South Africans, and I am saying this to our new South Africans who have immigrated to this country. We have an opportunity to create a country of hope and of goodwill. But then we must become positive. We must show our dedication and we must seek in a spirit of cooperative co-existence solutions for South Africa's many problems. [switches to Afrikaans] We will not find solutions by rebuffing one another. We will have to seek rights for everyone, including minority rights, in a Christian manner thereby ensuring a place for our children in this country. [end video]

Botha 'Will Not Tolerate Foreign Know-It-Alls'

MB260557 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, has told a West German newspaper that he will not tolerate foreign know-it-alls who press for instant, radical reform in South Africa. Mr Botha said in an interview with the daily newspaper, DIE WELT, that there were people in Europe and the United States who expected things in South Africa to change overnight. The state president said South Africa did not need to be forced towards reform, as the government itself was committed to it. Mr Botha told the paper that those who expected only precipitous change should realize that that was no guarantee for stability.

In the interview, to be published in today's edition of DIE WELT, Mr Botha also rejected accusations that he was not ready to negotiate with the country's black leaders. He noted that South Africa did not just consist of a single white minority and a single black majority. He pointed out that the blacks were composed of different ethnic groups, each with its own language and culture, that together they formed different and distinct minorities, and that all groups shared one country.

Uncertainty Over General Malan's Health Reported

MB270914 Umtata Capital Radio in English 0900 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] There is uncertainty over the health of South African Defense Minister Magnus Malan. According to the SUNDAY TRIBUNE newspaper, he was recently admitted to a military hospital in Cape Town for shock treatment for a severe heart malfunction, but officials are not saying much about the incident. A spokesman says the general was just discharged after treatment for a minor ailment, but the paper says the type of treatment seems to indicate something could be seriously wrong. Since the secret visit to hospital Gen Malan has, however, taken up his duties.

Government Reportedly Influencing State Media

[Text] A Sunday newspaper reports official documents have been revealed that show South African state radio and television is influenced by the governing party. The SUNDAY TRIBUNE says several pages of internal memoranda show staff and contributors to radio are guided in how to present their reports so as to fit in with SABC policy.

The documents show cabinet ministers can influence reports relating to them or even have them replaced. Other reports are said to have been blocked by top officials because they present a negative view.

Opposition Progressive Federal Party media spokesman spokesman Dave Dalling says the allegations confirm his experience of the SABC and he wants a full explanation.

ANC's Maharaj Says Country in 'Permanent Crisis'

MB251207 Lusaka Radio Freedom in English 1700 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] In view of the ongoing popular mass resistance against the apartheid system and the failure of the regime's repressive machinery to suppress mass uprising engulfing the racist republic, P.W. Botha has given the police more powers in a futile exercise to save apartheid from sinking. He also claimed that the police are given more powers in response to the escalating black-on-black confrontation. We are all aware that this is just a pretext of a cornered beast to continue with the reign of terror in our country because (?there is no) black-on-black confrontation, as we hear from Comrade Mac Maharaj, member of the National Executive Committee of the ANC.

[Begin Maharaj recording] Our country is today in a state of permanent crisis — permanent crisis which the regime and its backers refuse to acknowledge. They live in a dream world and they close their eyes to reality. What is happening is that our people have declared that the system of race rule is intolerable. Today, they are not prepared to put up with it for 1 day longer. People today find the situation so intolerable that a bus rise in fares, a wage strike, a problem of rents, can spark off a prairie fire in area after area. This fire is spreading through our country. Our country is ablaze with revolt. Obviously, revolt is a condition which will be found by many to be one of chaos, but there is order in revolt, there is order in revolution. That order is to be found when you clearly understand who are the people and who is the enemy. Within that framework then, you will be able to understand what is happening in our country. Our people are in revolt and the Botha regime is faced with a situation where that revolt is spreading throughout the country. In how many countrysides that revolt is spreading to, simmering and bursting forth to the surface. They are responding to the analysis of the leaders of the liberation struggle, the ANC, by their actions whether as members of the ANC or as part of the masses not structured into an organization, responding to the analysis [words idnistinct] which states very briefly that our duty now, at this stage, is to make apartheid unworkable and make the country ungovernable. [end recording]

MB251852 Maputo in English to Southern Africa 1800 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] (?A communique from the) African National Congress released in Lusaka today says South Africa is planning new attacks against neighboring African states. The ANC's director for international affairs, John Makatin, said that Pretoria wishes to take advantage of the international climate created by the recent United States attack on Libya for attacks on alleged ANC bases in these states. Mr Makatini was referring to Wednesday's white paper produced by South Africa's Defense Ministry, alleging that neighboring states were secretely aiding ANC operations in South Africa.

The paper pointed out Botswana, Mozambique, Zimbabwe, and Zambia. Mr Makatini once again denied that the ANC has military bases in the neighboring countries, stressing that all ANC operations are carried out from within South Africa itself. He said the white paper should not be taken idly, adding that Pretoria was preparing the public opinion for the launching of new cross border attacks.

20,000 Prisoners To Have Sentences Reduced

[Text] House of Assembly, April 23, SAPA — At least 20,000 prisoners will their sentences reduced by six months in a general amnesty on Republic Day, May 31 this year, the minister of justice, Mr Kobie Coetsee, said today. During his reply to the justice budget vote he announced that the state president had approved the amnesty to certain categories of prisoners on May 31 when the 25th anniversary of the republic is celebrated. People imprisoned for unrest, robberty, rape and assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm would be excluded from the amnesty.

Mrs Helen Suzman (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Houghton) interjected that it was a good opportunity to release "Mandela, Sisulu, and co."

All Pass Offenders Said Released From Prison

[Text] Pretoria, April 25, SAPA — The final total number of pass offenders "sentenced and unsentenced" who have been released from prison stands at 188 people, a senior prisons service spokesman said tonight. The spokesman said in response to a question from SAPA the figure did not include those former pass offenders held in police cells but added all pass "offenders" had now been released.

371 Killed, 1194 Injured Under State of Emergency

[Text] House of Assembly, April 25, SAPA — There were 371 deaths and 1194 injured as a result of police action during the state of emergency imposed on July 21, 1985 and lifted on March 7 this year, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, said today. A total of 416 deaths and 740 injuries in incidents not related to police action were recorded in the same period, he said in a written reply to a question from Mr Peter Soal, (PFP, Johannebsurg North). In this seven month period, 18,569 people were detained and 7097 arrests were made by the South African police in terms of state of emergency powers.

One Reportedly Killed in Ciskei Violence

[Text] King Williams Town, April 25, SAPA — A teenager reportedly died and the private house of the Ciskei minister of justice, police and prisons, Mr David Takane, was extensively damaged by fire last night after violence broke out at Sada township near Whittlesea, SAPA's correspondent reports.

The director of information in Ciskei, Mr Headman Somtunzi, today confirmed the disturbances last night and said they involved acts of arson. "A number" of houses were set alight. Mr Somtunzi said few arrests had been made by police "who managed to keep situation under control."

A number of people were reported injured and admitted to the local clinic and treated for various injuries such bruises, stab wounds and burns. Mr Somtunzi said some of the injured people were treated and discharged and serious cases were transfered to the Cecilia Makiwane Hospital in Mdantsane.

A 17-year-old girl, Nomboniso Sakwe, was reported to have died from first degree burns after an arson attack on a house.

Mr Somtunzi said no one was injured at the house of Mr Takane.

Western Cape Civic Group Member Arrested

MB270535 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2043 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 25, SAPA — A member of the Western Cape Civic Association, Mr Kholisile Ntondini, was arrested on a murder charge by police when he reported to the Guguletu police station today.

Yesterday his wife said their home was "attacked" by four men in the early hours of the morning. Mrs Gladys Ntondini said she believed the four men "who kicked and banged on the door and windows of her home at 2.30am yesteday morning were "witdoeke" [white cloth worn on head]. She said she hid her three children under her bed when the men shouted "open up," and they went away.

She said police had told her that they wanted to see her husband at the police station, however, he did not report there because he "had to work," she said. Today Mr Ntondini went to the police station with Mr Jan van Eck of the PFP's repression monitoring committee, because he was afraid that he would be detained, Mrs Ntondini said.

Mr Van Eck said today that he had accompanied Mr Ntondini because "in previous cases when people were asked to go to the police station they had been detained." He said that on their arrival at the police station, police said that Mr Ntondini was being arrested as he was a suspect in a murder case. Mrs Gladys Ntondini said today that a policeman said to her "we have locked your husband up because he came here with a white man."

Residents said they were afraid of renewed outbreaks of violence in the area following the incident at Mrs Ntondini's home. Residents said that they were afraid of re-newed conflict between the "witdoeke" vigilantes and members of progressive organizations.

Mr Ntondini was one of the seven men elected by the community to make peace between the "comrades" and the new Crossroads Committee collecting "bail funds" from the community.

The alleged misuse of bail funds was the direct cause of ongoing violence which has so far claimed the lives of at least 11 people in the past six weeks.

SAPA earlier reported that a police spokesman in Pretoria said if Mrs Ntondini was satisfied that the police had neglected their duty she could make an affidavit and take it to her local police station or any other police station for investigation, or send it directly to police headquarters in Pretoria for investigation if she wanted to.

Police Reportedly Search Zolani Township

[Text] Cape Town, April 27, SAPA — Police allegedly conducted a house-to-house search in Zolani township outside Ashton at this weekend following the killing of a community councillor and the burning of two vehicles on Friday night. The body of Mr Douglas Zwani, 62, was found in the township after he had been attacked with knives.

Mr Dawie Bosch, a member of the Montagu and Aston Advice Office, which serves Zolani, said today that "at least 15 people from Zolani have complained of an intensive police search of the township over the weekend." Mr Bosch said: "It looks like the police are clamping down after the burnings and the killing of Mr Zwani. Police have apparently been there since early on Saturday, and I have had reports of vigilantes working with police in searching the township."

A resident, Mr Isaac Majola, said 12 members of the Majola family — distant cousins of his — had "disappeared" from a house near his early today. Mr Majola said that after the house had been "made a mess of" by police, the family, including a four-month-old baby and a 70-year-old woman, had disappeared.

Mr Samuel Finiza said police had been "all around the location" since yesterday morning. "Vigilantes were helping the police," he said. "A vigilante came into my house with police about 7.45am on Saturday. The vigilante slapped my son. I saw police also go into all the houses near mine."

A police liaison officer for the Boland refused to comment on the allegations today. The police liaison officer in Pretoria, Major C.P. Crafford, told SAPA he could not comment on the incident until he had spoken to the local police.

Three Killed in Umbumbulu Faction Fighting

[Text] Durban, April 28, SAPA — Three people were shot dead during renewed faction fighting in the Umbumbulu area south of Durban yesterday. When police arrived the more than 1000 tribesmen thought to be members of the Emba and Makanya clans dispersed and, during follow-up investigations, police arrested 16 people and took possession of seven firearms and a large quantity of sticks.

A spokesman for Chief Makanya denied that the Makanyas were involved in the fighting. "The Embos have split into two groups and are fighting each other. When some of the Embos come and hide in Makanya territory, then people say Makanyas are fighting."

Durban Area Weekend Violence Reported

[Text] Durban, April 28, SAPA — A man was burned to death and the home of a KwaZulu Legislative Assembly member was petrol-bombed in renewed violence in two black townships outside Durban over the weekend. Police are investigating the death of an unidentified man who was attacked and then set alight at F Section in KwaMashu yesterday. Motor cars and a filling station were also set alight when youths returning from the funeral of a KwaMashu student leader went on the rampage on Saturday.

After the funeral of Dumisani Ximba, a pupil at Mzuvele High School who was abducted and killed last week, the youths set fire to cars, several houses and a filling station belonging to a former Kwazulu MP, Mr Gobizizwe Bhengu.

In Umlazi yesterday, the home of the KwaZulu Legislative Assembly member Mr Winnington Sabelo was petrol-bombed, causing damage which it is estimated will cost R5000 to repair. Mr Sabelo, a prominent member of Inkatha, was at home with his son and friends when the attack occurred. They managed to put out the fire themselves. Mr Sabelo said he did not want to comment on the attack as it would only give the attackers undue publicity. "All I want to say is that my house was attacked and I know the identities of the attackers and from which organisation they come."

In another incident, the home of the Natal regional secretary of the Congress of South African Trade Unions, Mr Thami Mohlomi, was petrol-bombed yesterday. No one was injured in the attack, in which a dozen shots were fired from a vehicle.

Homes of Two Soweto Policemen Attacked

MB280825 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0823 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — The homes of two Soweto policemen were attacked on Friday night by unknown men and there were no injuries, the Soweto police reported today. The homes, both situated in Zone Five, Diepkloof, were attacked about midnight. In one house, two bullet holes were found in a wall and in the other, investigators found four bullet holes. A Soweto police spokesman said one of the policemen had reproted seeing a combi drive away shortly after the attack.

Two Blacks Killed After Shooting at Police

MB280921 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0920 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 28, SAPA — At 4.40am today a group of white policemen on duty in Alexandra were fired on from a house, the police public relations directorate in Pretoria announced. Two of these policemen were struck by bullets. The police returned fire with rifles, pistols and a hand-grenade. Police said two black men were fatally wounded in the incident and another black man was wounded and arrested. Police are investigating.

Policeman Set on Fire in Mamelodi 28 April

[Text] Pretoria, April 28, SAPA — A policeman was doused with petrol and set alight, and a Russian-made hand grenade thrown at another policeman's house failed to explode in incidents of violence in Mamelodi at the weekend. A spokesman for the police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria said the handgrenade thrown at the house of the policeman in Mamelodi yesterday failed to detonate. Although the spokesman could not confirm the policeman's name, a Johannesburg morning newspaper identified him as Constable A. Tshuvula.

The spokesman could also not confirm an incident on Saturday in which a policeman was admitted to Kalafong hospital with serious wounds after he had been doused with petrol and set alight by an angry mob. According to reports, the policeman was spotted in Mamelodi. He rushed into a car with the mob in pursuit and was forced out and doused with petrol before he was set alight.

Two youths were arrested in a separate stone-throwing incident. The spokesman said the arrests followed a stone-throwing incidents at a policeman's house in Mamelodi.

Union Officials Unable To Attend Tembisa Funeral

MB281118 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1117 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — Police today sealed off Tembisa township on the east Rand near Johannesburg and refused permission for senior officials of the Metal and Allied Workers Union (MAWU), accompanied by union leaders from Sweden, the United States, and Britain, to attend the funeral of Mr Mphumelelo Kortman, allegedly killed by police two weeks ago.

Among those turned back by the police and army were MAWU officials Mr Moses Mayekiso and Dr Bernie Fanaroff; Mr Herman Rebhan, general secretary of the International Metalworkers Federation (IMF); Mr Denis Macshane of the British Transport and General workers Union; Mr Don Stillman of the American United Automobile Workers Union; Mr Ben Sharman of the American Association of Machinists; and Mr Hakan Arnelid of the Swedish Metalworkers Union. Mr Mayekiso was scheduled to be master of ceremonies at the funeral.

Members of the security forces guarded Nepo Cinema in the township early today where the funeral service was scheduled to be held. Later, police blocked all routes leading to the cinema. But the funeral service was transferred to Mr Kortman's home at Moutse section from where the cortege was to leave for the cemetery.

Press and television reporters were not allowed into the township. At a roadblock the unionists and members of the press were given five minutes to leave Tembisa or be arrested. Only people who could prove they were residents of Tembisa were allowed in and all cars entering were searched.

Mr Rebhan said the IMF found any pretence of democracy in South Africa to be a fraud "as we cannot pay our last respects to a colleague in the same industry as us." Both Mr Mayekiso and Mr Fanaroff said it was "absolutely irresponsible and inequitous" that the police and army could prevent union members and senior officials attending the funeral of a colleague. "We have done everything in our power to persuade police not to interfere in the proceedings, but they have decided not to be reasonable. We believe that in acting in this way the police can only contribute to unrest, the result of which we cannot predict. We call on the police and the army to withdraw from the townships."

In a speech he was to have delivered at the funeral, Mr Rebhan said that under all systems of oppression, it was the workers who paid the price. Mr Kortman's "sacrifice" would inspire workers overseas and other countries "as they raise their voice for a free and democratic South Africa."

Earlier today, groups of youths moved around Tembisa enforcing a work stayaway because of the funeral. Youths stood guard at all the railway stations as early as 3am and turned back commuters. There were no taxis and buses in the township and people who tried to walk to the railway stations were ordered back home by groups of youths.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report] Negotiation With ANC

"The chances of negotiations between the Government and the African National Congress could be closer than thought," David Braun, political correspondent, writes on the front page of Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 24 April. Braun cites P.W. Botha's comment in Parliament that discussions with the Eminent Persons Group had reached " 'a delicate state' " and says that "it is known that central to proposals put by the EPG to the Government is the unbanning of the ANC, the release of Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners, and negotiations for a non-racial and representative government. But it is clear from the Government's public stance that the key question is the question of the ANC renouncing violence — even if only for the duration of the discussions." The attraction of the EPG is that it could "provide the undertaking that the ANC will adhere to nonviolence if Pretoria keeps its side of the deal. The obvious attraction of this for Pretoria is that the Commonwealth, by putting its seal of approval on any agreement and by furnishing 'guarantees' to both sides, lends enormous international prestige and credibility to any agreement to start negotiations." If the ANC then could not adhere to its nonviolence pledge, the government would feel free to start constitutional talks without it.

Police Probe Attacks

According to a report by a "political correspondent" on the same page, "a high-level police investigation has been ordered into allegations that off-duty policemen were involved in attacks on homes and civilians in Alexandra on Tuesday night." According to a police spokesman, police are aware of "rumors" that off-duty black policemen had been among a group of "moderates" who carried attacks on "comrades" and members of the Alexandra Action Committee.

Discussion of Pass Law Changes

An article by Jo-Anne Collinge on the front page discusses the case of Patrick Morolong, in jail for failing to have a pass book, and how the new changes would affect him. A Black Sash advice worker suspects he would remain "a person of the shadows." Approved accommodation is needed for legal urban residence and his chances of getting this are low as a pass book is necessary to get accommodation. "Securing a South African identity document has proved an impossible task for Mr Morolong for the past nine years. This is largely because he cannot prove he was born on the Reef as he does not know the clinic where he was born." He is viewed as a citizen of Bophuthatswana as that is where he took out his first pass book and that restricts his job opportunities. He lives wherever he can but hopes someone will offer him a job and a room.

White Farmers 'Enemy'

"White border farmers, who were in police and army defence units, could not be considered soft targets and were regarded as part of the 'enemy,' the African National Congress told the National Union of South African Students' delegation during talks at Eastern," Susan Pleming reports on page 3. This was revealed at a report-back meeting on the trip by students who attended. Delegation leader Brendan Barry said: "Although the ANC said it did not plan to indiscriminately attack white civilians, it would take up 'the struggle' in white areas." The ANC also said the country would not become a Soviet satellite and that it was not opposed to a multiparty system so long as no party advocated racism.

Decaying Township

Don Holliday, a member of the crime staff, reports on page 6 of a tour he took of Alexandra under heavy policy escort which "revealed a decaying township slum," with sewerage overflowing, old brick houses sagging, corrugated iron sheeting serving as make-shift homes and children in ragged clothes at communal taps.

Discussion of Attacks

On the same page, Mike Siluma reports that the Congress of South African Trade Unions [COSATU] has called "on all progressive organizations to meet and discuss the growing incidence of violent attacks on anti-apartheid leaders and activists." COSATU said the attacks were part of " 'a grand plan by those in power to suppress us in a different fashion — for South Africa to get out of (the present) crisis. We call upon all progressive organisations, including churches, to look into the possibility of coming together to discuss the new trend of violence in South Africa, which seems to be our way of life.' "

Beyers Naude Comments

In a report from Harare on page 6, THE STAR's Africa News Service reports that Dr Beyers Naude, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, told a Zimbabwe Christian Council seminar that "while the picture of South Africa today is bleak with the country on the verge of an explosion, there is tremendous hope that a just and humane society will finally emerge." He said he told people who feared a Marxist regime in South Africa that "millions of people were beginning to understand the need for a new society and he had such implicit faith in God that he knew out of all the agony and suffering something would emerge with all the seeds of a more just society." " 'We are moving towards a revolution and have come to the point where there is no looking back.' "

Postal Workers Union

"The Department of Posts and Telecommunications has agreed, in principle, to the formation of a black workers' association, a spokesman for the post office workers said yesterday," the paper reports on the same page. A spokesman for the workers, who met with the postmaster general, said that the conditions for the formation were that the workers submit a draft constitution, and that executive members must be democratically elected. The postmaster general had pledged " 'equal pay for equal qualifications and job opportunities.' "

Alexandra Council Resignation

On the same page, the paper reports that a well-known Alexandra resident and bar owner Mr Million Bowes has resigned as an employee of the Alexandra Town Council. He had been employed for about a year as caretaker of the township's blocks of flats. Boycotters had distributed pamphlets asking that his bar be boycotted.

Reassurances for Private Schools

The Minister of Education and Culture in the House of Assembly, Mr Piet Clase, this week assured Catholic private schools that they would not be closed if they refused to re-register under new draft regulations. Last week, 65 Catholic schools said they would refuse to register until a racial clause in the new regulations was removed. A school representative said they had been assured they would not be de-registered if they failed to comply.

STAR on Pass Laws

In an editorial on page 12, THE STAR says that the word "reform" is in such disrepute that "even genuine political advances need to be dissected and examined under a microscope. With some reservations, then, yesterday's moves on the pass laws must be hailed as an undoubted major step towards racial justice." The release of people in jail for such offenses and the ending of arrests as well as the fact that the time for such action was moved forward are all positive signs. However, "the main factor clouding the picture of equal freedoms is the emphasis on the availability of housing as a condition for urban residence. How will this requirement be enforced?" Will the enforcement be discriminatory? "Events might prove that too much discretion has been left to reactionary white councils — that of Pretoria for example. Will they be allowed to subvert national policy." "Practice will show the proof of the pudding. For the meanwhile, these moves are an exciting start."

STAR on Safety Amendment Bill

In a second editorial on the same page, the paper says the Public Safety Amendment Bill was introduced in Parliament to give the rightwing more law and order before scrapping the pass laws for the leftwing. The bill, however, "is to be deplored." The minister of law and order has "too much power as it is. In effect, he will get the authority to do what only the State President once could do." Already there are too many reports on abuse by policemen and giving the minister new powers to declare a state of emergency without using that term is "subterfuge. Changing nomenclature does not solve problems." "Parliament would be advised to reject this Bill."

Catholics Consider Sanctions

On page 12, THE STAR carries a report by Estelle Trengove on the Southern African Catholic Bishops' Conference (SACBC) considering taking action requesting economic sanctions be imposed against the country. "Whatever the people say, the Catholic Church seems set to be come the first church in South Africa officially to give support to disinvestment and economic sanctions." The SACBC issued two documents for members to discuss but slanted heavily in favor of sanctions. One disputed that sanctions would cause a loss of jobs in most instances. If foreign business refused new investment or sold investments to local firms no jobs would be lost. Only if physical capacity was actually removed would there be a job loss, although job losses could also occur if foreign countries banned or restricted South African exports. The SACBC said its support would strengthen groups advocating sanctions abroad, would lend weight to the general movement away from apartheid at home and abroad and were supported by black opinion polls and by black leaders, who favored them even if jobs were lost. If the church takes such a stand, it may open the way to others to take such a position.

DPSC on Unjust System

On the same page, the Detainees Parents Support Committee writes in the "Our View" column that "due process of law always constitutes an unwelcome obstacle to those who would rather rule by arbitrary decree." The history of South African security legislation shows that the courts have been stripped of their power to ensure individual liberty and that "vast and almost unfettered powers have been conferred upon administrative officials." The case of the banning of Manas Buthelezi is discussed, which shows that Such actions rely on the information of paid informants with an interest in distorting the truth. "The information cannot be tested in a court of law and reliance upon it can lead to the imprisonment of innocent people." Although the DPSC is pleased the appellate court took action to overrule the minister's bannings, "it remains concerned that an arbitrary and unjust system remains intact. It is a system which is the product of an authoritatian regime with scant respect for legality and democratic values. The DPSC, therefore, reiterates its call for the scrapping of security legislation."

DPSC on Detainees

On page 16, the paper reports that the DPSC has said that "the structure of the South African detention laws encouraged the abuse of detainees." A DPSC spokesman said that " 'the point is that the structure of the detention laws is such that those practices are in effect encouraged. The detainee is entirely at the mercy of his interrogators.' " "Detainees were totally isolated from an attorney, an independent doctor, family or access to the courts." " 'So-called safeguards set up all operate within a closed system and experience shows that they are worthless.' "

Barclays on Sanctions

A report from London on page 17 says that Barclays chairman Sir Timothy Bevan has "repeated his pledge not to commit new money to South Africa — but the possibility of a Commonwealth- backed loans to held the black South African community was raised by him at the bank's annual meeting on Tuesday." He also said Barclays would not be party to formal debt rescheduling " 'until the regime there gains international credibility.' " He said lending benefiting the black community would be considered. He said he was confident that Barclays South Africa was a force for good. " 'In South Africa we are known as the anti-apartheid bank.' "

Role of Finrand

In another article on the same page, the paper says the Treasury is "looking for ways to increase the scope of the financial rand to enable potential foreign investors and local non-quoted companies to use the currency as an investment route into South Africa." The main stumbling block is the small pool of financial rands. Some bankers argue, however, the financial rand should be ended, that a floating mechanism would cope with readjustment and share prices here and abroad would quickly realign in response to the new exchange rate. They also argue that the commercial rand, after an initial fall, could be expected to rebound. It has been widely reported that "the flight of capital out of South Africa recently was higher than expected when the rescheduling oeration was put together" and exchange controls are not coping with "disappearing money." However, if authorities try to force disinvestment money through the financial rand system, that might encourage "even greater foreign investor disillusion with this country."

Black-Oriented Stores

Another report on the same page says that while established companies have seen profits cut in the last 6 months, the black oriented stores have posted sucessful interim results. Frasers topped the upper range of forecasts by increasing its earnings 61 percent. Analysts are not certain what role black consumer spending is playing in this as Frasers success was in part attributed to the success of its rural stores, where the boycott effects wrec not so severely felt. Also declining white income coupled with fierce competition may have caused the reduction in profits of the established stores.

Seriousness of Debt Issue

On page 21 THE STAR carries an article by Michael Chester examining the debt issue 8 months after South Africa declared a debt repayment freeze and "shattered" its "faultless record in international financial markets." Yet most people still do not understand the seriousness of the issue, a paper by the Bureau for Economic Policy and Analysis at the University of Pretoria says. Even economists differ on the reason for it. Many lay the blame on politics and "are convinced the U.S. banks considered it the last straw when the State of Emergency was clamped down in a vain attempt to calm the wave of black unrest." Another economist argued, however, that the banks turned off the taps because of the country's poor economic performance. The University of Pretoria report calculated that every man, woman and child in South Africa would have to pay about $760 each to pay off the debt. However, that is still much less than the debts of other countries, including Australia. Nevertheless, the debt problem may dampen growth and thus hinder job creation. Bankers and politicians all say South Africa will repay its debt, given enough time, but the weakening rand, slower domestic growth, and more unemployment make it difficult and reduce living standards. The country must concentrate on exports.

May Day Rallies

On page 23, Sheryl Raine reports on union demands for a paid holiday on May Day, with only the conservative Trade Union Council of South Africa (TUSCA) saying it would not support the holdiay. Many businesses, however, are following the "no work, no pay" rule. The Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) has accused local authorities of denying it places to hold rallies. It plans to hold them now in Durban, Maritzburg, Ladysmith and Empangeni in Natal; Bonteheuwel, Atlantis and Mitchell's Plain in the Cape; Port Elizabeth and East London; and Soweto, Pretoria, Witbank and Secunda in the Transvaal. There has been "some behind-the-scenes lobbying of the Government by anxious business leaders."

Recreation Race Bans

"Johannesburg's 'all-white' recreation centres have been accused of acting illegally by refusing to allow Indians, blacks and coloured people to become members," THE STAR reports on page 24. City Councillor Geoff Stark has offered to make an issue out of anyone refused admission for racial reason. There have two recent complaints of discrimination at Paterson Park Recreation Center, one involving an Indian man and another a young colored woman.

Hospital Race Rule

"A newly formed committee claims there has been a de facto suspension of the Transvaal Provincial Administration [TPA] directive introduced earlier this year to make the Coronation Hospital in Johannesburg a 'coloureds only' establishment," the paper reports on page 25. This was stated by an association of doctors who have opposed the directive. However, the TPA denied the suspension, although doctors said they were confident the TPA'S unwillingness to enforce it meant it had backed down.

SADF Denies Allegations

Gary van Staden reports on the same page that the Defense Force had denied that SADF members had at any time acted illegally in carrying out their duties. The statement was issued in response to affidavits from residents in Kagiso and Munsieville alleging wrongful acts by security forces in a petition to the Rand Supreme Court. The SADF denied they had used whips on residents, that the presence of their forces was unnecessary, and that the SADF had sealed off all but one exit from the townships.

Doctors Deny Torture

Joe Openshaw reports on page 26 that the Medical Association of South Africa was "not aware of any instances of doctors being involved in the torture of detained children," according to one official, in reply to charges on the BBC program "Witness to Apartheid." The official said that any involvement by doctors in the torture of detainees or the failure to report such participation was "a gross violation of medical ethics and the association would investigate all cases reported to it."

SOWETAN on Township Violence

Alexandra township "has all the ingredients necessary for the outbreak of violence," the Johannesburg SOWETAN in English of 24 April says in a page 4 editorial. Violence feeds on itself and "very soon few people will feel safe in and out of their homes in the townships." The only way these ugly incidents will not be repeated is for the causes of the violence to be removed, the editorial says. "It is about time that the people of Johannesburg and its rich suburbs took Alexandra under their wing and completely change the unbearable situation there. It is also about time that the laws that create places such as Alexandra township are all removed from the Statute books of this country."

Bill on Rent Deductions

A page 7 article says several political and trade union movements have condemned draft legislation introduced in Parliament which will allow money to be deducted from wages by black employers for outstanding rent. Among them are the Council of Unions of South Africa, the Azanian People's Organization, the United Democratic Front and the Congress of South African Trade Unions. Under the bill money owed the black local authorities could be collected from employers not to exceed 25 percent of a worker's pay. The main areas affected are Katlehong on the east Rand, the Vaal triangle, Malemodi, and Alexandra, where angry residents have refused to pay rents until various demands are met.

Pressure on Black Athletes

Port Elizabeth Youth Congress President Mkhuseli Jack said that pressure which forced black athletes to withdraw from a major meeting in Port Elizabeth "would be exerted on all black sportsmen taking part in multiracial events," a page 10 article reports Mr Jack, who was responsible for the withdrawals, "denied there was any personal threat, real or implied, in what he had said to the athletes." He said the ban on black athletes competing in " 'unacceptable multiracial sport' would continue until 'the deplorable actions of the police and troops in the townships is addressed.' "

Anger Over Maize Price Increase

The SOWETAN reports on page 12 that the increased price of maize — 13.9 percent for white maize and 9.7 percent for yellow — has been met with anger and dismay. The president of the Black Consumer Union, Ellen Khuzwayo, said it was "regretable that the Government considered the interests of white producers instead of those of millions of blacks, of whom the majority were either unemployed or earning meagre wages." " 'Mealie-meal is a staple commodity consumed by blacks. Many people will be hard-hit,' " she said.

Lebowa Negotiation Offer

The Lebowa chief minister, Dr Cedric Phatudi, has offered to accompany State President P.W. Botha to Pollsmoor prison to negotiate with jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela, a page 17 article reports. He told the Lebowa legislative assembly that Mandela was " 'now matured and wise and his release will pay dividends.' " He rejected economic sanctions and said blacks should "use their buying power to force the pace of change."

High Import Bill

Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English for 24 April reports on page 2 that a "significantly" higher import bill dented the country's trade performance for the first quarter of the year. Official figures put the cost of imports in March at R1.93 billion. Imports in the first 3 months totalled R6.79 billion, 22 percent higher than the corresponding period last year. Much of the higher import bill is accounted by January's R2.8 billion, most of the increase probably the result of oil purchases. Exports increased by 14 percent during the first quarter.

White Businessmen Urge Alexandra Talks

The Alexandra Action Committee, composed of white businessmen from areas bordering Alexandra are calling for dialogue with any resident or group — moderate or radical, a page 3 article says. They feel the state and local authorities are not doing enough to solve problems. Spokesman Ron Osborne said: " 'We don't care whether we talk to the moderates or the comrades who put out boycott pamphlets. We want to talk.' "

Criticism of Coca-Cola

BUSINESS DAY reports that the Food Beverage Workers Union (FBWU) has criticised Coca-Cola for not consulting it about a decision to give R20 million to improving business, housing and educational opportunities for blacks. A page 3 article says that Transvaal FBWU chairman George Nene said: " 'Black workers at the company should have some say as to how the money is spent because they feel the company does not do enough to assist them with housing and the financing of their children's education.' "

BUSINESS DAY on Importance of Land

The key to success of urbanization is not the " 'orderliness' " that so obsesses bureaucratic minds, but land, a page 6 editorial says. Government has "foolishly tried to exclude the residents of the so-called independent homelands from the new system, which means that the problems of Crossroads and Khayalitsha probably remain insoluble. It still dreams of reviving moribund dorps [villages] in the hope of reducing the flow of migrants to the cities, the equivalent of trying to divert the Orange River with a teaspoon." "And the government (when will they ever learn?) proposed to 'inform' the market where accommodation is available." "It's the old, sad story of reform. Government has done enough to arouse rightwing whites, but not enough to solve the problem. Yet its policy may still work, provided sufficient land is set aside to permit a process of self-help — prodded by the profit motive in a free market — to get off the ground."

Economist Criticizes Monetary Policies

"The complacent attitude of monetary and political authorities, after SA's foreign exchange markets were liberalized, contributed to the country's foreign debt problem, according to economist Louis Geldenhuys," a page 7 article reports. He said the "increasing reliance on market-related exchange and interest rates had underplayed the importance of discipline and prudence in monetary police." The South African situation, " 'given the potential violatility of the gold price and the political uncertainty is not totally conducive to successful free market operation,' " he said. He disagreed with the view that the debt standstill resulted from political rather than economic factors. Geldenhuys said the " 'political situation may have been the final straw which forced the authorities to impose a debt moratorium but to blame it entirely is simplistic.' " " 'We need a co-ordinated economic plan to engineer a climate to attract foreign capital to a changing SA and to improve the private sector's trust in the ability of the authorities to handle the ecomomy.' "

Gencor Chairman on Economic Growth

BUSINESS DAY reports in an article on page 13 that Gencor Chairman Ted Pavitt predicts a 3 percent growth rate this year and expects more real private expenditure. In his valedictory review, Pavitt says he does not expect any "substantial" change in the rand/dollar exchange rate and sees the inflation rate in excess of last year's 16 percent. Pavitt said that government efforts to stimulate the economy will contribute to a moderate upswing, but this will be short-lived if the questions of foreign-debt repayment and availability of foreign capital are not solved "satisfactorily and expeditiously." He believes that reform will be regarded as "too slow or too limited" by a substantial part of the population and this perception "combined with increasing unemployment and the political aspirations of the trade unions, will probably contribute to further deterioration in social conditions and labour relations."

Editorial on Geldenhuys Report

The Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English for 23 April in an editorial on page 8 asks why the Geldenhuys committee report on the armed forces cannot be published, albeit in edited form to excise classified information. That section of the report which appears in the white paper on defense "seems to be only a tiny part of the inquiry into the structure of South Africa's armed forces." "With troops now used almost routinely in the townships to control unrest, resistance to conscription is stronger than it has ever been. Yet the government seems unwilling to concede that the majority of objectors are anything more than draft-dodgers, who must be punished if they allow their principles to get the better of them." "Indeed," the editorial says, "a feature of the White Paper is the lack of change in the national service system." Initial call-up will remain at 2 years and the curtailment of deferments for university students "makes no sense unless the aim is to catch young men who graduate at South African universities and then leave the country to avoid national service." The punitive attitude towards conscientious objectors must be blamed for this. South Africa is losing some of its best brains and the abolition of general deferments may only hasten that loss.

CITIZEN Hails End of Race Laws

The Johannesburg CITIZEN in English for 24 April says the day the government announced that 34 racially discriminatory laws and proclamations are to be repealed was a great day for black South Africans. A page 6 editorial says the announcements not be regarded as sufficient by those who want all apartheid laws to be scraped immediately. Nor will it satisfy the radicals who want the country to be handed over to black rule. "What the Government has done is to abandon a major pillar in what is a giant step forward in ending racial discrimination. And other reforms will follow as sure as night follows day."

PFP Criticizes Geldenhuys Report

A page 8 report says the Progressive Federal Party spokesman on defense, Graham McIntosh has criticised the Geldenhuys committee report on defense for not providing nonmilitary forms of national service. He said it was " 'odd' to describe the present system as functioning 'satisfactorily and efficiently' when hundreds of young men left the country to avoid National Service."

Catholic Anti-Disinvestment Lobby Growing

"The anti-disinvestment lobby in the Catholic Church is growing and mobilising at an unprecedented rate as the Church's executive heads for its critical summit conference on Monday on the issue, according to leading moderate-traditionalist Catholic, Mr Jan Roodbol," a page 10 article reports. In an interview Mr Roodbol said: " 'Never before have Catholics been so willing in parishes throughout the land to stand up an be counted on the issue.' " Feedback from both white and nonwhite congregations shows "overwhelming resistance" to the call of the Church's commission for justice and reconciliation for disinvestment to force the country to its knees and to force change.

CAPE TIMES Praised

Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English on 24 April reports on page 3 that journalism students at the Peninsula Technikon in Bellvill have issued a statement expressing concern over " 'the increasing infringement on press freedom by the government and its allies,' " and praising the CAPE TIMES for "its honest portrayal of events in South Africa and the western Cape community."

CAPE TIMES on Security Force Powers

"As feared, the proposed amendments to the Public Safety Act will give the Minister of Law and Order sweeping emergency powers in areas of unrest, virtually making it unnecessary in future for the State President to proclaim a state of emergency," the CAPE TIMES says in an editorial on page 10. The state president used the black-on-black violence to justify giving the minister wider powers and while those at risk have every right to police protection, whether this violence is best combated "by restoring a state of emergency, albeit in another form," is open to question. President Botha seems to be forgetting that "the last state of emergency did not stop these township violence." "What makes the government think that emergency powers will be any more effective in future, unless fundamental political grievances in the black community are speedily redressed?"

Government Takes 'Massive Step Forward'

In a second editorial on the same page, the paper says "the government has done what it said it would do, which is to abolish influx control and promote the free movement of black South Africans." Although there are still some reservations and the Group Areas Act and Aliens Act remain on the books, the government has "taken South Africa a massive step forward and made it a better place."

Clergymen Oppose Conscription

"Prominent church leaders have joined in the call for an end to conscription and have supported the End Conscription Campaign's 'Working for a Just Peace Campaign,' " the CAPE TIMES reports on page 11. A joint statement issued by the Catholic archbishop of Cape Town, the acting chairman of the Methodist Church, the moderator of the United Congregational Church of South Africa's Peninsula region, the chairperson of Baptists for Social Concern, and the Anglican Archbishop of Cape Town said that the conscription of whites was forcing them " 'into a position of tragic confrontation with their fellow South Africans,' " and urged the government to provide more opportunities for alternative service by those "who in good conscience object to training in the SADF."

Appliance, TV Prices To Rise

"Domestic appliances and television sets are set to rise in price again," Cherilyn Ireton reports on page 18 of the CAPE TIMES. "Manufacturers warned yesterday that unless the dollar/yen exchange rate improved, these goods would go up by at least 8 percent in mid-year."

ASA To Oppose Rising Prices

"The Artisans Staff Association (ASA) is to become 'more militant' in the fight against rising consumer prices and could consider advising members to boycott Sasol [South African Coal, Gas, and Oil Corporation] unless the Government brings down the price," Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 25 April reports on page 3. At the union's congress, it was also decided to support "the principle of equal education," and to call on the government to open technical colleges to all races and to create more job opportunities.

Remaining Pass Law Offenses

A page 4 report notes that Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha told the House of Assembly that "some pass law offences were still in force," The paper reports on page 4. It is still illegal to forge, mutilate, or destroy a "reference book" and to possess a forged one.

White, Colored Salary Differences

"Salary differences between Coloureds and Whites had been phased out in all but two of the 21 salary levels in the Civil Service, the Minister of Administration and Economic Advisory Services, Mr Eli Louw," told the House of Representatives,a page 4 report says. He added that the government intended to eliminate the remaining disparities.

Coloreds 'Infiltrating White Race'

Another page 4 report in THE CITIZEN notes that Conservative Party MP Frans van Staden said in the House of Assembly that "Coloureds were 'infiltrating' the White race by applying for reclassification." Van Staden also "warned that if the National Party continued with its 'policy of integration' the White race would no longer be 'pure.' "

CITIZEN Backs Greater Police Powers

Commenting on the government's efforts to extend the powers of the minister of law and order in an editorial on page 6, the paper says that because of the increased in black-on-black violence since the state of emergency was lifted, "the government had no choice" but to make the request. "The threat to law and order by radicals attempting to destabilise the country, as well as the efforts to create a revolutionary climate, cannot be fought even with the extensive powers the police have in normal circumstances. We believe that until the violence is rooted out the police will need the extended powers. Parliament will be able to act as a watchdog to ensure they don't abuse them." More than anything else, the country needs peace so that the "great changes" can "proceed in the right climate."

National Forum on May Day

A report on page 8 notes that although the National Forum is not calling for a work stayaway or boycott on 1 May, it was seeking a national paid holiday. National Forum President Saths Cooper said boycotts, " 'if not national coordinated or goal-specific,' " " 'tend to dissipate the energies of those people the organisations appeal to.' "

Treurnicht on Resisting Blacks

Conservative Party leader Andries Treurnicht told a University of Pretoria meeting that " 'we will not let ourselves be shot dead like sitting ducks,' " the paper reports on page 12. Treurnicht, who was "enthusiastically applauded," added that " 'we are going to resist any attempt by Black people to overrun us' " and called on the government to have the question of black political participation decided by a "white general election rather than a referendum."

Insurance Costs Nearly Double

"The cost of insuring some of SA's major companies has almost doubled this year, as short-term insurers have continued to grapple with prolonged underwriting losses and tough re-insurance conditions," Lesley Lambert reports on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 25 April. "In certain cases, rates for some of the large categories of property and liability cover (normally including fire, consequential loss, crime and liabilities) have been pushed up by between 80 percent and 100 percent, while smaller increases in these categories have not been much less than about 35 percent.

Retail Sales Expected To Drop

"Inflation-adjusted retail sales are expected to decline for the fourth consecutive month in April, highlighting the disappointing performance of the economy," economics editor John Tilston reports on page 2. "The expected real (ie inflation-adjusted) retail sales for April show a seasonably- adjusted decline of 2.6 percent compared with March and a 7.5 percent decline from the depressed sales of last April."

Government Misleading on Maize Price

"The Federated Chamber of Industries (FCI) has accused government of misleading consumers on the actual extent of the maize price increase," Gerald Reilly reports on page 2. "FCI Agricultural sub-committee chairman L.K. Japhet told BUSINESS DAY yesterday the actual increase to millers and feed manufacturers would be 25.1 percent" rather than the 9.7 percent announced by the government.

Agricultural Input Costs

"Farmers are pressing government to curb agriculture's input costs," BUSINESS DAY reports on page 3. South African Agricultural Union officials have held "urgent talks" with Trade and Industry Minister Dawie de Villiers, appealing to the government " 'to abolish all measures which increases costs,' " according to the union's president, Kobus Jooste, who added that " 'if input costs cannot be controlled, agriculture will have no alternative but to depend on State subsidies in the future.' " Jooste also said that inflation, rather than the drought, is the farmers' major concern.

More Personal Indebtedness

"South Africans sank deeper into debt during January, according to Central Statistics Services (CSS) figures released in Pretoria yesterday," another report on the same page says. "The number of summonses issued between November and January increased by 8.1 percent to 216,077 (198,000 last year) and the number of civil judgments for debts rose by 10.7 percent or 103,768 (93,708)." Also in the January-November period, liquidations increased by 39.6 percent and insolvencies by 72.5 percent.

Arrest in UDF Leader's Murder

"Police have arrested 21 people in connection with the murder of United Democratic Front [UDF] leader Chief Ampie Mayisa," BUSINESS DAY reports on page 4.

Unions Apply for Registration

Barry Streek reports on the same page that two affiliates of the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) — the National Union of Mineworkers and the General Workers Union — "have applied for government registration." Although many black unions have refused to apply for registration "for fear of co-option by government," the union's decision shows they "now believe there are advantages in being registered."

PFP Criticizes Advertising Campaign

"This week's government-funded advertising campaign to boost President P.W. Botha's reform initiatives was a disgraceful abuse of the taxpayers' money, the Progressive Federal Party [PFP] said yesterday," another report by Streek on the same page says. PFP MP Peter Soal said the "programme announced in the advertisements was nothing but Nationalist Party policy" and using taxpayers' money " 'to promote the aims and objects of one particular party is corrupt and contrary to the aims for the Bureau of Information as approved by Parliament in the Budget.' "

BUSINESS DAY on Change

In an editorial on page 6, BUSINESS DAY says: "Choose a day in the life of South Africa, a day like last Wednesday." On that day, among other things the government announced the abolition of the pass laws, the Conservative Party said the "retreat from apartheid" was responsible for unrest, the Black Sash condemned the new urbanization policy and a spokesman for the Azanian People's Organization said there was little change in the new policy, the police were fired on in Alexandra and Mayor Sam Buti resigned, and President Botha blamed black radicals for the murder of other blacks. "This is the picture of a country which, far from being a static tyranny, is caught up in the process of headlong change. The oddest feature of it all may be the tenacious blindness to change of those who deny it is happening." While there are several factors behind this "denigration of change," one of the most important is that reform "threatens a revolutionary programme to overthrow not racism but capitalism. For the government, this may be disheartening, but there is really no alternative to carrying on. The elimination of racial injustice is a necessary prelude to the negotiations which alone can bring the country to rest."

Politics Not Affecting Stock Market

"Only some of the credit for the sudden flurry of activity on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange over the past few days can be given to this week's political developments, widely hailed as they were," a second editorial on the same page says. "With foreign buyers largely out of the market, political developments have much less direct impact on the market than they once enjoyed." Instead, the stock market recovery can be attributed to "a firmer gold price, a softer rand, particularly the financial rand, and to a minor degree to the interest attracted in some underpriced new issues."

Blacks Want To Keep Jobs

Dianna Grimes reports on page 7 of BUSINESS DAY that a report on "Black SA and the Disinvestment Issue" by a student at the University of Witwatersrand's Business School found "the overwhelming majority of blacks 'stream obediently every day to their workplaces and back, as opposed to the odd short-term stayaway when a sustained general strike could make foreign pressure pale by comparison.' " In contrast to "the militancy of black leadership," most black workers "seem determined to hold on to their jobs." The report also suggests that "disinvestment could thus be looked on by certain leadership as likely to achieve what they cannot, that is to force workers on to the streets, angry and desperate and in a mood to take on government whatever the consequences."

Government Causes Business Confidence Loss

"BMW SA's MD [Managing Director] Walter Hasselkus has castigated government for the depressed state of business confidence in this country," Jim Mackenzi reports on the same page. Hasselkus said " 'one cannot help but conclude that the political climate is responsible for this amazing lack of business confidence,' " as reflected in the declining sales in the car industry. He also "warned government the tolerance shown to date by the West German government was wearing thin."

Businessmen 'Not Impressed' By Conference Call

John Tilston reports on the same page that "despite some public expressions of welcome" to the state president's suggestion that another conference of businessmen similar to the Carlton and Good Hope conferences be held, "privately businessmen are not impressed." One businessman said: " 'If the President doesn't know businessmen's views by now, he never will. Anyway, at these huge meetings and luncheons no serious debate can get going. Too many spout a lot of tripe, or trot out their well-known hobby horses.' "

May Day Demands

Len Maseko reports on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 25 April that the Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA) and the Azanian Confederation of Trade Unions (AZACTU), the Congress of South African Trade unions, [COSATU] and the United Workers Union of South Africa all plan to hold rallies on 1 May. However, "COSATU has charged that local authtories in certain townships are deliberately denying it venues for rallies and warned the celebrations would still go ahead." Maseko notes that the Federated Chambers of Industries "said it was concerned that existing holdiays did not reflect community sentiment and was not opposed in principle to a public holiday recognising the role of labour." CUSA and AZACTU "have warned that employers who refuse to recognise May Day as a paid public holiday would be 'confronted by the collective wrath of the workers.' " The National Federation of South African Workers has also demanded the day as a paid holiday. Maseko also notes that about 1,000 workers at Unilever in Boksburg have been involved in a work stoppage for the past 2 days over management's refusal to grant a paid holiday on May Day. Furthermore, "more than 750 members of the building construction in Johannesburg have been sent back to their homelands following a strike over wages and demands for the reinstatement of dismissed shot stewards."

Whites Oppose Mandela Release

"Most urban whites in South Africa are against the release of imprisoned African National Cognress leader, Nelson Mandela, on humanitarian grounds according to a Marknor poll conducted countrywide recently," the paper reports on page 2. The poll found that 66 percent of those surveyed opposed Mandela's release, but 67 percent supported the idea of a common citizenship for all, 77 percent supported equal education, and 71 percent supported the opening of central business districts. The greatest support for the reform program came from the Cape, with 74 percent, followed by Durban with 71 percent, and the Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging area with 64 percent. Least support came from Port Elizabeth and East London, with 60 percent.

Release of Bophuthatswana Unrest Victims

Reporting on the Bophuthatswana's government's release of the bodies of victims of the Winterveld shootings on page 2, Monk Nkomo says that the two bodies released on 24 April were taken to their homes in police vehicles and buried 1 hour later. Only relatives were permitted to attend the funerals and political speeches were banned. Nkomo adds that another four bodies are expected to be released soon.

DET Warns Exam Candidates

"The Department of Education and Training [DET] has warned that candidates who have not paid examination fees will not be allowed to sit for matric exams in November," Ali Mphaki reports on page 3 of the SOWETAN. "This follows reports that a number of candidates for the matric examinations in November are being urged not to pay their examination fees. In other cases, candidates who have already paid are being told to demand their money back."

SOWETAN on Medunsa 'Crisis'

"We are cheered by the news that the National Education Crisis Committee is to address itself to the crisis situation at the Medical University of South Africa [Medunsa]," the SOWETAN says in an editorial on page 4. The white student whose attendance has brought about the boycotts at Medunsa "is part of a system that was responsible for the absurdity in having racially separated universities. Black students had no say in the making of these tribal colleges and seperate institutions of learning." "The university should ask him to leave as graciously as the other students have left. It will not cost him all that much."

'Focus' on Venda

In the "Focus" column on the same page, Sam Mabe writes that Venda President Patrick Mphephu has stayed in power despite the fact that he lost the first two elections in the homeland and only won the third election because it was "rigged," according to the leader of the opposition Venda Independent People's Party. Venda's constitution ensures that Mphephu will remain in power because there is an equal number of elected and appointed seats in Venda's Legislative Assembly. Mphephu, who was elected life president in 1983 "by tribal chiefs and party supporters," rules Venda "with an iron fist" and "is believed to be manipulated by a white man from Pretoria, whose decisions he seldom, if ever, opposes." In turn, the role of the Legislative Assembly "is not to make laws but to endorse laws made by Mphephu," according to "one South African official seconded to the Venda Government." A "reign of terror" began after a rocket attack on a police station in 1981 and several clergymen have been arrested. Mabe says "every person known to hold a slightly different view from that of Chief Mphephu is a potential detaineee in Venda. Outsiders are heavily scrutinised and nobody trusts anybody." Two people have died in detention and are believed to have been tortured to death by the Venda police.

'Joe's Burg' on Pass Laws

The "Joe's Burg" column on page 6 says "no law has created more bitterness than the pass laws of this country." Over the years we have had to work out ingenious ways of beating the system, for which the government "has only itself to blame." Blacks tried to get colored ID's or pretend they were American and "speak with a heavy South American drawl." "Thousands have died because of passes, and nobody has apologised to the blacks of this country."

West Rand Violence

"Clerics on the West Rand yesterday said they were trying to end a 'bloody' conflict between members of affiliates to the United Democratic Front and the Black Consciousness Movement," Mandla Ndlasi writes on the same page. One Anglican clergymen said "the conflict was caused by the youths who believed that their organisation was better than the other and should be allowed to dominate on the West Rand." But another Anglican clergymen "said the conflict was started by two youths who were unawre that they would drag their organisations into it." One youth is believed to have died as a result of the conflict, while two members of the Azanian Students Movement were attacked, the home of a UDF Leader was petrolbombed, one member of the Azanian People's Organization was stabbed and another was shot, and the van of a member of the Bekkersdal Concerned Parents Committee was burned.

Reaction to End of Passbooks

Sy Makaringe writes in a column on page 8 that this week he shed a tear "of joy and relief" over the end of a passbook which had "virtually run my life and restricted my movements for more than eight years." Makaringe recounts how he was once arrested for failing to carry his pass although he had shown his press card as a form of identification and how he was once nearly prohibited from working in Johannesburg because he had applied for his passbook while he was in school in the northern Transvaal. He won an appeal permitting him to remain in Johannesburg, but before his appeal was decided, "I contemplated committing suicide rather than leave Johannesburg and rot alive in the bantustans." Makaringe concludes: "I just hope that the ID card that I will soon possess does not stink like its predecessor."

Attacks on Antiapartheid Activists

"The Congress of South African Trade Unions has called on all progressive organisations to meet and discuss the growing incidence of violent attacks on anti-apartheid leaders and activists," the SOWETAN reports on page 13. Reacting to the attacks on Alexandra community leaders this week, COSATU said the attacks were part of a "grand plan by those in power to suppress us in a different fashion for South Africa to get out of (the present) crisis." The paper notes that "in recent years there has been an increase in attacks on opponents of the Government. While some leaders and activists were assassinated, some simply disappeared. In most cases, the culprits have never been brought to book."

Alexandra Violence

Page 16 carries photographs of the police operation in Alexandra and reports that "the violence in Alexandra erupted when an attack was launched on a people's court on Tuesday night, residents have claimed. They allege the attack was carried out by policemen. The police say they are aware of the allegations and are examining them."

Township Hijackings

"Township motorists who are living under the threat of having their cars, vans or trucks burnt or damaged by gangs of youths calling themselves 'comrades' have decided to call a meeting of all vehicle owners on Sunday to find ways of combating the menace," Langa Skosana reports on page 18. Soweto youths and members of organizations affiliated to the UDF, the National Forum, trade unions, and taxi companies, as well as "anyone who is directly or indirectly affected by the hijackings" have been invited to the meeting. A spokesman for the meeting's organizers said " 'the reason we are inviting the youth is to get a clear picture of their strategies. We don't want to alienate ourselves from the problems which may be affecting the community as a whole.' " Cars have been reported to be taken "under the pretext of an 'unrest' funeral or transport 'to a funeral of a comrade' " and drivers who object may be killed. Drivers also say they have been "gangpressed" into driving to funerals of unrest victims and one woman who was stopped said she was robbed.

Black Policewoman Interviewed

Ntnabi Moreosele interviews two black policewomen on page 26. One said she joined the police force because she felt she was "not doing enough for the community." She added that while she is " 'aware of the dangers a police officer faces,' " she " 'will not run away. It is part of the job and we are trained to deal with it.' " The other policewoman said she joined because " 'I want to show others what is right and what is wrong. People have a wrong image of the police. They forget it is the duty of the police to arrest and call wrongdoers to order.' "

Indian Traders Support Township Residents

"A spokesman for the Indian traders on the West Rand yesterday said they supported residents of Kagiso, Munsieville and Mohlakeng in their 'campaign and struggle,' " the SOWETAN reports on page 32. After a meeting between Indian traders in the area and executive members of the Krugersdorp Residents Organization (KRO) following a 2-week boycott of white shops in Krugersdorp and Randfontein, the Indian traders agreed to dissolve the Krugersdorp Indian Chamber of Commerce and affiliate themselves to the Kagiso African Chamber of Commerce. Since the Indian shops could be affected by the boycott as they are in the same area as the white shops, a KRO official said residents would decide if the Indian stores could be exempt from the boycott.

Debate With ANC in U.S.

"An historic first public debate between representatives of the South African Government and the African National Congress took place on a prime time television progamme in the United States," Johannesburg THE STAR in English reports on page 1 of the 25 April issue. "The 15-minute discussion coincided with a debate in Parliament in which the Government's changing attitude to talks with the ANC — since it refused passports to Stellenbosch students and churchmen last year — was highlighted by Mr Tiaan van der Merwe (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Green Point)." Home affairs Minister Stoffel Botha "denied any change in the Government's view on talking to the ANC. He said the Government was still convinced that it was totally wrong to hold discussions with people who murdered and destroyed." The debate was on the value of ending the pass laws.

Nel: Right Will Not Deter Us

Political correspondent David Braun writes from Cape Town on the same page of THE STAR about the disruptions in Brits which prevented Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel from speaking. Mr Nel said today the "National Party would continue with its reforms 'regardless of these people who do not want to see reason. We are not prepared to give a number of white rightwing radicals like the AWB [Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging, Afrikaner Resistance Movement] a veto on our plans.' " Asked about the AWB threat that the National Party would never again be able to hold another public meeting addressed by a minister in the Transvaal, Nel said that " 'the National Party will not be intimidated by such a threat. The AWB has sent out to the world an ugly face of the Afrikaner and, in doing so, have done us and South Africa a disservice, because this is not the true character of the Afrikaner.' "

Rand Under Pressure

"South Africa's foreign exchange restrictions over the transfer of money abroad do not appear to be coping with the present flight of money out of the country," the paper reports on the same page. As a result the rand has come under heavy pressure. Banking sources say it is difficult to pinpoint how it is leaving the country. If a foreign owner sells his business, then the money when it moves through the exchange market would put pressure on the rand. Companies with foreign loans are repaying them as soon as possible. This should keep the value of the rand below $0.50.

Support for Objector

Gary van Staden reports on page 3 that several prominent organizations and individuals are supporting Philip Wilkinson, "who has opted to go to jail rather than continue his military training." Statements came from a branch of the Progressive Federal Party, the Young Progressives, Bishop Tutu, Dr Beyers Naude and Mary Burton of the Black Sash.

SACC Pamphlets

The Christian Mission International (CMI), the organization which published the anti-liberation theology pamphlets sent to members of the South African Council of Chruches (SACC), has denied being involved in the delivery in any way, the paper reports on page 5. The pamphlets were delivered to the rooms of SACC delegates, which they saw as a breach of security. The CMI said, however, that it was pleased with the deliveries.

No IBM Pullout

John Akers, chief executive officer of IBM, says he is " 'increasingly discouraged at the slow pace of change' " in South Africa but said his company did not plan to close its local subsidiary, the paper reports on page 5. He was responding to a

NEW YORK TIMES article saying IBM was reconsidering its operations in the country. He said he told the paper that the situation was making it difficult for the company to make a profit and contribute to change in the country.

Government Asked To Drop Charges

The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions has called on the South African Government to drop charges against James Mndaweni, president of the Council of Unions of SA (CUSA), another report on page 5 says.

STAR on Influx Control

In an editorial on page 10, THE STAR asks why there has been such a muted reaction from black leaders on the end of influx control. However, "dismantling of part of the apartheid edifice is not seen as an occasion for rejoicing when so much of the structure remains." Part of the problem is poverty, as blacks cannot take advantage of the freedom. The other problem is that black leaders want so much more that measures to ease their burden make little impact. So the pressure remains to move further faster. The government "will deserve unstinting praise only when it gets past the stage of demolishing apartheid and moves on to construction of a structure based on full democracy."

STAR on Alexandra

On page 10, a second STAR editorial says that while the smoke may disappear from Alexandra, "the violence and social breakdown are likely to remain." Although there had been hopes of reversing the decay, the resignation of the mayor seems to be "an act of despair." "Whatever the immediate causes of this week's disturbances, the appalling conditions must be a contributory factor. They stand as an indictment — and will continue to do so as long as neglect persists. Surely simple humanity demands action now?"

Comment on Government Direction

In his "My View" column, Dr Frederick van Zyl Slabbert says that the reason that P.W. Botha's statements evoke so little praise is because the government has lost credibility and the initiative. If it had not, the reaction would have been much different. Under present circumstances, the government's motives are questioned. "More and more people are beginning to discover a very simple truth. Once the government gave up on the grand vision of apartheid it lost its way. It simply has no plan with which to replace it." In this circumstance, words have different meaning than usual. Self-determination means whites will maintain economic and political control. Negotiation means " 'everyone be reasonable, agree with me so that we can carry on.' " Reform means finding new ways of fitting opponents into government policy. Group character means " 'I will determine your group and its character.' " "As the Government's uncertainty about the future increases, the certainty of the majority of those who oppose it has grown. They want full and equal citizenship; they want effective political power; they want to be free from racial exploitation and compulsory group membership." It is time for the Government to cross the real Rubicon. "The worst thing that the Government can do for whites is to pretend that we are avoiding that crossing by implementing reform."

ECC Reaction to White Paper

The End Conscription Campaign said yesterday that "the decision not to extend the provisions for conscientious objection ... displayed an arrogant disregard for a growing and sincere movement to end compulsory military call-up," Gary van Staden reports on page 11. The ECC said that Defense Minister Malan's statement that the provisions for conscientious objection would weaken the SADF " 'is already a celar admission on the part of the authorities that there exists a widespread resistance to conscription.' " "It was evident that only conscription and the threat of punitive measures was enough to ensure the SADF had enough personnel."

508 Necklaced Since 1984

Johannesburg CITY PRESS in English on 27 April [as published] reports on page 1 that "the dreaded 'necklace' has claimed 508 lives countrywide since unrest erupted in September 1984." This year 205 have been killed in this manner, which does not include the 36 discovered in Lebowa last week. These figures were released Foreign Affairs Department press officer. March of this year had the highest monthly figure, 117.

'Boy King' Flees

On the same page, the paper reports that "Boy King" Prince Buyelekhaya Dalindyebo, heir apparent to the Tembu throne, is believed to have fled the Transkei in fear of being detained. His mother is under police surveillance.

CITY PRESS Editorial

In its editorial on page 2, the CITY PRESS discusses the explosion in Alexandra and the resignation of the mayor, which it says "is only a mirror of the crisis in South Africa." Parliament has before it a new bill to give more power to the minister of law and order. "The present powers of the police are already so frightening. Heaven knows what will happen when they get even more clout. What South Africa needs is less powers to the police and greater and aggressive means of negotiating a settlement. A settlement which is not based on the principles of apartheid, but on the collective will of the people. It's the only way out."

Black Sash President's Comment

An article by Mary Burton, president of the Black Sash, on the same page says that despite the end of influx control, it is clear that the Group Areas Act and the Population Registration Act will "remain in force and that the responsibility for the control of the movement of people will be devolved to local authorities." Those bodies will be based on racially separated groups.

Potchefstroom Detainees

"Ten activists from Potchefstroom's Ikageng township have been detained under Section 50 of the International Security Act," according to another article on the same page. They include former Pollsmoor prison detainees Daniel Ralekgetho and Joseph Makoena, trade unionist John Tseko Maumakwe and Johannes Sekati and others.

Former ANC Member Detained

The CITY PRESS reports on page 2 that former ANC member Maxwell Mayekiso has been detained by Ciskei Security Police. Two others were also detained.

Hope in Alexandra

An Alexandra priest talked about the violence in the township in a speech at Witwatersrand University, a report on page 4 says. Horace McBride said he could understand why residents were involved in violence, although he deplored violence himself. He said: " 'How would you feel if there was that dreaded midnight knock at your door, and people burst into your house and took away your child? Then the following day come the phone call to say your child has been detained because he is an ANC member.' " However, he said there was still a message of hope: " 'What has come out of Alex, especially from the youth, is that we don't want to rob whites.' "

Reaction to Alexandra Attacks

In an article on the same page discussing the attacks on activists' homes in Alexandra, the paper reports that eyewitnesses heard the attackers say: " 'You are the dogs who do not want the police.' " Residents said the " 'bandits' " were backed by three Hippos. The Congress of South African Trade Unions warned " 'those who are perpetrating these barbaric acts' that it will deal with them severely." The United Democratic Front said that residents will not be fooled by police denials of the " 'strongarm tactics of the police and their surrogates in Alex.' "

People's Power Rules

In an article on the same page, Mono Badela discusses "people's power" in Port Alfred in the eastern Cape. Since the collapse of the town councils, residents have become self-governing and have renamed their township after Nelson Mandela. The township is governed by the Port Aldred Residents' Civic Organization [PARCO]. Residents are organized into street and area committees. "People's education" has been introduced. " 'Attendance is compulsory and the syllabus will be drawn up in consultation with the students' organisation and the parents of prospective students,' " said PARCO President Gugile Nkwinti. Various other organizations have also been formed. Residents pay a fee to the PARCO central committee. All fees to the state have been halted.

Bus Boycott

"Greyhound bus company management and the Krugersdorp Resident's Organisation will hold talks to find ways of breaking the five-month boycott of buses on the West Rand," According to another report on the same page. Residents demanded that the company cancel minibuses in the township, pave the roads, erect sheds at bus stops, transport pensioners free on the day their pensions are due, and provide scholarships for black students.

Pretoria Business District

A report on page 5 says that "white Pretoria businessmen have condemned plans to open the Akacia Central Business District to all races." The announcement is " 'unnecessary and ridiculous' " a local businessman said.

BEELD on Security Law

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 24 April says in an editorial on page 14 that "the more developed and stable a country becomes, the less it has need for security laws and forces." In this connection it is a pity that the minister of law and order has been given wider powers to curb unrest. With increasing violence in certain areas, the government had no other option than to maintain law and order strictly. No government will allow its authority to be undermined by revolutionary forces. Most important is that equally, with the wider powers granted to police, there should be more driving force in the political reform process. This is the best guarantee for law and order.

SWAZILAND

King Mswati III Crowned; Heads of State Attend

[Text] Crown Prince Makhosetive today was elevated to the throne and given the reigning name of Mswati III. At the coronation rites, his speech was delivered by Prince Mboni. King Mswati III said he will follow in the footsteps of his late father, Sobhuza II. The king said he will be receptive to hearing any complaints and problems affecting the Swazi people. King Mswati III appeared at the cattle byre dressed in Swazi traditional attire. He was received by the kingdom's princes and visiting foreign dignitaries. He then danced with the warrior regiments, who had turned up in their numbers. The wives of the late king Sohbhuza II also attended the ceremony.

Two heads of state arriving today for the ceremony were President Samora Machel of Mozambique and President P.W. Botha of the Republic of South Africa. President Botha was accompanied by South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha. The queen regent also attended the ceremony.

Botha, Machel Hold Talks

[By Bill Mclean]

[Excerpt] Mbabane, April 26, SAPA — The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, flew out of Swaziland to Cape Town this evening after spending two days attending the coronation celebrations of King Mswati III and at the same time enjoying a "social summit" with some of southern Africa's key black leaders. President Botha chatted in public today with the leaders of three "Frontline States," Zambia's President Kenneth Kaunda, [Botswana President] Quett Masire, and early this morning had a 45-minute session with [Mozambique's] President Machel.

There has been no indication of the substance of the talks but there has been much speculation in Swaziland about the possibility of a new black initiative in an effort to resolve South Africa's problems.

While President Kaunda attacked Mr Botha's current reform programme as "cosmetic" on Friday, he emphasised the importance of finding a solution for South Africa. And while Dr Kaunda and King Moshoeshoe in speeches today both made what could be taken as references to South Africa's race policies, it was all very low-key.

In any case President Botha's visit to Swaziland can be termed something of a triumph. He was warmly greeted by the predominantly black crowds whenever he appeared in public. The South African delegation was among the first this evening to pay a courtesy call on the new king in his palace. Mr Botha told the 18-year-old king: "I hope your reign will be as fruitful as that of your late father, and you will make such a great contribution to peace and goodwill as he did." He then expressed his regret at not staying tonight — when a state banquet is being held — saying he was leaving immediately for Cape Town.

Discussions Reported as 'Cordial'

[Text] In Swaziland yesterday, President Samora Machel received his South African counterpart Pieter Botha, with whom he discussed the implementation of the Nkomati Accord after the Gorongoza events. A Mozambican source described the meeting as having been cordial. In the meeting, the two presidents reaffirmed their pledge to respect and ensure the implementation of the Nkomati Accord as an instrument for good neighborliness, peace, and cooperation between the two countries. The two presidents were in Swaziland to attend the coronation of the new Swazi king, Mswati III. President Samora Machel returned to Maputo early yesterday evening after being received by the new Swazi monarch to whom he personally expressed the Mozambican people's congratulations on the celebrations in that neighboring country. Samora Machel invited Mswati III to visit Mozambique.

Kaunda Comments on RSA Presence

[By Bill Mclean]

[Excerpt] Mbabane, April 25, SAPA — As Crown Prince Makhosetive completed his secret tribal rites and effectively became the new king of Swaziland, black Africa tody appeared to be adopting a conciliatory attitude towards South Africa. Initial fears, that there might be an exodus of black nations from this weekend's coronation celebrations because of the presence of State President Mr P.W. Botha at the head of a South African delegation faded as no-one followed the withdrawal of Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi.

Then this morning Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, who has been chosen to speak on behalf of visiting presidents at tomorrow's coronation oath-taking ceremony, called a press conference to explain his attitude towards South Africa's presence. President Kaunda said he — and it is thought he had probably consulted other Frontline States before speaking — had come to the celebrations because he had been invited by the king, and it was up to Swaziland to invite whom they liked. While he stressed his distress at how he saw the South African picture, he said southern Africa, and the rest of the world, must continue to strive towards a solution to the situation.

Then later today it was learned that the Kenyan Government had a change of thought about its position. After President Moi had on Wednesday cancelled his flight and pulled his advance party back to Nairobi, a message was sent today saying an envoy was on his way to give Kenya representation after all.

MB271136 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 1115 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] President Kaunda has warned the ANC of South Africa to dismantle apartheid immediately if they want to keep their followers. The president said if the ANC delayed in its (?destruction) of apartheid, its followers may forsake it and embark on their own bitter liberation. This, he said, would make it difficult for the ANC to regain its leadership in South Africa after the removal of apartheid. Speaking to two South African journalists before he left Swaziland for Zambia, the president said the struggle against apartheid among the youth may become uncontrollable unless real changes in South Africa begin taking place. He told the two South African journalists that his (?admonition) of an explosion in South Africa is based on his understanding of the feelings of the youth.

Issues Facing Mswati Evaluated

[Station commentary: "Swaziland's New King"]

[Text] With the enthronement today of King Makhosetive [Mswati III] of Swaziland a new chapter is being written in the colorful history of the tiny kingdom — one of only three in Africa. For three and a half years, since the death of his father King Sobhuza II, Swaziland has been plagued by power struggles between traditionalist and modernist factions in the country. Under the 61-year reign of King Sobhuza the country was an absolute monarchy. There was total acceptance of the king, and there was no doubt about who ruled.

He was revered as a good king, a wise statesman and a gracious man. With his legendary wisdom and diplomacy he steered his country to independence and into the 20th century, while retaining the traditions of his people. With his death in August 1982 it was clear that, in the modern vernacular, his would be a hard act to follow.

Tradition for the making of a new king demanded that the country first fall under the control of a regent — the dead king's senior wife. The future king would then be chosen from the deceased's many sons from many marriages. It is also tradition that the new king should be the only son of a particular wife, in order to prevent rivalries between brothers. A year after King Sobhuza's death the orderly transfer of power was shattered when the Queen Regent Dzeliwe was deposed in favor of the mother of Crown Prince Makhosetive.

At the same time power was slipping away from the monarchy towards the Supreme Council of State, known as the Liqoqo. There followed a period in which senior members of the royal family regained their grip on the leash of government and stripped the Liqoqo of its self-imposed executive powers, reducing it again to the status of an advisory body.

In the meantime Crown Prince Makhosetive was being educated in England, and he was to ascend the throne at the age of 21. At the end of last year, however, it was announced that he was to be enthroned two years in advance of that age. The main reason put foward by observers was the need to put an end to the disputes among the various factions in the country and bring unity back to the nation.

These are only some of the problems the young king will have to contend with in the near future. There is no doubt also that the kingdom's links with South Africa will come under political as well as economic strains. Relations between the two countries have always been sound, based on the mutual recognition of the interdependence of the ocuntries of southern Africa and the need for good-neighbourliness. However, Mbabane continues to be pressurized from outside to cooperate in the tightening of economic sanctions against South Africa.

How the young monarch will approach these and other issues is difficult to predict. There is growing impatience among young Swazis with the old ways, and they are sure to have a measure of understanding from the new king.

South Africans will have no hesitation in wishing King Makhosetive well with his responsibilities, long life and congratulations on his ascension to the throne, with the hope that relations between the two countries willcontinue to flourish.

ZAMBIA

President Says U.S. Arming UNITA Through Zaire

NC280840 Paris AFP in English 0817 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Lusaka, April 28 (AFP) — The United States is now using Zaire to deliver arms to rebels of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) fighting the Angolan Government, Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda said here Sunday. The official news agency ZANA reported President Kaunda as saying he had learned of the new route for arms at a recent meeting of "Frontline States" (Zimbabwe, Zambia, Mozambique, Tanzania, Angola, and Botswana) in Angola. He said he had suggested a meeting of Zambia, Angola, and Zaire to discuss the problem, but did not say what the response to his proposal was. The Reagan administration had "given us another unnecessary job" in the region, and had deliberately tried to antagonise Zaire and Angola, President Kaunda said.

The Zaire Government, a major U.S. ally in Africa, earlier this month denied American and South African press reports that it allowed its territory to be used for the delivery of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to UNITA rebels, who are also backed by the South African Government.

President Kaunda also noted that South Africa had "increased her reconnaisance activities in the region" following accusations in the South Africa Parliament last week that Zambia, Botswana, Mozambique, and Zimbabwe were allowing their countries to be used as bases for the African National Congress (ANC), the main movement fighting the South African Government.

ZIMBABWE

Students Demonstrate at U.S. Embassy 25 April

AB252035 Paris AFP in French 1846 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Harare, 25 Apr (AFP) — About 300 students on Friday demonstrated in front of the U.S. Embassy in Harare in protest the American raid on Libya on 15 April, tearing and burning an American flag while the police watched. The students first marched through the center of the Zimbabwean capital, chanting slogans such as, "Long live Al-Qadhdhafi, long live Angola, long live Nicaragua" and carrying placards with inscriptions like "Libyan commandos should strike at Washington and London." After an hour of speeches in front of the American Embassy, the leader of the student council, Kingdom Mabhena, climbed the embassy gate and tore down the American flag, which was then burned and torn by the demonstrators.

Embassy officials announced that they were going to lodge an official complaint following [words indistinct] stating that they were "particularly disturbed by the attitude of the Zimbabwean police, who remained passive while the demonstrators violated American property."

Mr Mabhena, for his part, declared that among the demonstrators were representatives of southern African liberation movements and Muslim student groups.

U.S. Described as 'Leading Sponsor of Terrorism'

MB250611 Harare Domestic Service in English
1600 GMT 24 Apr 86

[Text] Zimbabwe regards the recent American air raids on Libya as further evidence of the Reagan administration's policy of state terrorism. The remark was made by the deputy minister of education, Senator Joseph Culverwell, in a speech read on behalf of the minister of foreign affairs, Comrade Witness Mangwende, at a reception in Harare today to mark Tanzania's 22nd anniversary of independence. Mr Culverwell said Zimbabwe joins Tanzania and other countries in condemning Washington's policy of state terrorism which poses a grave danger to peace. The deputy minister commended Tanzania for its stand against imperialism, Zionism, and apartheid, and added that the Frontline States remain unshaken in their resolve to see Namibia and South Africa independent.

Speaking on the same occasion, Tanzania's acting high commissioner to Zimbabwe, Comrade (Bernard Karabani), said the United States is the leading sponsor of terrorism criticized the Reagan administration for supporting UNITA bandits in Angola and the MNR counterrevolutionaries in Mozambique. MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

Iran-Iraq War

Over 4,000 Iraqis were killed or wounded, 4 Iraqi brigades were "destroyed," and a "great number" of Iraqis were captured in a "three-pronged" Iranian "blitz" offensive on the Al-Faw peninsula late 28 April, according to IRNA reports and a Tehran radio report citing a military statement. The reports said the Iranians have "established" their positions in the area after advancing more than 2 km on the peninsula, while the Iraqis have been "paralyzed" as a result of the "surprise" attack. In other fighting, an Iranian military commander cited by IRNA claimed that Iran repulsed an Iraqi attack in the southern Majnun Islands area and launched a counteroffensive that inflicted "hundreds" of casualties upon the Iraqis, while an earlier Tehran radio report alleged that a second Iraqi counterattack in that area had also been "defeated."

On the Iraqi side, a communique cited by Voice of the Masses radio asserted that Iraq repulsed an Iranian attack in the east Al-Basra sector, inflicting a "number" of casualties upon the Iranians.

Libya

Information Secretary Muhammad Sharaf al-Din al-Fayturi indicated that Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi may not attend the forthcoming Arab summit conference, asserting in a statement to the UAE's AL-ITTIHAD cited by QNA that it is "not important" whether Al-Qadhdhafi personally attends the meeting. What is important is the convocation of the summit, not who will represent Libya, Al-Fayturi maintained. In another development, JANA announced the arrival in Tripoli of an Iranian delegation headed by Foreign Minister 'Ali Akbar Velayati and Revolution Guards Corps Minister Mohsen Rafiqdust, citing Velayati's statement that the visit is aimed to demonstrate Iran's support for Libya against the "U.S.-Atlantic aggression." The Libyan agency also denied as a "fabrication" reports that Liberians in Libya have been subjected to "acts against their person." The denial followed Monrovia Radio ELWA's 25 April disclosure that two Liberians in Libya had reported seeing fellow Liberians being tortured to death and executed by firing squad.

In Turkey, Ankara radio announced that a state security court will try five Libyans, three of them in absentia, on charges relating to the attempt to bomb the U.S. officers' club in Ankara.

Bahrain-Qatar Territorial Dispute

Bahrain and Qatar have responded to urgent efforts by Saudi Arabia and other GCC states to contain the conflict over Fasht al-Dibal and have expressed their desire for a rapid settlement, the UAE paper AL-KHALIJ reported. In Riyadh, the Saudi cabinet discussed the Gulf situation in light of Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan's recent visit to Qatar and Bahrain, the information minister disclosed in a statement reported by Riyadh radio. The Qatari defense minister visited Riyadh the evening of 28 April, according to the radio. The Kuwaiti foreign minister expressed confidence that Saudi Arabia will be able to settle the Bahraini-Qatari dispute, which he described as a "passing cloud," KUNA reported.

Israel

Talks With Jordan — Prime Minister Shim'on Peres' office has been informed that the Jordanian king "is angry" at recent remarks made by Peres regarding "secret contacts" between the two countries, Jerusalem radio reported. The king's aides, the radio reported, asserted that the Jordanian monarch views Peres' statements as damaging his position prior to the Arab summit, and disclosed his opinion that there is "no substance" to the prime minister's contentions. Radio Monte Carlo cited denials by "informed" Jordanian sources on the existence of such contacts, who maintained that the Israeli "allegations" are aimed at "undermining the improving relations" between Jordan and Syria. Nevertheless, "sources" in Jerusalem acknowledged that "recent" contacts have been held with Jordan, although revealing that they have thus far yielded no "tangible breakthrough," adding that Jordan has moved "very hesitantly," according to THE JERUSALEM POST.

French Reactor to Iraq — Jerusalem radio divulged that Peres was informed during his recent talk with his French counterpart that France "might sell" a nuclear reactor to Iraq. Peres, while hypothesizing on the possibility of an Israeli purchase of a French reactor, which would produce energy "only under the appropriate supervision," alleged that an Iraqi reactor would "produce problems, not energy," the radio added.

Syrian Incidents Denied — The IDF spokesman rebutted a report published in the Toronto paper TORONTO STAR 27 April on alleged "local firing incidents" on the Golan Heights between Israel and Syria, HA'ARETZ reported. The military spokesman declared that there have been "no" such incidents, and that activities in the area are "absolutely routine."

Terrorist Attack Aborted — Jerusalem televison reported on an "aborted" attempt by three Syrian Army deserters recruited by Yasir 'Arafat's Fatah organization to "attack" a kibbutz on the Lebanese border, noting that the three were arrested in a Lebanese village 3 weeks ago.

PLO

The issue of secret contacts between Jordan and Israel is a "serious" matter which the PLO will raise at the forthcoming Arab summit or "on the Arab level" if the summit is not held, PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat stated in remarks reported by Radio Monte Carlo following his talks with Egyptian President Husni Mubarak. The issue was one of the main topics in 'Arafat's talks with Mubarak, the radio said, and the PLO leader will also raise the matter at the PLO Central Council meeting in Baghdad 29 April. Baghdad Voice of PLO also commented on the issue, asserting that Israel is disseminating reports of such talks in order to "frighten and terrorize" the PLO and to pressure the organization into renouncing its "principled national constants."

As for the PLO's internal problems, Radio Monte Carlo noted that dissident Fatah official 'Atallah Muhammad 'Atallah chaired a "Fatah Supreme Military Council" meeting in Amman which repudiated the recent PLO decision to expel him and which adopted the demands of 'Atallah's "corrective movement." In Cairo, 'Arafat dismissed 'Atallah's movement as "too insignificant to affect the revolutionary march," Radio Monte Carlo noted.

In another development, Sabri al-Banna's Fatah Revolutionary Council claimed responsibility for the 27 April murder of a Briton in Jerusalem, according to AFP, which said the claim was made in a letter received in Beirut.

Syria

In a banquet speech in Belgrade, transmitted by the Yugoslav press agency TANJUG, President Hafiz al-Asad said the U.S. Administration "refuses to go to the root" of the Mideast problems in order to find "just solutions" that will thwart international terrorism. Al-Asad told his Yugoslav hosts that Syria "sharply condemns terrorism," but he stressed the difference between terrorism and national resistance. Reporting on Al-Asad's meeting with his SFRY counterpart, TANJUG said the talks proceeded in an "exceptionally cordial and friendly atmosphere," focusing on bilateral cooperation and topical international issues.

On the internal situation, Syrian security sources cited by the UAE's AL-ITTIHAD revealed that the authorities last week arrested two men caught while trying to plant bombs in Damascus, according to the JORDAN TIMES. The men disclosed information that allowed the authorities to apprehend 10 members of the gang which bombed several targets the previous week. The report claimed that the gang was hiding in an apartment rented by an Israeli intelligence agent, but Israeli sources cited by THE JERUSALEM POST denied that the Syrians have arrested Mosad agents.

Egypt

An Interior Ministry statement cited by Cairo radio denounced an unsuccessful attempt by a "few isolated employees" of a textile and spinning company to "incite" co-workers to stage a sit-in at a factory to "pressure" the authorities into dealing with a number of "private" demands. Nevertheless, the statement acknowledged that approximately 250 workers participated in the sit-in, which security forces were "compelled" to end.

Tunisia

President Habib Bourguiba initiated a "partial government reshuffle" including the appointment of a new interior minister, a former Army general, according to a statement by outgoing Interior Minister Mohamed Mzali broadcast by Tunis radio. Mzali, who retains his position as prime minister, announced the appointment of a new finance and economy minister; a new energy and mines minister; and a new industry and trade minister. "Informed" government sources told KUNA that the reason behind the reshuffle is Bourguiba's intention to "deal in a tougher manner" with the opposition, noting that Mzali had "advocated dialogue" and had been against the detention earlier this month of opposition leader Ahmed al-Mestiri.

In other developments, a statement by the minister of higher education and scientific research carried by Tunis radio revealed that Bourguiba approved measures to consolidate the university system in part to "eliminate the chaos" caused by some "extremist" groups in certain university establishments.

Abu Nidal Said Planning New Terrorist Attacks

DW271941 Hamburg BILD AM SONNTAG in German 27 APR 86 pp 14-15

[Article by Friedemann Diederichs and Adi Sidon: "Girl Terrorists Are Already Practicing on an Airplane."]

[Text] Killer commandos of Arab terrorist Abu Nidal are planning attacks in European capitals to force the release of imprisoned Palestinians. Great Britain and the Federal Republic are in particular jeopardy.

German and Israeli intelligence services found out the following:

The Palestinian brother Nezar Hindawi (who wanted to blow up an El Al jumbo) and Ahmed Hasi (who is suspected of having participated in the attack on the discotheque "La Belle") who were arrested in London and Berlin, are members of Abu Nidal's ("father of struggle") 800-man terrorist group.

Their wirepullers are in Al-Qadhdhafi's environment, however, primarily in Damascus: Hindawi has now admitted that he planned the attack by order of Syrian chief of state Hafiz al-Assad. Early in 1985, the Syrian intelligence service had instructed him to make advances to an English women and make her board a plane with a bomb.

Top terrorist Abu Nidal has his headquarters in Damascus, he receives 1 million dollars from Syria every year. In Hasi's apartment in Berlin the investigators found a note with a Damascus telephone number.

The (34 and 35-year old) brothers learned their terrorist trade in Syria in Abu Nidal's training camp in Damir (15,000 inhabitants) east of Damascus. Together with 22 other Palestinians, including young women between 20 and 25 years, they were trained for 2 months in shooting and bombing. On a Boeing 737 made available by Syria they were trained in hijacking and in counteracting liberation commandos.

In addition, security experts of international airlines have found out that there is a workshop in Damascus which by order of Abu Nidal changes the popular "Samsonite" suitcases. The sidewalls contain a plastic explosive (which is not discovered by x-rays) and the locks contain time fuses. The terrorists try to surreptitiously exchange those suitcases with the suitcases of unsuspecting passengers. The U.S. intelligence service has already seized such bomb suitcases.

The explosives used in London and Berlin were probably brought to West Berlin and London via East Berlin's Schoenefeld Airport in October 1985. In that month the brothers had met in Tripoli and had earlier also been in Damascus. From there Hindawi wrote a postcard to his former wife Barbara Hindawi (34) who lives in Poland.

Hindawi is suspected of having received part of the explosives from his brother Hasi in Berlin in February this year. Microscopic residues in the discotheque "La Belle" have proven to experts that the explosives used in London and Berlin are identical

Ahmed Hasi, who came to Berlin in 1975 to seek political asylum, was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment in July 1979 for attempted manslaughter but was released on probation after 1 year. He had tried to kill his German wife Petra Sch. (30). His alibi for the night of the bomb attack against the disco "La Belle:" the testimony of his girlfriend Heiderose P. (30), a former callgirl. She said: "We were in bed."

According to the Israeli intelligence service, in the Libyan embassy in East Berlin 2 days later the diplomats had a "victory party" with champagne and girls.

More from Berlin, Bonn

LD261632 Hamburg DPA in German 1517 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Berlin/Bonn 26 Apr (DPA) — Berlin's justice authority spokesman Walter Neuhaus refused to comment today on the BILD AM SONNTAG report about Hasi. Until next Monday, when Hasi's remand in custody will be reviewed, the Berlin authorities will not make any statements on this case. Neuhaus confirmed that Hasi had been sentenced to 3 years imprisonment in July 1979 for attempted manslaughter but was released from prison early. At the time he had tried to kill his German wife from whom he is divorced.

According to the Federal Interior Ministry in Bonn, there are no concrete indications that Arab terrorist death squads are trying to force the release of prisoners. The Interior Ministry spokesman was also unable to confirm that the brothers are members of the Abu Nidal terrorist group.

'Arafat Announces Resistance Council Meeting

NC282030 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic 2000 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat has announced that the resistance movement military council will meet in Baghdad tomorrow to discuss the situation in the occupied territories, the Israeli raids on the Palestinian camps in southern Lebanon, and the continued blockade imposed by the Amal Movement on the Palestinian camps in Beirut. 'Arafat added that the council will also discuss Jordanian-Palestinian relations. He noted that nearly all Palestinian organizations have agreed to attend this meeting.

Makes Statement to London Paper

PM290920 London AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT in Arabic 28 Apr 86 pp 1-2

[Unattributed report: " 'Arafat tells AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT: Total Palestinian Response to Call for Central Council Meeting "]

[Text] Baghdad — The Central Council of the Palestinian resistance movement will begin its meetings in Baghdad tomorrow. In an exclusive statement to AL-SHARQ AL-AWSAT, PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat said that the council will discuss very important and essential issues, especially the situation in the occupied territory, the continuous Israeli threats including the air raids on Palestinian camps in southern Lebanon, and Amal Movement's continuous siege of the Beirut camps.

He added that the council will also discuss Jordanian-Palestinian relations because the Central Council is the link between the Executive Committee and the PNC which has not met since Jordanian-Palestinian coordination was suspended. The discussions will cover Palestinian affairs in general, particularly the invitation extended by Algeria to the various Palestinian factions to meet in Algiers.

'Arafat continued: Here I must say that there has been an almost unanimous response from all the Palestinian organizations to attend that meeting. To the best of our knowledge the PFLP is the only organization reluctant to attend the meeting but it might agree to attend.

He added: I am in continual contact with the Algerian brothers and other brothers in the leadership on this matter. After wereach agreement with the other factions, as I hope we will, we will call for a PNC session after a suitable venue has been found for it.

Referring to the Arab summit conference called by Moroccan King Hassan II to discuss the Arab situation, 'Arafat said: As we have often declared, we insist on an Arab summit conference to discuss all aggressions by whatever source against the Arab nation, particularly the recent attack on al-Faw area in Iraq, the Iranian threats to the Gulf states, and the continuous Israeli war against the Palestinians, including the Zionist aggressions against our camps in the south, the aggressions by pro-Israeli forces against our other camps in Lebanon, and also the recent U.S. aggression against Libya.

On the question of promoting a settlement between Iraq and Iran, 'Arafat said: We must say that Iran is trying to totally ignore all Islamic and international good offices, particularly the efforts of brothers and leaders here and there. This explains the procrastination which occurred at the Islamic Good Offices Committee. We should realize that certain forces do not want the conflict to end and so obstruct all efforts including Islamic efforts. I declare here that an emergency Islamic conference should be held to discuss this conflict because the war is between two Islamic states and to implement the decision to stop the war by force by using Islamic forces to be determined by the Islamic summit conference.

In reply to a question about Syrian-Palestinian relations and whether the negotiations between the two sides have reached a new stage, 'Arafat said: I can only say that during our meeting in Baghdad on 7 December we took the initiative and stopped the media campaign on our part and we have adhered to that decision ever since.

He added: There have been contacts between Syrian and Palestinian officials but so far there has been no positive and tangible progress but I must add that the contacts are continuing and we hope they will produce positive results.

Asked about the release by the Lebanese militia of some Palestinian captives among those released in Beirut the day before yesterday, 'Arafat said that the Phalangists took that initiative but it was aimed at the Lebanese and not the Palestinians, because the majority of those released were Lebanese (29 Lebanese and 6 Palestinians). The Lebanese forces took that initiative to start a dialogue with the other Lebanese militia.

Going back to the question of Syrian-Palestinian contacts, 'Arafat said that these contacts have not stopped and are continuing despite everything. We, he said, have tried to ease the tension and minimize the differences and we even overlooked the arrest of some of our brothers in Lebanon because of this sincere Palestinian desire and in adherence to the decision we took in Baghdad which I have already mentioned.

Answering a question about the nature of his meeting with Soviet leader Gorbachev in Berlin recently, 'Arafat said: I consider my visit to Berlin to be one of my important visits in more than one respect. It is known that we have strong relations with our East German friends. These relations have not stopped for one moment.

He added: During the SED congress I met with Gorbachev twice and we reviewed a number of general issues, especially the Soviet attitude toward the Palestinian question and its support for the Palestinian people's right to an independent state and the call for an international conference under UN supervision to be attended by all states concerened and the PLO.

He continued: Naturally, we also discussed Soviet interest in Arab solidarity and Palestinian unity. I also discussed with Gorbachev a number of other important issues pertaining to Soviet-Palestinian and Soviet Arab relations. The results will appear shortly.

'Arafat Asks Mubarak To Stop Jordan-Israel Talks

GF290609 Abu Dhabi WAM in Arabic 0630 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 29 Apr (WAM) — The UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD reports that PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat, currently visiting Cairo, asked Egyptian President Husni Mubarak during talks yesterday, to interfere to effectively stop the secret talks Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres has reported to be currently taking place between his government and Jordan.

The paper cited an Egyptian official source as saying that during his talks 'Arafat referred to dangers that could arise from these contacts which could lead to a unilateral solution between Jordan and Israel without the participation of the PLO, the sole and the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people. At the conclusion of the talks, 'Arafat expressed his intention to raise this issue before the Arab summit scheduled to be held shortly.

Meanwhile, it was announced yesterday that King Husayn of Jordan received a phone call from President Mubarak during which they discussed the current situations in the Arab region.

'Arafat on Amman Meeting, Husayn-Peres Contacts

JN290621 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 0500 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Huda Tawfiq dispatch from Cairo]

[Excerpts] In a first reaction to the Fatah military council's decisions in Amman, Yasir 'Arafat said: This subject is too trivial to give it my concern, especially after the firm decision that was made by the military council in Baghdad. He added: Abu al-Za'im's ['Atallah 'Atallah] movement is too insignificant to affect the revolutionary march, the Palestinian people, and the PLO. The Palestinian people are stronger, firmer, and greater than those who follow Arab intelligence services.

Regarding the Arab summit, 'Arafat said: What has been agreed on so far is the foreign ministers meeting to discuss the agenda. The date of the summit will be set in light of that meeting. If the summit is held, the PLO will raise the issue of the secret contacts between Jordan and Israel. I have received the reports on these contacts with astonishment. Therefore, if the summit is held, this subject will be raised. However, if the summit is not held, we will raise this serious matter on the Arab level, because this is a new development.

The subject of the secret talks between King Husayn and Peres will be raised at the PLO Central Council's meeting in Baghdad tomorrow. 'Arafat told us that the council will discuss the repercussions of Peres' statement about the existence of secret talks between him and Jordan as well as the situation in Lebanon and the Israeli aggression against the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples. 'Arafat disclosed that Soviet leader Gorbachev acted quickly on the international level to stop a potential Israeli aggression. He said that he thanks Gorbachev for using his influence to protect the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples from another big strike.

'Arafat Meets UN Fact-Finding Committee

NC282136 Cairo MENA in Arabic 2125 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo, 28 Apr (MENA) — PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat met tonight with the UN fact-finding committee dealing with the Palestinian issue, now on a visit to Cairo as part of its tour of the Middle East. 'Arafat explained in full the various aspects of the Palestinian issue and the living conditions of the Palestinians in the occupied territory.

PLO Radio on Israeli-Jordanian 'Secret Talks'

JN281929 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1746 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] Brothers, Zionist enemy leaders have disseminated reports about secret talks between them and an Arab country on what they call peace in the Middle East. Within the context of these reports, enemy Prime Minister Peres says the PLO is the major obstacle on the road to peace. He adds what he has always said: that Yasir 'Arafat is an impossible partner in the peace process.

Of course, Yasir 'Arafat will continue to be an impossible partner in the U.S.-Israeli peace process and the PLO will remain the major obstacle preventing the peace process from proceeding on the course that had been set for it. Peres adds nothing new to this reality which keeps him sleepless. He adds nothing new when he refers to it, though his reference to it is for a different purpose, that of instigating others against the PLO.

In any case, let us go back to the reports about the secret talks, which are no longer secret, as the enemy had wished. Peres says that the talks continue in an atmosphere of positive understanding and under the canopy of quiet diplomacy. Whether these reports are true or not, we say that they will never scare the PLO. The purpose of disseminating such reports is to frighten and terrorize the PLO. The enemy wants to imply that the peace process is proceeding without the PLO, which is no more than an obstacle that will be overcome thanks to the quiet diplomacy under which these talks are taking place.

This terrorism is intended to pressure the PLO to make it give up its principled national constants. In other words, the U.S.-Israeli onslaught against the PLO is escalating constantly to force the PLO to liquidate itself by its own hands. Washington, before any other party, must realize the impossibility of attaining this objective and the futility of pursuing any attempt to achieve it. Absolutely nothing can force the PLO to abandon its national constants so long as it draws its strength from this splendid rallying around it by its great people, who are determined to pursue the national struggle under its banner for regaining all their legitimate rights, chief among which are the right to repatriation, self-determination, and the establishment of the independent state.

The PLO will not be deceived by any maneuver to drag it into the U.S.-Israeli peace process seeking to obliterate our people's inalienable and legitimate rights. The PLO will not be frightened by any moves or any talks on so-called peace. The PLO realizes very well the weight it has and the principal role it assumes in mapping out real peace. The PLO knows that any moves to bypass or ignore the Palestinian people will never succeed.

There is no alternative to the PLO's participation in the real peace process in its capacity as the Palestinian people's sole legitimate representative. There is no alternative to the right of self-determination and to the establishment of an independent Palestinian state until peace prevails in the region and stability and security are established.

Tunisian Official Denies PLO Headquarters Move

[Text] Tunis — A responsible official source has denied all recent rumors that PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat was specially requested to move his headquarters from Tunis. The source said that when Tunis decided to host the PLO political leadership, it understood its responsibility toward this move and still adheres to it. The source added that the Palestinian leaders have decided to move the military factions from Tunis to other Arab countries in accordance with the demands of the struggle against Israel.

'Atallah-Led Fatah Meeting Denounces Ruling

JN281821 Paris Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 1730 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Fu'ad Na'im dispatch from Amman]

[Excerpt] The so-called Fatah supreme military council convened in Amman today under the chairmanship of Abu al-Za'im ['Atallah 'Atallah]. PLO sources loyal to Yasir 'Arafat emphasize that all those in this council are not members of the Fatah Military Council of the Palestinian revolution's Supreme Military Council.

Journalists in Amman were invited to attend a session held under the aegis of the Fatah movement's supreme military council, in which 41 out of 52 members were present, as its organizers said. The Council adopted four resolutions which emphasized the illegality of the military council's meeting in Baghdad which decided on 23 April to expel Abu al-Za'im from the Palestinian revolution. The council considered this decision null as well as a violation of the Fatah movement and its bylaws. The council also praised Abu al-Za'im's militant and revolutionary stands, unanimously adopted the corrective movement's demands, and stressed the need for a Fatah general conference. It also called for a meeting of the general military council Al-'Asifah forces.

Pro-'Arafat Palestinian sources stressed that all those assembled do not enjoy any representational status within the framework of the Fatah military council or the PLO. They have absolutely no capacity within an organizational framework. Observers find it difficult to say anything decisive on this subject because of the secrecy shrouding organizational affairs and lists of the members of the Fatah and PLO Military Councils.

Joint Forces 'Ambush' Israeli Military Patrol

JN281817 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] A group belonging to the Palestinian-Lebanese Joint Forces ambushed a Zionist military patrol while it was on its way to 'Almat this morning. The group pounded the patrol with rockets and machineguns. A Joint Forces' statement said one military vehicle was destroyed, another damaged, and several enemy soldiers killed or wounded.

Another group of the Palestinian-Lebanese Joint Forces shelled two military positions belonging to Antoine Lahd's agent militias in Yatir and on the (Zanartya) axis, scoring accurate hits and inflicting heavy losses on the two positions. Many agent elements were killed or wounded.

Another group of the joint forces shelled an artillery emplacement belonging to the agent militias in the Abu Qamhah valley, damaging one 120-mm gun and killing or wounding many agent elements.

Revolution Forces Attack Israeli Vehicle

JN281822 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1720 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] A military spokesman for the Palestinian Revolution Forces General Command has stated the following:

One of our combat groups operating in the occupied homeland, using hand grenades and incendiary bombs, attacked a Zionist military vehicle near Qalandiya near occupied Jerusalem last night, setting the vehicle on fire and wounding its occupants. Zionist security forces rushed to the scene of operations, besieged it, and arrested many Palestinian citizens on charges of connections with the operation. Despite the Zionist measures, our combat group safely returned to its base. Revolution until victory!

Leaders Urge Restraint in Bahrain-Qatar Conflict

GF281348 Al-Shariqah AL-KHALIJ in Arabic
28 Apr 86 p 1

[Excerpt] AL-KHALIJ has learned that Qatar and Bahrain have responded to urgent efforts made by Saudi Arabia and other GCC states to contain the conflict over Fasht al-Dibal, and that they have expressed their desire for a rapid settlement.

In addition to the meetings of a high-level Saudi delegation led by Prince Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz with the Qatari amir in Doha and the Bahraini amir in Manama, a number of GCC leaders made telephone calls to the Qatari and Bahraini amirs in which they affirmed the need to exercise self-restraint.

GCC Forces To Replace Qatari Forces

GF291119 Al-Shariqah AL-KHALIJ in Arabic
29 Apr 86 pp 1, 17

[Excerpt] AL-KHALIJ has learned that responsible GCC circles are working to crystallize a proposal to replace the Qatari forces which occupied the island of Fasht al-Dibal 3 days ago with token forces from the Peninsula Shield forces. Well-informed sources expect that this proposal would be accepted by the concerned parties on condition that the GCC prepare binding arbitration on the disputing parties.

The sources indicated that the GCC efforts, which were made within the past few days and which include unannounced contacts with the Qatari and Bahraini amirs, have stressed the need to confine the conflict and to avoid escalation of the situation under the circumstances. The AL-KHALIJ sources have affirmed that the Bahrain Defense Force and the Qatari Armed Forces are still on maximum alert.

Cabinet Discusses 'Organizational' Topics

GF271606 Manama Domestic Service in Arabic 1530 GMT
27 Apr 86

[Text] The cabinet held its ordinary weekly session today under the chairmanship of Prime Minister Shaykh Khalifah ibn Salman Al Khalifah.

Yusuf Ahmad al-Shirawi, minister of development and industry and acting minister of state for cabinet affairs, made a statement after the meeting. He said the prime minister began the meeting by thanking almighty God for the good health He has bestowed on his highness. His highness then lauded the role of Shaykh Hamad ibn 'Isa Al Khalifah, heir apparent and commander in chief of the Bahrain Defense Force, in heading the cabinet during his absence abroad, and expressed his appreciation for and pleasure with the wisdom and tact shown by the heir apparent in running the cabinet's work to serve the country in accordance with the requirements of duty and under the guidance and direction of His Highness Shaykh 'Isa ibn Salman Al Khalifah, the amir, may God protect him. His highness also thanked all the ministers for their cooperation and positive response during his absence and for the good sentiments they expressed toward him. In reply, Shaykh Hamad ibn 'Isa Al Khalifah expressed his great happiness and joy for the return of the prime minister to the homeland, safe and sound, to continue the march of good and growth for Bahrain and its loyal people. He said that he only did his duty to serve the homeland under the guidance of the amir.

The cabinet then resumed its meeting to discuss the topics on its agenda, topics that had an organizational character, and the appropriate decisions in this regard were made.

Upon his departure Yusuf ibn 'Alawi 'Abdallah said that during his meeting with Bahrain Amir Shaykh 'Isa ibn Salman Al Khalifah, he delivered a message from His Majesty Sultan Qabus ibn Sa'id of Oman on the recent events in the Fasht al-Dibal region right after the Qatari forces landed in this region. As chairman of the current GCC session, Oman is attempting to get to know the point of views of both countries.

In his statement to WAKH before his departure, he said he also met with Amir of Qatar Shaykh Khalifah ibn Hamad Al Thani this morning for the same purpose. He said: We are holding contacts and consultations with our brother members of the GCC, particularly with Bahrain and Qatar, to contain this issue and to return matters to normal.

GULF DAILY NEWS Analyzes Fasht al-Dibal Incident

GF290509 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English
29 Apr 86 p 2

[By David Tucker and Geraldine Bedell]

[Text] Gulf-based diplomats were last night confident they would be able to negotiate the early release of the 26 men being held captive in Qatar. The men were seized on Saturday [26 April] when Qatari troops landed on a Bahraini island 18 kms from Muharraq. The Fasht al-Dibal island is now reported occupied by the Qataris, who initially landed in helicopters and were then reinforced.

A spokesman for the British Embassy in Doha last night said he hoped diplomatic moves now underway would result in the early release of the men who, he said, "were being held somewhere in Qatar." He said he had been assured the men — two Britons, a Dutchman, two Thais and 21 Filipinos — were safe and well, although the Qatari authorities had so far not allowed direct contact with the diplomats.

The Qatari troops opened fire on some of the men who attempted to escape during the landing on the Fasht and there were claims yesterday that there had been some injuries. However, the British spokesman said the claims did not tally with the information he had received. The diplomatic moves gained momentum last night with the arrival in Doha of the Dutch Consul from Kuwait.

The British spokesman said he had been in contact with the envoy and he said it was possible there would be positive moves early today.

Meanwhile, the identity of the detained Dutchman was released yesterday by the Ballast Nedam Company in Bahrain. A company spokesman said he was 54-year-old Wim Hoekendyk, who is married with a number of children. His wife Tine lives in Bahrain.

The two Britons have already been named as chief engineer Richard Thompson, 40, whose wife Susan and baby daughter live in Bahrain and surveyor Brian Davies, 40, from Dolgellau, in Wales.

The name of one of the detained Thais was given as 30-year-old equipment mechanic S. Nilphet. No details of the other 22 detained men were available last night.

Most of the men are employed by Ballast Nedam but others were subcontracted to the Fasht project by Muharraq Engineering and Gray MacKenzie. Ballast Nedam had been working on the Bahraini island for three weeks before the attack took place.

Spokesman for the company said last night they were still very anxious about the men. "We have heard nothing of them since Saturday. We are naturally very concerned."

Diplomatic sources last night revealed that Qatar had apparently agreed to a joint GCC defence project for the development of the Fasht al-Dibal island and it was still unclear last night why the Qataris had acted as they had.

A spokesman for Muharraq Engineering in Bahrain confirmed last night that his company's tugboat, the Seahawk, was still at Fasht al-Dibal after being shot-up by the Qataris when its captain attempted to flee. "Our people are still in Doha. We have no word of them," he said.

'Regret' at Qatar-Bahrain Rift Expressed

LD281319 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1225 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Kuwait, 28 Apr (KUNA) — Kuwait has expressed its profound regret for the dispute that has arisen between two sister country members of the Gulf Cooperation Council, Qatar and Bahrain.

The deputy prime minister and Foreign Minister Shaykh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jabir in a statement to the press today expressed his regret "for what occurred among brother members of one council, the Cooperation Council of the Arabian Gulf States." At the same he hoped that the dark cloud between the two sister countries would vanish very soon.

He stressed that Kuwait is very confident about the efforts of the Saudi monarch His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and his role in settling this problem and in ending the dispute between the two countries.

Shaykh Sabah al-Ahmad expressed his fears about the effect of the incident on the course of relations among the GCC countries "if a speedy solution for it is not achieved."

He described the dispute that occurred between Qatar and Bahrain concerning Fasht al-Dubal Island, which lies in the Arabian Gulf waters between the two countries, as "a passing cloud soon to vanish for harmony, tranquillity and relations of affection to be restored between the two sister countries."

In other news, the deputy prime minister and foreign minister announced that he received an invitation from the secretary general of the League of Arab States Chedli Klibi to take part in the preparatory meeting of the foreign ministers of the Arab countries set to be held in Fes, Morocco, this Wednesday.

Bahrain-Qatar Incident Regretted; Unity Urged

GF281657 Kuwait AL-ANBA' in Arabic
27 Apr 86 pp 1, 26

[Editorial: "A Gulf Summer Cloud"]

[Text] We believe that relations among the GCC states are fraternal before they are neighborly relations and are bonds of blood, spirit, and destiny before they are bonds gathering a common regional and geographical group. Before all this, the peoples of the joint Gulf family are relatives on the maternal side. For this reason, the Gulf motherhood is deeply rooted in history and is deep enough to surmount any transient incident, a casual tension, or a limited border dispute like the one which took place yesterday between Qatar and Bahrain.

While we regret the incident, which should not have happened in the first place in view of the spirit of Gulf cooperation among the region's peoples and states, we are confident that the wisdom of the brothers is capable of surmounting this sudden tension which only represents a passing summer cloud in the Gulf sky that will soon disappear to pave the way for the restoration of cordiality and purity of cooperation relations within a framework of fraternity and cohesion of brothers.

It is not important here to hold one party responsible for the incident or to condemn the other party, because the two parties are brothers and are part of the common Gulf family. However, what is important is to uproot the problem rapidly and to contain it from the beginning. The region is obliged to devote all its potentials and capabilities to confront the common challenges instead of being involved in minor internal matters which will only cause sensitivities and tension. We do not need sensitivities and tension while we are in the middle of incidents and dangers.

Although what happened on Fasht al-Dibal Island was a limited act it was absolutely not necessary to use force. The language of fraternal dialogue is the natural alternative to the language of force in the relations of brothers and is capable of resolving any problem within the Gulf family. Therefore, the GCC is required to confront this internal challenge as quickly as possible and is also required to defuse these problems so that they do not erupt from time to time.

We are confident that fraternal Bahrain and fraternal Qatar will be the first to surmount yesterday's incident within the framework of the GCC, which represents an umbrella for all the states and peoples of the Arabian Gulf and in a spirit of brotherhood and cohesion. May God forgive all. Let the cooperation family be strong through its cohesion, brotherhood, and unity in face of all challenges.

Finance Minister Denies Dinar Devaluation

GF281500 Kuwait ARAB TIMES in English 27 Apr 86 p 1

[Excerpt] Kuwait has no plans to devalue the dinar to offset a projected drop in revenue for the fiscal year starting July 1, the Finance Minister, Jasim al-Khurafi was quoted yesterday as saying.

But he told AL-SIYASAH newspaper in an interview that the government was considering measures including nigher duties on luxury items and amendments to state subsidies to make up for the drop.

"The government will not devalue the dinar ... we will continue to link it to a basket of world currencies," he said. "However, we will consider other means to offset the drop in revenue, concentrating on subsidies and giving a greater role for citizens' contribution to the economy," he added.

The proposed budget for the year forecast total revenue at KD [kuwaiti dinars] 1.92 billion, against KD 3.11 billion projected for the current year. Expenditure was forecast at KD 3.04 billion against KD 3.42 billion.

The revenue estimate does not include income from Kuwait's foreign investments - worth several billion dollars annually — whichare credited to a fund for future generations. Al-Khurafi told the cabinet this week the expected drop in revenue was due to the fall in the value of the dollar and lower oil prices. The budget was based on an oil price of $15 a barrel compared with $27 last year, he said.

Foreign Minister Departs for Fes Conference 29 Apr

[Text] Kuwait, April 28 (KUNA) — Kuwaiti Deputy Premier, Foreign Minister Shaykh Sabah al-Ahmad said he received on Monday [28 April] an invitation from the Arab League secretary general Chedli Klibi to attend an Arab foreign ministers conference scheduled for Wednesday in Fes, morocco.

Shaykh Sabah said he will leave for Fes Tuesday at noon to take part in the conference which would set the stage for an emergency Arab summit, the date and the official agenda of which are yet to be determined by the foreign ministers. He reiterated Kuwait's position on the summit's agenda, that Kuwait was in favour of discussing the Arab situation in its entirety, including the Iran-Iraq war, the U.S. attacks on Libya developments of the Palestinian question and clearing the Arab atmosphere.

The summit was originally called for by Libya which wanted Arab heads of state to discuss only the U.S. air raids on its territories, and the Libyan call for a single-item agenda was supported by at least three countries. Later Libya reportedly watered down its insistence on discussion of one subject as the majority of Arab countries preferred broader deliberations.

PDRY

'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il Reported 'Alive'

GF281317 Dubayy AL-BAYAN in Arabic 27 Apr 86 p 14

[Text] Al-Quds Media — Arab diplomatic sources in Aden have stated that former PDRY Chairman 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il is still alive znd that he is being detained by the loyalists of former PDRY Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad at the borders between the two parts of Yemen. It is to be recalled that this is the second time the survival of Isma'il is confirmed without any comment from the disputing parties of the incidents in Aden. The sources stated that the intensive search operations for the corpse of Isma'il have come up empty.

The sources pointed out that 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il's driver was wounded and that it was not known whether 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il was also wounded after his car was hit by an armor-piercing missile launched from a naval position near Aden manned by supporters of former Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad.

Meanwhile, Chairman 'Ali Nasir Muhammad's sources in Addis Ababa have stated that 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il is being detained by supporters of 'Ali Nasir Muhammad. These sources stated that 'Ali Nasir's supporters arrested 'Abd al-Fattah Isma'il during the Aden incidents and took him to Abyan, the major residence of 'Ali Nasir Muhammad, but later they were forced to evacuate him to the borders between the two parts of Yemen.

YSP Secretary General Visits Defense Ministry

[Text] Brother 'Ali Salim al-Bayd, secretary general of the YSP Central Committee, this morning visited the Defense Ministry and met with brother Colonel Salih 'Ubayd Ahmad, candidate member of the YSP Political Bureau and minister of defense; brother Colonel Haytham Qasim Tahir, member of the YSP Central Committee, first deputy of the defense minister and chief of staff; and a number of commanders, officers, and officials at the ministry. The brother secretary general acquainted himself with the situations in the military institutions and expressed his satisfaction over the advanced level of our country's defense ability. He greeted the great efforts exerted by the commanders, officers, NCO's, and soldiers of the armed forces to raise preparedness and political and combat education and to implement the training plan for 1986 in a way that contributed to the efficiency of the armed forces and to the execution of the tasks and duties assigned to them.

The brother secretary general hailed the role of the armed forces personnel in defending the homeland, the safety of its territory, the achievements and gains of the revolution, contributing to developing the revolutionary process, and to implementing the YSP policy. In this connection, the brother secretary general stressed the great importance of the cadres in implementing the policy of the party and the resolutions of its leading organs. He stressed the need to devote further attention to the political, ideological, and military education of the armed forces cadres. He also affirmed the determination of the party and state leadership to continue offering the necessary assistance to the armed forces to enable them to enhance their ability in defending the revolution and homeland and in building the new society. He pointed out that the party leadership devotes increasing attention to the welfare of the families of the armed forces martyrs who fell in various battles of defending the revolution and homeland against all internal and foreign plots which were intended to undermine our party and progressive regime and to delay our progressive march, foremost of which was the 13 January bloody plot planned by conspirator 'Ali Nasir Muhammad and his clique.

The brother secretary general greeted the efforts being exerted by the Soviet experts in building the armed forces and hailed the internationalistic support offered by the Soviet Union to consolidate the defense might of our country.

Mubarak, McPherson Discuss Economic Aid Plans

NC281043 Cairo MENA in English 1005 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo, April 18 (MENA) — President Husni Mubarak received this morning Peter McPherson, U.S. AID administrator, and his accompanying delegation.

The meeting was attended by Dr. 'Usamah al-Baz, director of the President's Office for Political Affairs, and by William Clark, U.S. charge d'affaires here.

The U.S. AID administrator said following his meeting with President Mubarak that the U.S. Congress is currently discussing at the request of the U.S. Administration, the providing of additional economic aid to Egypt by one billion dollars for the coming year.

McPherson expressed optimism, despite the difficulties that face the U.S. budget, that the Congress would approve the additional aid to Egypt.

He said that the U.S. aid programme to Egypt is one of the largest programmes due to the importance of Egypt.

Egypt faces long-term economic problems, he said, adding that this is one of the important issues he has discussed with officials here, noting that talks in this connection are constant and expressed hope to be back here within months.

He pointed out that the United States gives Egypt approximately one billion dollars in economic aid and a half billion dollars as additional aid that was decided last year. McPherson said he had good talks with President Husni Mubarak, Premier Dr. 'Ali Lutfi and with the economic group. His visit to Egypt came within the framework of the series of visits to Egypt, he added.

Abu Ghazalah Warns Against Escalating Conflicts

NC260816 Cairo MENA in Arabic

[Text] Cairo, 25 Apr (MENA) — Field Marshal Muhammad 'Abd al-Halim Abu Ghazalah, deputy prime minister and minister of defense and war production, has warned against escalating conflicts in the Middle East. Failure to solve these conflicts, he emphasized, will lead to a confrontation between the two superpowers.

In a statement to the weekly AKHBAR AL-YAWM, scheduled to be published tomorrow, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah said that it behooves all parties to control their military behavior and reaction. He urged those who use terrorism to stop doing so immediately. He also called on those who are opposing terrorism through military operations to reconsider their calculations so that the region and its people will not be burned.

Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah urged Arab countries to calmly and rationally reconsider the pan-Arab arms industries project, previously known as the Arab Industries Organization. He affirmed that this is the only way to attain an additional defensive capability for us all, to match advances in technological development, and to avoid the foreign pressures being brought to bear on the Arab countries' requests for arms by either the United States or the Soviet Union.

In this regard, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah alluded to the decision by the U.S. Congress to freeze the arms deals requested by Saudi Arabia. Saudi Arabia then turned to Britain and purchased the Tornado and other training aircraft at the end of 1985. He also noted the U.S. Administration's decision to cancel Jordan's request for defensive missiles which has prompted Jordan to consider asking the Soviet Union to meet its needs.

Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah said that Egypt is now manufacturing the Alpha Jet and is moving toward the manufacture of the Mirage 2000. Both aircraft, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah added, can be substituted for the Tornado and the Hawk [as received].

Regarding the effects of the Iraq-Iran war on the region and on Egypt's national security, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah affirmed that Egypt's security and supreme objectives, as well as those of any other Arab state in this geographical area, are indeed affected by this war regardless of which side is being supported.

He expressed the hope that the brothers in the Arab homeland would listen to the repeated calls made by President Husni Mubarak in this regard with an open heart and with reason. These calls represent an alarm signal, he added. Perhaps we will soon wake up and understand.

Responding to a question on current regional conflicts and his assessment of the recent confrontation between the United States and Libya, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah stated that of the 23 states which constitute our geographical area, 10 are experiencing acute civil wars, 12 are confronted by terrorism, 11 are faced with an armed struggle on their borders, and eightare in wars with their neighbors [all figures as received].

Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah affirmed: Among these conflicts there are some which, if not brought under control, will actually lead to a confrontation between the two superpowers. He noted that there are now four such conflicts, which is a dreadful rate.

Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah said that disputes begin to escalate when the superpowers send in arms, experts, and advisers. This actually took place in Libya following the recent confrontation there. Every power then seeks to demonstrate its military capability in the area and the Western and Eastern fleets appear. The possibilities for confrontation are increased when one party carries out air strikes against specific targets. This is what took place when the United States delivered its air strike to Libya.

If this escalation is not brought under control, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah continued, then the series of events and reactions to them will only increase in intensity. This in turn will lead to land and sea operations by one of the parties, followed by another party's attempt to confront this. Replying to a question about Egypt's ability to militarily defend the sovereignty of its territorial waters, Field Marshal Abu Ghazalah emphasized that there is a plan to build up the Egyptian Armed Forces over the next 10 years. This plan is not based on what we can achieve during these years, but on the contingencies which we might have to face.

Al-Qadhdhafi Policies, Soviet Ties Assailed

PM241118 Cairo AKHBAR AL-YAWM in Arabic
19 Apr 86 p 1,8

[Chief Editor Ibrahim Sa'dah article: "The Defeated Who Emerged Triumphant"]

[Excerpts] Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi might imagine that he is the only one to gain from the recent U.S. aggression against his country. This was what he showed when he appeared on television the day before yesterday and asked his people to go out onto the streets to sing and dance in celebration of their country's victory against the United States, Britain, and all the other countries hostile to Libya.

Al-Qadhdhafi has forgotten what happened to his country, the destruction that befell the Libyan people's property, the Libyan citizens who lost their lives in the U.S. raids, and the hundreds of millions of dinars in losses and destruction caused to military and civilian targets hit by the destructive U.S. bombing. Al-Qadhdhafi has forgotten all this and did not care about it; he only cares for his person, his success, and the superhuman victory he achieved against the world's biggest power.

I don't know why, as I was following up current events in Libya, I was reminded of Egypt following the 1967 defeat. The only reason could be the strange similarity of the two incidents. In June 1967 Egypt suffered the severest military, economic, political, and social defeat in its 7,000-year history. Yet the Egyptian regime then tried to delude itself and the people into believing that Egypt had won this war and that the whole world stood with it. War is a series of battles in which you might lose one but you will win future ones.

How often did we sing the praise of all those victories! How often did we boast about our great political victories which we lost in one single moment in an unprecedented military defeat. We raised the slogan "no sound is louder than the sound of the battle," claiming that the battle had shown who was with us and who against us. We claimed that the military defeat proved that the Soviet Union is the ally and the friend on whom we can relay in times of difficulty, as evidenced in the fact that it broke off relations with Israel.

Because of this total conviction of the Soviet Union's friendship we placed all our capabilities and resources in the hands of this loyal friend. We welcomed his sending Soviet advisers to train our armed forces. The friend and the ally was generous with us; he sent about 15,000 advisers who were distributed among the various armed forces corps. Overnight they became the Egyptian army's actual commanders who alone had a right to issue orders for military movement. Our commanders often complained of this disregard for their efficiency, capability, and expertise.

The Soviet Union exploited our military defeat in order to establish its presence and control in our country, and only God knew when we might get rid of them. Egypt came under Soviet rule for many long and bitter years whose memory will take generations to erase. If it were not for the late President Anwar al-Sadat's order to expel the Soviet advisers and so eliminate their influence and control of the country we would not have been able to fight the October war and achieve the only military victory in our country's ancient and contemporary history. If it were not for this brave decision by the Egyptian leader Soviet influence would have continued to oppress us, destroy our morale, and multiply our defeats.

This situation is now again being repeated in Libya.

The Soviet Union has embraced Al-Qadhdhafi in order to regain its influence in the area, from which Egypt expelled it. Libya is a small oil-rich country but afflicted by an ignorant leadership. So the Soviets hastened to put their hands on it; they exploited all its wealth and emptied its coffers in return for weapons and military hardware that were stockpiled in their depots but for which they could not find buyers. Not content with causing the bankruptcy of the small rich state, the Soviets sponsored its ignorant leader and made him believe that he is the world's awaited leader, that he alone can achieve the unity of the world — and not just the Arab world — under his leadership. He is the peerless, inspired, and brave and nationalist leader; he is the only true leader among scores of lying and hesitant ones.

Al-Qadhdhafi believed what his masters in Moscow told him. He turned his back on his people and nation and became a cheap tool in the Soviets' hands serving their ends, their designs, and their terrorist plans everywhere. Al-Qadhdhafi has come to represent the world's number one terrorist; he has an abundance of funds which he has abused by financing conspiracies and terrorist plans, for a purpose one time and for no purpose a thousand times. We have seen him encouraging all the extremist gangs in the east, the west, the north, and the south; we have seen him financing international criminal gangs and dispatching arms to dissident movements in countries both friendly to him and unfriendly to him. He left no country without attempting to interfere in its internal affairs. He has contributed to destablizing and inciting disturbances in almost every country; he contacted the rebels in Ireland, and America's blacks and indians, dealt with Mafia criminal gangs, paid the international terrorist Carlos generously, opened his country to Palestinian dissidents, took part in the attempt to overthrow the PLO leadership, interfered in the Lebanese war with funds and arms — sometimes supporting the Maronites against the communists, other times the communists against the Maronites, and yet other times the Shi'ah against the Sunnis and the Sunnis against the Shi'ahs; he also befriended Iraq but later turned against it and stood with Iran in its war against Iraq. He supplied the Iranians with surface-to-surface missiles which were used in bombing Iraqi towns causing the death of thousands of Iraqi Muslims.

The Egyptian people's share of Al-Qadhdhafi's terror was substantial. Al-Qadhdhafi hates no people like he hates the Egyptian people; it is the only people he dreamed of leading, but his dream never came true. At one time Al-Qadhdhafi imagined that the Egyptian people supported him, backed him, and accepted his leadership. He tried to stage a coup in Egypt so that, when it succeeded, he would enter it carried shoulder high. His attempt failed and the Egyptian people ridiculed him. So Al-Qadhdhafi soon devoted himself to terrorizing this ancient people, using all the funds at his disposal and arms for which the Libyan people paid. He also used mercenaries and agents which he recruited and sent to Egypt in order to carry out his conspiracies and terrorist plans.

Not content with these conspiracies against the Egyptian people's safety and security — conspiracies totaling 110 in number — Al-Qadhdhafi also planned to liquidate his Libyan opponents who sought refuge in Egypt seeking its hospitality and protection from Al-Qadhdhafi's brutality and crimes. Two abortive attempts were made to assassinate 'Abd al-Hamid Bakkush and a third attempt at his colleagues Ghayth al-Mabruk and Bashir al-Rabiti and the rest of the Libyan leaders who fled from Al-Qadhdhafi's hell and took shelter with the Egyptian people for their safety and security.

If Egypt is the number one target in Al-Qadhdhafi's imaginary plans the other Arab countries did not escape his terror. The only difference is that the Egyptian people and leadership resisted this terror and threatened Al-Qadhdhafi with punishment, whereas the rest of the Arab countries did not publicly reject Al-Qadhdhafi's plans and in vain tried to appease him. Meanwhile they secretly support any conspiracy to topple his regime. Al-Qadhdhafi is well aware of the hostile feelings of the Arab peoples and governments toward him, but he goes along with the good words he hears from those governments, the false appearances, and the fake sympathy. He does so in order to convince himself and his people that the whole Arab world stands with him, supports his plans, blesses his conspiracies, and proclaims him leader of the Arab nation and commander of its march.

Al-Qadhdafi could not be happier with the recent U.S. raid! His trumpets incessantly broadcast the telegrams he receives from Arab kings and heads of state, and his press gives prominence to the great Arab support he is daily receiving. The YAR has sent Al-Qadhdhafi an urgent message heralding to him the news that it has placed all Yemen's capabilities at his disposal since the U.S. aggression began. The rest of the Arab countries too have been rushing to contact Al-Qadhdhafi to declare their support for him and his regime and their full readiness to meet all his demands. Yet Al-Qadhdhafi knows well that the situation would have been different had the U.S. raid put an end to his life or if the abortive coup had succeeded. In this case all these Arab countries without exception would have hastened to declare their support for the new regime that had relieved them of Al-Qadhdhafi and his terror forever. But this fact did not spoil Al-Qadhdhafi's happiness with the telegrams he received, with the verbal support he heard and with the mountains of written support he received, all of which he cleverly exploited in his propaganda to give the impression that the defeat that his country suffered because of his criminal terrorist policy was a unique victory.

What is said about Arab support can also be said about the European countries' rejection of the recent U.S. raid. We have heard about popular demonstrations in European and other capitals rejecting the U.S. raid. We also heard criticism by many foreign country rulers. Al-Qadhdhafi imagined that this rejection and criticism was in his favor and that the whole world supports him, blesses him, and accepts his policy and terror. Al-Qadhdhafi himself realizes that this is not so as there is not a single citizen, especially in Europe, who does not want him to disappear from the international scene. The world has had enough of Al-Qadhdhafi's terror. As for the rejection of the U.S. raids, it is because of the belief that they did not achieve their objective and did not topple Al-Qadhdhafi and, therefore, this superterrorist will continue his terror and crimes with further assassinations and explosions, more aircraft and ship hijackings, and more kidnappings and executions of innocent citizens. The civilized world respects human rights and the right of every citizen to safety and security. What the world fears most is that Al-Qadhdhafi will step up his his terrorist operations and his crimes of taking revenge on innocent citizens. The U.S raid did not bring down Al-Qadhdhafi, nor did it relieve the world of his evils and crimes. Had this happened demonstrations of rejoicing would have happened in Europe, and European governments, particularly those of France, Spain, Italy, and Greece, would have hastened to recognize and support the new regime in Tripoli.

Commentary Calls Arab Summit, Unity 'Mirage'

NC281613 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic

[Bahiyy al-Din Shu'ayb commentary: The Arab World and the Summit's Mirage]

[Text] Can an Arab summit be held today to save the Arab people from the nightmare of their horrible pains? Do the circumstances currently experienced by the Arab nation allow the holding of such a summit to relieve them of the burden of their gloomy present? Can an Arab miracle change the impossible into a reality? It is sad to say that all these are unattainable illusions that haunt the Arab people. It is more distressing to say that the summit, as such, is neither a goal nor a gain. It is merely a method of determining an Arab stand on the calamities that surround the Arab world. This method is not taken into consideration by anyone.

Arab policies in the past have destroyed Arab integrity and turned the Arab giant into an unfeared nobody. And since the issue is serious and requires complete honesty, we say that the Arab states cannot face their destiny because some Arab states, particularly Syria and Libya, have burned all the bridges; destroyed the basis of Arab cohesion; and used all deceitful, terrorist, and misleading means to destroy the achievements of Arab solidarity.

The concept of unified action and the minimal level of strategy were the first victims of the Syrian and Libyan regimes. Hence, Lebanon was divided and it is still suffering from the tyrannic hegemony of the Syrians. The Lebanese people were turned into mere factions that fight from behind roadblocks, for the sake of Syrian policy. Thanks to the destruction of Arab solidarity, the Libyan regime interferred in Chad and devised plots in southern Sudan. Both Syria and Libya supported Iran to strike the Iraqi people. Thanks to the hateful policy of axis, the Western Sahara was turned into a scene of clashes in Morocco. Even Qatar and Bahrain were not spared this curse; they rushed into an inferno of dispute over a small islet.

This general significance leads us to a conclusion, namely, that the Libyan and Syrian regimes, which sew the seeds of black malice in the hearts of the Arabs, have created gaps in the Arab dialogue and paved the way for selfishness, regionalism, and maneuvers. As a result, the Arab states became engulfed in personal interests in an attempt to avoid the anger of those who can devise conspiracies. Every state tried to save itself from this foolishness.

Therefore, the Arab nation has failed to take a unified stand on the Iraq-Iran war and on the Israeli raid on the PLO headquarters in Tunisia. The Syrian and Libyan regimes regarded all these as revolutionary gains because they were able to use their veto against all Arab resolutions. Hence, the Libyan regime, which lives in an illusion, thought that the entire Arab nation would back it when it came under the U.S. raids. The fact that the Libyan regime has finally realized, or rather should fully realize, is that all the Arabs were offended by the American action but they did not stand by Libya because it was Libya that created the atmosphere of the crisis and paved the way for it, both by words and deeds.

Hence, we believe that the Arab nation is no longer able to meet in an urgent summit as Libya wants and it is the Libyan regime's fault. It was the Libyan regime that destroyed all the ethical and political norms of Arab political action. Even if the Arab summit is convened in Fes, we are positive that it could not produce a single effective resolution. This would not be due to an inability to make a decision but, rather, because Libyan and Syrian practices have long destroyed the possibility of issuing any decision.

Interior Ministry Statement on Workers' Sit-In

[Text] The Interior Ministry has issued a statement, saying that at the present time Egypt is mobilizing all its forces to confront difficult economic conditions. It is making every effort to preserve the level of workers' wages, increments, and bonuses, and to maintain the rate of development, which can only be done by hard work and an increase of production, for which the honorable sons of Egypt must make their best efforts. At such a time, a few isolated employees have attempted to incite the workforce in several esco textile and spinning factories. Yesterday evening and this morning they urged them to stage a sit-in inside the factory, to pressure the authorities to respond to a number of private demands and pay them for their days off.

However, the workers refused to go along with their call because they know that a committee has been formed to discuss the issue and bring it to a speedy conclusion by referring it to the Higher Policies Committee. The workers also believe that those in official circles are interested in meeting every justifiable legal demand, through legitimate channels.

Although the workforce and its leaders refused to respond to this chaotic method, a few workers, numbering about 250, continued their sit-in and attempts to incite others. They are thus unaware of their responsibilities under present economic circumstances, which cannot withstand vituperations and oneupmanship. The security forces were compelled to end the sit-in and refer the violators to the public prosecution for interrogation.

Ministry Declares Support for S. African People

NC281629 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1435 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo, 28 Apr (MENA) — Egypt has declared its continued support for the South African people's struggle to rid themselves of the racist regime in South Africa. In this context, Egypt will continue its efforts in collaboration with the peace, equality, and justice-loving countries of the world.

Egypt has also stressed its continued support for the African liberation movements and the Namibian people's organization which strive for the rights of the African people.

This came in a statement distributed by the Egyptian Foreign Ministry among the delegations participating in the third general conference of the African Mineworkers Unions, currently underway in Cairo. The statement asserts that Egypt is fully aware of the sufferings of the African workers, specially the mine workers, who mine the wealth of the African land for the benefit of the racist regime without obtaining the gains proportionate to the efforts they make and the hazards they face.

The statement notes that this exploitation also affects the neighboring southern African Frontline States, particularly the mineworkers.

Saddam Husayn Receives Cable on Liberated Areas

JN291556 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1540 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Baghdad, 29 Apr (INA) — President Saddam Husayn has received a congratulatory cable from Staff Major General Tali' Khalil Ruhayyim al-Duri, commander of the VI Army Corps, on the occasion of the Iraqi forces' victory over the Iranian forces yesterday. The cable said Iraqi columns liberated 16 villages, mountains, and areas during their advance toward their targets. It pointed out that the Iraqi soldiers and the men of the lightly equipped Kurdish regiments and special detachments participated in this battle supported by artillery, tanks, and helicopter gunships. The commander said the Iraqi forces completed the liberation of these areas, the last of which was the (Hayat) area, at 0815 [0415 GMT] today.

[Text] Baghdad, 28 Apr (INA) — Dr Ekrem Pakdemirli, Turkish Treasury and Foreign Trade Ministry under secretary of the Prime Minister's Office, arrived in Baghdad early this morning leading an economic delegation on a visit of several days to Iraq.

In a statement to INA, the Turkish official said that his visit aims at completing the discussions of the joint Iraqi-Turkish committee on strengthening and developing economic and trade cooperation.

Ramadan on Arab Summit, Gulf War, Other Issues

JN291035 Baghdad INA in Arabic 0840 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait, 29 Apr (INA) — Taha Yasin Ramadan, Iraqi first deputy prime minister, has asserted that the current state of Arab disunity will encourage more than one quarter to attack Arab territory and that aggression will reach new Arab capitals. In an interview with the Kuwaiti paper AL-SIYASAH published here today, Ramadan said that he raised this subject during his recent talks in Moscow which followed last January's summit between the Iraqi and Soviet presidents. He described President Saddam Husayn's last visit to the USSR as most successful.

Ramadan said that the time has come to stop certain Arab regimes from exploiting the principle of solidarity in order to obtain legality for their policies which actually seek to entrench Arab divisions and disunity.

Ramadan explained that in their assessment of the situation in the region and the disputing parties in the Gulf war, the Soviets find in Iraq and its leadership a friendly country that is defending its territory. They are convinced of Iraq's peace calls. On the other hand, they find in Iran a reactionary, aggressive, and expansionist country. Therefore, they stand for developing and strengthening Iraq's defense capabilities. This is a moral commitment to Iraq which they will naturally translate into action.

Ramadan said that Iraq does not need to ask the Soviets to exert pressure on Syria and Libya to make them change their attitude to the war. He said: The Soviets know Iraq's stand. They also know the behavior of the Libyans and Syrians. As far as we can see, they are not assured by this behavior. So while they sympathize with us, they also consider the others as their friends with whom they have established relations.

Regarding the projected Arab summit, Ramadan emphasized Iraq's position against discussing only one topic at this summit. He said: While we condemn and reject the aggression against Libya, we must point out that there is something more important; namely, the Iranian aggression against and occupation of Iraqi territory as well as the continued Zionist occupation of Arab territory in Palestine and Lebanon.

Ramadan praised Iraq's relations with the USSR and Turkey and considered the relations with Egypt as the basis of joint Arab action. He said: Egypt is not just any state. When Egypt is sick the whole Arab nation is sick. The Arabs must work for its return to joint Arab action. Ramadan supported the view that any attempt to attack the Arab nation always begins with its Egyptian and Iraqi flanks. Ramadan expressed his optimism over the new situation in Sudan which, he said, will play a new pan-Arab role.

Regarding the war, Ramadan said that Al-Faw will be liberated in accordance with the plan drawn up by the Iraqis and at the time they chose. He added: This is a new battle in the war and Iraq's recent operations along the entire front have established that the Iranian forces are now in a desperate position.

Regarding the oil price war, Ramadan said that the consumer industries will be hurt by this war just as the producer countries were hurt. He warned that a suspension of expensive oil investments accompanied by an increase in oil consumption will lead to a more serious problem than in 1979.

Ramadan announced that the second Iraqi oil pipeline via turkey entered the implementation stage 4 months ago and that it will be completed in May or June this year. He also said that discussions are under way to find the best means of supplying water to Kuwait from Iraq.

Regarding Iraqi-French relations, Ramadan said that Iraq views these relations with special interest not just because France is a major West European state, but also because we can, through France, develop a West European stand serving Iraq and the Arab nation.

Ramadan said that France can play a basic role here. He expressed the hope that Chirac's government will further promote the positive relations between Iraq and France.

Iranian Al-Faw Offensive Halted

JN291510 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1455 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Baghdad, 29 Apr (INA) — An Iraqi military source has said that Iraqi forces on the VII Army Corps Al-Faw front have inflicted massive losses on Iranian forces. In a statement to INA this evening, the military source added that last night Iranian forces tried to attack positions of some of our units in the abovementioned army corps, but our fighters confronted them with all types of weapons. Following a series of fierce battles all night long yesterday and today, and effectively supported by Air Force planes, artillery, and helicopter gunships, the Iraqi forces succeeded in halting the Iranian offensive and in inflicting massive losses on the Iranians.

Communique No 2,205

[Communique No 2,205 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 28 April 1986]

[Excerpt] The following is a roundup of our activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. As our triumphant forces are scoring the most remarkable victories over our heretic enemies, the brave cavaliers of the helicopter gunships take their share in destroying the enemy and inflicting losses on its men and equipment by their efficient combat action and effective support of our units. They carried out 97 combat missions in the operational sectors today during which they inflicted losses on enemy soldiers and destruction on its equipment. Having carried out all their duties, the helicopter cavaliers returned safely to base in God's care and protection.

2. Our units in the heroic V Army Corps seized the following weaponry and equipment, in addition to that mentioned in our Communique No 2,204 dated 27 April 1986: 11 Strella launchers, 14 GC rifles, 3 120-mm mortars, 3 81-mm mortars, 1 23-mm two-barrelled machinegun, 2 RPG-7 launchers, 3 GC machineguns, 44 Strella rockets, large quantities of ammunition of various calibers equivalent to 25 large truckloads, 4 vehicles of various types, 2 radios, 3 tractors, and 1 set of night binoculars.

3. The enemy sent a force into the battlefield estimated at two infantry companies, supported by artillery and launchers, in a desperate attempt to approach our units' positions in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah. It was pounded with all types of weapons, killing or wounding a number of personnel, sinking three boats laden with men, and forcing the rest to retreat, leaving their dead in no-man's-land. Our units in the same sector succeeded in inflicting the following losses: 5 enemy soldiers were killed; 21 positions of various types, 1 tank, 1 boat, 1 machinegun, and 1 observation post were destroyed; and 3 ammunition dumps were set ablaze.

4. Five enemy soldiers were killed and three observation posts were destroyed in the IV Army Corps sector east of Maysan. One enemy soldier was killed and one tower and two ammunition dumps were destroyed in the VI Army Corps east of the Tigris.

5. Our units in the VII Army Corps front engaged enemy positions, killing two soldiers, destroying two positions, one tower, one observation post, and one ammunition dump, and starting large fires in several areas.

6. One ammunition dump and one observation post were destroyed in the I Army Corps northern sector. One RPG-7 launcher and one GC rifle were seized and one infantry position was destroyed in the II Army Corps central sector.

[Communique No 2,206 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 29 April 1986]

[Excerpts] O proud Iraqis, the fighters of the heroic V Army Corps have added a new, splendid victory to the series of victories scored during these blessed days — a victory by which they shattered the failed enemy hopes, dismembered a new group of its remnants, and controlled vital territory of extremely strategic and logistic importance on the northeastern border.

Our triumphant forces composed of Iraq's brave soldiers, the hero fighters of our Kurdish people in the lightly-equipped regiments, and volunteers mounted a fierce offensive against enemy positions. Through the planning and field supervision of the V Army Corps headquarters under the command of Staff Major General 'Tali 'Khalil Ruhayyim al-Duri, our columns succeeded in reaching their targets, which are the (Bardariyah), (Fizuk), (Hamulan), (Harunah), (Hayat), (Mimulan), (Babik), (Jabal Kilah Salim Khan), ('Ayn Misyad), (Jabal Kuwait), (Kawlanah), (Sarukani), (Birkah), (Minyah), (Zarkati), and (Wa'ukat) areas. Heroically supported by our brave artillery and the bold Army helicopter gunships the Iraqi people's forces wiped out the aggressors in all these areas. None escaped death except those who fled the battlefield. The situation was completely settled in favor of our triumphant forces.

God bless the tough fighters of the heroic V Army Corps, commanders, officers, and other ranks. God bless the loyal fighters of our Kurdish people.

Reportage on Visit of Egyptian Prime Minister

Arrival Statement

JN281211 Amman Domestic Service in Arabic
1100 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Amman — Egyptian Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi arrived in Amman today on a 3-day visit to Jordan during which he will lead the Egyptian side to the meetings of the joint Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee to begin this evening under the chairmanship of the two countries' prime ministers.

In a statement to reporters on arrival, Dr Lutfi said that everyone in Egypt is completely satisfied with what was achieved in the committee's previous three sessions and with the principles for fruitful cooperation laid down by the committee. He expressed his great pleasure at visiting Jordan and hoped that the committee in its current session will reach a number of decisions that will serve the interests of both fraternal peoples. He pointed out that great cooperation has been achieved in all fields, both on the level of trade exchange and in the field of establishing a holding company from which a group of companies will stem and work in the two countries' interest.

Dr Lutfi said that at the end of the committee's meetings, an agreement for bilateral cooperation in the tourist field will be signed and a formula for cooperation will be defined between Alia -- the Royal Jordanian Airline and the Egyptian airline which will be announced later.

Speaking to reporters, Prime Minister Zayd al-Rifa'i expressed his pride in an appreciation for the existing relations between Jordan and Egypt in all fields. He said that the joint higher committee will reach several decisions that will entrench coordination and bolster cooperation between Jordan and Egypt in all fields.

[Text] According to reports received by the Amal Movement in the south, an Israeli force of 5 armored personnel carriers and 50 troops began to advance on the township of Yuhmur at 1405. The Israeli advance was carried out on two fronts, the first on the northern side and the second on the southeastern side. Initial reports indicate that the Israeli operation is limited.

Gunboats Sighted Off Coast

NC290553 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 0515 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] A security setback occurred in Sodeco, Al-Barjawi, Al-Tayyunah, and Dar al-Kitab in Beirut at 0600 today. Army positions and neighborhoods in East Beirut were the targets of artillery fire, and a shell fell on Al-Dikwanah at about 0710.

Snipers in West Beirut actually kept sections of East Beirut under fire throughout the night, and wounded a Lebanese soldiers near the military court.

In another development, Israeli gunboats were spotted off the Lebanese coast last night between Al-Awza'i and 'Ayn al-Muraysah. West Beirut military organizations responded at that time by taking military precautions in the aforementioned area.

Gunboats Come Under Fire

NC290710 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 0530 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Unidentified gunboats appeared off the St George and 'Ayn al-Muraysah areas at 2300 last night. The gunboats later approached the shore, where they were met by anti-aircraft fire. The boats moved away, only to reappear off Al-Ramlah al-Bayda', approximately 300 meters from the shore. They again came under fire.

Until a later hour last night, the gunboats could still be seen off the coast between the St George area and Ramlah al-Bayda'. Earlier, Israeli warplanes had been flying over Beirut and other Lebanese territories since the morning.

Amal Prepares for Possible Attack

Al-Jumayyil Receives Message From Mubarak

NC281422 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 1215 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] President Amin al-Jumayyil received a message from Egyptian President Muhammad Husni Mubarak today. The message was delivered by Egyptian ambassador to Lebanon Nuhad 'Asqalani and dealt with Egypt's concern over the situation in Lebanon and in the region.

Upon leaving B'abda Palace, 'Asqalani said: I had the honor of meeting with his excellency the president today. I delivered a letter from President Mubarak expressing Egypt's concern over the situation in Lebanon, the Egyptian people's sympathies with Lebanon, and their great hopes that the situation will stabilize and peace return. This can only occur on the basis of political and democratic dialogue among the various Lebanese factions and on the basis of the equality of all Lebanese citizens in terms of rights and responsibilities. Egypt hopes to see peace, security, stability, and prosperity restored to fraternal Lebanon so that it may play its full role in the Arab and international arenas.

Asked whether President al-Jumayyil had responded, 'Asqalani replied: President al-Jumayyil expressed his appreciation of President Mubarak's message, and his hope and determination to take all the necessary steps possible to restore peace and stability to Lebanon.

Karami Cites Failure of Tripartite Agreement

NC290737 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 0530 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] It is being said that Prime Minister Rashid Karami might go to Damascus this week for talks with Syrian officials. Meanwhile, Karami warned yesterday of the perils of the stalemate that has been reached in the country. He said: Salvation can only be achieved through a reconciliation among the Lebanese. This is the only way to restore legitimacy. He repeated that which he announced in the north 2 days ago — that the only solution lies in the restoration of full legitimacy. He said that he is opposed to inaction and that he supports any alternative or solution that will end the crisis that has affected the country since 15 January.

He said: We have offered a great amount of advice, but it has not been heeded. Therefore, we call on everyone to find An alternative to the tripartite agreement.

The tripartite agreement offered a solution that would have restored the lost peace in Lebanon. Regrettably, however, they [not further identified] have not accepted this agreement to date, nor have they presented an alternative. We repeat for the thousandth time that if they have a solution, let them present it; we will then express our opinion on it.

Comments on Unity in Beirut

[Remarks by Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami in response to questions by unidentified correspondents following the West Beirut Coordination Committee meeting on 28 April — recorded]

[Excerpts] [Karami] We discussed the existing situation and current developments, particularly those relating to the crossing points. During the previous session, we had asked [Chief of Staff] Major General Abu Dargham to contact the [Army] command and work out a plan to cut down on existing procedures in order to introduce unity and coexistence in Beirut. However, we have noticed that the procedures have been multiplied, not cut down. Therefore, we asked the security committee to fulfill its responsibility and open all these crossing points to safeguard the interests of those citizens who need to move between the two parts of Beirut. We hope that the security committee will be successful in performing this task.

Yesterday, I received Marrack Goulding, UN under secretary general, and listened to his views. I perceived the importance that the UN Security Council attaches to the implementation of its resolutions, particularly Resolution 425, which provides for Israel's full, unconditional withdrawal. I could also see that the Security Council attaches deserved importance to such matters. We hope that Israel's comprehensive withdrawal will be effected and that UNIFIL's presence will be expanded to cover all border points. We, for our part, are committed to the armistice agreement. Through this agreement the Lebanese Government is prepared to make arrangements, which we believe should be 100 percent Lebanese, that would ensure the security of the south. This security arrangement should ensure the safety of everyone. We have made these points on many occasions, and we pledge ourselves to them under all circumstances. We are quite prepared to convey these points to anybody who wishes to listen.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, West Beirut has become empty of foreigners. We do not want to exaggerate, but embassies have started closing their doors, such as the Netherlands Embassy. Are there specific measures to stop what is going on?

[Karami] All of you know the measures that have been taken by the coordination committee. This committee is closely following the implementation of all the measures agreed upon. I admit that the results of the arrangements concluded by the parties, forces, and functionaries ran counter to our expectations. Though we thank them for their trouble, we feel that they failed to produce the required results. That is why I said yesterday in Tripoli that the sole solution rests in the return of full legitimacy. Without this legitimacy I find no solution to the problems of foreigners and Lebanese citizens alike. Unless such legitimacy is restored and a new Lebanon is established, I believe there is no way to achieve salvation. We hope that the foreigners will remain with us. We, however, cannot stop those who wish to leave us.

[Question] The Halat Airport is expected to begin operating soon. What is your view on this?

[Karami] Actually, we refused to rent out utilities and casinos. Therefore, we will never accept an illegal airport. We reject everything that is illegal. This airport must comply with all Lebanese and international laws to become legal.

U.S. Security Plan for Southern Lebanon Noted

GF281142 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0840 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 28 Apr (WAKH) — The UAE newspaper AL-ITTIHAD today carried the details of a U.S. plan designed to establish new security arrangements in southern Lebanon to protect Zionist settlements in occupied northern Palestine against the attacks of the Lebanese national forces.

The U.S. plan, which has been called a gradual withdrawal, stipulates the implementation of a partial Israeli withdrawal from the western sector — the Tyre region — and transferring it to the UN forces. Also the Amal movement is to be given an outstanding political and security role in the region. Once success of this role has been ensured, a second Israeli withdrawal would then take place from the border strip abutting occupied Palestine.

Information published by the paper indicates that some Israeli officials have approved of this plan while others oppose it, claiming that this would not prevent fedayeen attacks on the Zionist settlements. U.S. Middle East envoy Richard Murphy, who prepared details of the plan, is optimistic of its success once implemented. The information also indicates that the United States is keen to call for the convocation of the UN Security Council, once the withdrawal has been completed, to give the UN forces a greater role in the region and to convert it into a deterrent force.

[Text] The martyr Zuhayr Shihadah group of the Amal Movement today ambushed a mechanized patrol of agent Lahd's army on the Haris-Sribbin-Kafra crossroad. Using rockets and machineguns to attack the patrol the groups fighters destroyed a vehicle and killed its crew.

Israeli-Lahd reinforcements were brought to the scene immediately and started combing the villages and valleys with machineguns and 120-mm mortars. The enemy then assembled its vehicles on the same crossroad. An Amal resistance group infiltrated a nearby area and shelled the vehicles with 80 60-mm shells, inflicting further losses on the enemy's personnel and vehicles. The clashes continued until 1200.

Authorities Foil Bomb Attempt, Make Arrests

JN290613 Amman JORDAN TIMES in English 29 Apr 86 p 1

[Excerpt] Abu Dhabi (Agencies) — Syrian authorities foiled an attempt to bomb two targets in Damascus last week and killed or arrested 10 members of a gang who bombed several targets the previous week, a United Arab Emirates newspaper said Monday.

Two men were arrested last week while trying to plant bombs at a hospital and student housing complex in the capital, the daily AL-ITTIHAD quoted Syrian security sources as saying.

They told security forces where to find members of the gang responsible for a string of bombings the previous week, who were hiding in an apartment rented by an Israeli intelligence agent, it said.

Security forces swooped on the apartment last Friday and overran it after a 90-minute gun-battle with the gang, the sources were quoted as saying. They said 10 people were killed or wounded and arrested.

Reportage, Comment on Al-Asad's Visit to SFRY

AL-BA'TH Previews Visit

JN290825 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic
0439 GMT 29 Apr 86

[From the press review]

[Text] Commenting on the significance of President Hafiz al-Asad's visit to Belgrade, AL-BA'TH says: Comrade leader Hafiz al-Asad, secretary general of the Party and president of the Republic, begins his visit to Yugoslavia amid significant regional and international developments and circumstances. Observers in all political and information circles are showing great interest in this visit. On the regional level, Syria is facing a serious threats from the imperialist-Zionist alliance, which recently seemed to be preparing a military strike against our country to prevent it from completing its strategic buildup and to undermine its growing role in leading Arab liberation action, as Zionist sources say.

The paper adds: On the Arab and international levels, the region recently witnessed a flagrant U.S. aggression against fraternal Libya that constituted a serious precedent in international politics and a flagrant violation of the UN Charter. This means that Syria must find an appropriate formula to confront aggression against it and the policy it represents in progressive Arab circles. The friendly peoples in the socialist camp and the nonaligned states are the framework from which Syria begins its moves and activities to broaden the front of friends and allies. The friendly socialist bloc countries headed by the USSR have proven in all tests their support for us and our legitimate rights to liberation and reconstruction. The nonaligned states, headed by friendly Yugoslavia, have always backed our stands and understood our legitimate struggle against hegemony, expansion, and aggression.

AL-BA'TH concludes: During his current visit to Yugoslavia, leader Al-Asad carries with him the steadfast Arab stand; namely, Arab readiness to confront aggression. During this historic visit, the president will, in addition to deepening the ties of friendship and cooperation with Yugoslavia, explain all issues that concern both countries and further develop the ties of friendship and understanding.

[Text] Sofia — The conference of the World Peace Council [WPC] concluded its work in Sofia last night. Romesh Chandra was reelected chairman of the council. Comrade Muhammad Jabir Bajbuj, [member of the National Command of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party in Syria], was elected vice chairman. Moreover, Dr Muhsin Bilal, Murad al-Quwatli, and 'Atiyah al-Judah were elected members in the WPC Presidium.

Comrade Dr Muhsin Bilal delivered Syria's speech before the WPC General Assembly. In this speech, he spoke about the serious situation threatening world peace, saying the United States is further aggravating this situation by transferring the nuclear danger to outer space despite world denunciation of this policy. He said that the aggression against Libya is a prelude to a wider aggression against our Arab region, and our Syrian homeland in particular. He noted that the United States and Israel are massing their military forces, making terrorist threats, and exerting economic pressure.

Dr Bilal added: We are determined to liberate the occupied Arab territory and to give all support to the Palestinian Arab people in their effort to regain their legitimate rights of return and self-determination. We will continue to resist the capitulatory Camp David policy. Our objective is to achieve just, comprehensive peace in the region. Dr Bilal also affirmed Syria's continued support for the Lebanese people in their struggle to expel the Israeli occupiers from all of their territory and to achieve national accord. Dr Bilal said: On this occasion, we announce our support for the peace program proposed by the USSR and call on the United States to listen to the voice of reason and to respond to the wishes of the people.

The WPC also issued a special statement in which it denounced the United States' acts of terrorism against Libya. The statement called for the withdrawal of the 6th Fleet from the Mediterranean. The statement also called for the immediate, unconditional withdrawal from all the occupied Arab territories and condemned imperialist threats, provocations, and hostile plans against Syria.

Security Forces Capture Abu Musa Terrorist Squad

Peres 'Satisfaction' With Al-Asad Remarks on Peace

TA282105 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 2100 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] The prime minister has expressed satisfaction with the Syrian president's remarks yesterday that it is possible to reach Middle East peace through an international conference under the aegis of the Soviet Union and the United States. However, in Mr Peres' opinion, even if this is the first sign of Syria's readiness to make peace, the process will be a long one. Israel, he added, is prepared to discuss peace at once and without preconditions, but he believes this will not happen soon.

This is reported by an ITIM reporter. The prime minister was speaking to correspondents at the inauguration of the Eshkol Park in the western Negev. He refused to comment on the possibility of resumption of diplomatic relations with Eastern bloc countries. He believes it is preferable to let the process develop at its own pace, assess the results, and only then comment.

Further Peres Reaction

[Report by Eytan Rabin]

[Excerpt] "If Syrian President al-Asad wants an international conference of one sort or another, let him start talking peace. So far he has not talked about peace with Israel at all," Prime Minister Shim'on Peres said yesterday in reaction to Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad's declaration the previous day that he supports the convening of an international conference headed by the Soviet Union and the United States.

The prime minister, who toured the south of Israel yesterday, said: "Al-Asad is talking about an international conference and we are prepared to talk about peace without preconditions."

Referring to the possibility of Israel's relations with the Soviet Union being resumed in the wake of the rapprochement with Poland, the prime minister said: "We will let matters develop and then comment on them."

In reply to a question by the HA'ARETZ correspondent as to whether there has been any progress in the Tabah talks, the prime minister said: "We expect a delegation from Egypt to come to Israel to continue the Tabah negotiations."

Replying to a question, the IDF spokesman noted that there have been no firing incidents on the Golan Heights and that activities in the area are absolutely routine.

'Sources' Deny Israeli Agents Arrested in Syria

TA290629 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 29 Apr 86 p 1

[Text] Israeli sources last night categorically denied a report that Syria had arrested a gang of Israel Mosad agents reputed to have carried out the recent spate of bombings in Syria.

The United Arab Emirates daily AL-ITTIHAD reported yesterday that the 10 members of the gang were killed, or wounded and arrested, after Syrian authorities foiled an attempt by two other gang members to bomb two targets in Damascus last week. The two were arrested while trying to plant bombs at a hospital and student housing complex in the capital, the paper quoted Syrian security sources as saying.

They told security forces where to find members of the gang responsible for a string of bombings the previous week, who were hiding in an apartment rented by an Israeli intelligence agent, it said.

Security forces raided the apartment last Friday and overcame the gang after a 90-minute gun-battle, the sources were quoted as saying.

AL-ITTIHAD recently has published several red herring reports that later proved untrue.

Last week three bombs exploded in the Syrian port of Tartus killing one person. Ten days earlier some 150 people were killed or wounded by bombs planted aboard military transport buses in Syria.

Prime Minister Shim'on Peres said that one cannot compare supplying a reactor to Israel to supplying one to Iraq because were Israel to purchase a reactor from France it would serve to produce energy only under the appropriate superivision, while the Iraqi reactor would produce problems, not energy.

Energy Minister Moshe Shahal has said that the reduction in oil prices will enable a further cut in the retail price of fuel.

HA'ARETZ on Reasons for Iran Arms Sales Blowup

TA281355 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 28 Apr 86 p 7

[Commentary by Re'uven Pedatzur: "Arms to Iran: The Smoke and The Fire"]

[Text] It is doubtful that the official announcements issued by the Foreign and Defense Ministries, and the speedy investigation conducted by the director general of the Defense Ministry which showed that "Israel is not involved in the affair of the arrest of Reserves Brigadier General Avraham Bar'am," will prevent the political damage Israel is bound to suffer following the uncovery of the arms-smuggling ring to Iran.

Also, Bar'am's blunt reaction from his prison in Bermuda will not make it easier for Israel to explain the situation. Bar'am threatened that Israel had better see to getting him out of prison, "or else I would rather stand trial in the United States and tell all." According to him, the Israeli defense establishment had known about the group of arms dealers for which he had worked as a consultant. As he claims, part of the arms designed for Iran were supposed to have come from Israel. Bar'am also has a permit signed by Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin allowing him to engage in "activities involving military knowhow or combat equipment."

Against its best interests, Israel must now prove to the U.S. Administration that it has nothing to do with the Iranian arms deal whatsoever. In the past there had been another occasion in which the government tried to cover up an arms deal it had carried out. Upon the outbreak of the Falklands war, Israel was portrayed, particularly in the European press, as the "bad guy" selling arms to Argentina in order to fight Britain. The foreign minister was forced to lie and say that Israel had not sold any arms to Argentina. However, when additional details about the arms deals with Argentina cropped up, the foreign minister said that we would stop selling them. It seems though that in actual fact Israel went on selling arms to Argentina.

The involvement of a senior reserves officer in arms deals designed to help out a regime operating under the slogan of "victory over Iraq is a step on the way to liberating Jerusalem" should not surprise anybody. The Israel Government had been doing good business with Iran, but the downfall of the shah brought the arms deals to an abrupt end (in 1977 Israel sold some $200 million worth of weapons to Iran). Based on foreign publications quoted in his book about Israel's arms exports, Professor Aharon Kleiman estimates that the Persian Gulf war and the severance of arms supplies from the West led to the renewal of the contacts with Israel.

The Israeli Government has good reasons to deliver arms to Iran. In addition to the evident financial profit, Israel very much wants the "Gulf war," which has been keeping the Iraqi Army busy, to continue since this reduces the threat posed by the "eastern front." According to the Israeli concept, Iran is strategically important on two counts: In the global context, as a buffer against Soviet expansion to the southwest, expansion which would turn the Gulf area into a Soviet zone of influence; and in the context of the Arab world, due to the fact that Iran's military power does not only pose a threat to Iraq but also to other Arab countries. Therefore, as far as Israel is concerned, a distinction between Iran's geographical location and its regime is largely justified.

The world press has reported on various arms deals with Iran. According to one such report, it seems that the deals with Khomeyni's Iran began as early as October 1980, on the second month of the fighting with Iraq. In its issue of 25 July 1983 TIME magazine reported that Begin's government had at that time agreed to sell Iran tires for its Phantom aircraft worth several hundred thousand dollars. In July 1981 a mysterious airplane loaded with weapons crashed in the Soviet Union. Rumor had it that Israeli weapons on their way to Iran were involved. According to a report by a Swedish institute, in the course of 1981 Israel sold Iran weapons including overhauled aircraft engines, spare parts for M-48 tanks, and large quantities of ammunition. On 9 March 1982, Leslie Gelb wrote in THE HERALD TRIBUNE that according to documents in his possession Israel had in the previous 18 months sold about half the weapons arriving in Iran.

a visit to the United States, Ari'el Sharon told his audience in a synagogue in Connecticut that Israel was selling weapons to Iran. This attempt by Sharon to score points in the political arena did not take into account the feelings of his U.S. hosts. It emerged that Israel had continued to sell weapons to Khomeyni even during the time when Iranian revolutionary guards were holding the Americans captured at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran hostage. In the wake of Sharon's remarks in the United States, the spokesman of the prime minister at the time, Yitzhaq Shamir, announced that "Israel is not selling weapons to Iran these days." The emphasis placed on the words "these days" was not lost on experienced observers.

Consequently, the Iranian feats of Reserves Brig Gen Bar'am leave the "Israeli connection" in doubt even if there is no official connection between it and the defense establishment.

Decision-makers on Israeli arms sales constitute a small and homogeneous group with a clear and distinct outlook. They have basically embraced the pragmatic approach set by David Ben-Gurion that, being a small country, it is in Israel's interest to keep normal relations with the maximum number of countries and that those relations should not take into consideration the nature of their regimes. These decision-makers are unanimous in their acceptance that arms sales and morality are not always compatible.

In this context, one may rely on foreign publications according to which Israel has developed vast relations, largely based on arms sales, with the "club of ostracized countries": South Africa, Taiwan, Chile, the military Argentina, Zaire and, of course, Khomeyni's Iran. Bar'am's deals do not deviate from the norms set out by the defense establishment but rather fit in very well with them.

Of course, the most interesting question in the "Bar'am affair" is: Who were the Americans who were interested in making it public at precisely this time? After all, the U.S. Administration is not interested in a devastating Iranian victory which might open the way to the menace of a communist takeover either.

According to foreign publications, the United States has more than once in the past used Israel's services as an arms supplier to achieve its objectives in various parts of the world. It should be said that Israel usually gave in willingly and sold weapons to various parts of the world where the United States did not want its name mentioned. There were also instances in which the U.S. Administration did not hesitate to use the Israeli arms deals to embarrass its government.

It seems that the "Bar'am affair" also blew up because various elements in the U.S. Administration wanted to embarrass Israel. It is still too early to mention these elements by name, but the timing may be related to the approval of the arms deal with Saudi Arabia. Bar'am and his friends were detained only one day before the foreign relations committees of both houses of Congress were scheduled to vote on the Saudi arms deal. It may be that somebody wanted to hint to the members of Congress that while they are trying to defend Israel's security interests, the latter is busy selling arms (mostly U.S.-made) to the big enemy of the Western democracies and to the country considered one of the main patrons of international terrorism.

Ibrahimi Hosts Political Talks

LD281955 Algiers APS in Arabic 1600 GMT 28 APR 86

[Text] Algiers, 28 Apr (APS) — Algerian-West German political talks started at the Villa Mustafa Rais this morning under the chairmanship of Dr Taleb Ibrahimi, member of the Political Bureau and foreign minister, on the Algerian side, and of Hans-Dietrich Genscher, FRG foreign minister, on the German side.

The talks covered the deterioration of the situation in the Mediterranean Sea, and each side informed the other of his country's attitude to this issue.

This exchange of views is of special importance in view of the fact that it is being held on the eve of the emergency Arab summit and of the summit of the seven industrialized countries in Tokyo.

The two ministers also reviewed relations between Europe and the Arab world, as well as the repercussions of the measures and the standpoints which have recently been taken by the EEC on these relations [word indistinct] the escalation of tension in the Mediterranean Sea.

Arab Maghreb Parties Meet in Algiers 28 Apr

LD281519 Algiers APS in English 1152 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Algiers, 28/04/86 (APS) — An imposing meeting was held yesterday here on the occasion of the commemoration of the 28th anniversary of the Tangier conference which laid the foundations of the edification of a united Arab Maghreb. In their addresses to the meeting the heads of the four Maghreb parties affirmed their willingness to build a united and prosperous Arab Maghreb to meet the deep and longstanding aspirations of the peoples of the region.

Opening the meeting Mr Messaadia welcomed the Tunisian and Moroccan delegations: "The brothers we are welcoming today amidst us were our comrades in arms who are here today to reassert their willingness to achieve the historic project of the unification of the Maghreb," Mr Messaadia said.

"Without unity our development will remain uncertain. We should find appropriate means and the necessary courage to discuss different approaches of vital issues." The edification of a united Arab Maghreb is not less important than our attachment to sovereignty and independence. The head of the Permanent Secretariat stressed the need to go beyond mere wishes and overcome material, moral or whatever constraints to achieve the dream for which the peoples of the region sacrificed themselves.

The aggressions against Tunisia and Libya are breaches of morale and holy principles. Any attack on a Maghrebin country is considered as an aggression against Algeria and its people. Mr Messaadia said Algeria did not hesitate to express its readiness to shoulder its historic responsibilities, he concluded.

Taking the floor, the secretary general of the Istiqlal Party (Morocco) Mohamed Boucetta dwelt on the strong bonds uniting the Maghreb peoples, that is tongue religion, civilisation history, community of destiny and geographic situation. "All these factors are a sound basis for unification. Unfortunately it is not so for all peoples, Mr Boucetta said. "With will power we can overcome constraints and obstacles and resume dialogue for building a united Maghreb he added.

Mr Boucetta pointed to the dangers threatening the Arab-Islamic nation with the aim to stifle this civilisation. He further noted that rifts and differences are divisive factors that prevent Arab peoples from facing this critical situation, today's encounter is the genuine path to unification, he concluded.

The first secretary of the USFP (Socialist Union of Popular Forces) (Morocco) Abderahim Bouabid said for his part he was proud the commemoration of the Tangier conference takes place in Algeria, land of sacrifices independence, and miracles.

"The spirit of Tangier is still alive and will remain alive for ever and the best evidence is the Algiers encounter, Mr Bouabid declared. He voiced deep concern over the obstacles standing in the way of the aspiration of the Maghreb peoples after unity.

"It is high time to remove them and move ahead in confident steps to translate into action the Tangier decisions for the profit of the mounting generations.

The director of the Destourian Socialist Party, Hedi Bakkouche described for his part that the Algiers encounter as successful initiative that will shortly yield fruits.

Mr Bakkouche expressed satisfaction at the close economic social and cultural relations existing between Algeria and Tunisia under the treaty of concord and fraternity signed between Algeria, Tunisia and Mauritania. This treaty is a model of cooperation, coordination and complementarity and is conducive to unity, Mr Bakkouche said. He further expressed hopes that Morocco joins in achieving cooperation facts show that complementary cooperation between the Maghreb peoples is a must, he concluded.

Bendjedid Addresses Delegations

LD281525 Algiers APS in English 1327 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Algiers, 28/04/86 (APS) — Receiving the delegations of the parties of the three Maghreb countries taking part in the commemoration of the 28th anniversary of the Tangier conference, President Chadli Bendjedid set out practical actions to be taken with a view to achieving unity in the grand Arab Maghreb.

"The Arab Maghreb unity is a lofty ideal to the achievement of which we are committed moreover it is the aspiration of our peoples," the president said.

"The parties of our country play a pivotal role in strengthening this unity." We are witnessing an era of groupings. Our strength lies in our unity; only unity will enable us to buttress our independence, achieve progress and unity for our peoples and defend our vital interests, the head of state declared.

"We insist on the pressing need to establish permanent contacts and dialogue and work out a long term programme of works that doesn't obey to occasional events".

"The parties of our countries will thus be able to contribute in achieving the challenging task of the Maghreb edification and work toward the rapprochement of our peoples by removing hurdles likely to estrange them from each other".

In this respect, the head of state said, the Maghreb parties' actions will benefit our region, allay the fears of our peoples and funnel energies toward the edification of the Maghreb. Our action, the president concluded, should not be contingent upon occasional problems and the present objective difficulties. It is our duty to join hands to find suitable solutions through a constructive dialogue and sincere willingness. We are also duty bound to make of this historic commemoration the outset of a fruitful action that might fulfil the expectations of our peoples and serve our fundamental interests.

Brahimi Departs for Talks With Turkey's Ozal

This visit will be an opportunity to boost and to strengthen the Algero-Turkish cooperation, which falls short of the two countries capacities, according to the Turkish official's opinion. Several agreements were signed during the past years between Turkey and Algeria, including an accord of cooperation in the field of tourism signed in 1980, and an agreement on economic, scientific and technical cooperation and the creation of a joint commission in 1982.

LIBYA

Iran's Velayati Arrives in Tripoli, Issues Statement

LD281933 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1910 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 28 Apr (JANA) — 'Ali Akbar Velayati, the foreign minister; and Rafiqdust, minister of the Revolutionary Guards Corps of the Islamic Republic of Iran, and the delegation accompanying them, arrived in Tripoli this evening on a visit to the Great Jamahiriyah.

Brother 'Ali Akbar Velayati has declared anew the standing of the Islamic Republic of Iran and its solidarity with the Libyan Arab people in their courageous resistance to the unsuccessful U.S.-Atlantic aggression. He told JANA that the vicious U.S. imperialist onslaught on the Great Jamahiriyah is contrary to all human norms and principles. He said that we in the Islamic Republic of Iran consider that the main reason driving the government of Reagan — the killer of children — to wage its barbarous raids against the Libyan Arab towns is the revolutionary stance which the Great Jamahiriyah insisted on adopting in all fields, and particularly the firm stances of the leader Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi in the face of all the U.S. imperialist plots and provocations against the peoples who are struggling for freedom. These are true revolutionary stances that disturb imperialism and Zionism.

In his statement to JANA he stressed that U.S. imperialism adopted false excuses to justify its barbarous aggression on Libya, explaining that these excuses were old weapons they used against the Great Jamahiriyah in a desperate attempt to harm its revolutionary choices. He added that the Iranian delegation accompanying him, which includes members from the Consultative Council, the Revolutionary Guard Corps and the Foreign Ministry, have come to the Jamahiriyah to declare again the complete and comprehensive cohesion and support of the Muslim Iranian people for the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership against the U.S-Atlantic aggression. He said we stand beside our brothers and sisters in the Great Jamahiriyah and with them, in a united rank to bolster their revolutionary stand. He added: We declare that the Iranian people and its government are supporting loudly the Libyan Arab people in its brave confrontation with the U.S.-Atlantic, barabaric aggression.

Brother 'Ali Akbar Velayati declared that continued revolutionary action among the Great Jamahiriyah, Iran and Syria against U.S. imperialism and Zionism was the main reason that made the United States and the NATO countries, especially Britain, launch the barbaric aggression on Libya and persist with military threats to launch similar attacks on Syria. He said that U.S. imperialism and Zionism do not view with satisfaction the stands of the three countries, and accuse them of supporting what they call terrorism.

He said: Is it not the United States that supports organized state terrorism and direct intervention in peoples' freedom? He repeated: Was it not the United States that invaded Grenada, surrounded Nicaragua, is supporting the Zionist entity in occupied Palestine and the racist entity in South Africa, and has perpetrated the assault on the Great Jamahiriyah recently? He exclaimed: Was it not the United States that was always supporting terrorism and every tyrant dictator standing in the face of revolution?

He concluded his statement by saying that the U.S. threats uttered by the child killer Reagan and his foreign minister Shultz, as well as the child killer Thatcher, against progressive revolutionary countries, especially Libya, Iran and Syria and the rest of the Islamic world, are nothing but empty statements that will reinvigorate the will of these people to continue their struggle for consolidating their freedom and continuing the struggle against U.S. imperialism and Zionism.

Reportage on Arab Summit Scheduled To Convene in Fes

'Hints' Al-Qadhdhafi May Not Attend

GF281405 Doha QNA in Arabic 1135 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 28 Apr (QNA) — Muhammad Sharif al-Din al-Fayturi, information and culture secretary of the Libyan General People's Committee has hinted at the possibility that Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi might not attend the emergency Arab summit scheduled to convene in the Moroccan city of Fes. He added that what is important is the convocation of the summit, not who will represent Libya. He said that it is not important that Colonel al-Qadhdhafi personally attends the summit.

In a statement to AL-ITTIHAD published today, he said that Libya has agreed to attend the summit without adhering to the agenda, and that this agreement stems from the need for the Arabs to meet to discuss their situations even without a prearranged agenda and to discuss the U.S. aggression on Libya.

Quoting a high-ranking Libyan official in Tripoli, the newspaper said that Libya's intention to join the Warsaw Pact is not a political step, but a decision to confront a superpower which possesses unbalanced capabilities with Libya. The source added that this decision allows Libya to be with allies which are capable of confronting the aggressive powers and enables it to wage this confrontation.

The source, which the paper did not mention by name, affirmed that his country's intention to join the Warsaw Pact does not contradict Libya's views, stances, and ideology, a matter which will stand against having allies which support Libya and will help to make it powerful.

Jallud Insists on Joint Reaction

LD291133 Kuwait KUNA in English 1057 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Beirut, April 29 (KUNA) — A senior Libyan official has expressed his country's insistence that the emergency Arab summit slated for next Saturday in Morocco should discuss a joint Arab reaction to the American aggression on Libya.

Libya's second man in command Major 'Abd al-Salam Jallud said in an interview with Lebanese daily AL-SAFIR published here Tuesday that the American raids have failed to force the Libyan Jamahiriyah to "amend or change its revolutionary line."

The raids have further failed in the attempt to assassinate Libyan leader Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi and destroy the basic Libyan military structure, he added.

Jallud accused a number of Arab countries of "attempting to exploit the upcoming Arab summit to force the Jamahiriyah into making concessions.

These countries, which he did not name, are trying "to achieve politically what the Americans have failed to accomplish militarily by their barbaric raids."

Libya suffered 37 deaths and 93 wounded, mostly civilians as a result of the raids, Jallud said and warned that Libya's response to future attacks will be "more decisive and painful."

The paper quoted well informed Arab sources as saying that Libya has proposed to host the Arab summit in the city of Sabha since the conference is held over an issue mainly concerning Libya.

EEC Chairman Told Europe Shelters 'Hostile' Elements

LD281241 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1120 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 28 Apr (JANA) — The People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison summoned today the Dutch charge d'affaires, due to the fact that his country currently chairs the EEC, and told him that the European countries are giving shelter to the terrorist movements and elements which are hostile to Libya and the progressive Arab countries, and that they are providing them with protection, finance, and facilities to carry out their various activities.

The European countries are sheltering, organizing, and exporting terrorism, which these countries conceal under feeble justifications and motives. Yet, these countries do not hesitate to accuse others of practicing terrorism. If the European countries allow themselves to pursure such a course, then other countries have the right to do the same.

The Dutch charge d'affaires was also told that the Zionist enemy, the tool of official terrorism and with all of the mass extermination policies which it practiced in the past and still practices against the Palestinian people, has not prevented the EEC countries from establishing and bolstering relations and cooperation with it in various fields. Therefore, these countries should not be surprised to encounter the extension of Palestinian resistance to wherever this enemy is found.

Western Claims of Attacks on Citizens 'Fabrication'

LD281458 Tripoli JANA in English 1458 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 28 Apr (JANA) — Some Western news agencies have reported allegations saying that some Liberian citizens in the Jamahiriyah have been subjected to acts against their person [ashkhasihin]. This is a fabrication that comes within the campaign led by the United States and its partners against the Jamahiriyah, and an attempt to plant the seeds of discord among the peoples of the African continent, who have shown their standing with the Great Jamahiriyah in condemnation of the U.S. aggression against the Libyan Arab people.

AFP Reports Belgium To Expel Diplomats

AU281710 Paris AFP in English 1703 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Brussels, April 28 (AFP) — Seven Libyan diplomats are to be expelled from Brussels, half the diplomatic staff at the People's Bureau (embassy), the Belgian Foreign Ministry said Monday.

Two members of the administrative staff were also being expelled, the ministry said in a statement.

The decision follows the adoption of diplomatic sanctions against Libya by European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers meeting in Luxembourg on April 21.

The expelled Libyan diplomats will have to leave Belgium before May 10, the statement said.

It added that the decision had been taken "jointly" by the three Benelux countries of Belgium, Netherlands and Luxembourg. Libya has no diplomatic representation at The Hague or Luxembourg.

The decision meant that the number of Libyan diplomats in Benelux countries was being reduced to the number of diplomats Benelux had in Tripoli, four from Belgium and three from the Netherlands.

The remaining Libyan diplomats and administrative staff as well as members of their families would be restricted to the Brussels region with advance permission required for trips to other parts of Belgium, to the Netherlands and to Luxembourg. All Libyan requests for visas to visit Benelux countries would in future be subjected to close scrutiny, the statement concluded.

Further on Condemnations of U.S. Aggression

Syria's Al-Asad to Soviet TV

LD282001 Tripoli JANA in English 1454 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, Shaban 18, Apr 28, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The Syrian president, Hafiz al-Asad, has reiterated condemnation of U.S. aggressive schemes that are directed at the Arab people.

In his comments to Soviet television yesterday afternoon, Al-Asad said that U.S. had no right to launch an aggression against other countries and people simply to both satisfy its own aims and carry out its terrorist schemes in this region allegedly for combatting terrorism.

He has also stressed that U.S. Administration and the Zionist enemy aim by such aggression at extending their hegemony in the region reaffirming that there is no choice left for us save to stand tall in the face of this hostile policy.

He mas made it clear that victory will be achieved by the peoples bolstering their just causes and their desire to safeguard its life, interests and aspirations.

He has stressed that U.S. makes every endeavor to make the international situation tense, threatening peace and security through both its aggressive military policy and its treacherous, barbarous aggression against the Libyan Arab people.

Cuban Envoy on 'Barbaric Crime'

LD282019 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1443 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 28 Apr, JANA — The Cuban ambassador to the Socialist Peoples Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah reaffirmed the stance of his country — government, people and party — with the people of the Great Jamahiriyah in its brave confrontation to the barbaric U.S. imperialist aggression.

In a statement today in Tripoli, he said that the Cuban people and government have strongly condemned and denounced the failed aggression on the friendly people of the Jamahiriyah and followed with pride the Libyan Arab people's heroic brave resistance to this failed barbaric aggression. He stressed that Cuba was prepared to use all its capabilities and participate effectively and decisively with the Libyan Arab people in this heroic confrontation with U.S. imperialists.

The Cuban ambassador said in his statement that the unjust U.S. aggression on the Jamahiriyah constituted the greatest barbaric crime in modern history when the terrorist Reagan's planes killed children, elderly and women and bombed residential areas whose inhabitants have done no wrong except declare their challenge [word indistinct] of imperialism and attempts to impose domination and dependence.

The Cuban ambassador strongly condemned the policy of state terrorism practiced by the government of the child killer Reagan. The U.S. official plans and statements which the American boast about and which are aimed at the leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi — the symbol of defiance and confrontation with imperialist and Zionism — are regarded as a serious precedent in international laws and norms. The ambassador pointed out that the U.S. raids were aimed at leader Al-Qadhdhafi's house in an attempt to harm him.

The Cuban ambassador said that these terrorist plans are considered the first in history not been previously recorded, except in the law of the jungle that is practiced by the U.S. Government.

The Cuban ambassador to the great Jamahiriyah pointed out at the end of his statement that all Cuban media apparatus follow continuously and with great interest the news of the heroic resistance and brave confrontation of the Libyan Arab people with U.S imperialism and Zionists who try to impose their expansionism and domination over the Arab region.

Greece's Papandreou on EEC Measures

[Text] Athens, Shaban 16, April 26, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — Mr Andreas Papandreou, the prime minister of Greece reaffirmed his country's open denounciation of the U.S.-NATO failed, barbarous raids on Libya.

Papandreou told the Greek Parliament that the latest American military operation against the friendly Libyan Arab people, using feeble excuses and evidence, is considered as a blow to international law and conducts.

He addressed the Parliament saying: How did the international community treat the Arab people with regards to the Palestinian issue and the indisputable Palestinians' rights?

He said that Greece has registered strong reservations and opposed the measures the EEC endorsed against Great Jamahiriyah because EEC states and the U.S. did not introduce a single evidence accusing Libya with the charge of what they called 'terrorism'. He called on the members of Parliament to necessarily differentiate between terrorism and national liberation struggle or defending freedom's causes and stepping out of the circle of imperialist domination.

Papandreou confirmed that his country struggles for peace and nuclear disarmament. He said that this was the core of the Greek Government's policy. He pointed out that the search for peace and struggle for it is an indisputable right and no man on earth can dispute that.

Bulgaria 'Repulses' Power Mania

LD281035 Tripoli JANA in English 1003 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Sofia, Shaban 18, April 28, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — Bulgaria has reiterated its supportive stand alongside the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership in encountering [word indistinct] barbaric aggression.

On receiving the members of the Libyan Arab delegation participating in the sessions of World Peace Council, the Bulgarian foreign minister has said that his country stresses the bilateral cooperation within the framework of friendship and cooperation, adding that Bulgaria reaffirms its support to Great Al-Jamahiriyah while repulsing valiantly the irresponsible power mania.

He, furthermore, has said that the party and government in Bulgaria have clearly announced the supportive stand backing the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership.

He, in the meantime, sent his best wishes and greetings of the Bulgarian president, Todor Zhivkov, to the leader of the revolution.

French Minister's Press Conference Summarizes Talks

LD262343 Paris Domestic Service in French
2030 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] The situation in the Mediterranean was at the center of the first talks between Minister of External Affairs Jean-Bernard Raimond and his Moroccan counterpart, Abdellatif Filali. Jean-Bernard Raimond spoke about his talks during a press conference this evening attended by our correspondent [name indistinct]:

Reiterating what was contained in the general policy statement made by the prime minister at the French National Assembly, Jean-Bernard Raimond stressed the importance of France's ties with the countries of the Maghreb. On the subject of bilateral problems and the immigration issue, which were widely discussed during these talks, the French minister said that an agreement on social problems will be signed in Paris 5-6 May. Regarding the introduction of visas, he confirmed that the practical arrangements have not yet been decided, but that the control system will be studied in the coming weeks.

The Mediterranean region after the U.S. raid on Libya must also have been fully discussed. Jean-Bernard Raimond said he had talked about this with [words indistinct] with Mr Filali and he is expected to do this shortly with his Algerian counterpart. As for peace and stability in the Mediterranean, the minister said the European states would have agreed on security measures to combat terrorism and they would work with Arab states. To this end, an information commission will visit all the Arab countries to explain the European position.

The final topic covered with the press was the Sahara conflict. The French Foreign minister said his country is committed to stability and peace in the Maghreb.

Al-Dhahab Rejects Supreme Council Chairman Post

GF281147 Al-Shariqah AL-KHALIJ in Arabic 28 Apr 86 p 1

[Text] Khartoum — In a statement to AL-KHALIJ an official of the Ummah Party said that Lieutenant General Siwar al-Dhahab has turned down the post of chairman of the Supreme Council of State. All Sudanese political forces are unanimous that Lieutenant General Siwar al-Dhahab should assume the post of chairman of the Supreme State Council.

In his letter of regret to Ummah Party leader Sadiq al-Mahdi, Siwar al-Dhahab indicated that he wants to prove to the world that there are many political leaders in Sudan who are capable of leading the country during the coming stage.

SPLA/SPLM Meets Al-Ummah, Other Delegations

EA252030 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Excerpts] A spokesman for the SPLM/SPLA has told Radio SPLA special correspondent that the SPLM/SPLA and the Ummah Party and the Alliance for National Salvation [ANS] delegation met last night in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa. Our special correspondent went on to quote the SPLM/SPLA spokesman that it was not ready to disclose the subject of discussion between the SPLM/SPLA and the Ummah Party and the ANS delegation.

The SPLM/SPLA spokesman told Radio SPLA that the discussions between the two delegations were being conducted in a friendly atmosphere. We in the SPLM/SPLA approach dialogue discussions with any political force with an open mind. However, all we aim at must be (?actions and views) within the context of the movement's principles and objectives which guide us, regardless of the attitudes of others towards them, the spokesman said.

In a related development the spokesman disclosed that the movement was ready to meet at any level with representatives of both the Ummah Party with which it is currently having talks, the Democratic Unionist Party [DUP] or, indeed, with any other party interested in having discussions with tthe SPLM/SPLA. The spokesman stressed in particular both the willingness and the readiness of the SPLM/SPLA to meet representatives of the DUP, which has expressed its desire to talk to the movement.

Speaking on the level at which such talks could be held, the spokesman said that views could be exchanged at any time between the SPLA representatives and those of any other party wishing to do so. He, however, added that if the leadership of the Ummah, the DUP, or any other political party desires to have contact with the SPLA, then the movement's leader, Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior, would be ready to meet the leaderships of those parties in person. The spokesman went on to say that bilateral discussions between the SPLA on one hand and the Ummah or the DUP on the other do not and will not contradict the Koka Dam Declaration signed last March between SPLM/SPLA and the National Alliance for National Salvation. The movement, the spokesman concluded, would strive to conduct any discussions within the context of the Koka Dam declaration, which, he said, the SPLM/SPLA respected and expected its signatories to proceed with implementation of its provisions.

SPLA/SPLM Press Statement Issued

EA282051 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in Arabic 1330 GMT 28 Apr 86

[SPLA-SPLM "press statement" on visit to Addis Ababa of Al-Ummah Party delegation; read by (first names indistinct) Benjamin]

[Text] An Ummah Party delegation arrived in the Ethiopian capital, Addis Ababa, led by Mr Idris al-Banna and consisting of Dr 'Ali Baghdadi; [words indistinct] Muhammad 'Ali, member of the National Alliance for the Salvation of the Homeland. This delegation held talks with the SPLM-SPLA led by major Arok Thuon Arok, member of the High Command of the SPLA, deputy chief of staff of the SPLA; Maj Alfred Lado Gore; Maj Deng (Aluor Kual); Captain Atem Yak Atem; Comrade Muhammad Harun Kafi; Dr Peter Adok [third name indistinct].

The SPLM is committed to its national responsibility inasmuch as it [words indistinct] meeting with the Al-Ummah Party delegation that came to meet the SPLM-SPLA with a verbal message from the leader of the Al-Ummah Party, Mr Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi. The message stressed the following principal points:

a. The Al-Ummah Party wishes to reach an agreement with the SPLM-SPLA on constitutional and administrative measures as well as security [passage indistinct]. The Al-Ummah Party wishes to know the possibility of participation by the SPLM-SPLA in the forthcoming government at the national and regional levels. [passage indistinct]

b. The Al-Ummah Party wishes to know and ascertain the possibility of a personal meeting between the leader of the Al-Ummah Party, Mr al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, and the leader of the SPLM-SPLA, Colonel Dr John Garang de Mabior.

The SPLM-SPLA hails the generous initiative of the Al-Ummah Party in contacting the SPLM-SPLA prior to the formation of the new government in Khartoum. The SPLM-SPLA is in principle highly committed to the decisions of the Koka Dam conference [of mid-March 1986], attended by representatives of the SPLM-SPLA and the National Alliance for the Salvation of the Homeland, which included members of the Al-Ummah Party

The SPLM-SPLA considers the implementation of the Koka Dam declaration [words indistinct] as well as the security measures as the only means of creating the correct atmosphere for the convening of the joint national constitutional conference next June. It is the responsibility of the Al-Ummah Party as it is the responsibility of any other political party that wishes to take over the reins of government in the country to implement the resolutions adopted at the Koka Dam conference [words indistinct] and national (?interests).

The SPLM-SPLA wishes to announce to the Sudanese people that it is not prepared to participate in nor will it recognize in advance a government that comes to power as a result of the partial elections held recently in the country by the Transitional Military Council. For this reason the SPLM-SPLA is highly enthusiastic about a meeting of the joint committee [to be held] on 7 June, in line with the Koka Dam meeting. [Press statement ends here; following three paragraphs are Radio SPLA's comment]

Meanwhile, Radio SPLA has learned on the basis of statements made by the official spokesman of the SPLM-SPLA that Col Dr John Garang de Mabior, commander in chief of the SPLA, chairman of the SPLM Executive Committee, does not object in principle to a meeting with the leader of the Al-Ummah Party, Mr al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, to exchange views on Sudan's problems.

However, the SPLM-SPLA spokesman refused to define the framework within which such a meeting might be held. It is understood that the SPLM-SPLA delegation has ended its talks with the Al-Ummah Party delegation.

Dear listeners, you have just heard a press statement issued by SPLM-SPLA on the visit of the Al-Ummah Party delegation.

Participation in Summit Announced by Morocco Envoy

JN271552 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1458 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Khartoum, 27 Apr (SUNA) — Sudan has agreed to participate in the emergency Arab summit scheduled to be held in the Moroccan city of Fes at the beginning of next week to discuss Arab issues following the U.S. aggression against the Libyan Jamahiriyah. This was announced by His Majesty King Hassan II's envoy Ahmed Besouda after his meeting with General 'Abd al-Rahman Siwar al-Dhahab, Transitional Military Council chairman-designate, this afternoon.

Bensouda, who conveyed a message to Gen Siwar al-Dhahab on Sudan's participation in the summit, said that any Arab head of state can add any topic he deems appropriate to the original agenda of Arab issues.

SPLA Spokesman on Statement Asking for Negotiations

EA251640 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 24 Apr 86

["Special" commentary by an official SPLA/SPLM spokesman on the statement delivered to Radio Omdurman by Major General Fabian Agang Long on 20 April 1986]

[Excerpts] In his statement, General Agang Long said that if Colonel Dr John Garang refuses to talk with the Transitional Military Council because of assumptions that the Transitional Military Council [TMC] is a part of the May regime, then he should be ready now to negotiate with the new government that will take over from the TMC after a week from now. If Dr John Garang again refuses to talk with the new government, then the only option will be a military solution. Gen Agang Long added that the rural areas in Upper Nile and Bahr al-Ghazal which are under SPLA control are facing lots of differences because of the failure of SPLA to establish any administration to govern them.

Maj Gen Fabian Agang Long and the entire Sudanese public must always bear in mind one thing and that is that the SPLA-SPLM leader, Col Dr John Garang de Mabior, has never refused to talk to the Khartoum government since the war broke out in 1983. Gen Agang Long should be asked to explain to the Sudanese people what sort of administration he wants. His statement is nothing but only an attempt to beg the sympathy of the coming government, so that he gets a post since he is going on a pension after a week. General Taj al-Din Abdullah, the deputy chairman of the TMC, is to become the commander in chief of the Sudanese Army on 24 April 1986. This shows the color of the forthcoming government and that does not affect the war in the Sudan. The TMC can also come in civilian clothes and the struggle will still continue.

In the so-called Army Forces Program, Radio Omdurman announced that the Sudanese Army in Pibor District and by the help of Chief (Ismail Konyi's) militia, managed to destroy a complete SPLA battalion and pursued them to Pachala where they also dispersed SPLA forces and brought under control in the whole area. This is a cheap propaganda because the SPLA does not have forces in Pibor area. The TMC is encouraging the Murle tribesmen through (Ismail Konyi) to fight the SPLA but this will not happen. SPLA is here to liberate the oppressed masses such as Murle. No Murle tribesman has gone to Pachala to fight against SPLA. The fact is that Pachala Town fell into the hands of SPLA forces on 19 April 1986 at 12:30 midday. If the TMC claims that it controls Pachala, then the SPLA/SPLM invite foreign journalists to visit Pachala so that they can witness the truth by themselves.

Radio Omdurman mentioned also that their forces in Bor had destroyed an SPLA camp, 35 miles away from Bor, without identifying the direction and that the SPLA forces after that defeat split into tribal groups and fighting broke out between Dinkas and Latukas. This is also another cheap propaganda, because the Sudanese Army personnel in Bor garrison are using their trenches as toilets. If they cannot come out of their trenches for that important purpose, then how can they come out to hunt for SPLA forces up to 35 miles [away]?

Message to Garang Said To Call for Cease-Fire

JN281504 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1438 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, 28 Apr (SUNA) — A responsible source in the Al-Ummah National Party has told SUNA that the message Al-Sadiq al-Mahdi, leader of the Al-Ummah Party, sent yesterday to John Garang calls for a cease-fire until a constitutional conference is convened, the movement participates in the conference, and until it reaches an understanding with the new government.

The source said there are reports that John Garang has responded, pointing out that the party delegation which was to hold a dialogue with the Sudanese People's Liberation Movement is continuing its contacts. It is expected to return within 2 days after completing the dialogue on the content of the message.

Reportage on Rebel Forces' Combat Operations

Bridge Destroyed, Town Isolated

LD252029 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Further details of the raid carried out by SPLA forces of Fire and (Tingli) Battalion on (Kiyala) 25 miles away from Torit have come in. Our correspondent in the area now says that (Kiyala) has been captured from government soldiers following the raid, the purpose of which was to enable SPLA engineering unit to blow up the vitally strategic (Hos) bridge between (Kiyala) and Torit. The correspondent said that (?half the) bridge itself has now been completely demolished and Torit effectively cut off as a result from most other towns in eastern Equatoria, including Kapweta. The destruction of (Hos) bridge was the work of the demolition team consisting of Corporal (Philip Otor), Private (Philip Alfonzo) and Private (Peter Obour). The correspondent said that the intense raid which led to the seizure of (Kiyala) by SPLA troops forced all the surviving government soldiers to flee to Torit.

'Unspecified' Number of Enemy Killed

EA252020 (Clandestine) Radio of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army in English 1300 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Radio SPLA correspondent in the northwestern part of Upper Nile administrative area said that two APC's were destroyed recently by land mines set in place by engineering units of SPLA's Hadid [Steel] Battalion. According to the correspondent, an unspecified number of enemy soldiers, including a lieutenant and a sergeant, were killed when an APC hit a land mine near the army garrison at (Pariyang) and another detonated a similar mine between (Pariyang) and (Lake Jau).

[Text] President Habib Bourguiba held a working session with Mohamed Mzali, in the palace of the Republic in Cathage, this morning. The session was attended by Mansour Skhiri, the minister director of the Presidential Office and minister of civil service and administrative reform.

After the session, Mohamed Mzali made the following statement.

"His excellency the president of the Republic has decided on a partial government reshuffle by appointing Zine Labidine Ben Ali minister of interior, Rachid Sfar as minister of finance and economy, Salah Ben Mbarka as minister of energy and mines, and Slaheddine Ben Mbarek as minister of industry and trade.

With regard to the inherent functions of the Ministry of Finance and Economy, it covers the current inherent functions of the Ministry of Finance in addition to what concerns the policy of prices and their control.

KUNA Comments on Reshuffle

LD282125 Kuwait KUNA in English 1743 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Tunis, April 28 (KUNA) — Tunisian Premier Mohamed Mzali was monday stripped of his portfolio as interior minister in a minor ministerial reshuffle ordered by President Habib Bourguiba.

The Interior Ministry portfolio went to Minister of National Security Zine Labidine Ben Ali, who is a former army general.

Informed government sources told KUNA intentions by Bourguiba to deal in a tougher manner with the opposition has prompted this reshuffle.

Mzali has advocated dialogue with the opposition and opposed the detention of Socialist Democratic leader Ahmed al-Mestiri earlier this month.

Consolidation of Universities Announced

LD281407 Tunis Domestic Service in Arabic 1200 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Minister of Higher Education and Scientific Research Abdelaziz Ben Dhia has made the following statement:

In order to underscore the directives of his excellency the president of the Republic with regard to returning the university to its basic function, that is, teaching; as a safeguard to the freedom of lectures, and of the right of every citizen to learning in an atmosphere of reassurance; and as an effort to eliminate the chaos that is caused by some extremist groups in some university establishments, his excellency has decided the following:

First, the establishment of three universities which are: the University of Tunis, the University of the Center, and the University of the South. The first one includes all the faculties, and the Institutes of Higher Education of Tunis, Bizerte, and Nabeul.

The second one, the University of the Center, includes the university establishments situated in Monastir, Sousse, and Kairouan. The University of the South will include the Institutes of Higher Education of Sfax, Gabes, and Gafsa.

Secondly, the appointment of three rectors at the head of these universities. His excellency the president decided to appoint Amor Chedli at the head of the University of Tunis.

Thirdly, encompassing all the establishments of higher education into the university, even those that do not now come under the control of the Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, as an emphasis to the principle of comprehensiveness and to the provisions of coordination from the pedagogical point of view.

Fourth, the appointment of those in charge of the establishments of higher education in the institutes and faculties, to be directly made by the supervising authority.

Fifth, to strengthen the security aspects in order to protect the continuity of lectures in some establishments of higher education.

Paris Paper Comments on Mzali's Visit to France

PM281410 Paris LE FIGARO in French 23 Apr 86 p 4

[Slah Maaoui dispatch: "Chirac: Full Support for Tunisia"]

[Text] Tunis — Tunisian Prime Minister Mohamed Mzali's lightning visit to Paris last Friday and his talks with his French counterpart Jacques Chirac are regarded in the Tunisian capital as "a very important political event" for the future of Franco-Tunisian relations.

At all events Mr Mzali's visit had two aims: to establish initial contact with the leader of the new majority in French and to obtain assurances of France's support for Tunisia in face of the new Libyan threats. Official Tunisian circles consider that the two objectives were achieved "in a very noticeable way."

In addition to the particularly warm welcome given to the Tunisian prime minister at the Hotel Matignon, Tunis stresses Mr Chirac's public statements, describing Tunisia as a "fraternal country" to France and clearly illustrating the new French Government's desire to strengthen relations with Tunis and establish relations of confidence with the Tunisian leaders.

We also learned from a reliable Tunisian source that it is also significant that Mr Chirac assured the Tunisiah prime minister during their meeting that France stands resolutely "beside Tunisia and President Bourguiba and Mr Mzali in person." "I believe you are the best possible successor to President Bourguiba," Mr Chirac apparently told his guest. "Even the Americans Shultz and Vernon Walters share my conviction."

During the same meeting, Mr Mzali explained to Mr Chirac the new situation created in the Mediterranean following the American raids on Tripoli and informed him of the threats clearly made by the Libyan regime against Tunisia which is accused of having allowed U.S. aircraft to cross its air space for this purpose. In this connection, Mr Chirac assured his interlocutor of France's full support and informed him that he had already summoned the Libyan ambassador to Paris twice to warn him against any action against Tunisia.

We believe that to put into practice this firm intention by the New French majority to establish "preferential and exemplary relations" with Tunisia, Mr Chirac pledged to defend Tunisian positions toward the Common Market.

In the military sphere, according to a reliable source, France has already sent a ship and a plane equipped with radar to the eastern Mediterranean to monitor Libyan movements.

UGANDA

PANA: Uganda Freedom Army Declared Dissolved

EA282239 Dakar PANA in English 1136 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Kampala, 28 April (UNA/PANA) — The Uganda Freedom Army (UFA), the military wing of the Uganda Freedom Movement (UFM), has been dissolved.

According to THE STAR newspaper's Saturday edition, the minister of energy, Mr Andrew Kayiira, who had been the chairman of the UFA high command, announced the decision when he addressed soldiers of the defunct UFA at their barracks at Mubende 95 kms west of Kampala. Mr Kayiira's UFA, like President Museveni's National Resistance Army (NRA), started a guerrilla war against deposed President Obote's regime in 1981.

The paper quoted the minister as telling the soldiers that it would be "meaningless and quite stupid for anyone who actively participated in the struggle against dictators in Uganda to continue having different armies after the dictators have gone". He continued "I do not want anybody to continue saying, he is a soldier of UFA. You all now belong to the NRA. There can be only one commander-in-chief and that is now our president".

Mr Kayiira, however, said that all soldiers in the NRA must consider themselves still in the bush until the NRA high command settles all issues leading to the formation of a regular army, and makes plans for those who wish to leave the forces. The UFA is the first guerrilla group that entered an alliance with the defunct military council, to dissolve its army. The others, the Federal Democratic Army (FDA) and the Uganda National Rescue Forces (UNRF) have not made their positions clear yet, on the issue of dissolutions.

Museveni Addresses Kampala Victory Celebration Rally

EA281218 Kampala Domestic Service in English 1245 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Speech by Yoweri Museveni at Kampala victory celebration rally in City Square, Kampala — live]

[Excerpts] Your lordships the bishops, members of council, ministers and citizens and dwellers of Kampala: I am very grateful [to you] for inviting me to come here and share with you your celebrations for the liberation of the country. When I got the invitation to come and talk to you, I was on a tour of Karamoja, Teso, Bugiso, and other districts in the east, because there are still a few problems there. But when I understood that the people of Kampala wanted me to take part in their celebrations, I had to jump some of the programs there and come here to talk to you [applause]. This was because I know the people of Kampala have suffered probably more than anybody else. This is because this city has been the very seat of all the bad governments of Uganda and while the drunkard may disturb the people in the bar where he is drinking, I think his wife gets more disturbance because she stays with him in the house (?until) [words indistinct] all these useless regimes of the past there is no doubt that the people of Kampala have suffered more, probably more than people in other parts of the country. Therefore you are right to celebrate your victory of the National Resistance Army [NRA] in this big way. I don't know how to estimate this crowd, whether it is 100,000 or 300,000, I cannot say, but it is definitely a very big crowd [applause] and that shows the emotions and I can see other people down there, I don't know whether they are part of this crowd or they have got their own business [laughter]. This shows you the pent up emotions of the people for so many years. I am very glad to be with you here to experience this occasion.

But you should know that you have not been alone in suffering. For instance, Karamoja, where I was 2 days ago, people have suffered a lot. The people of Karamoja have never known the government of Uganda. They just hear of governments and the people of Uganda on the other part, they have got an idea that the Karamoja people are trouble-makers. (?actually that) is not true. If you examine their case carefully, you find that it is the governments of Uganda which have been making trouble for the Karamojong people. Until the Karamojong people gave up the governments of Uganda, they forgot all about them and they started looking after themselves. Now, when they started being (?harsh), then everybody started crying the Karamojong are causing trouble.

Actually it is the governments of Uganda which are still causing to (?trouble] the Karamojong. Example: In the sixties the Turkana people from Kenya managed to get some guns from Ethiopia, because these guns were being sold liberally in the market. The Turkana people managed to get some guns and would come and use these guns to raid the cattle of the Karamojong. Now, the Karamojong people reported all this to the government of those days. The government did nothing. The people of Karamoja were victims of the Turkana for so many years, for almost a decade, since 1960, for about a decade and half up to about 1976 or 1975. Then the Karamojong people gave up about expecting help from the government of Uganda and they started buying guns themselves. Fortunatley for them, in 1979 the regime of Idi Amin collapsed and it abandoned so many guns in the barracks of Moroto. So they get hold of the guns, armed themselves even better, and because of arming themselves, they were able to strike a deal with the Turkana this time, because the Turkana found it unprofitable to keep on attacking the Karamojong, so they struck a deal and they said why should we raid one another. After all we are equally armed now. Why don't we look for another target of raiding? And what was the other target? It was the Acholi, Lango, Teso and so on.

So, okay, we can say the Karamojong are raiding cattle, the Turkana are raiding cattle and they are disturbing that area, but in reality it is because of absence of government. There is no government. There has never been a government in Karamoja. So people have to provide their own means of looking after their own (?security). So, I have been to Karamoja. I talked to them. I talked to the people. I talked to the elders and I told them that this time there is a government and that there is no need for them to raid and that the government will look after their interests as well as the interest of all Ugandans in that area and they have listened and those who decide not to listen, we will punish them as usual. They came to raid Acholi. We punished them severely. They came to raid Lango. We punished them severely and they have been [word indistinct] (?off). They have promised me that they will settle down and start being law-abiding citizens providing that we will give them the security they need from all the other disturbers of the peace.

So, right now we have finished the actual fighting. We have defeated thoroughly all the remnants [applause] of the bad governments of the past because, mark you, this regime which is seated here was after the remnants of the bad governments of the past, because when you talk of Okello, what are you talking about? You are talking about KAR, the King's African Rifles of the British, because Okello and Amin were trained by the British. You are talking about the KAR, the Kings African Rifles of the British, you are talking about Obote, you are talking about Idi Amin, so all the total sum of the badness of all those governments is summarized in Okello [applause]. So, I can actually say that for the first time the people of Uganda have got their own government, because it is now our own government [applause]. It has no — it is not a shared government: it is shared by the political groups within Uganda, but it does not owe its origin to any other force other than the internal Ugandan forces. We were not brought here by the Tanzanians. We were not brought by the British. We were not brought by anybody. We were brought by ourselves, by our own efforts and our own wisdom. [applause] And that is why you find there is peace, because it is ourselves who decide (?who disturbs us) [words indistinct]. These fellows who are disturbing the peace here, we are not acting on their own behalf. You are asking on behalf of [words indistinct] which we do not know. We shall not act against our own [word indistinct] it is almost? We are the loosers and, therefore, we shall not disturb the peace. It is almost automatic. Therefore, now that we have grabbed power, now that we have grabbed power from the usurpers — they were usurpers who had grabbed power here, who were not entitled to be in power here, because they were not representing the interest of the population. I am not here talking about elections. You don't have to be elected to know that killing your mother is a bad thing. Whether you are elected or not, that is just common sense. So it means those fellows who were acting so violently against the interests of the people were not in many ways from the people.

So, when you are dealing with a nation, that, in our view, the correct side, get the very good people first and remain with the a very large of supply of not so good people. But, just again look again a second round, maybe there are people who are bad because they were misled by others. Maybe there are people who were bad at one time and they have given up being bad.

Obote failed to do that. That is why he made so many mistakes. He had this idea of [kwa rire], you know that UPC [Uganda People's Congress] everywhere and everybody. Everybody had to be UPC. If he was not a UPC, he was not a good person. And he persecuted people. He persecuted people in the civil service. He persecuted people in the army. And as a result of that mismanagement Obote is now where he is, having so many mistakes. So ourselves, we should be very, very, very careful; we should be clear-headed, get the best out of everybody and throw away only those who cannot be [word indistinct] by any means. And there are ways to carry out this separation.

Now that we have cleared the armed people, we are now going to start tackling the insecurity, because the insecurity is not the same thing as fighting. We have fought, we have defeated the enemy, but there are still other bad elements like the car thieves, those must be cleared out. The other day, we frightened them a big when we launched an operation here in Kampala. They were not wiped out, but they were somehow inconvenienced. We are now dealing with cattle rustlers and that process will go on until we clean the whole country. I am sure we shall clean it, because at least we have cleaned some practices at the top. (Museka) and his wife, the chairman of traders, is worried about the bad people, but an accident which kills somebody immediately is the accident which crushes the head. If you get a head injury, your chances of survival are very limited, but if you get injuries on the toe or in the foot or in any other region other than the head, your chances of survival are not so bad. Even when you are killing a snake, you start with the head. If you start with the tail, the snake will go and leave you. So, the moment we grabbed the Headquarters of the state, the moment we have liberated the Presidency — if the Presidency is liberated [applause], if there are thieves, if there are no murders in the Presidency, in the end all the murders in Uganda are going to be brought to book, because then there is nobody who is protecting these people. For instance, some people killed the Reverend Wilson, whom you have all heard of. They killed him here at Namirembe. They drove his car up to (Mkomero) which is 60 miles from here and they thought they were safe but within about 2 weeks they were arrested. The car was recovered, the fellows involved were arrested. I don't know how far the case has gone but definitely I think it is progressing satisfactorily somewhere, although I am not (?familiar with) the details. This was because the murderers, the criminals had no protection from anybody in authority. As long as the criminals manage to round up all the bad people in this country, maybe not immediately, but every time we shall be making them weaker and weaker and weaker and that is satisfactory as far as I am concerned.

While our own economy is rich, while we have got a lot of food and you can have a lot of food if you want; but because all the past governments were not properly organized they made us overdependent upon other peoples' efforts. And because of that overdependence, whenever there is a problem in other countries that problem is [word indistinct] reflected in our own economy. For instance take the question of petroleum. Somebody has been talking of petroleum, that petroleum prices are high: Yes they are high and petroleum is necessary. It is true, but we are overusing petroleum because of the bad plans of the previous governments. We could use less petroleum and more of the things we have.

Therefore, now that we are where we are, I have already told the people in the government, the minister of planning and the minister of finance, to tackle the question of the economy. They have been active for about — since we came to the government — but since some of these planning ministries and all this they are already also like old cars, you know [sentence as received]. But our plan is to work out a 4-year recovery program for the economy.

Now that 4-year recovery program will involve the following: First of all we shall fight to make the essential consumer goods here. You know the soap, we would like to make it here because we have got most of the things we need to make soap. The sugar of course we can make, there is no doubt, but you know cane takes 18 months to grow. So even if we rehabilitate the factory, which I think we could do, it would still take 18 months to grow fresh cane in (?cultures) and they mature to get crushed into making sugar. But definitely we are going to start on that program also of ensuring that we make the sugar here.

The question of the salt at Katwe, ha that is a wonderful story, if I would have had time to tell you. So, we do not have salt — we know the salt is there. Uganda has got salt, but there is no salt. It's a wonderful contradiction: Uganda has got salt but there is no salt. I have not actually investigated the whole thing myself of exactly what happened, how it came about that wrong pipes were imported from wherever they were imported, but that one we are going to sort it out also so as we have the salt, we have the sugar, we have got the soap. Other things will take some time like the hoes. We have got some hoe factories but they are not enough. They do not make enough hoes, so that we shall continue importing, although also [word indistinct] to make hoes here ourselves.

But before we do all that, or as they are doing all that, the biggest problem is to tackle with the question of the currency, because the currency of Uganda has become a problem. Now the situation has changed completely. I am told now the kilo of sugar is 2,500 [shillings]. I am told now the minimum wage I think is 8,000 [shillings]. So, somebody works for a month and in payment he gets three kilos of sugar. Now that is a very serious state of affairs. So, we talk about many other things and we also talk about the currency. This currency must be restabilized so that money means money: If I have got 10 shillings it means 10 shillings; if I have got 100 shillings it means 100 shillings. Without solving the question of the currency I think a lot of things will continue to go wrong.

And what is wrong with the currency? The problem with the currency is first of all the shortage of the essential commodities. If essential commodities are in shortage, then people try to pay very high prices for the few things which are available. But that is part of the problem, because if the commodities were high, if the prices were high because they are in shortage, but people did not have a lot of paper money in their pockets, then they would not afford the high prices and then that would force the prices to remain down, because if you want to sell us a bar of soap at 2,000 shillings and we can't afford it, then you will stay with your soap. And if you stay with your soap for long enough, then you will have to bring back the price to a lower mark. But if there is a lot of currency in the hands of people, if they say 2,000, people are willing to pay, if they say 3,000, they are willing to pay. If they say 4,000, they are willing to pay — now that continues, continues indefinitely. So, the second problem of the currency is a lot of currency in peoples' pockets. This is what these wonderful economists call excessive liquidity. There is too much currency in the hands of the public and some other reasons, which I don't want to give — this is not an economic lecture — but we shall have to tackle all that. And therefore we are debating. We are having very serious debates aomong ourselves, how to tackle this. We have got some ideas, I think. But to summarize it all, as far as I can see Uganda is a bit fortunate, because here we have got only one problem: We have got the problem of disorganization. We are disorganized.

I used to be in those villages of Luwero — (Banyanda), (Kateka) — and I would turn on my small radio and hear myself Milton Obote talking about — that UPC was the party of ideas. [laughter] Now, when you look at the ideas of Milton Obote... they have got us where they have got us. Those ideas did not include the idea about controlling security, so I dont know what ideas they were. They could not control even soldiers — soldiers who are recruited, trained, and paid by the government. That government of ideas could not control them. Now, these vehicles (?they) [words indistinct] really wonderful (?sort of) ideas. But I used to hear him talking about the economy, how it is going to recover, the floating of the shilling, the window policy: window one, window two, but it all turned out to be wrong and some of us know it to be wrong [passage indistinct] of the few dollars we have on importing furniture for his excellency from anywhere other than Kawempe.

So, Mercedes Benz, well, well, well, I am travelling in cross country and I think I can knock down a few [word indistinct] if it comes to (?this) [word indistinct]. So I can see nothing wrong. Why don't we keep to these simple vehicles? Why do we have to import these very expensive vehicles which in any case have no value? So I have cracked down on the importation of these luxury items. Those are not coming. I have cracked down on them. I have cracked down on, well, on other wonderful things like the [word indistinct] and so on. So I have told the bank, I have told these gentlemen here, the ministers, minister of finance, minister of commerce, the Bank of Uganda: First and foremost the few items which are really essential — soap, because we are not making it now; if we are making it we would not import it; salt, sugar, agricultural inputs, which means hoes and some other items, you know, axes and so on; drugs, medical drugs for human beings, animal drugs for livestock and so on and a few other items like that and the operations of the (?coffee) marketing board abroad and the Uganda Airlines. Incidentally, we have now paid to recover our planes. Our planes had been impounded for non-payment in London. So, we have now paid and the planes are going to come back. Because of that miserly policy. I am a miser — I have no apologies to make. As far as public revenue is concerned I am a big miser and I am not going to apologize to anybody.

Now, because of that careful policy we have been able to save some little money. We are paying the debts of the IMF. Every month we pay on the average of $12 million. Every month we are paying the debts by our beloved friend Milton Obote. So we also pay that. They [IMF] are not in arrears as far as payments are concerned. And we are not borrowing any money. We are not going to borrow. [applause]. We are only going to borrow something which can help us to make more money.

So as far as the economy is concerned, we are talking about prices. We are talking about very high prices. I know about them and we have already instructed the concerned ministries, the Ministry of Economic Affairs, the Ministry of Finance, the Bank of Uganda. They have got a team, they are working out — they are burdened and I am not giving them peace — to work out the 4-year recovery program which will put the economy back on some sound footing from which we could start a fresh beginning. And my own estimation is that it is not impossible, mainly because we happen to have the resources. If we do not have the resources it would be much more difficult, but we have the resources. Of course, we have got the rain, we have got the good soil, we have got fisheries, we have got livestock, we have got even minerals, although minerals are not so [word indistinct]; minerals are for [changes thought] we shall preserve them as much as possible. We don't even mind some of the minerals staying in the ground for a long time, because if we dig them out in a hurry then we shall sell off the minerals and remain with only holes for ourselves. And in fact Kilembe mine is almost a hole now. They have mined from Kilembe mines 17 million tons of ore in the past 30 years, and according to estimates only 7 million tons are remaining underground, and we cannot point to anything we have done with Kilembe. So, that is as far as the economy is concerned.

We shall fight for rehabilitation of the currency, to restore its value. Announcements are going to be made. In fact, proposals have been made in the few months we have been in the government. Proposals have been made. We have studied them and we returned them to the planners. We said no, no, no; go and plan again. It seems it is not proper yet. Go back and plan. Don't think we are just sitting idle. We are planning and examining the matters very, very carefully. In fact, I can tell you that we have returned those plans a number of times. I don't want to reveal what is happening behind those wonderful closed doors of your government.

Now, coming to rehabilitation of Luwero and Arua and some parts of Lango and Teso — because those areas were also severely disrupted — we have already worked out a plan for Luwero and Arua and these other areas, and it will cost us approximately $160 million and we have made appeals to some of our external friends to assist. But for us, we never wait for friends; we always try to do our best.

But there is also a fund which the government has created. The prime minister launched it the other day. I would appeal to all of you to contribute to this fund, because this fund will help. For instance, as far as food is concerned for rehabilitation, we do not have to import the food from outside, but we need local currency to buy the food from the farmers so that it can be purchased by the Ministry of Rehabilitation, so that it can be distributed to the affected people.

Now the Government of Uganda has got a total deficit of 90,000 million Uganda shillings. That is the deficit of the Uganda Government which has accumulated over the years.

Now, coming to the — what steps have been taken [words indistinct] about cleaning the government. These people who have been frustrating this commission. We know they are there. They even frustrate me, myself. Forget about [word indistinct]. The other day I was in Mbarara and somebody asked me about the Banyarwanda people in Mbara. I answered the question. I took a long time to explain the issues involved and I ended by saying that the only thing we can do was to call a meeting between the refugees themselves. The UNHCR and the Government of Rwanda and we discuss what to do. That is what I told the people there. Now, what did the man who was there report in the paper? He said all the Banyarwanda are now going to get citizenship. I think you saw it in the papers. Now, I thought of going to get this fellow and strangling him myself with my own hands, but then I knew that I was constrained by the law, otherwise I would have boxed his ears.

So you can see — these fellows — the other day the Americans attacked Libya and with the Libyans we are not very hostile to one another. In 1979 we fought Al-Qadhdhafi, Al-Qadhdhafi brought his people here to support Idi Amin. I fought them myself. I fought the Libyans. Then (?afterwards) you know when to fight, when you fight and somebody steps on your toe and you box him and he boxes you and then you may become friends. So, we are now friends with the Libyans. We have no quarrel with the Libyans. They have got a quarrel with the Americans, not with us. So, we did not like the Americans attacking Libya, going with planes to attack them in their own country. Our view is that if the Libyans are training terrorists, arrest the terrorists where they are sent and find them and punish them. But if you are going to — for instance if a certain country sends spies to some places, to Uganda for instance; suppose a certain country sends spies to Uganda, what should we do with the spies? We arrest the spies but we can not go and attack that country and say it has sent spies to Uganda and it must stop sending the spies. If it does, we are going to attack it. So I told the American ambassador, and I told him that I was not happy with America attacking Libya. I even told him that they are the ones who are encouraging terrorism. Because if you attack a small man like Libya, you attack him. You, a big man, you attack a small one. Now what will you do? He cannot attack you. You know in the villages when a strong man on a beer party beats a small one, you know what the small one says? Eh? He says, now this man, you better be careful, you will see. Now, that is what weak people do. A weak man, if he is attacked by, if he is beaten by a strong man, his solution is kuroga [Swahili for getting an evil spell cast] He goes to a witchdoctor, so that since I cannot beat you directly, I will use some other method of beating you.

So, now when America attacks Libya — Big America, with aircraft carriers and what have you, attacks Libya, Libya cannot attack America. They have no aircraft carriers to go to America. So, what they do? [laughs] They plant a bomb alas. So, that is the only way they have. So, a big man attacking a small man is actually inciting terrorism. The solution, I told the American friend who came to see me was that first of all you solve the question of the Palestinans, because you know all those problems in the Middle East are from the Palestinians. There are people called Palestinians. They have no home. They were thrown out of their land by the bigger people and they are all over the place. They are refugees, so they go on planting bombs. So I told the American, I said: First solve the Middle East problem. Secondly, do not, if you can, use force against small people.

Now, that is what I told the man, the American official. What did they say on Uganda TV? I am talking about my friend, (Mutekanga) - somebody in Uganda TV and Uganda radio, I do not know for whom he is working. I actually want to lay my hands on that gentleman. He went and said Museveni was very happy. He thanked the American official very much. The impression given was that I was actually very happy that the Americans had attacked Libya, which was opposite of what I had said. So, Mr (Mutekanga) you are not alone in your problem. [laughs] I am also frustrated, but I must go carefully.

So, Mr (Mutekanga) — I am aware of this fellow. I am aware of FOBA [Force Obote Back Again]. You know one day the FOBA people, they said: We are now going to take over the government on the 15th of — there was some (?month) [word indistinct]. Then I sat in my house and said: How will FOBA take over government: I could not think of ways for FOBA. FOBA have been defeated thoroughly. When they are in the government, when they have got the whole army on their side, how would they take over government? So, I sat down and I told the commander that if these FOBAs — they want to provoke us, — they are making a mistake. They want to provoke us into arresting people for nothing, because if you are not careful, they can do that, they just spread the word that trouble will again start in few days — you will see. Then you will start panicking, arresting this one, arresting this one: this is FOBA, this is FOBA — that is exactly what they want. So, I told the commander and said: Do not worry about FOBA. Just stay in the barracks and shoot them if they come. What is the problem? If they come, shoot them. There is no problem: You just keep your guns ready. Keep some people on standby. While others are going for disco, others stay on duty and when FOBA come, you just shoot them — finished. What is the problem? But do not get excited, FOBA, FOBA, FOBA? No, no, no: Keep your cool. Get thorough intelligence. Know exactly FOBA, who is he. FOBA is recruiting people. FOBA recruiting? Whom did they recruit? [passage in vernacular]. [laughs] That is bad government, that is bad government. Do not be excited [sentence in vernacular]. Go slowly, follow them. After all, we have got the government now in our hands. You know the government has got a lot of means. Follow them, follow FOBA, follow them, follow. I will give you [words indistinct]. They have recruited so-and-so here and you get hold of the man. So, even for these people, the bad fellow, somebody who goes on the radio and says Museveni was very happy [words indistinct]. Do not be excited about them. Go slowly. In fact, I've got that man's name. I said: Who is that fellow? They told me his name. And I will follow up the root. Why is he editing my speeches? Imagine, a news reader to edit my speeches. So what goes on the radio is his speech, not my speech. But do not get excited about this type of people.

Now, coming to the businessmen, my hosts, the businessmen. I think I would like to agree with the Ministry of Commerce. Sure there is a shortage of goods in the country, but we also see that the businessmen make too much profit. You make too much profit, because if somebody is making a profit of 125 percent — now, is that really a good profit? Why cannot you make profit of 25 percent and stop there? If you (?reduce) your costs even five percent is a profit. Even 10 percent is a profit. But to make a profit of 125 percent on the things you are selling is actually cheating. It is unscrupulous. Therefore be careful.

For the time being we are not attacking you because we want to bring our things first. We want to bring our own sugar first, our own salt first and get it here. When it is here and we give it to you to sell as a licensed seller — wholesale or retail and you overcharge. But you will know what it means. You will know what it means to oppose the NRM, eh? You know sometime there was one man, he told me: If you want a good wife, you should get somebody who has already been married before, because that one knows the problem and if you get that one, she will not give you a lot of fujo [trouble] because she has already suffered somehow. But the one who is a bit new does not know the problem. So if you want to know the badness of the NRM, the ugly face of the NRM, you should ask my friends Okello and Obote. So, if we bring commodities here ourselves, we are not now striking at businessmen, because we have not brought many things here ourselves. These fellows are getting them by their own methods and we do not yet have a moral case. Well, they have got a case with God not with us for the time being. I think they will have to answer for some of their problems before God so that he judges them, because he is almighty, he is watching them. They should know that he is watching them. But the NRM is still out. The businessmen who are overcharging are now going to face a problem with God, because he sees that they are overcharging. He sees that this one is making a profit of 125 percent, another one is making a profit of 200 percent, but for the NRM, we are still keeping out. We shall wait, bring our own things and then give them to them to sell and they overcharge — now that is when they will see us. And actually I am going to get the National Resistance Council to pass special legislation against economic crime, because things like smuggling, like embezzlement of public funds must be handled in a specific way. Some of the punishments according to the old law are very weak. These fellows who are sabotaging the economy, the embezzlers, were being treated with kid gloves. We cannot treat somebody who is destroying the economy with kid gloves, because he is actually an enemy of the whole country. So, anyway, for business of overcharging, you just give us few weeks. Let the minister of commerce get the goods here, let him get the soap, let him get the hoes, let him get some of these items here and we shall work out a system of distribution either directly by the government agencies or through licensed sellers and then if there is a shortage [words in vernacular], then we will face those who overcharge. So, wait a little while.

Finally, about the politics: You know our politicis — the politics of the NRM is the politics of unity. It is politics of unity, because unity is strength. I have not had time to talk with the people of Kampala, although of course I have talked on other forums about this issue. We are totally opposed to any politics of dividing the people. [sentence indistinct]

I have said very many times I am very glad that the religious leaders today of the Christian church have (?returned) to say common prayers on public occasions. This is [words indistinct] you should have for them, because that is a very good spirit, because if it is a Christian Church [words indistinct]. I am not a bad Christian, you know, and I happen to know at least about [words indistinct]. I think the most fundamental point in the Christian belief is the question of resurrection — because the Christians believe in resurrection. They believe that Jesus Christ died and he rose from the dead and we went to heaven and in so doing he gave us the hope of life after here. This is one of their biggest differences with some other beliefs.

Now, people who are united by such a fundamental belief, why shouldn't they act together? Why whould they believe in [words indistinct]. Also the Catholic — the Christian Church and the Muslim Church have got that big thing in common. And what is it? They believe in one God. One God, all of them. The Christian Church believes in one God and the Muslim Church, the Muslim religion, believes in one God, in one deity, because you should know there are other beliefs which do not believe in one God. So, it is very good that we emphasize the point of unity and we reemphasize as much as possible the point of (?unity).

Now, the strongest point of the NRM — why are we strong — especially the army. When we [word indistinct] that our army is very strong and we are strong, because we have got correct politics. We never care about your religion; we never care about your tribe; we never care whether you are short or tall; we only care whether you are a useful man or a useless man. That is our interest. If you are useful, we use you. If you are useless, we discard you. And the question of where you come from cannot atone for the weaknesses as a person. It cannot compensate for your uselessness. [words indistinct] It does not matter whether you come from the same village with Museveni who happens to be president at that particular time. I am sure there are quite a number of people from my tribe, from my village, who may be in prison in Luzira for stealing. If I was to follow the ideology of my villagism, those thieves in Luzira would be here with me.

You remember your friend Idi Amin Dada — field marshal, doctor, GC, MC. You remember him. He was here and he had medals all over the place and he used to tell us that he feared nobody but God. Now, it so happens that Idi Amin was a primitive sectarian, a primitive tribalist, a primitive believer is religious sectarianism. And he tried to put his ideology in the army, in the Uganda army of those days. Instead of promoting somebody according to merit, people were promoted according to where they came from — because you are a Muslim, because they does [as heard] nicely for Idi Amin. Now when the time of test came, when the time of testing whether Idi Amin's ideas were correct or wrong, what did you find? You found that Idi Amin's ideas were very wrong, because his army was dispersed completely by another army which was coming from a neighboring country assisted by other fellows who opposed Amin themselves. That proves that the ideas of sectarianism are wrong, that they will bring wrong results.

Now that the NRM has come in, as I have told you, we believe in the merits of people. We do not believe in sectarian politics. We believe that Ugandans should be united. We believe that if there is going to be a difference, it should be a difference between the bad people and the good people, between the thieves and the straight forward people, between the corrupt and the uncorrupt people. That should be the only difference and this idea has worked with the NRM.

I have had occasion to tell you about the experience of our army. Our army has got very good experience. The person captured Bulopa — we decided to attack Kampala on — when we decided to attack Kampala I held a meeting in Masaka, i think it was 3 days, I think it was on the 14th when I held the meeting in Masaka, I think I ordered the army to attack Kampala. The meeting was attended by a few commanders — a few — those who were going to take part in the operation, plus myself, and afterwards we gave the order for the army to attack Kampala. Now, the man who captured Bulopa was a boy from West Nile, from Pakwach, a commander by the name of Okecho. He is the one who captured Bulopa. While Basilio [Okello] was here preaching tribalism, the man who was capturing Bulopa was Okecho. Why? Because Okecho — we had seen that Okecho was a good commander.

Two: He was a good man, not corrupt, straightforward. That was Okecho. The man who captured Pakwach Bridge was another commander from Pakwach by the name of Kerim, again somebody from the North. The commander who has dispersed these cattle raiders in the East where we were given a hard time to organize ourselves was another commander by the name of (?Opeto). This (?Opeto) is a boy from Acholi. After we captured him in Masaka, we captured those [words indistinct] we captured, we looked at them, we looked at them, we looked at them and we discovered an (?Opeto) there. And this (?Opeto), a good boy according to our system, [passage indistinct]. Just look at you, these people, eh ? What? 5,000, 6,000 people — they all cannot be bad. We looked at them and we discovered an (?Opetu) and this (?Opetu) man, we made him the (?second in command) of 25 battalion. And he has done a very good job in the East to date (?coping with) cattle raiders.

I have just got some reports from east Acholi, at a place called Adilang. One of our soldiers again points to the same idea of bad people and good people. One of our soldiers killed a mwananchi [citizen] in the village of Adilang.

Of course, as usual, he was arrested promptly, on the spot and then, of course, it was reported to me. At that time I was in Arua. They reported to me that a fellow by this name has killed a Mwananchi and has been arrested. What do we do with him? I said the man must be tried there, there, there, on the spot.

So, when our (?fellows) were still investigating, a certain lady from the local area gave a speech and told them that she was very surprised to see that in Africa it is possible to have a government by law, she said — because these people had forgotten about it completely — to see that the government bothers to come to investigate at Adilang and investigate the killing of a mere village woman. That's how the woman was saying, that a mere village woman, we didn't know that this thing was possible. And in fact, you know, some of our local people, they seem to think that only in the colonial times, that's when it was possible to have justice, because of those useless fellows whom the colonialists themselves left in power. The colonialists left these useless fellows in power, these Obotes, the Okellos, the Amins and then, because of their mismanagement of national affairs [words indistinct] that only the colonial administration which was here was here was capable of providing justice. So, a woman like that was in (?a) [word indistinct]She is now able to see that what matters are the actions of a group or a government, not the tribe of the leaders or of the soldiers or what have you. So, this message, if it sinks home, I think we are going to go a long way to solving our problems, because then we shall be able to make an alliance of good people, of decent people from all over the country, from all the religions, from all the tribes -- make an alliance -- a national alliance which can be able to pull our country out of its present problems.

Thank you very much. Thank you for calling me. I cannot [word indistinct]al the subjects I would have liked to talk to you but we shall (?see) you. Thank you very much. [applause]

Kisekka Launches Appeal To Aid War-Affected Citizens

[Text] More than 105 million shillings has been raised at the launching of the national appeal to alleviate the plight of missions of people affected by the liberation war in the Luwero triangle and other areas. Launching the appeal yesterday, the prime minister, Dr Kisekka, reiterated it is the duty of Ugandans to help themselves before turning to the international community for assistance. Dr Kisekka singled out the gallant freedom fighters who have suffered greatly and are now in need of the basics for their livelihood. The prime minister assured the nation that despite the enormity of the task, the government is determined to succeed and is already succeeding.

He commended the tremendous response and encouraging assistance from friends abroad, which he said was totalling $30 million and hoped that within the coming months, more and more aid will come from Uganda's international friends.

Dr Kisekka expressed confidence that the majority of the people support the cause now that Ugandans are free from the tyranny of dictators who humiliated them into such thing as Panda gari [colloquial for highway robbery] and robbery of their money but also basic clothing. He likened the panda gari to slave trade, with only one difference, that in the recent case suffering was being administered by the so-called leaders.

Dr Kisekka thanked all those companies and individuals which had contributed essential inputs and cash totalling to 187 million shillings, but added that a lot more money is required to be able to assist those in need.

As from yesterday, collectors will be appealing to the public and Dr Kisekka appealed to the public to respond positively to help their brothers and sisters in the affected areas. The prime minister requested government ministries, big organizations and the Makerere University and parastatal bodies to collect all the necessary collection materials from the Prime Minister's office at the Uganda International Conference Center. All government field departments, especially the offices of the special district administrators were also requested to collect the materials.

["Communique issued by the minister of information and culture" — date not given]

[Text] As a result of an illegal wildcat strike by some officials and agents of the national radio, programming was disrupted on Monday 28 April 1986, thus denying Cameroonians news in the morning and at noon. The government cannot tolerate such behavior, which seriously harms the public interest. The president of the Republic has ordered a careful investigation to determine those responsible for the situation. Those found guilty will be punished.

CHAD

Radio Reports 10 GUNT Defectors Join Ndjamena Forces

AB281513 Ndjamena Domestic Service in French
0530 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] The masquerades of Al-Qadhdhafi and of his protege were exposed today by some Chadian patriots — 10 in number — who have fled the Libyan hell to join the legitimate government of Chad. In their statements, they have given overwhelming proof of the policy of aggression and annexation of Chad being pursued by Al-Qadhdhafi.

Not satisfied with occupying a part of the Chadian territory, the Libyans, the Libyan Army, and Libya's mercenaries commit the worst extortions against the inhabitants of the occupied areas, enslaving them to the clear knowledge of Goukouni who loyally obeys Al-Qadhdhafi's army augumented by a horde of mercenaries set up to conquer Chad. According to the statements given by the patriots who have just put the Libyan jailers off their guard, the Libyans are increasing their troops and all types of war equipment — tanks, SAM-5 missiles — not only to attack Chad but also the whole of Central Africa. Listen to these statements:

[Begin recording] [Unidentified speaker] Judging from the Libyan's behavior, it seems that day after day they are preparing to attack the government forces. The Libyans have (?sophisticated) equipment such as T-72 and other Soviet-made tanks [words indistinct] of different calibers. They have weapons of all calibers. They have anti-aircraft missiles, such as the SAM-5 which have been installed in the mountains and which cannot be easily observed. Despite all their security measures, we were able to get this information from the Libyans, that is those who came to visit us and who give us orders. They gave us information about such equipment. This equipment is intended not only to liberate Chad but also to reach as far south as Central Africa.

[Unidentified reporter] Well, concerning the men, the mercenaries recruited here and there by the Libyans and who, after attacking Chad will later try to invade the other countries in the subregion, have you seen the technicians — as you call them — train people of other nationalities recruited by the Libyans. Have you seen non-Africans or African elements of nationalities other than Chadians?

[Unidentified speaker] After their defeat in the fighting of the (?5th) [month not given], the Libyans proposed to send units of black soldiers to the front as elements of the Transitional National Union Government [GUNT] to take part in the fighting [words indistinct]. These elements are now in the mountains. We did not see all of them but we saw some of them and the rest are hidden in the mountains. They are of many nationalities including Sudanese, Cameroonians, Nigerian; several nationalities. We cannot even tell the difference between all the nationalities because the mercenaries are so numerous. [end recording]

(?As if) the successive defeats inflicted on the Libyan troops and the bases of their mercenaries are not enough for Al-Qadhdhafi, the Libyan leader continues to commit his heinous crimes. The patriots who have returned to the big Chadian family, say they will now join the government of the Third Republic and its Chadian National Armed Forces in the final national liberation struggle in order to drive Al-Qadhdhafi out of the national territory. This defection is an appeal to the conscience and to the true sense of duty of those who are still under the Libyan umbrella so that they may join the Chadian National Armed Forces as soon as possible and contribute to the fight for the defense of the fatherland.

Congo's Ndinga-Oba Comments on Reconciliation

AB261236 Ndjamena Domestic Service in French
1845 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Congolese foreign minister, Mr Ndinga-Oba, stopped over this afternoon in Ndjamena. Mr Ndinga-Oba was returning from New Delhi, India, where he attended, with other African delegations including that of Chad, the meeting of the Coordination Bureau of the Nonaligned countries. Our correspondent, Monique Gnalagbe met the Congolese minister at the Ndjamena International Airport and asked him about the Congolese Government's reactions to the failure of the Brazzaville meeting — the meeting which would have been attended by the president, El Hadj Hissein Habre, and the leader of the Libyan puppets [Goukouni Oueddei].

[Begin recording] [Ndinga-Oba] The reaction of the Congolese Government was contained in the communique which was issued after having noted the fact that all the people expected did not respond unanimously to the call which was made and to the invitation which was extended. We also noted with pleasure that President Hissein Habre honored the appointment and that President Abdou Diouf of Senegal, who made an important contribution [to the preparation of the meeting], was also present in Brazzaville. But the GUNT [Transitional National Union Government] president was absent and we much deplored this situation because we think that the Chadian problem is a serious one. Faced with a situation which is hindering their development and their national unity, the people of Chad are suffering from division. It is rather unfortunate that this situation should arise — a situation for which we have not yet been able to assemble all the parties for a discussion in order to find a solution to the problem which is dividing the Chadian people and which is preventing them from advancing. We greatly regret this situation and we think that those who were not present in Brazzaville will chwnge their attitude so that we can put an end to the suffering of Chadians.

[Gnalagbe] After the failure of the Brazzaville national reconciliation meeting, what steps is the Congolese Government taking in order to make another attempt at national reconciliation in Chad possible?

[Ndinga-Oba] As you know, we cannot do anything without the help of our Chadian brothers themselves. We cannot work ... [changes thought] do anything unless we are asked to do so and only if the conditions are favorable. And this is what we did recently. We had assurances from all the sides and this is what we intend to do in the future, too. That is to say, if our Chadian brothers express the willingness to cooperate, the Congolese people, with their institutions and under the leadership of President Denis Sassou-Nguesso, will always be present at whatever meeting is decided upon to make their contribution. But it is necessary that one respects one's word of honor. One must respect one's words.

[Gnalagbe] Can one assert that your trip abroad falls within the framework of (?this specific issue)?

[Ndinga-Oba] No, no. I simply went to New Delhi — and of course along with a delegation from Chad — within the framework of the meeting of the Coordination Bureau of the Nonaligned Movement. I am now returning to Brazzaville after this international meeting. Nothing else. [end recording]

CONGO

Nguesso Opens Trade Union Congress, Discusses Chad

AB281250 Paris AFP in French 1231 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Brazzaville, 27 Apr (AFP) — Congolese President Sassou-Nguesso, who on Saturday presided over the opening of the 7th Congress of the Congolese Trade Union Confederation (CSC, sole trade union), reaffirmed his desire to continue his mediation in the Chadian conflict for the achievement of national reconciliation.

During the ceremony, attended by a thousand persons including diplomatic missions and about 50 foreign delegates, Colonel Sassou-Nguesso acknowledged that after several attempts his efforts had not been crowned with success.

"However," he continued, "we are not pessimistic. The road will be long and arduous. But we have confidence in Africa. When accepting the mission entrusted us by the OAU, we never envisaged achieving success at the end of a few weeks, not even a few months."

The Congolese head of state also spoke on the American-Libyan crisis, stressing that reactions and protest demonstrations recorded throughout the world show that peace, freedom, and justice-loving people "stand up everywhere to face attacks by imperialist forces and international reactionaries."

President Sassou spoke at length on his country's economic and financial crisis, giving a negative report on the public sector where over half the enterprises are recording a fall in production. The total accumulated loss in this sector since 1980 is 72.677 billion CFA francs; subsidies accumulated from 1980 to 1986 for the recovery effort is 366,768 billion CFA francs, the head of state indicated.

The 846 union members attending the congress, which is to end next Wednesday, will elect a new CSC secretary general and will set up a confederal council for the union, which was created in 1964 and has 156,000 members.

GABON

Bongo Addresses PDG Central Committee Session

AB281655 Libreville Africa No 1 in French 1230 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] The session of the Gabonese Democratic Party [PDG] Central Committee ended yesterday. The PDG Central Committee is satisfied. The seriousness, the know-how, and the sense of responsibility which dominated the session of the Central Committee which ended in Libreville yesterday explain this feeling which is shared by the Gabonese president, Omar Bongo, who is secretary general and founder of the party and who congratulated its members for the determination they demonstrated during the working sessions.

The working sessions were based on four themes: economic and financial policy; security of people and property. The themes tackled are very important. It must be noted that President Omar Bongo, who presided over the working sessions, spoke at the end of those sessions and, for a better appreciation of the themes tackled, I ask you to listen to the Gabonese President himself who began by discussing economic and financial policy.

[Begin Bongo recording] After 4 days of deep reflections on subjects which are of major concern to our people, the recommendations and resolutions adopted represent, no doubt, a model of positive criticism, in conformity with the noble tradition of our party. Everybody has been able speak frankly his innermost thoughts and make the necessary suggestions in complete quietude and freedom. Thus, in the area of economic and financial policy, you have proposed guidelines for readapting our development strategy to the new situation which has arisen from the bad international situation. We have until now pursued policies in accordance with our means, which were derived mostly from petroleum revenues. Today, we have to find the appropriate means that suit our policy, by applying a rational development policy based to a large extent on non-renewable resources. In this perspective, henceforth, we must depend a great deal on our own work in addition to foreign investments, which are contributions, and very important ones at that. The work of our compatriots must become the principal wealth of the country. We can no longer continue to confide our destinies to foreigners — however honest they may be. The Gabonese people must resolutely embark upon the mastery of our economy by themselves. [end recording]

Following his words on Gabon's economic and financial policy, President Bongo spoke on the question of security.

[Begin Bongo recording] Security concerns everybody, and all the citizenry. It is not the affair of only the security forces. Everyone must feel concerned by the danger which weighs on each of our lives, and the lives of our close ones, and also on our properties. Gabon is certainly a land of hospitality, but we cannot accept that our country becomes the hideout of those who have gained notoriety elsewhere by their bad behavior. Moreover, the new foreign policy which has been proposed by this session of the Central Committee takes this concern into consideration. It also makes it possible to give a new impetus to our diplomatic actions, and to obtain the necessary support for the pursuance of our development. [end recording]

Finally, the Gabonese head of state spoke on the role of the PDG.

[Begin Bongo recording] I find it important to tell you that I accord capital importance to the role of the party in this country. Even if the PDG is not a party-state, the truth still stands that it is the engine, or better still, the soul of the state and the nation. It is for this reason that I strongly request that the prime minister, the head of government, effectively implement the resolutions and decisions accepted by the present session, coming shortly before the second session of the Central Committee which precedes the ordinary congress. Niger's Kountche Arrives in Libreville for Visit

[Text] Libreville, 28 Apr (AGP-GAB/PANA) — Niger's head of state, General Seyni Kountche, arrived in Libreville on Monday morning for a 48-hour friendly and working visit. President Kountche was welcomed on arrival by Mr Omar Bongo, his Gabonese counterpart.

In his statement to the press, General Kountche said that "Gabon being a uranium-producing country like Niger, it is necessary to have exchanges of viewpoints with a view to drawing up a common strategy to face the world economic crisis caused by the fall in the American dollar and in oil prices." Moreover, the Niger head of state lauded the efforts made by President Bongo in order to find "solutions to various problems facing Africa," and underscored Gabon's solidarity gesture to his country last year.

It will be recalled that in 1985 Gabon made food and drug donations to Niger. President Kountche stated that the search for water remains the priority in the fight against drought in the Sahel. The last visit by Niger's head of state to Gabon was in August (?1983).

ZAIRE

Government Denies Role in GUNT Attack on Libya

AB281345 Paris AFP in French 1826 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Kinshasa, 26 Apr (AFP) — Zaire today denied categorically that Zairian forces might take part in an offensive which Chadian President Hissein Habre, according to the Transitional National Union Government [GUNT], is reportedly about to launch against the south of Libya.

The GUNT (armed opposition to the Ndjamena government) said in a communique broadcast in Paris yesterday that President Habre's forces were about to launch such an offensive with the support of French and Zairian troops.

"In the present situation that the Libyan regime is going through, Zaire, which cannot be taken in, knows what is hidden behind these provocative maneuvers," an authoritative source stated in Kinshasa.

Concerning possible support for the Chadian Government, the same source recalled that on two previous occasions, Zaire had reacted positively to appeals for assistance by the legitimate government of Chad. Should the same government make a fresh appeal to Kinshasa, Zaire is ready at all times to "help the Chadian brothers preserve their independence and sovereignty."

U.S. Agriculture Experts Arrive; Carter Due in July

AB290800 Accra Domestic Service in English
0700 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] A team of three agricultural experts from Global 2000 Incorporated, a benevolent society dedicated to the elimination of hunger, arrived in Accra last night from Atlanta, Georgia, in the United States, to start an agricultural program based on technological transfer to mainly small-scale farmers. The aim is to help them to improve on their main yield. The arrival of the experts is the result of an agreement signed between the government and the former American president, Mr Jimmy Carter, who led a delegation of the International Peace Foundation to Ghana last January. Mr George (Shiraah), director of Global 2000, who accompanied the experts, told newsmen that in addition to its commitment to the elimination of hunger, the organization is also dedicated to the improvement of the health needs of people, especially in the developing countries. According to Mr (Shiraah), the team, which has already worked in India and Mexico, will help in grain storage facilities. He disclosed that Mr Carter is expected in Ghana early next July to assess the progress of the program. The experts are made up of Dr (Jinatio Navayeh), field director for Africa, Dr (Eugenia Martinez), director of the Ghana program, and Dr (Chon Hwon), an agronomist.

[Text] The Federal Government has advised Nigerians to exercise the greater caution in their choice of airlines and airports when they travel. The government, in a statement issued today by the Ministry of External Affairs, also appealed to Nigerians to undertake only those journeys outside the country that were absolutely necessary. They should, furthermore, be vigilant. The advice became necessary following the recent spate of hijackings, bomb explosions and other terrorists acts directed mainly at civilian targets. The government assured all Nigerians that it would continue to take all possible precautionary measures to ensure the safety of citizens traveling abroad.

President Eyadema Receives PLO, Chadian Envoys

AB251505 Lome Domestic Service in French

[Excerpts] Three audiences were granted this morning at the Presidency in Lome. The head of state received in separate audiences, the PLO ambassador to Nigeria, Samir Baker; Auxence Ickonga, the managing director of Air Afrique; and Chadian Foreign Affairs Minister Gouara Lassou.

The first, Mr Baker, the PLO ambassador to Nigeria, delivered to General Eyadema a special message from Yasir 'Arafat. The PLO chairman's envoy told the press that his visit to the president falls within the framework of the consultations which the PLO chairman organizes in order to discuss some issues.

[Begin recording] [Baker in English fading into French translation — processed from French] I have been sent here by PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat to deliver a special message to his brother, his excellency the president of the Republic of Togo. And as usual, the PLO chairman always consults Brother Eyadema on developments and on issues of common interest to the people of Togo and to the people of Palestine.

[Unidentified reporter] Your Excellency, would you please tell us briefly the topic of your discussions during the audience?

[Baker] As I said, it is in connection with issues of interest to the Republic of Togo and the PLO. We also discussed the strengthening of the bonds of cooperation between our two peoples. We are therefore here to consult our Togolese brothers in order to further strengthen cooperation between our two peoples who always support us in our struggle to regain our state. [End recording]

It is worth mentioning that Atsou Koffi Amegah, our minister of foreign affairs and cooperation, was present at the audience which the head of state granted the PLO envoy.

The third and last audience was granted to Foreign Affairs Minister Gouara Lassou who delivered to President Eyadema a message from President Hissein Habre. Apart from the message, they also discussed the current political situation in Chad.

[Begin recording][Lassou] I have just been received by President Eyadema to whom I deliverd a message from President Hissein Habre. I took the opportunity offered me by the audience to explain to him what happened in Brazzaville — the abortive Brazzaville rendezvous — the Louboumo rendezvous to be specific, because the meeting was to take place at a location in Congo. I also had the opportunity to explain to him the position that the Chadian Government intends to adopt henceforth. Now the opposition has crumpled, because the government has signed two agreements in Gabon with the CAC-CDR [Action Coordination Committee of the Revolutionary Democratic Council] and the FDT [Chadian Democratic Front] and after that the government has signed an agreement with what the press calls the Codos. Following these agreements, the Chadian Government was reshuffled and the national constituent council was also reshuffled. National reconciliation is therefore in process. It must continue and get consolidated. Therefore, the mandate that the Chadian Government has requested and which the OAU has assigned to President Sassou-Nguesso to take steps aimed at bringing about reconciliation among the sons of Chad ... [changes thought] the Chadian Government holds the view that this mandate has come to an end with the refusal of Goukouni [Oueddei] to come to Congo. What is left for the OAU to do is to reactivate the ad hoc committee which was created in 1977 to look into the border dispute between Chad and Libya. This is what I explained to President Eyadema after I had delivered the letter to him. [end recording] The Togolese minister of foreign affairs and cooperation was also present at this audience.

[Excerpt] The heads of state of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries, namely Angola, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, Cape Verde, and Guinea Bissau, are due to begin their sixth summit meeting in Luanda today. Presidents Manuel Pinto da Costa of Sao Tome and Principe, Aristides Pereira of Cape Verde, and Joao Bernardo Vieira of Guinea Bissau have been in Luanda since yesterday to participate in the summit. Samora Moises Machel, the chairman of the Frelimo party and president of the People's Republic of Mozambique, is expected to arrive in Luanda this morning.

Speaking to the press shortly after his arrival in Luanda yesterday, Manuel Pinto da Costa, the Sao Tome head of state and the current chairman of the group of five, said that the summit was being held at an extremely important time for the African continent, particularly southern Africa. President Manuel Pinto da Costa added that debate and discussion will center mainly on the situation in this part of the African continent inasmuch as since the group's last summit the situation had changed for the worse and there was, therefore, a need to find means and mechanisms for solvingthe southern African problem. President Manuel Pinto da Costa also said that the summit would examine cooperation among the five.

Foreign Ministers Discuss Region

[Excerpts] Presidents Aristides Pereira of Cape Verde, Joao Bernardo Vieira of Guinea Bissau, and Manuel Pinto da Costa of Sao Tome and Principe are expected in Luanda today where they will participate in the sixth summit of the heads of state of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries. Field Marshal Samora Machel, the president of Mozambique, is expected to arrive tomorrow, 28 April. The summit will be held under the slogan: "In the struggle for the consolidation of our independences and for unity among the five states."

Preparations for the summit have been underway in Luanda since last Tuesday, the initial groundwork being laid by experts and then until yesterday by the foreign ministers and representatives from Angola, Mozambique, Sao Tome and Principe, Cape Verde, and Guinea Bissau. At the end of the ministerial meeting yesterday, spokesman Comrade Paulino Pinto Joao gave details:

[Begin Joao recording] Dear representatives of the international press, dear comrades of the Angolan press: the proceedings of the sixth conference of foreign ministers of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe have just concluded. I should like, for your information, to briefly outline what transpired during the conference. However, I would like first of all to recall that besides deliberations within its sphere, the ministerial conference was charged with the task of preparing the summit of the heads of state taking place in Luanda in the near future.

On examining the international political situation, the ministerial commission exchanged information and viewpoints on issues connected with the situation in southern Africa, the Western Sahara and Chad, west Africa, and the Mediterranean,as well as the special session of the UN General Assembly on the critical economic situation in Africa, the forthcoming international-conference on sanctions against South Africa, and the eighth summit of the countries of the Nonaligned Movement.

On the prevailing situation in southern Africa, the ministerial commission expressed its concern over the heightening of tensions and conflicts in this region of the African continent caused mainly by the aggressive attitude of the apartheid regime, its obstinancy in continuing its occupation of Namibia, and its policy of decentralization of neighboring independent countries, particularly the People's Republic of Angola and the People's Republic of Mozambique. In addition, the commission noted that the aggravation of this situation in recent months is due mainly to increasing imperialist interference and intervention in this region by, among other things, increased support to South Africa and armed bandits whose actions are aimed at decentralizing and eradicating progressive regimes in the region.

The ministers from the five Portuguese-speaking African countries expressed their satisfaction with the development of the struggle against apartheid as shown by the increase in popular confrontations in South Africa itself and the racist South African regime's growing loss of control of the internal situation. Accordingly, they reiterated in their militant solidarity with and their countries' unstinting support for the struggles waged by the peoples of Namibia and South Africa and their revolutionary vanguards, SWAPO and the ANC, as well for the Frontline States, particularly Angola and Mozambique, in their struggle to defend their soverignty, national independence, and territorial integrity.

The ministerial commission also gave special attention to the continuing conflicts in the Western Sahara and Chad and expressed deep concern over the subsequent negative implications for peace and stability in the continent following the continuation of the conflicts.

The meeting examined the recent evolution of the situation in the Mediterranean and condemned the aggression, on 15 April 1986, by U.S. naval and air forces against Libya, an independent country and a member of the OAU and the Nonaligned Movement, and described it as a violation of international law and the principles enshrined in the UN Charter. Dos Santos Addresses Summit

MB291039 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese
0500 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] At the opening session of the sixth summit of the Portuguese-speaking African countries, Comrade President Jose Eduardo dos Santos centered his speech on issues connected with local wars, peace, and underdevelopment — issues that concern the international community.

On the situation in southern Africa, the comrade president said that there were no conflicts in the region other than colonialism in Namibia and apartheid in South Africa, which were the principal threats to peace on the African continent. The president of the People's Republic of Angola noted that the prevailing tension in southern Africa was caused by the moral and material support given by a superpower to puppets that had been artificially created, inspired, and led by Pretoria, as well as by the continuation of the colonization of Namibia, which is used as a springboard for acts of aggression against Angolan territory and the repression of the South African people. Angola and Mozambique must cease to be Pretoria's whipping boys, President Jose Eduardo dos Santos said. He referred to the incalculable damage done by the armed bandits in the pay of imperialism who sow destruction and death against sovereign and independent countries which have been resisting with determination. To which side will the pendulum swing, will it swing to the side of the racist white minority or the side of the oppressed black majority, the Angolan head of state asked. He reiterated the Angolan people's support for and solidarity with the Namibian combatants led by SWAPO and the militants in the struggle against the racist South African regime.

On the presence of the Cuban internationalst troops in Angola, the comrade president said that it was an issue [words indistinct] of our country and that the Cuban troops did not operate outside our borders. He reiterated the Angolan Government's position with regard to Namibian independence based on the application of the UN Security Council Resolution 435/78 and pointed out that the Angolan government was ready to continue to collaborate with the UN secretary general to ensure the independence of Namibia. According to President Jose Eduardo dos Santos, the solution of the southern African problem will only be possible when our adversaries change their opinion toward Angola, a peaceful and sovereign state which follows a policy of peaceful coexistence and diversified cooperation.

Economic blackmail against Angola and the imminent new large-scale invasion of our sovereign and independent state from the racist South African troops were other issues highlighted by President Jose Eduardo dos Santos.

Also on the present international situation, the president of the People's Republic of Angola referred to the importance of the decisions of the Geneva summit between the two big nuclear powers and noted that the United States has been making the peaceful solution of the existing problems in the world, particularly in the field of disarmament, difficult.

East Timor and the struggle for its legitimate achievement of independence were also referred to by the Angolan president, who called on Portugal and other UN member countries to shoulder their responsibility over this issue and contribute to the peaceful solution of that former Portuguese colony. On the occasion, he reiterated the five Portuguese-speaking African countries' solidarity with and support for the struggle of the Maubere people.

In his speech, President Jose Eduardo dos Santos devoted major attention to the economic situation of the five in light of the present international financial crisis. The Angolan president hoped the Luanda summit would permit the examination of issues of common interest and draw prospects for the strengthening of cooperation through whcih [words indistinct] as well activate development whose implementation is very often rendered difficult due to serious problems inherited from colonialism and the continued imperialist acts of aggression as well as natural disasters.

On the economic reality of the five within the international framework, he called attention to the need for economic relations between industrialized countries and underdeveloped countries which, he said, were overtly unjust at present. He underlined the importance of regional cooperation and other forms of cooperation within the framework of South-South cooperation, which he described as a defense mechanism of paramount importance inasmuch as it would contribute toward the reduction of economic dependence and other factors which might endanger the sovereignty and independence of a state.

The fall in the prices of raw materials, the high interest rates, and the substantial increase in defense spending to confront the constant imperialist aggression, were seen as the main causes of the worsening of the economies of the African and other developing countries.

After referring to the countless difficulties caused by the external debt of various developing countries which has reached such a critical level that it endangers their independence, President Jose Eduardo dos Santos said that it was within this framework, which is not encouraging, that there was greater need for diversified cooperation among the five.

On the strengthening of cooperation among the five, the president of the People's Republic of Angola said that there was a need to explore the possibilities offered by some international organizations with a view to financing economic projects for (?balanced development).

Also within the framework of cooperation among the five, he underlined the importance of complementarity as a means of promoting economic integration and unity. The comrade president described the existing relations among the five as valuable and pointed out that the five Portuguese-speaking African countries, inspired by a common history, have been forging a solid unity inasmuch as they share a common trench in the fight for total independence and the building of new societies based on justice and social progress.

Further on Dos Santos Address

[Text] President Jose Eduardo dos Santos said this afternoon in Luanda that UN member countries, particularly Portugal, cannot abrogate their responsibilities in the face of events in East

Timor. The Angolan president was speaking at the opening session of the summit of the five African Portuguese-speaking countries countries and mentioned above all the situation in southern Africa in his speech — a situation which was already disturbed, but which, he said, was aggravated by a U.S. administration's decision to involve itself directly in the conflict through military and financial support rendered to what are referred to here as the armed gangs of UNITA, and its open support for South Africa. The Angolan president said, furthermore, that South African troops are preparing for a new major invasion of Angola. To this end, South Africa is massing troops near its southern border with Namibia.

Finally, an interesting notion to dwell on from Jose Eduardo dos Santos' speech: the resolution to the problems of southern Africa is in the hands of the people of South Africa. What remains to be seen is on which side the tug-of-war rope will break: on the side of the racist white minority or on that of the black majority.

SOUTH AFRICA

Botha Answers Questions on Current Issues

Says ANC Non-Communists Should Return

MB281603 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1554 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, Apr 28, SAPA — The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, today repeated his statement that ANC members who did not believe in communism should "come back to South Africa and take part in constitutional action." However, he could not be expected to deal with the African National Congress while they were controlled by the Communist Party and openly advocated violence, he said in his reply to the debate on his budget vote. Mr Botha said he found it "worrying" that 63 per cent of the ANC's National Executive elected last year were members of the Communist Party. "I have said it is high time that those who do not believe in Communism should step out and come back to South Africa and take part in constitutional action. But you can't expect from me, while the ANC is under the control of the Communist Party and still openly advocates violence, to deal with them."

Referring to the jailed ANC leader, Nelson Mandela, Mr Botha said he had "dealt with his position very carefully in the past." "He is keeping himself in jail. The moment he renounces violence, he will be set free."

Notes Talks at Swaziland Coronation

MB281606 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1529 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, April 28, SAPA — Discussions he had with leaders at the Swazi coronation over the weekend showed once again how much southern African states had to talk about when it came to the region's common problems, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Replying to debate on his budget allocation he said "I had the opportunity to have discussions with some leaders who attended (the coronation) and with other leaders too. I hope this will lead to further positive results." "We have so much to discuss with each other in the fields of water utilisation and conservation, the promoting of tourism, agriculutre and health services, and many others.

"In the economic field, the inter-dependence cannot be ignored." South Africa could play a big role in the region not to dominate but to help other countries utilise their manpower and natural resources to improve their quality of life.

Mr Botha said his visit to Swaziland to attend King Mswati III's coronation had been "a pleasant experience." Swazi authorities and the public had been very friendly and courteous to the South African party and he had been impressed by the strong traditions and pride in the way of life of the kingdom's people.

Says Mozambique Must Be Helped

MB281607 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1545 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, April 28, SAPA — The predicament of thousands of Mozambicans who risked death to cross illegally into South Africa through the Kruger Park to seek food and work in the republic was discussed with President Samora Machel at Swaziland's coronation over the weekend, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Speaking in the debate on his budget allocation, he said he had told President Machel: "We must get your country going again so that your people ... are not forced to risk lions and go through the Kruger Park to come to South Africa for work and food."

Mr Botha said South Africa could not be as bad as its enemies wanted to make it out to be if 12 million people form neighbouring states were in the country illegally to seek a livelihood. "If South Africa is as bad as our enemies make out, why do these people come here?" The message had to go out that if South Africa could help these people to return to their own countries and an improved quality of life there, then the unemployment situation in the republic, among others, would be eased.

NP Will 'Take Care' of AWB

MB281633 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1618 GMT 18 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, Apr 28, SAPA — The National Party [NP] would "take care" of Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] members who disrupted party meetings, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Replying to calls made during the debate on his budget vote for the banning of the organisation and the imprisonment of its leader, Mr Eugene Terre'Blanche, Mr Botha said Mr Terre'Blanche was subject to the law if he broke it. "But I don't think that if they get rowdy at a public meeting of the deputy minister of information (Mr Louis Nel) that is a reason to beat him (Mr Terre'Blanche) up (om hom op te dons)," Mr Botha said. "Leave him to the Nationalists. Keep out of this fight — the Nationalists will take care of it."

End to Constitution 'Premature'

MB281641 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1621 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, April 28, SAPA — Calls to scrap the new constitution were premature at this stage and the dispensation should be used to move towards better things, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Replying to debate on his budget allocation he said the constitution did not have to last forever, "but calls from time to time for the scrapping of the new dispensation come too soon." "We must use our senses and use this vehicle to move to better things."

On calls by representatives earlier in the debate for important announcements in Parliament to be made at joint sittings and for certain budget votes to be jointly debated, Mr Botha said this was a matter that should be arranged by the houses among themselves. As state president he was not actually a member of any house or of Parliament, but he believed it was possible "to streamline our activities and our duties." Mr Botha suggested the houses look at areas where improvements in the houses' functioning could be achieved. There were ways that Parliament's workings could be improved and this should be ironed out at the negotiation table.

The Van der Walt commission's report on the unrest in the Vaal triangle in 1984 had been referred to during the debate, but he wanted to emphasise it was the government and not its critics who had decided on the inquiry. "We wanted an independent report on the Vaal triangle and this was why Professor Tjaart van der Walt was chosen ... he gave an open, honest report on a matter about which the government really wanted to know the truth."

Communism Termed 'Economic Bluff'

MB281651 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1608 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, Apr 28, SAPA — Communism was an economic bluff that brought no advancement to people who accepted it under pressure, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Replying to budget vote on his office he said he agreed with the minister of health and welfare, Mr Chris April, that it was a "deadly danger to this country". Not only did communism do away with economic freedom, but also freedom of religion and conscience and a free judiciary. "Communism turned Mozambique, an exporting nation, to hunger. It can only be maintained through carnage (bloedvergieting)."

Pledges Commitment to Afrikaners

[Text] [No dateline as received] — When people threatened him, or tried to hurry him along the road of reform, they should remember that he had to take the Afrikaner along with him, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today. Replying to debate on his vote in the committee stage of the budget, he said that without the cooperation of the majority of whites, reform would not succeed. "And without the majority of Afrikaners, this country can't make a success of it," he said. "When you threaten me, or try to hurry me on, you must remember that I must take the Afrikaner along, without giving him the feeling that he has been discarded on the ash-heap." He could not turn on this people who themselves had come out of poverty and suffering. "I can't turn on my own people," he said.

The coloured, of all South Africa's peoples, were the closest to white South Africans. The two groups had many things in common, and "we can build on that in future." However Afrikaan South Africans had to feel safe. Many people ahd other countries to which they could flee if they felt threatened here, but the Afrikaner, like the coloured, had no other country to go to.

To Introduce National Council Law

MB281733 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1708 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, Apr 28, SAPA — The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said today he foresaw the most prominent leaders of all South Africa's communities discussing the future "management" of the country on his proposed national council. Replying to the debate on his budget vote, he said he hoped to introduce enabling legislation in Parliament shortly to give effect to the council. Details would then be presented to all the chambers. He foresaw that some of the country's most prominent leaders from all its communities would sit on the council. These would include representatives of the government and Parliament. Discussion would, he envisaged, be on the handling of the country's "minority problems" and from such talks, provision could be made for how the country might be managed in the future, Mr Botha said.

Referring to world pressure for change in South Africa, he said overseas countires were tyring to "bring about their way" in the republic but had not succeeded. Mr Botha said he was prepared to listen to any reasonable men from countries that had shown a positive interest in South Africa but he would not accept prescriptions. "The solutions must come from South Africans themselves. Once you start letting others prescribe to you, you are lost because you don't know when they are going to stop. They have so many skeletons in the cupboard anyway I don't think they should open them for us to see." Mr Botha said he believed the government was trying in a responsible way to convince the world that it could solve its problems. South Africa was not a "jellyfish" — it was a strong country and should stay that way.

Referring to apartheid, Mr Botha said he had never liked the word and had always said it would be misunderstood. He referred to a UN report that one third of United States blacks lived below the poverty line and that up to 45 per cent of the black population in America was unemployed. He also quoted from a European report referring to massive debts and declining living standards in sub-Saharan Africa. The report had quoted a black professor as saying leaders of black African countries had proved "a hopeless disappointment and a disgrace."

Mr Botha said there was no apartheid in Africa, [as received] yet countries that maintained good relations with South Africa, such as Malawi and Swaziland, prospered. Countries that "turned their backs on us" such as Lesotho until recently, were experiencing difficulties. More than 600,000 Lesotho citizens and 60,000 people from Botswana worked in South Africa. "It's wrong to always castigate South Africa — we have positive pictures to present to the world too," Mr Botha said.

He added that he had stated that apartheid and the colonial system of paternalism were outdated. "We must just make sure we deal in such a way when we build the new structures that the second decline (die tweede daling) is not as bad as the first."

Botha Interviewed on Brandt, 'Foreign Interference'

DW280951 Bonn DIE WELT in German 26-27 Apr 86 p 5

[Interview with President Pieter Willem Botha by correspondent Monika Germani; no date and place given]

[Text] WELT: What did you say to Willy Brandt?

Botha: I found that he was very poorly informed about the situation in South Africa, and I tried to tell him some basic facts. We had a very open and honest discussion about developments in South Africa itself and in the entire region. I told Mr Brandt that I knew that he was a socialist and that socialists have other ideologies. I also told him that socialism was the greatest failure in Africa I had ever seen. One should just look at the socialist countries on the continent.

I want to add: During his visit Mr Brandt did not talk to one moderate black leader, only to radicals. Mr Brandt knows about the Berlin Wall and, therefore, he ought to realize the communist threat. And now he supports such groups as the ANC, which is being trained and armed by the Soviet Union and is supported by Libya.

WELT: How do you see South Africa's relations with the Western world?

Botha: Let us forget that South Africa pursues certain interests in its relations with the West — and vice versa. Just think of the well known fact that many countries depend greatly on South Africa's natural resources. Our geopolitical situation is also of great importance to the West. I find it strange how some Western countries criticize and attack us all the time. We have never maintained we had a perfect society. Nevertheless I ask myself frequently whether the countries that attack us so regularly have a perfect form of society themselves.

A great number of immigrants come to South Africa every year. They hope to find a better future here. Hundreds of thousands of blacks come over the border illegally from neighboring countries. They know that they can expect a better life here. Therefore, I want to repeat: It is strange that some Western countries introduce economic sanctions against us while we are engaged in a reform process. From that I have the impression that such countries do not actually want peaceful political reform to take place in South Africa. However, other Western governments have realized that my government has committed itself to reform. During my visit to Western Europe in 1984 I noted great interest in developments in South Africa. It strengthened my conviction that the Western European leaders suport evolutionary rather than revolutionary changes.

In connection with the Soviet Union's policy in southern Africa I stressed recently in Parliament that South Africa needs economic development and social reform. I point out repeatedly that much is still to be done here in South Africa. However, as long as the Soviet Union continues to use southern Africa to export terrorism, it does not contribute to stabilizing our subcontinent. However, if the Soviet Union continues to export weapons and the revolution to southern Africa, its influence in seeking a peaceful solution can only decrease.

WELT: Who is exerting pressure on South Africa to step up the reform process, and who or what hinders you from making reforms?

Botha: There is no need to force South Africa to make reforms. My government has committed itself to them. However, those expecting rash changes for their own sake must realize that it is not a guarantee of stability. There are voices on the left and the right in South Africa for whom the way to reform is either too fast or too slow. There are people in Europe and in the United States who believe that the situation could be changed overnight. I told Mr Brandt very clearly that I refuse to tolerate any interference in our internal affairs by foreign wise guys. I know myself what the South Africans expect. I know that reforms must promote stability and economic development. That is the reason my government negotiates regularly with various black leaders in South Africa. Only negotiations can produce peaceful solutions for the complex structures in our country.

I told Mr Brandt that some people are simply misinformed if they say I am not prepared to talk to blacks. I told him that he can forget the sentence that South Africa consists of a white minority and a black majority. The blacks consist of different ethnic groups. Every one of them has its own language and culture. Together they form various different minorities, and we all share one country. I asked Mr Brandt whether he would advise the French to unite with the Germans tomorrow.

My government committed itself to create equal opportunities for all South Africans. We have accepted the division of power between the various multicultural communities. However, we also believe that minority rights must be protected and that no group must be eliminated by another. In no other comparable country has so much has been done for social and economic progress as in this country. We work continuously on constitutional forms to create political rights. We render assistance to all of southern Africa.

WELT: What effect would an investment halt have on the current economic situation of the country, and what would it mean for the reform process?

Botha: An investment blockade would impair South Africa's economy. It would create even more unemployment among our black populace. That is obvious. The blacks would suffer from it most. He who is abroad demanding sanctions will not lose his job. That would happen somewhere else. In addition to unemployment in South Africa, sanctions would have negative effects on our neighboring states also. The reason for that is simple. South Africa is a power factor on the African continent. Services and support rendered by South Africa are often the most important stabilizing factor on the subcontinent.

I told Mr Brandt that there are 1.2 million illegal foreign workers in South Africa, and I asked him why he does not try to convince the international business world to invest its money in the neighboring states of South Africa, thus creating jobs for 1.2 million people who have crossed our border. They have come because we can offer them a better future than their own countries.

We have committed ourselves to reform. It is the right way. Naturally, it is easier to implement reform at a time of economic growth. However, even the current recession will not keep us from it.

WELT: How do you assess internal support or criticism in your own party?

Botha: The National Party is big and has many members. Naturally, there are different opinions. I welcome constructive criticism and reasonable advice. I appreciate it very much. Some years ago some members deviated from the National Party, setting up a "Conservative Party," headed by Mr Andries Treurnicht. They did not agree to several social reforms I introduced. There will be always be minor differences of opinion in the political thinking of our party. However, I can assure you that as a whole, the party stands firmly and united behind the government's reform.

Le Grange Says ANC White Recruitment Increased

MB281730 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1715 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] House of Delegates, Apr 28, SAPA — The African National Congress has stepped up its recruitment campaign among whites and especially among "draft dodgers" — in South Africa, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis Le Grange, said in the house today. Replying to the debate on his vote in the budget, Mr Le Grange said South Africa was experiencing a revolutionary onslaught on a multi-dimensional front. The South African Communist Party, the ANC and the PAC [Pan Africanist Congress] aimed at advancing a revolution by exploiting situations. Their goal was an increase in the military struggle. Mr Le Grange said the organisations were recruiting over a "wide section" of the community. Most of the recruits were students who had left the country, criminals and revolutionaries. "The ANC has increased its recruitment campaign among whites, where draft dodgers are the prime targets," he said.

Training of ANC recruits internally had increased since the signing of the Nkomati accord with Mozambique. A small number of ANC members were training others "in isolated places" in South Africa.

Describing police successes against the ANC and the PAC, Mr Le Grange said police had captured two PAC members on the east Rand on April 7 and five in Bophuthatswana two days later. One of the men arrested was the second in command of the Azanian People's Army who had been sought in connection with a murder in the eastern Cape. In an incident near Pietermaritzburg yesterday, police had shot dead one man and seriously wounded another when they fled after being apprehended. In their car police had found six limpet mines, mechanical detonators, fuses, ammunition and other equipment.

Mr Le Grange praised the chairman of the Council of Ministers Mr Amichand Rajbansi, for "coming out strongly in support of law and order."

Tutu Claims Most Black Leaders Favor Sanctions

MB280947 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0942 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 28, SAPA — Bishop Desmond Tutu says almost every credible organisation and black leader — except the "predictable ones" — supports his call for sanctions.

He makes the claim in a video-recorded interview, intended to improve his public image, made by Anglican Church worker Mr Mike Thornton. A fund-raiser for church development in Cape Town and co-ordinator of the Provincial Stewardship Committee, Mr Thornton made the video at his own expense before Bishop Tutu's election as archbishop of Cape Town. He said its release was embargoed to avoid an impression of pre-election lobbying. He said he made the video to counteract the image of Bishop Tutu projected in some media and to introduce people to "the real man, a warm and deeply religious person."

Asked in the interview about his call for sanctions and questions by his critics whether he had a mandate from the black community, Bishop Tutu said he had never claimed to speak for anyone. Almost every credible organisation and leaders representing blacks — except the "predictable ones" — had supported his call.

AZAPO Rejects, Condemns 'Phony Pamphlets'

MB251958 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1648 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 25, SAPA — "Phony" pamphlets purporting to be an issue of AZANIAN FOCUS, a suspended AZAPO [Azanian People's Organization] publication, was today rejected by the organisation. A statement by the publicity secretary of the Azanian People's Organisation, Mr Muntu Nyeza, said: "It has come to our attention that a phony pamphlet purporting to come from Azapo is being circulated countrywide. This disgusting piece of derisive drivel is clearly the work of the agents of the oppressive racist system. We unequivocally condemn and disown this little heap of twaddle with the contempt it deserves. We do not wish to delve into the diabolic contents of this rubbish for not wanting to give it further publicity."

"However we wish to point out, firstly, that the AZANIAN FOCUS, the name of the bulletin, has been temporarily suspended since the middle of 1985." All issues of the AZANIAN FOCUS bore the volume number which the "mischevious pamphlets" did not, the statement said.

"Thirdly our slogan is 'One Azania — One Nation' and this bogus pamphlet has 'One People — Azania' " the statement said.

Police Pledge Protection for May Day Workers

MB281256 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1256 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 28, SAPA — The South African Police said today they would do everything possible to ensure the safety of people wishing to go to work on May 1 — May Day. In a statement to SAPA, the SAP Public Relations Division gave the assurance in light of reports that some workers were planning stayaway action on May 1. The statement warned intimidators the security forces would take strong action against them if it was found they were preventing people from going to work.

Rand Supreme Court Rules 1 May NUM Strike Legal

MB281110 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1042 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — Thousands of black mineworkers are poised to stage a legal strike on certain Chamber of Mines gold and coal mines on May 1 after a victory for the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) in the Rand Supreme Court today. Lost production from a one-day strike could cost the mines R68-million, according to chamber estimates. The chamber last week applied to the supreme court seeking an order declaring:

— Any strike on May 1 1986 organised by the NUM illegal.
— A conciliation board to settle the May Day issue established on April 1 by the minister of manpower, be declared invalid and set aside.
— That the NUM be prevented from calling for organising a strike on May 1 1986 until it had acquired the legal right to do so.
— That costs be awarded against the NUM.

In a court packed with NUM supporters, Mr Justice A.J. Vermooten today declared that the NUM was legally entitled to strike on May 1 1986 because a dispute between the union and the chamber concerning May Day had been in existence since last year's wage negotitations. The NUM tabled its demand for May 1 as a paid holiday in its package of wage demands last year.

The judge said that when a dispute arose between the parties, the NUM last year made use of all the conciliation machinery laid down in the Labour Relations Act. When this machinery failded to settle the dispute, the NUM won the right to strike lawfully. Although a considerable time had elapsed since last year's wage negotiations, Mr Justice Vermooten said the right to stage a legal strike, once obtained, could not "go stale." There was no sense in the union having to go through the conciliation procedures again.

The judge rejected the chamber's argument that the May Day demand had been a low priority item during last year's wage negotiations. The union had fulfilled the requirements of the Labour Relations Act and was entitled to strike for as long as the May Day issue remained in dispute. He ordered that a conciliation board established by the minister of manpower on April 1 be set aside because the minister had exceeded his powers in defining the terms of reference of the board. The judge ordered the chamber to pay the NUM's costs.

Chamber Says No Pay for Strikers

[Excerpts] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — Any miner who did not work on May 1, International Labour Day, would lose a day's pay following a supreme court ruling that they could stage a legal strike, the Chamber of Mines said in a statement tonight. "In the wake of today's supreme court judgement it would seem that the National Union of Mineworkers [NUM] may carry out its threat to call for a strike on some mines on May 1," the statement said.

The chamber's statement said the judgement was complex one and needed to be studied carefully. It had an impact on certain categories of workers on a limited number of mines. "Like other employers,the mining industry applies the principle of no work, no pay, and anyone who elects not to work on May 1 will forfeit a day's pay. However, people who have leave to their credit and can be spared will be given time off, in accordance with an earlier undertaking given to the NUM."

The statement said the chamber "wanted to stress that it does not regard May Day public holiday as a holy cow and is prepared to negotiate the issue — provided it is done in a proper way at the proper time." "It is, however, simply unreasonable to expect employers, who have to plan expenditures on an annual basis, to accede to and implement union demands with possible serious cost and other implications at short notice at any time of the year."

The chamber claimed that the NUM's package of wage and other demands for 1986/7 were only received late on Friday. These included the union's demand for May Day to be declared a holiday. "It is therefore ironic that some chamber member mines are faced with a situation that the union is now planning to strike on May 1 and only thereafter will it negotiate the matter with employers in terms of collective bargaining procedures," the statement said.

UDF Eastern Cape Official Reportedly Detained

MB290856 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0851 GMT 29 Apri 86

[Text] Port Elizabeth, April 29, SAPA — The publicity secretary of the Eastern Cape Region of the United Democratic Front [UDF], Mr Stone Sizani, is believed to have been detained by the Security police this morning. A UDF worker, Mr Thango Lamani, told SAPA today Mr Sizani, who is also an executive member of the Port Elizabeth branch of the Education Crisis Committee, was taken from the offices of the UDF at Phakama Building, in New Brighton.

Cradock Residents Association Leader Detained

MB280442 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1649 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 27, SAPA — The president of the Cradock Residents Association, Mr Gradwell Makaula, has been detained and charged with furthering the aims of a banned organisation. Mr Makaula was arrested at his home in Cradock early on Friday morning, according to his wife. She said he will appear in court on Tuesday.

Police Use Teargas To Disperse Tembisa Mourners

MB281508 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1458 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — Police used teargas to disperse about 4,000 mourners at the funeral in Tembisa of Mr Mpumelelo Kortman today, police said. Police used teargas on a number of occasions to disperse a group of about 4,000 people who ignored the prohibition on mourners on foot imposed by a court, said Major Chris Liebenberg, East Rand police spokesman. The funeral ended without serious incident, he said. "There are no problems at the moment, all is quiet," he said.

At about 12 o'clock, Maj Liebenberg said, police saw the cortege moving towards the graveyard from the trade unionists home. The service was over by 2.15, he added. "It was not a usual service as we know it," Maj Liebernberg said.

The service was transferred to Mr Kortman's home after police blocked routes to the Nepo cinema where the funeral was to have been held, reports alleged.

Police and the South African Defence Force remained to patrol the aerea in armoured vehicles, the policeman said. He did not know when security forces would be withdrawn.

Police this morning sealed off the township to outsiders, residents said. Stringent restrictions were placed on the Metal and Allied Workers Union [MAWU] member's funeral. They included the prohibition of banners, on mourners walking on foot to the cemetary, and limited to 500 the number who could attend. Mr Mpumelelo was allegedly shot by police at a MAWU meeting two weeks ago.

This afternoon a MAWU official told SAPA: "As far as we are concerned the gathering was peaceful. We feel the police action was provocative in the extreme, especially after the police action at Huntersfield Stadium Katlehong, on 12 April, when Mr Kortman was killed in a similar unprovoked fashion. "With regard to today's events, we condemn the police action in the strongest terms. It is our considered opinion the security forces are destabilising the townships and the events of today and last night would not have occurred but for the actions of the security forces, which have become a law unto themselves." Instead of protecting people the security forces are radicalising people in the townshps, he added. "The workers in MAWU are very embittered. They expect the union to make a strong call ... and not only MAWU but also the Federation of South African Trade Unions, to take concrete steps towards fighting a system which they feel does not serve their interests," he said. The spokesman said the union was worried about the thousands of MAWU members still trapped in the township. "We had taken all possible legal steps to ensure Mr Kortman's funeral was peaceful. We view today's police action as inconsistent with civilised standards anywhere in the world," he concluded.

Police Accompany Tembisa Trains After Attacks

MB290949 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0915 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The railways police this morning accompanied suburban trains between (Lerala) station which serves the black residential area of Tembisa on the East Rand and (Kalfontein) after a mob of youths had to be dispersed at (Lerala) station last night. The youths set a passenger coach alight, causing serious damage. They also stoned coaches breaking windows and damaged signaling equipment. The trains were full this morning and there was no sign of the troublemakers. Yesterday intimidators prevented many residents of Tembisa from going to work.

Further on Alexandra 28 April Police Shootout

MB281851 Johannesburg Television Service in English 1745 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Two men were killed and a third wounded duirng a shoot-out with police in Alexandra Township near Johannesburg early this morning. Two white men were wounded during the incident. The house from where police were shot at before dawn today was pointed out to police during investigations into the shooting of a white policeman in Alexandra last week. The policeman, one of them an officer, ran for cover. They then opened fire on the room, and threw a hand grenade at the door of the outbuilding. The battle continued for some minutes. Police moved into the home at first light and found the bodies of two men. A third suspect, who has suffered gunshot wounds, was arrested. Police are investigating the possibility that the men could have been involved in shooting incidents in the township last week.

MB291152 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1149 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — One of two men killed yesterday when police fired into a house in Alexandra near here was a victim of the mob which went on the rampage in the township last week, attacking political activists. Mr Zephaniah Mdakane, a member of the Alexandra Youth Congress, made a statement to relief workers soon after losing his home last week. He said that he was out at the time of the attack but had returned to find "the shack where I live had been burnt." "All my clothes and furniture had been destroyed." There were witnesses to the attack.

Police are investigating widespread claims that off-duty policemen played a central role in the violence against activists, which claimed at least two lives last Tuesday. Police have said that wo men — identified by residents as Mr Emanuel Ngubeni and Mr Mdakane — were killed yesterday in a gun battle between occupants of 37 10th Avenue and the police, during which the police hurled a hand grenade into the house. They state that a civilian and two policemen were injured in the shootout.

But residents deny that any shots emanated from unit number seven in the yard. They say the first noise they heard was police knocking at unit seven and demanding entry. The owner of the house, Mr Andries Phiri, lives and works away from home. His two daughters, Nomvula Georgina, 20, and Thulane Angel, 15, usually live there alone. Mr Phiri was distraught at the disappearance of the two young women after the attack. He said he had no idea if they had been detained, or were injured or dead. Residents said people who remained in the house were taken away by the police during the morning. The police have not confirmed or denied the detention of the Phiri girls.

UWC Students Dispersed by Police Teargas

[Text] Cape Town, April 28, SAPA — Students at the University of the Western Cape [UWC] were dispersed by police using tearsmoke, rubber bullets and birdshot this afternoon, while at a school in Manenberg, pupils holding a placard demonstration were dispersed by police using quirts, SABC Radio News reported. A police liaison officer, Lt Attie Laubscher, said a large crowd at UWC stoned police and private vehicles in Modderdam Road, and a petrol bomb was also thrown at a passing car. Rubber bullets were fired at the person who allegedly threw the petrol bomb, and it is believed that he was hit.

A member of the riot squad was injured when a spade was thrown at him, and hit him on the left hand at the demonstration at the Sliverstream Secondary School in Duinefontein Raod, Manenberg. He underwent an operation at the Conradie hospital and is reported to be doing well. Lt Laubscher would not disclose his name.

[Text] Cape Town, April 28, SAPA — A Kensington resident was burned to death today and an unidentified black man seriously burnt when their car was stoned and petrol-bombed. A police liaison officer for the western province, Lt Attie Laubscher, told SAPA today the driver of the bakkie lost control during the stoning and the car smashed into a tree. A petrol bomb was thrown into the bakkie and the driver, Mr Richard Abrahams, in his thirties, burned to death. The passenger, a black man, also in his thirties, escaped with 80 per cent burns and was admitted to the Conradie hospital, but later transferred to Tygerberg hospital. A hospital spokesman tonight described his condition as "unsatisfactory."

Police Raid Atteridgeville in 'Crime Swoop'

29 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 29, SAPA — A number of political and union figures were detained or had their houses searched during a police "crime prevention swoop" in Atterdgeville over the weekend. Hundreds of homes were searched and police distributed pamphlets saying the raid was aimed against "radical intimidators." Among theose reported to have been detained were:

— Mr Jackie Masemola, of the Pretoria Consumer Boycott Committee,
— Mr Deacon Mathe of the UDF [United Democratic Front],
— Mr Pat Seete of a local youth organisation, and
— Mr Ernest Ramadite of another local youth body.

Mr Masemola said he and others were later released without being charged. Police arrested others for possession of dagga [marijuana] and banned literature. The raid was not specifically aimed at the political figures involved, police said. Their homes just happened to fall within the area covered.

Police Issue Unrest Situation Reports

7 PM, 28 April

MB281816 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1735 GMT
28 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 28, SAPA — Following is the SA police 7pm unrest situation report:

"At Middelburg black township in Transvaal six black youths attempted to steal a private vehicle from a black man. A white man came to his assistance and fired one shot with his firearm. The six youths were arrested.

"At Alexandra, about 100 blacks, being riotous, shot at the police. Police had to use a handgrenade, R1 rifle and pistols, wounding two black men over 18 years fatally. One black youth, 18 years, was arrested.

"At Sebokeng, Vereeniging, about 100 blacks robbed a delivery vehicle. The SADF used tearsmoke. One black female was arrested.

"At the University of Western Cape about 100 students petrol-bombed a private vehicle. The police had to fire (one shot R1 rifle). One coloured male was wounded but managed to escape. In another incident about 100 students stoned a SAP vehicle. The police had to use birdshot. One coloured male was wounded but also escaped.

"At Old Crossroads black township five blacks stoned a private vehicle during which one coloured male was slightly injured by the mob.

"In Mannenberg, 500 coloureds gathered. The police had to use sjamboks [whips]. Sergeant J.G. Tradie was slightly injured when a spade was thrown at him.

"In Kwamashu black township about 33 blacks stoned a SAP vehicle. The police had to use tearsmoke and birdshot. One black man, under 18 years, was arrested.

"In Tembisa early this morning, blacks started building barricades on roads at several places and victimised workers and told them not to go to work. Fortunately with no significant incidents or clashes with the police.

"At 8am today, two blacks were arrested for stoning a SADF vehicle. A black woman being 'necklaced' was found by the police at noon today and admitted to the local hospital, severely injured. At approximately the same time, about 3,000 blacks gathered in the streets and the police had to disperse the mob by way of tearsmoke. Since then no incident of unrest in Tembisa has been reported."

Ends report.

Iran-Iraq War

In further reportage on fighting in the Al-Faw area, a military communique broadcast by Tehran radio claimed that Iraqi casualties have surpassed 4,600 and that Iran has "completely occupied" 7 "strategic" ravines in the area. The communique also asserted that Iran "liberated" several more km and brought the Iraqi command headquarters in that area under "complete control," and claimed that two Iraqi planes were downed. On the other hand, an Iraqi military spokesman cited by INA termed the Iranian statement on the downing of two Iraqi aircraft "absolutely untrue," while a later INA report, also citing an Iraqi military spokesman, dismissed Iranian reportage on fighting in the Al-Faw area and described it as "exposed lies." An Iraqi communique carried by Voice of the Masses radio acknowledged the Iranian offensive in the Al-Faw area but claimed that Iraq had "succeeded in halting" it in a series of "fierce" battles that inflicted "massive" losses upon the Iranians.

In other action, the Iraqi V Army Corps reportedly captured 16 areas of "vital territory" in the northeastern fronts, according to another communique broadcast by the radio.

Additionally, an Iraqi military spokesman disclosed that the Iraqi Air Force bombed Kermanshah airport, INA reported,, while IRNA acknowledged that Iraqi planes raided a village in Bakhtaran, killing a civilian and wounding 32 others.

Bahrain-Qatar Dispute

A Bahraini Government statement carried by SPA expressed "regret" over Qatar's military action against "Bahraini territory" and the detention of unarmed civilian workers, considering this a departure from the principles of good neighborliness on which the GCC is based. The statement expressed "great appreciation" and support for Saudi Arabia's mediation efforts, adding that Bahrain also appreciates the "positive" stands of GCC leaders and their "sympathy with Bahrain's stand," which seeks to avoid violence.

The UAE paper AL-KHALIJ reported earlier that GCC officials are working on a proposal to replace Qatari forces on Fasht al-Dibal with a token force from the GCC's "Peninsula Shield" forces. Nevertheless, Bahraini and Qatari forces are still on "maximum alert," the paper said, and Bahrain's GULF DAILY NEWS subsequently reported further evidence that Qatar is continuing a military buildup along its western coast. The Qataris are still keeping secret the whereabouts of 29 men abducted from Fasht al-Dibal by Qatari troops, GULF DAILY NEWS stated.

Arab Summit

Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar', currently in Belgrade, "clearly hinted" that a postponement of the proposed emergency Arab summit "should not be ruled out," in a statement to KUNA. Elaborating on this, Al-Shar' revealed that Syria has agreed to Libya's "request" to host the summit in Sabha, Libya, and he maintained that emergency summits should discuss "urgent matters," namely the U.S. aggression against Libya, SANA reported citing the same statement. Meanwhile, Libyan Major 'Abd al-Salam Jallud insisted that the summit should discuss a "joint Arab reaction" to the U.S. raids in an interview with the Beirut paper AL-SAFIR cited by KUNA. Jallud accused a number of Arab states of "attempting to exploit" the summit to "force" Libya into "making concessions," and asserted that the U.S. raids had not deterred Libya from pursuing its "revolutionary line."

In related developments, Rabat radio reports noted the arrival of several Arab foreign ministers in Fes for the scheduled 30 April Arab foreign ministers meeting.

Libya

Iranian Message — Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi received the visiting Iranian delegation, Tripoli radio reported, adding that the Iranians gave Al-Qadhdhafi a message from the Iranian leadership which affirmed that "hundreds of thousands" of Iranian volunteers are ready to go to the Jamahiriyah to help protect the Libyan leader. IRNA's report on the meeting did not mention this offer, though IRNA noted the Iranian foreign minister's statement that Iran is willing to provide "any sort of assistance."

Reagan Warning — A poem broadcast by Tripoli television promised that President Reagan will "most certainly" be killed "like a stuck pig."

Relations With Egypt, Tunisia — A JANA commentary sharply attacked Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butrus Ghali for his statement to Spain's EL PAIS that Arab countries are agreed in condemning Libya's "destabilizing" policy. As for Libya's recent request for arms from Egypt, Egyptian Prime Minister 'Ali Lutfi stated during his visit to Amman that after the long alienation between Egypt and Libya, the latter should have focused attention on improving relations rather than requesting arms, according to MENA.

In a parliamentary address reported by Tunis radio, the Tunisian foreign minister confirmed that Tunisia's decision to remain silent over the U.S.-Libyan conflict is linked with the rupture in Tunisian-Libyan relations and with Libya's threats and accusations against Tunisia.

Syria

SANA announced the public execution of Lebanese citizen Ahmad Hasan 'Id, who was arrested by the authorities in connection with a 13 March explosion in Damascus. The criminal's confessions left no room for doubt that the "agent" Iraqi regime was behind the "spiteful, foolish crime," SANA asserted.

Israel

The authorities have arrested a terrorist squad suspected of perpetrating a number of recent attacks in Jerusalem, including the 27 April killing of a British tourist, Jerusalem radio reported. The squad was reportedly affiliated to Colonel Sa'id Musa Muragha's [Abu Musa] organization.

Reportage on Preparations for Fes Arab Summit

'Dire' Need for Summit

LD291237 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1130 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Kuwait, 29 Apr (KUNA) — Deputy Kuwaiti Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Shaykh al-Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jabir has stated the Arabs are in dire need of a discussion of differences among themselves and the threats of confronting the entire Arab world.

In a statement to KUNA prior to his departure at noon today for Fes to lead the Kuwaiti delegation to the preliminary meeting of Arab foreign ministers; Shaykh al-Sabah said the meeting will draw up the agenda for the emergency Arab summit conference. He expressed hope the foreign ministers will succeed in drawing up an agenda that takes all the Arab causes into consideration and asserted nothing should obstruct or delay the convocation of the expected summit conference.

He pointed out Kuwait's position that all issues must be discussed has been conveyed to the Arab League and to King Hassan II's envoy. He expressed hope the meetings of the ministerial conference would end in success and decisions would be reached realizing the desired objectives and checking the dangers threatening the Arab nation.

Syria's Al-Shar' Hints Postponement

LD291837 Kuwait KUNA in English 1628 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Belgrade, April 29 (KUNA) — Syrian Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' said here Tuesday [29 April] his country had approved Libya's request to host the proposed Arab emergency summit, originally slated for next week in Morocco. As the exact date and agenda of the proposed summit remained uncertain, Libya's request to host the (?conference) and the Syrian backing to the Libyan attitude indicate that even the summit's venue may as well be arguable.

Al-Shar', who is accompanying President Hafiz Al-Asad in a visit to Yugoslavia, clearly hinted that postponing the proposed emergency summit should not be ruled out.

Al-Shar', in a statement to KUNA, said if the emergency summit failed to convene in Libya to discuss the emergency topic of the U.S. attacks on Libya, it would be better then to hold an ordinaryArab summit that will be well-prepared for through consultations among heads of state.

Libya called for an emergency summit to discuss the U.S. air raids on its territories on April 15, and Morocco which haired the last ordinary summit in 1982 invited Arab countries to the emergency conference. The majority of Arab countries, however, wanted the summit to discuss not only the U.S. attacks on Libya but also other aggressions on the Arab world including the Gulf War.

Arab foreign ministers meet in Fes, Morocco Thursday [30 April] to fix the summit's agenda and date. The Syrian foreign minister, apparently backing a single-item agenda, stressed that an emergency summit should discuss an emergency development, in reference to the U.S. attacks on Libya.

"But if the conference," he went on, "would debate ordinary issues, it would, of course, be better to hold an ordinary summit to be preceded by careful preparations" to ensure its success.

Al-Shar' said his country's position on the proposed summit has been relayed to Libya and the Arab League General Secretariat.

Foreign Ministers Groups Arrive

LD292215 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 2000 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] As the delegations participating in the conference of Arab foreign ministers started to arrive, Sudanese Foreign Minister Ibrahim Taha Ayyub announced today General Abd al-Rahman Siwar al-Dhahab, chairman of the Transitional Military Council, will preside over his country's delegation to the emergency summit. The chief of Sudanese diplomacy expressed his country's readiness to discuss at the summit any Arab issue in addition to the U.S. aggression against Libya. He declared the Sudanese permanent representative to the Arab League will preside over the Sudanese delegation to the ministers' conference.

Jalal al-Atbani, the Sudanese permanent representative to the Arab League, who will preside over the Sudanese delegation at the meetings of the Arab foreign ministers, arrived in Casablanca today. The chairman of the Sudanese delegation talked about his country's participation. He said:

[Begin recording] We are greatly honored and very happy to be in the great home of pan-Arabism - fraternal Morocco — under the patronage of His Majesty King Hassan II. We hope this conference of ours will lead to uniting the Arab ranks and will lead us to the real Arab solidarity which is the minimum and only way to face up to the difficulties and challenges of the Arab nation. We will do our best to contribute to the achievement of this noble goal. [end recording]

To participate in the ministerial conference preparing for the emergency Arab summit, Shaykh al-Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jabir, Kuwaiti deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs, this afternoon arrived in Fes. The chief of Kuwaiti diplomacy talked about the topic. He said:

[Begin recording] I am happy to be in Fes to attend the preparatory conference of foreign ministers, which will prepare for the summit conference, God willing. We sincerely pray for it to be a good meeting [words indistinct] our Arab world as we desparately need the meeting of our leaders, kings and presidents to discuss all our Arab issues which honor our peoples and our status before the whole world. [end recording]

The Kuwaiti deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs was received by Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Abdellatif Filali, the Fes governor and the Kuwaiti ambassador to Morroco

In Riyadh it was announced that Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal, the Saudi minister of foreign affairs, will leave Saudi Arabia for Fes tomorrow morning to represent Saudi Arabia at the meetings of Arab foreign ministers which will prepare for the emergency Arab summit.

Mr Abu Mazin, member of the PLO Executive Committee, arrived in Casablanca to participate in the meetings of the Arab foreign ministers in Fes. About the PLO's contribution to the conference, he said:

[Begin recording] We have come to attend the conference of the Arab foreign ministers, which will precede the extraordinary summit, to be held in Fes at the initiative of His Majesty King Hassan II. This initiative at the right time, as the Arab nation is exposed to aggression against its various countries. There is the aggression against Libya, there is the aggression against Iraq in the Iraq-Iran war, there is the aggression against the Palestinian people and there are the hot issues on the Lebanese arena, there is the Arab solidarity and there is the clarification of the Arab atmosphere. All these issues are important and basic issues which should be discussed by the extraordinary Arab summit. We believe that all these issues will, God willing, be solved, and this conference will be as the previous one, which was recently held in Casablanca. Undoubtedly, we have great hopes that the kings, presidents, and King Hassan II will close their ranks and unite their stand and adopt firm and decisive stand towards the current issues of the Arab nation. [end recording]

Mr Ahmad Abdullah, Somali ambassador to Tunisia and permanent representative to the Arab League, also arrived in Morocco to participate in the work of the Arab foreign ministers' conference.

More Delegations Arrive

LD300339 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 2300 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Many delegations arrived in Morocco this evening. We now go to Fes:

This evening Tahir al-Masri, the Jordanian minister of foreign affairs, who hears his country's delegation to the meetings of the Arab foreign ministers, which is in preparation for the emergency summit, arrived.

Dr 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Dali, PDRY minister of foreign affairs, arrived in Fes-Sais airport. This evening Ahmed el Hag Fahmy, the minister of industry and industrial development in Djibouti, arrived in Morocco to participate in the meetings of the Arab foreign ministers preparing for the emergency summit.

Rashid Abdullah al-Nu'aymi, UAE minister of state for foreign affairs, arrived this evening in Fes to represent his country in the meetings of the Arab foreign ministers. The Algerian delegation, headed by Messaoud Ait Chalal, arrived this evening in Morocco.

Summit Agenda, Venue Debated

LD301020 Kuwait KUNA in English 0939 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Fes, Morocco, April 30 (KUNA) — Arab foreign ministers or their representatives started their meetings here Wednesday [29 April] to draw the agenda of a proposed Arab emergency summit conference. The ministers will also set a date for the proposed summit, which was originally called for by Libya to discuss the American raid on its territory.

Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, in a sudden move yesterday, has suggested with Syria's support, that the summit should be held in the middle of the Libyan desert, at Sabha, 650 km south of Tripoli instead of Fes. Meanwhile, the Arab countries maintained differences over agenda of the summit conference.

Libya, Syria, South Yemen and Sudan want the summit's discussions to focus on the American aggression on Libya while the other Arab League member-countries want the discussions to deal with all foreign aggressions on the Arab nation.

The summit was scheduled next Saturday [3 May], but the Moroccan Information Ministry has announced the summit's postponement to a later date, which will be set by the ministerial conference.

Palestinian Source on Summit, PLO Council Meetings

JN291343 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1315 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Baghdad, 29 Apr (INA) — A Palestinian source said here today that the PLO believes the proposed Arab summit should deal with all forms of aggression against the Arab nation. In a statement to INA, the source said the PLO's position on this subject is both principled and firm. During their summit the Arab leaders should discuss aggression against the nation regardless of its source and whether it is committed against Iraq, the Palestinian Arab people, Lebanon, or Libya.

The Palestinian source pointed out that bolstering the unity of the Palestinian factions will top the subjects to be discussed by the PLO Central Council during its meetings to begin in Baghdad today. He added the meetings, to be chaired by PNC Speaker Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih and attended by PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat, will discuss reports prepared by committees formed for this purpose which held preliminary contacts to achieve unity among the factions. He added that the council will also discuss the situation in the Palestinian camps in Lebanon in light of the agent Amal Movement's escalation of attacks and means to bolster their steadfastness in the face of these repeated attacks.

Palestinian Reconciliation Meeting Postponed

LD301016 Kuwait KUNA in English 0945 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait, April 30 (KUNA) — A senior Palestinian official has announced that the proposed Palestinian reconciliation meeting in Algiers scheduled for May 1 was postponed until after the Arab summit conference.

The official told Kuwaiti daily AL-QABAS published Wednesday [29 April] in a telephone contact that the meeting will be attended by all Palestinian forces that are currently discussing issues to be tabled at the reconciliatory gathering called for by Algeria to attain Palestinian national unity.

Salah Khalaf, better known as Abu Iyad, underlined that he will be heading the mainstream Fatah Commando Movement's delegation to the meeting. Abu Iyad, Fatah Central Committee member, meanwhile, asserted that Libya and Syria have asked for the convening of the emergency Arab summit in Libya and noted that intensified contacts are currently underway between the Arab League Secretariat and various Arab capitals to close views.

Abu Iyad described the Arab foreign ministers meeting, scheduled to start later tonight in the Moroccan city of Fes, as the most difficult in the history of similar gatherings, in view of the issues on its agenda that are topped by a date and venue of the proposed summit.

Abu Iyad expressed belief, however, the Arab chief diplomats will succeed in overcoming obstacles and pass conciliatory decisions. The Palestinian official has refused to disclose details of his recent meetings in Paris during a four-day visit to France last week but said that he met with representatives of all French parties and described France's relations with the Palestine revolution as "satisfactory."

'Arafat Denies Syrian Conditions for Al-Asad Meeting

LD301000 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0900 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 30 Apr (KUNA) — PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat stressed, in an interview published here today, that Syria has not stipulated conditions for holding a summit between him and the Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad.

In an interview with AL-ITTIHAD published here today, he said that brothers in Syria, like all Arabs, are concerned about the PLO, in view of it being the sole legitimate representative.

'Arafat was thus replying to reports Syria had stipulated 'Arafat should come to Damascus in his capacity as the leader of Fatah and not (rpt not) the PLO. 'Arafat said the PLO has expressed readiness to turn a new page with Syria, and the organization was awaiting the results of contacts that have been made, stressing that the organization will continue its attempts to improve relations with Syria.

'Arafat remarked that the Soviet Union moved quickly to prevent a planned Israeli aggression on Lebanon and hitting Palestinians in southern Lebanon. The Palestinian leader said that the arab summit, if convened, must discuss all attacks on the Arab nation.

Regarding Egypt's return, 'Arafat said that this issue must be discussed thoroughly with all Arab sides so that we would not leave room for anyone to blabber about it. He added: I am struggling hard for the return of Egypt because I am an Egyptophile. Yasir 'Arafat described the Marshall plan, which was put forward by the enemy premier Peres, as a big scandal.

DFLP Leader Criticizes 'Arafat Visit to Egypt

GF291513 Al-Shariqah AL-KHALIJ in Arabic 29 Apr 86 pp 11, 15

[Interview with Nayif Hawatimah, DFLP Secretary General, by unidentified AL-KHALIJ correspondent in Damascus — date not given]

[Excerpt] AL-KHALIJ: Do you believe there is a real possibility to unite the factions of the Palestinian revolution?

Nayif Hawatimah: Now, and following the initiative presented by Algerian President Chadli Bendjedid to achieve unity in the Palestinian arena in light of the bitter lessons in the 3 years since the summer of 1983 and in light of the Algerian experience which has illustrated that unity is the weapon for victory, we find the right wing of Fatah is resuming its destructive role against the Algerian initiative. We find that by his current visit to Cairo, Brother Yasir 'Arafat is leading those who are working to destroy the initiative. He clearly understands that the PLO program based on the establishment of an independent state and the independent representation completely contradicts the Amman agreement sponsored by Cairo and Amman. This agreement has denied the Palestinian people their right to self-determination and the establishment of an independent state. The agreement has made the cause an internal issue between the Jordanian Government and the current PLO leadership, while allowing King Husayn to represent the Palestinian people on an equal basis with the PLO.

According to these concessions, he [King Husayn] is longing to expand the amount of his participation in accordance with the new elections code passed by the Jordanian National Assembly, which implies the representation of both East and West Banks in addition to the Palestinian camps in the East Bank. All this clearly indicates that the right wing of Fatah and the PLO led by Brother Yasir 'Arafat are exerting efforts to undermine all the current noble attempts to speed up the unity of the PLO, which is based on the programs of the organization, the decisions of the session held in Algeria, and the Aden-Algiers agreement.

The current visit to Cairo affirms that the PLO Executive Committee chairman is still wasting his efforts. He is wasting his efforts between King Husayn and Mubarak. The Amman-Cairo axis is working to squeeze the PLO leadership and force it to make all the concessions required in the famous 8-point conditions of the United States. It is the same axis which dragged the current PLO leadership into signing the Amman agreement making 'Arafat walk half-way to agree to the U.S. solution. And when he walked his share, he discovered that he is required to walk all the way to the U.S. solution and not meet it half-way, as had been indicated by the Amman-Cairo axis and a number of West European countries.

And now these visits indicate that the right wing of Fatah and the PLO leadership are still searching for a way to improve the conditions of the U.S. solution. The visit of 'Arafat to Cairo is an obvious indication of this.

Joint Forces Attack Lahd, Israeli Positions

JN291900 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1715 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Men of the Palestinian-Nationalist Lebanese Joint Forces attacked with machineguns and rockets a Zionist military vehicle as it passed on the (Kufr Tall al-Nuhas) road in southern Lebanon yesterday, damaging the vehicle and wounding or killing its occupants. The joint forces also attacked a military position belonging to the so-called Army of Southern Lebanon in the township of 'Anata yesterday. The attack, in which rockets and machineguns were used, severely damaged the position and killed or wounded many agent elements. Yesterday, the joint forces also attacked with rockets and machineguns a roadblock belonging to the agent Antoine Lahd militias and the Zionist enemy in the township of Al-Surayri, damaging a jeep and killing or wounding many agent elements.

BAHRAIN

Government Expresses Regrets on Qatari Action

GF300500 Riyadh SPA in Arabic 2005 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Manama, 29 Apr (SPA) — Bahrain has expressed its regret over the military action carried out by a Qatari military force against Bahrain territory and the detention of unarmed civilian workers.

In a statement issued tonight, the Government of Bahrain described the action as a departure from the principles of good neighborliness upon which the GCC is based.

The government of Bahrain expressed its great appreciation for the good efforts of His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and the government of Saudi Arabia to bring the parties together, contain the crisis, and restore things to normal. The Government of Bahrain affirmed its support, blessing, and total responsiveness to these efforts. It expressed its appreciation for the positive stands of their majesties and highnessess the leaders of the GCC countries for their sympathy with Bahrain's stand aimed at self-control, the preservation of the two fraternal peoples of Bahrain and Qatar, and the avoidance of violence; and their persevering quest to preserve the rights of the member countries to complete sovereignty over their territories and the security and peace of their sons. Following is the text of the statement.

The Government of Bahrain expresses its regret at the action carried out by a Qatari military force against Bahraini territory and the detention of unarmed civilian workers. The Government of Bahrain considers this action a departure from the principles of good neighborliness on which the GCC is based. Bahrain also expresses its great appreciation to His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and the Government of fraternal Saudi Arabia for their good efforts to bring the parties together, contain the crisis, and restore things to normal.

Bahrain affirms its support, blessing, and total responsiveness to these efforts.

Bahrain also appreciates the positive stands of their majesties and highnesses the leaders of the GCC countries for their sympathy with Bahrain's stand, which is aimed at self-control, the preservation of the interests of the two fraternal peoples of Bahrain and Qatar, and the avoidance of violence; and their persevering quest to preserve the rights of the member countries to complete sovereignty over their territories, and the security and peace of their sons.

Manama Paper: People Surprised at Qatari Attack

GF291110 Manama AKHBAR AL-KHALIJ in Arabic 29 Apr 86 pp 1, 10

[Text] Popular quarters in Bahrain have expressed absolute support for the calm way in which the Bahraini Government is trying to contain the crisis resulting from the Qatari military attack on the Bahraini island of Fasht al-Dibal.

AKHBAR AL-KHALIJ local correspondents note the popular quarters are asking: Whose interest does provoking such a crisis serve at a time when the Arab nation is passing through a grave turning point, particularly as it is well-known to everyone in the Gulf that the island of Fasht al-Dibal is a Bahraini island and one of the locations frequented by Bahrainis for recreation and fishing.

The popular quarters also expressed their surprise at the Qatari attack on the Bahraini Coast Guard station being built on the island in light of the fact that it is known that the decision to construct the coast guard station was made at a meeting of the defense ministers of GCC states.

Fears Growing Concerning Abducted Workers

GF300517 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 30 Apr 86 p 1

[By David Tucker]

[Text] Fears were growing last night for the safety of the 29 men abducted by Qatari forces from the Bahraini island of Fasht al-Dibal. The men have been held prisoner in Qatar since Saturday [28 April] when troops stormed the tiny island in a lightning helicopter raid.

Their whereabouts are still being kept secret by the Qataris who have so far allowed no consular access to any of the captives. A British Embassy spokesman in Doha said last night that he had received re-assurances from the Qataris that the two Britons among the men are "well and being well looked after." But he said he had no information on the other prisoners: Dutchman Wim Hoekendyk, two Thais, and 24 Filipinos.

The British spokesman said further "high-level" contacts had taken place with the Qatari authorities. "We are more hopeful now of having consular access quite soon - possibly today," he said.

He said the British were in contact with the Dutch Consul to Kuwait, who arrived in Doha on Monday, and the Dutch Embassy in Kuwait. The Dutch too have been unable to talk to Mr Hoedendyk or any of the other captives.

The British spokesman said that as far as knew neither the Thai nor the Philippine governments were yet involved in negotiations to secure the release of the men. [sentence as published] "So far it is only us and the Dutch," he said.

The commercial manager of one of the Bahrain-based firms whose employees are among the captives last night said he would make an appeal to the Philippines Foreign Minister, in Manila, to join the negotiations.

"I am having relatives contact me from the Philippines but I am unable to tell them how their men are ... [elipses as published] Manila ought to be involved," said group commercial manager of Muharraq Engineering, Derek Ambridge. Seven of his men are among the 29 captives.

A spokesman for Ballast Nedam in Bahrain said the lack of information about the captives was "very worrying." "I cannot understand why the diplomats appear to be unable to see any of the men," he said.

Diplomatic and business sources suggested some of the men might have been wounded in the military action despite assurances to the contrary. And there were fears that the lack of ipformation about the captives hinted that some had been injured.

The two Britons are chief engineer Richard Thompson, aged 40, and surveyor Brian Davies, also 40.

Meanwhile there were signs yesterday that Qatar was continuing its military build-up along its western coast. Bahrain's Coast Guard was telling boat owners to keep well away.

Qatari forces were said to have armoured vehicles positioned on the Fasht with naval gunboats patrolling the waters surrounding the tiny island 18 kms from Muharraq.

Delegation Departs for Foreign Ministers Meeting

GF300830 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0743 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Manama, 30 Apr (WAKH) — Bahrain's delegation to the conference of Arab foreign ministers, scheduled to be held in Fes today, left Manama this morning. The delegation is chaired by 'Ali Ibrahim al-Mahrus, director of the political department at the foreign ministry, and includes Ibrahim 'Ali Ibrahim, ambassador at the foreign ministry; Muhammad al-Mahamid, Bahraini charge d'affaires in Tunis; and 'Abdullah al-Shamlan from the protocol department at the Foreign Ministry.

Firm To Prepare Iraq-Kuwait Water Pipeline Study

GF291524 Kuwait ARAB TIMES in English 28 Apr 86 p 4

[Article by Samir Yasin]

[Text] Kuwait's electricity and water minister, Muhammad 'Abd al-Muhsin al-Rifa'i, said yesterday that the Santa Fe-Braun Company would prepare a study on installing water pipes from Iraqi rivers to Kuwait.

He said a KD [Kuwaiti Dinar] 1.5 million contract had been signed a few days ago, and the study would be ready by September.

Experts would study the economic value of the project and then estimate the total cost and the best method for implementing it. Al-Rifa'i said the ministry found it was better to begin with the study because the Kuwaiti company assigned to study the Iraq-Kuwait gas pipeline projet had been allowed to enter prohibited military areas.

The minister said that about 350 million imperial gallons of water would be supplied daily. Of this, 200 million gallons would be used for drinking purposes and the remainder for irrigation and other projects. Asked whether the project would be linked to the demarcation of the Iraq-Kuwait borders, Al-Rifa'i said the matter did not arise. He said the Kuwait-Iraq borders were well-known and demarcation would not affect the project.

Al-Rifa'i questioned the value of local agricultural production, which consisted mainly of vegetables. He said these could not be considered strategic foods deserving financial sacrifices. He said that the cost of producing 1,000 gallons of water in Wafra, for example, was KD3.400, while Kuwaiti farmers paid only 300 fils.

The minister denied that water produced by the al-Zawr station would be used for irrigation purposes, adding that the main purpose of the station was to achieve self-sufficiency in drinking water for the southern areas. He revealed that the ministry had taken a number of civil defence measures to protect important installations, as well as other secret measures. He said the ministry had collected most of the elctricity and water bills from consumers, and only about KD 38,000 was outstanding.

Kuwaiti Amir Receives Qatari Message

Iran's Seizure of Vessel Against International Law

LD292025 Kuwait KUNA in English 1830 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] United Nations, April 29 (KUNA) — Kuwait declared Tuesday [29 April] that the decree by which Iran confiscated a Kuwaiti-registered vessel last November was completely invalid because it contravenes the provisions and rules of international law.

Reference was made to the cargo vessel Ibn el-Bitar which is owned and operated by the Kuwait-based United Arab Shipping Company (UASC). Iran has alleged that the ship was owned by Iraq prior to the Iran-Iraq war and that its ownership was transferred to the current company of which Iraq was a co-founder.

"Kuwait affirms that the vessel was at no time owned by Iraq and that its construction was ordered by the shipping company of Kuwait for its own commercial fleet," Kuwaiti Ambassador Muhammad A. Abu al-Hasan explained in a letter to the secretary-general.

Upon the establishment of the UASC in January 86 by the six Gulf states, title to the vessel was transferred to the new company which made it part of its fleet, he said. The ship, Abu al-Hasan said, has never been the exclusive property of Iraq but has, ever since it forst operated, been among the holdings of the UASC. "Basing the confiscation solely on Iraq's status as one of the stock holders does not — according to the rules of international law suffice to warrant such an action," he said.

The company's headquarters is in Kuwait and it is in fact managed and directed by the other Gulf states which, except for Iraq, constitute the Gulf Co-operation Council and co-ordinate their economic, trade and financial policies, Abu al-Hasan said. Consequently, they actually direct the management of the company and Iraq is, therefore, just a minor party in terms not only of stockholding also of the direction of the company, Abu al-Hasan said [as received].

Brazilian Foreign Minister Arrives for Talks

LD291227 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0852 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Kuwait, 29 Apr (KUNA) — Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto de Abreu Sodre arrived in Kuwait this morning on a 1-day official visit. He was welcomed at the airport by Rashid 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Rashid, minister of state for cabinet affairs; Sulayman Majid al-Shahin, Foreign Ministry undersecretary; Hamad al-'Ubaydi, acting head of the Protocol Department; Faysal al-Ghays, Kuwaiti ambassador designate to Brazil; and Kuwaiti Foreign Ministry officials.

In a statement to KUNA on arrival, he said that the purpose of his visit was to acquaint himself with this country which occupies an important position in the Arab Gulf region. He expressed his hope that the visit will help develop bilateral relations between the two countries and bolster the traditional friendship that exists between them, not only in culture but also in other fields, including oil. He said that there were about 2.5 million people of Arab stock in Brazil, and Brazil owes them much for its development. We also cherish the Arabs immensely, he said.

Minister of State Rashid al-Rashid in reply welcomed the Brazilian guest in the name of the amir of Kuwait and his heir apparent and expressed his hope that the visit will be followed by many other such visits.

He added: I thank the Brazilian foreign minister for his kind words and wish to affirm that we are anxious to have good relations with Brazil in all fields. We appreciate Brazil's true stands toward the Arab causes, he said, and look forward to a greater understanding of these causes.

The Brazilian foreign minister during his visit will meet with the heir apparent and prime minister, Shaykh Sa'd al-'Abdallah al-Salim al-Sabah, and hold official talks with Minister of State Al-Rashid and Minister of Oil and Industry Shaykh 'Ali al-Khalifah al-'Adhbi.

Talks With Al-Rashid

[Text] Kuwait, April 29 (KUNA) — Visiting Brazilian Foreign Minister Roberto De Abreu Sodre held a round of talks here Tuesday [29 April] with Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs Rashid al-Rashid on means of expanding bilateral cooperation between the two countries. Al-Rashid told reporters that his discussions with de Abreu Sodre extensively reviewed the Kuwaiti-Brazilian economic relations and tackled political issues concerning the Middle East and Latin America. He added that both sides agreed on activating the economic cooperation protocol and continuing meetings of the joint Kuwaiti-Brazilian commission.

The Kuwaiti side to the talks expressed appreciation to the growing interest of Brazil in developing its relations with the Arab world, and its constant support to Arab causes, mainly the Palestinian question, said Al-Rashid. He added that the Brazilian side lauded Kuwait's strides to spread peace and to preserve the spirit of cooperation among all peoples of the world.

Meanwhile, sources at the oil ministry said De Abreu Sodre discussed with the minister, Shaykh 'Ali al-Khalifah, means of expanding horizons of cooperation between the two countries in the oil fields. The sources said the ministers examined ways to give a greater share for Kuwaiti petroleum products in the brazilian market.

De Abreu Sodre arrived here earlier today on a one-day official visit.

Saudi Arabia, Austria Issue Joint Statement

GF291432 Riyadh SPA in Arabic 1200 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text]Salzburg, 29 Apr (SPA) — A statement was issued following the official visit to Republic of Austria by Saudi Interior Minister His Royal Highness Prince Nayif ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz from 23 to 29 April. The following is the text of the statement:

At the invitation of Austrian Interior Minister Karl Belcha, Saudi Interior Minister His Royal Highness Prince Nayif ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz made an official visit to Austria from 23 to 29 April. His royal highness the interior minister was accompanied by a delegation of officials from the sectors of the internal security forces in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The talks held between his royal highness and the Austrian interior minister, attended by the delegation of the two countries, tackled all aspects of security aimed at consolidating mutual cooperation in public security. Out of their desire to deepen the bonds of intimate friendly relations, the two sides agreed to training, to exchange visits by the directors of the various security administrations departments, to exchange expertise, and to consolidate mutual cooperation between the two countries.

During the visit the grand guest visited a number of police establishments. He called upon the president of the Republic of Austria, His Excellency Rudolf Kirchshlaeger, and conveyed to him the greetings of His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and his royal highness the crown prince. The president asked him to convey his greetings to His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and to the crown prince, His Royal Highness Prince 'Abdallah ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz. The president also expressed his satisfaction over and pride in the friendly relations existing between the two friendly countries. His royal highness also called upon Chancellor Dr Fred Sinowatz and discussed in detail their views on the security situation in both countries and on issues of mutual concern.

The sides affirmed their identical positions toward the issues discussed during the official talks aimed at achieving prosperity and stability for the benefit of the two friendly peoples. At the end of the talks held between Saudi Interior Minister His Royal Highness Prince Nayif ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz and Austrian Interior Minister Karl Belcha in an atmosphere of love and friendship, his royal highness extended an invitation to the Austrian interior minister to visit the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. His excellency accepted the invitation. The date of the visit will be determined later.

Paper Considers Fasht al-Dibal, Arab Differences

[Editorial: "The Suspension of Issues"]

[Text] It is the right of the Arab citizen, especially the son of the Arabian Gulf, and in particular the son of the GCC states, to be pained by the incident of Fasht al-Dibal. This citizen after 6 years of the GCC march has reached a total conviction that any conflict among the GCC cowntries would be solved through the council, in which its member countries have made great strides in political, economic, and military coordination and have established special organs dealing with allm regional affairs.

It is no secret the security concern and the goal of achieving stability in the region and keeping it away from intervention by foreign powers have always been major issues among GCC officials when discussing GCC goals and plans to attain these goals. However, an event such as Fasht al-Dibal contradicts the GCC march and its goals. Thus emerges the need to contain its complications.

It is understandable that some GCC countries have border or other conflicts among themselves, because some traces of British colonialism are still in the region. So the solution to these conflicts must be through dialogue and discussions and with the help of the brothers.

If the Fasht al-Dibal issue presented itself this week to remind us suddenly that there is a suspended matter between Qatar and Bahrain, then it is necessary to solve any suspended issues between two GCC countries. If such issues are found, then the GCC states are unanimously required to adopt a final solution to eliminate any possibilities — no matter how minor they might be — which could lead to exploding the situation.

Any conflicts in the region which cannot be solved through dialogue and understanding assure the entrance of foreign interference in the region. Our region has had enough of foreign interference, struggle, and the ongoing war between Iran and Iraq. There is no more space in the Arab body for a new wound.

Ghali: Libyan Raid 'In No Way' Affects Relations

AU291225 Paris AFP in English 1205 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Madrid, April 29 (AFP) — The Arab world is united in condemning Libya's "policy of destabilisation", Egypt's minister of state for foreign affairs, Butrus Butrus Ghali, said in an interview published here Tuesday.

In the interview in the daily EL PAIS, Mr. Butrus Ghali said the April 15 U.S. air raids on Libya were "very worrying", but would "in no way affect" relations between Cairo and Washington.

He said the United States was still needed for the Middle East peace process and that without its presence, it would be very difficult to reach a new peace agreement.

"The participation of the United States is essential for one obvious reason: its influence over Israel," he said, adding that Egypt did not support Libya.

"We condemn terrorism and we believe that one of the reasons for the American intervention was terrorism," he said. "We (the Arab countries) are all agreed in condemning the policy of destabilisation led by Libya in the Arab world, in Africa and in the world in general."

In Cairo, meanwhile, Egyptian officials said the U.S. aircraft carrier Enterprise had entered the Suez canal from the Red Sea early Tuesday and was heading for the Mediterranean.

The nuclear-powered ship, escorted by five support vessels and several Egyptian navy units, was expected in Port Said, at the northern end of the canal, in the early afternoon.

Egypt normally refuses nuclear-powered ships permission to use the canal.

Lutfi Discusses Jordanian Talks, Ties With Libya

NC292024 Cairo MENA in Arabic
1830 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Amman, 29 Apr (MENA) — Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi has asserted that Egypt has been, and will remain, Arab.

During his meeting with Jordanian reporters in Amman this evening, Dr Lutfi noted that Egypt wants a comprehensive, lasting, and just peace, in which Arabs regain sovereignty over all the occupied lands.

Dr Lutfi noted that Egypt did not isolate itself from the Arabs; it was the Arabs who detached themselves from Egypt.

Commenting on Egyptian-Libyan relations, Dr 'Ali Lutfi said that Egypt was the first Arab state to denounce U.S. aggression against Libya despite all the terrorist actions conducted by the Libyan regime against Egypt. He continued: Egypt has also denounced military aggression as a means of fighting terrorism and believes that an international conference is the best way to deal with terrorism.

Dr Lutfi noted that Egypt formed an integrated medical team, equipped with everything needed to deal with the situation resulting from the aggression on Libya, but Libya replied by saying that they have sufficient equipment.

Commenting on the arrival of a Libyan envoy to Egypt requesting armaments, Dr Lutfi noted that the weapons available in Egypt were obtained for self-defense. He added: After a long alienation between the two countries, attention should have been focused on purifying relations rather than requesting arms.

In his remarks, Dr 'Ali Lutfi touched on the Tabah issue and expressed optimism over an eminent recovery of Egyptian sovereignty. He noted that the Egyptian-Israeli talks have managed to achieve a certain degree of progress in this field. He added that a final solution to the problem will be achieved, pointing out that Egypt possesses the official historical documents proving its claims to that beloved part of the Egyptian territories.

Replying to a question on whether the meetings of the Joint Jordanian-Egyptian Higher Committee had discussed political relations between the two countries, the prime minister noted that this issue is under continuous coordination between his Majesty King Husayn and President Husni Mubarak, whether during personal meetings or telephone conversations. In this context, Dr Lutfi asserted that there is full coordination between the two countries and the relations between them are excellent.

Commenting on the achievements of the Joint Jordanian-Egyptian Higher Committee during its present session, Dr Lutfi said that two new sectors, namely industry and health and medicine, were introduced into the fields of cooperation between Egypt and Jordan. He added that it was agreed to hold a meeting between industry ministers of both countries, with a view to coordinating their efforts in the field of production, as a prelude for a complete industrial integration.

The prime minister said that the two countries agreed to establish a joint fodder and meat company, which is to start with 100,000 head of sheep and 20,000 head of cattle.

In the field of information, it has been agreed to establish a Jordanian information office in Cairo next month, in addition to a JNA correspondent in Cairo and his Egyptian counterpart in Amman.

In the field of economic cooperation, Dr 'Ali Lutfi said it is surprising that both countries should sustain losses following the fall in oil prices since Egypt is an exporter and Jordan an importer. Dr Lutfi asserted that cooperation is in the interest of people of both countries.

In his remarks, Dr Lutfi noted that Jordanian Interior Minister Hasan al-Kayid attended part of the higher committee's meetings where it was agreed to conclude a number of security agreements providing for cooperation in the field of fighting narcotics. An agreement for the extradition of criminals also has been prepared and soon will be signed by the interior ministers of both countries in Cairo.

The prime minister added that it has been decided to send a team of Jordanian planning experts to Cairo next June to study the Egyptian 5-year plan with a view to coordinating the 5-year development plans of both countries.

A number of Jordanian young people will also visit Cairo to attend training courses in the Egyptian planning institutes.

Abu Ghazalah on National, Military Security

NC241605 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic
1241 GMT 24 Apr 86

[Interview with Field Marshal Muhammad 'Abd al-Halim Abu Ghazalah, deputy prime minister and minister of defense and war production, by Siham al-Buluq on the anniversary of the liberation of Sinai — place and date not given — recorded]

[Excerpts][Al-Buluq] Before we begin the interview, I would like to convey the Egyptian people's heartfelt congratulations and appreciation to Your Excellency and the Armed Forces, which always respond to the call of the homeland.

[Abu Ghazalah] Thank you very much. This, however, is our duty. The Armed Forces belong to the people and will continue to do so.

[Al-Buluq] Your Excellency, our talk today is taking place as we approach the anniversary of the full liberation of Sinai on 25 April 1982. This anniversary holds a special place in the heart of every Egyptian. What are your feelings on this occasion?

[Abu Ghazalah] You yourself have just said that this anniversary is of special significance to every Egyptian. As an Egyptian, I share these feelings. As I see it, the land was liberated and returned to its motherland.

[Al-Buluq] There is no doubt that, after 25 April 1982, a change took place in Egyptian military strategy. Could you kindly tell us about this change?

[Abu Ghazalah] I have been asked this question many times. I can say that Egyptian military strategy is based on deterrence. I have elaborated on this point on so many occasions. However, I don't mind explaining it again. By deterrence, we mean that Egypt should have the military capability to prevent any aggression against it. If deterrence is to be effective, Egypt must possess a military force capable of convincing any party which might attempt, intend, or plan, now or in the future, to launch an aggression against Egypt, that Egypt's forces are such that there would be a high price to be paid in the event of an aggression. This party should realize not only that it would be defeated, but also that it would lose far more by an aggression than it would gain from it.

Furthermore, we must have the determination to use force when the need arises. This is what we are doing and this is our purpose. We believe that every Egyptian may rest assured that we are in the process of achieving 100 percent of this strategy.

[Al-Buluq] In a speech last month, Your Excellency said that defense is a national strategy, and that it requires material aid from the ministry of defense, which is in charge of planning, and other ministries, which are in charge of implementation. How is this coordinated?

[Abu Ghazalah] As I said in my speech last month, national security depends on many things, including military security. Military security is inseparable from other factors, such as economic security. That is why we say that the whole subject is indivisible. Hence, there must be an integrated plan to ensure Egyptian national security through coordination. A comprehensive plan should be drawn up, involving the various ministries and other parties concerned.

[Al-Buluq] Your Excellency, as we speak of the days of peace, the beautiful days which Egypt is experiencing, we see another picture, a dark and gloomy picture, resulting from international terrorism. International terrorism is no doubt a recent term in the military vocabulary. Given that it is being exercised by state against state, state against individual, do you think international terrorism can be (?condoned) militarily as it has been (?condoned) in times of war?

[Abu Ghazalah] No, no. International terrorism by its very nature cannot be (?condoned). People will reject it. It is impossible that a person should be on a plane and find that there is a bomb on board, or discover that someone is hijacking the plane. The hijacking of aircraft, the problems we are experiencing, the killing of passengers, and all incidents of this kind could have a radical effect on the world economy, which depends on air traffic and good transportation. Today the whole world is a quasi state, for as a result of technology, distance no longer has any meaning. You board a plane and a few hours later you find yourself in Paris or London, while before it would take days or months to get there. So there is no way people will condone international terrorism. The solution to international terrorism is for states to assume their responsibilities. There should be an international conference, as his excellency the president said. Let us sit down together, and decide on sanctions to be taken against those countries which adopt terrorism. If all countries today were to reject and combat terrorist organizations, these organizations would have no place to go. The problem is that there is a terrorist organization in a particular country. That country protects it, therefore it is able to function. If it could not find anywhere to base itself, how could it function? International terrorism will not survive if all countries agree to reject and combat it. This cannot be achieved without international cooperation. When a state departs from international consensus, why then does the United Nations exist, why do international agreements exist? It is possible even to have regional agreements, or international agreements which would include all states. If one country does not conform, the other states would boycott it. There are many ways of solving the problem.

[Al-Buluq] At a time when the fraternal state of Sudan announced that it was suspending integration plans, Egypt continued to supply it with arms and did not fail to provide it with assistance. Was this timing deliberate, or was it coincidental?

[Abu Ghazalah] With regard to this matter, we have never failed Sudan when it has asked us for something, in spite of the serious economic difficulties that Egypt faces. For your information, no country in the world has given Sudan as much as 10 percent of the aid which Egypt has given it. We are not bestowing any favours on Sudan. It is a duty. We have always provided it with this aid, quietly and in accordance with its requests. The timing was not planned, and we continue to stand by Sudan wholeheartedly.

[Al-Buluq] And about the situation in the South?

[Abu Ghazalah] The situation in the South is an internal Sudanese problem. I believe that they have always said they are capable of resolving it. All I can say is that we hope that those foreign countries that are helping Garang will stop doing so, so that Sudan may find a solution.

Mubarak Comments on Development Prospects

[Excerpts] President Muhammad Husni Mubarak inaugurated the Heliopolis-Hulwan highway today.

Following the ceremony, President Mubarak said: If we wish to develop our country, then we must focus on the kind of infrastructure which will permit such development. He called on everyone to fully implement Egypt's resources in order to ensure that the country will have the civilized facade appropriate for attracting investors and tourists. He affirmed: Despite the deficiency in our resources this year, we must nevertheless work toward this goal. He indicated that next year is expected to be very difficult for Egypt, particularly in light of the fact that the deficit in its petroleum resources will reach $2.2 billion. He added: This is a difficult stage. However, we must bear the burden and cooperate, otherwise we will collapse. The people must be made aware of this fact.

[Excerpts] Cairo, 29 Apr (MENA) — Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti has highlighted his country's backing and support for President Husni Mubarak's peace policy and for stronger bilateral relations.

The Uruguayan president made these remarks at a press conference in the Republican Palace in Al-Qubbah this morning before leaving Cairo for Sinai, where he will inspect his country's contingent in the peace-keeping force.

President Sanguinetti said that he invited President Mubarak to visit Uruguay, and that the invitation was accepted. The date of the trip will be fixed later. He noted that the states of Latin America hold President Mubarak in particular esteem. Sanguinetti expressed his belief that this visit will be of great significance, as it will allow direct contacts between Egypt and Latin America.

On the Palestinian issue, the Uruguayan president said that his country has no intention of recognizing the PLO for the time being. He added: We are focusing on the right to self-determination so we can see who represents the Palestinian people. He noted that his country has had relations with Israel since 1948 and has always defended Israel's right to exist within secure borders. This position, he declared, must be accepted by all countries, and does not conflict with the search for a solution to the Palestinian problem. [words indistinct] he expressed his belief that the main position is reflected in the need to give the Palestinian people this right. He stated that Uruguay considers Yasir 'Arafat and the PLO to be temporary actors representing an interim situation. They will remain until an official entity for the Palestinian people and their representative emerges.

The press conference opened with a statement by the Uruguayan president, who said: I would like, before anything else, to express my satisfaction with this visit to Egypt. I would like to give special thanks to the press for its interest, the Egyptian people for the feelings they have shown during my trip, and the Egyptian government for the clarity of our talks.

He added: This visit has achieved two goals. It has shown our support for a policy of peace and has strengthened Egyptian-Uruguayan relations. During our discussions with President Mubarak, we examined the Middle East problem. We voiced our backing of his excellency's policy. He pointed out: Uruguay's relations with both Egypt and Israel have traditionally been friendly. Therefore, Uruguay supports the Camp David agreements and has taken part in the multinational force in the Sinai. He went on to say: Time has shown that the Camp David accords were the right answer for the region's problems and that was the view we passed on to President Mubarak.

When asked about his country's plans to resolve its difficulties over debts, President Sanguinetti explained that Uruguay plays an active role in the question of settling debts. It would like to reach a solution through negotiations with the aim of extending the term of the debt and covering the interest. Much has been accomplished in this area.

Communique Issued on Visit

[Text] President Muhammad Husni Mubarak and Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti have expressed concern over the continued escalation of the arms race, particularly in nuclear arms. They stressed that efforts must be intensified worldwide, more specifically, by the two superpowers, to put an end to this race. They called on the superpowers to hold talks on the important issues threatening world security and peace, and to focus more attention on a solution to the hotbeds of conflict in the world. This came in a joint communique issued during the Uruguayan president's visit to Egypt.

The two presidents called on the world community to abide closely by the provisions of the UN Charter, particularly with regard to international relations, and to avoid resorting to force to solve international disputes.

The communique noted that President Mubarak had made an in-depth analysis of the situation in the Middle East. The two presidents agreed on the importance of establishing a just and comprehensive peace in the area on the basis of UN Resolutions 242 and 338. They emphasized the right of all countries of the region to live within secure and recognized boundaries, and the importance of recognizing the legitimate and national rights of the Palestinian people, including their right to self-determination.

President Mubarak praised Uruguay's contribution to peace efforts in the region through its participation in the MFO in Sinai. The Uruguayan president, for his part, praised Egypt's efforts to reach a peaceful solution to the Middle East issue. He welcomed Egypt's proposal to establish a Latin American group to follow up on and support peace efforts in the Middle East, and expressed his country's readiness to participate in such a group. President Mubarak and President Sanguinetti expressed their concern and regret over the continuation of the Iran-Iraq war, stressing the importance of international efforts to put an end to this war.

With regard to Lebanon, the two presidents expressed their ardent hope that a solution acceptable to all Lebanese parties would be reached without foreign interference.

President Mubarak lauded the effectiveness of Uruguay's moves to preserve peace in Central America. The two presidents reiterated the importance of this endeavor. They condemned the policy of racial discrimination, stressing their full support for international action to put an end to this policy. They also condemned all forms of international terrorism, expressing their readiness to provide assistance to fight it.

The Uruguayan president said he supported President Mubarak's initiative on ways to combat international terrorism and his appeal for an international conference to be held under the auspices of the United Nations.

Concerning world economic problems, the two presidents stressed the importance of the steps being taken in Latin America to reach a solution to this problem, as well as the efforts of African states to deal with their foreign debt.

The two presidents indicated that the dialogue with the developed countries on important economic issues is meeting with obstacles. They called for the examination of ways to deal with world economic issues and trends. They both agreed that African-Latin American dialogue could only enhance understanding among the countries of the two continents.

The two presidents expressed satisfaction over the progress in bilateral relations and agreed on the importance of establishing joint committees in the domains of economy and trade, in accordance with the 1977 trade agreement.

President Mubarak was happy to accept the Uruguayan president's invitation to visit Uruguay. The communique stated that the Uruguayan president's talks in Egypt were held in an atmosphere of understanding and goodwill, reflecting the friendship between the two countries.

Lack of Arab Military Cooperation Lamented

PM210931 Cairo AL-AHRAM INTERNATIONAL EDITION in Arabic 18 Apr 86 pp 1,3

[Part six of Chief Editor Ibrahim Nafi' article: "The World and Us; Egypt and the Arabs and the Attack on Libya"]

[Excerpts] The violent events in Libya during the past few days have overshadowed all other events and imposed themselves on us. Objectively I must say that we are against any attack on any Arab country even if that country is Libya, whose behavior toward us I will explain in a while, along with how much maintaining good neighborliness with it in the most critical and difficult cirmustances is costing us.

We are against any attack by a superpower against a small state, even if this small state may be sponsoring terror or carrying out terrorist operations in all parts of the world.

We are also certainly against innocent victims paying with their blood and lives the price of the leadership's recklessness or its competing for leadership at the expense of the people's real interests.

Therefore, we are against the recent U.S. aggression against Libya and against these raids that showered it with lethal television bombs. We are against shedding a single Arab's blood in any place in the Arab land.

But we also hope from the depth of our hearts that all the Arab parties that rally to one another, compete with one another, or ostensibly show solidarity with one another will rise to Egypt's level in its realization of national responsibilities.

Let us ask ourselves this question: Could the Arab land possibly be open to attack by any power without with the attacker not reckoning with a military, economic, and political reaction as would be the case now if the Arabs had a unified strategic view and a capability comensurate with their resources and knew how best to use this capability and to direct it toward the correct objectives?

I do not claim that we can fight a superpower or countries stronger than the Arab countries, but I am quite certain that the existence of such an Arab strategy that would define the objectives and know how best to exploit the capabilities would, at least, make any potential aggressor think of the reaction of the vast Arab nation toward him even before taking the first step. We are unable to achieve even the minimum security or dignity for ourselves after having squandered Arab wealth and the Arab capability in areas and in a manner that do not serve the Arab national interest and having failed to produce a comprehensive Arab strategy that would define the objectives and utilize the capabilities in order to achieve them.

Perhaps by discussing what the Arabs offered to Egypt in military aid in the past 30 years will underline the facts of what I am saying.

There is no comprehensive strategy for the Arab nation as a whole. Some of the Arab countries, epecially the rich ones, still depend on the policy of reacting to events one by one. This is contrary to the evident need for a comprehensive strategic concept in view of the great need of the Arab states, particularly the conservative ones, to defend themselves and preserve their position. These countries still believe in the idea that the U.S. umbrella will protect them. They depend on this infinitely, not realizing the dangers of this total reliance and not heeding the lesson of the Shah of Iran and the Philippines' Marcos.

Despite the fact that everybody in the area is aware that there is no hope for stability in the Arab countries unless Egypt is strong and capable, they are acting contrary to the obligations and duties which this strategic fact imposes on them.

Let us frankly open the file regardless how harsh this frankness is:

Officials in the Arab states, primarily in Saudi Arabia, often talk about the military aid they gave to Egypt. They let some people say on their behalf that they offered Egypt $60 billion in the past years and other times they say $90 billion. The facts which the politicians of these countries know more than anybody else is that all the military aid that Egypt received from the rich Arab countries throughout the wars it fought on their behalf was no more than $3.6 billion. These figures are contained in the military records which we are publishing for the first time so that the truth will emerge. Or, let us look at the amounts that have lost their way to Egypt and, most importantly, of which Egypt did not receive a single dollar in cash; instead they were paid directly to arms factories in the West. We know and they know more than us the "nature" of these deals with arms factories to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars. We know and they know too how much of these amounts went into the pockets of Arab middle men. According to some Western estimates the commission on any arms deal with a rich Arab state could reach 50 percent of the deal's value.

According to this realistic calculation we can therefore say that what Egypt actually received could not be more than $1.8 to $2 billion at the best estimate.

Besides, why go far? Did Egypt not give these very countries military aid that is equivalent and even more than the value of these military deals?

Everybody knows that it was Egypt that trained all or most of the Arab armies. How much would such training have cost them had they brought in foreign instructors or sent their personnel abroad for training?

It was the Egyptians who trained the Kuwaitis in the use of the Soviet surface-to-surface missiles; they trained the Saudis in the Egyptian naval college before they established their own college where they receive instructions from the Americans; and it was the Egyptians who during the unity turned the Syrian Army from a political army that was worthless and incapable of fighting into an army able to fight. It was also the Egyptians who established the UAE's Air Force and who trained its naval forces. Egyptian colleges received students from all the Arab countries in the past 30 years.

So, by mathematical calculation how much would this training cost? An American military instructor costs about $300,000 a year. How much would these countries have paid had they imported foreign instructors?

Indeed what is the economic value of the educational missions that Egypt has sent and is still sending to all the Arab countries in order to teach their new generations? Some of the pupils of these missions are now rulers and notables.

Does this not mean that the military aid they gave to Egypt was not a one-sided giving, but rather mutual exchange or in repayment of what Egypt has given and is still giving?

Indeed the story of the Arab Authority for Military Industrialization could sum up the tragedy of Arab cooperation to create an Arab military capability. When the authority was established Egypt became a partner in it with ten military factories whose value was estimated at $180 million which was the share of each of the four partners. It was greatly unfair for its ten factories to be estimated at such a low value, yet Egypt accepted in the hope of creating an Arab military industry.

Later they withdrew from the authority after it had succeeded in establishing a military industry base.

A few years after they withdrew they started talking about establishing a Gulf military industry, but nobody asked them how they could establish such an industry, when they did not have a single skilled worker to work in it nor the technicians needed for it.

What is said about the Arab Authority for Military Industrialization can also be said about the Arab brothers who prefer to buy military equipment from any country, even if it was of a lesser quality and higher cost than that produced by the authority's factories. They do so so that they will not help Egypt in dealing with its economic crisis. The most recent example was what the Saudis did when they bought Hawk training planes from abroad while knowing well that the authority's factories produce the Alpha jet trainer which could be better and cheaper than the Hawk. Besides, it is produced by the factories of the authority in which they are partners even if in theory. Another example is the purchase by the Saudis of Tornado planes for $10 billion while they do not have the pilots that could fly them or the technicians and the services necessary for them. Which means that these planes will be flown by foreign pilots and ground services will be provided to them by foreigners indefinitely. This is at a time they could have bought the Mirage 2000. In any case, the question in the final analysis is not that of arms sales. Had it been so we would have sold arms to whoever asked for them, beginning with Iran.

Therefore, the Iraqi brothers have no right to say that all that Egypt is offering them is arms sales. It is not a matter of sales. Egypt is not an arms dealer that sells arms to anybody who wants. Rather is is using its arms production capability in strengthening the Arab capability. It was hoping to expand in this field that is vital for the Arab nation's security, but most unfortunately the Arabs are not helping it to do so. In fact, I would allow myself to say that had Egypt been as financially capable as the Arab brothers it would have offered arms to Iraq freely as a support for it after it made it clear that it wishes to end this diabolical war.

Therefore, the path is clear if they wish to benefit themselves and benefit others and also benefit from Egypt's economic ability to deal with difficulties and from its advanced position.

The path in fact is clear if this was their objective. Those who bought 360 MX tanks in order to boost the French economy and left them in the wasteland in their country could, if they wished, have bought 200 or 300 Egyptian armored vehicles and so strengthened Egypt's economy in their own interest and the interest of all the Arab nation. This is merely one example.

We then come to this strange situation on our western borders which can serve neither an Arab objective nor a national strategy.

Colonel al-Qadhdhafi has established on our borders a defensive-offensive line similar to the Maginot Line. He has stockpiled arms in his arsenal disproportionate to Libya's capability, size, or role. If we were to ask for what purpose these arms are being stockpiled, the answer unfortunately is that they are against Egypt, Tunisia, and Chad and not against Israel.

What is the purpose of this vast arsenal? Is it for use against Israel?

Historical facts show us that Al-Qadhdhafi has not committed a single action against Israel in any part of the world out of fear of Israeli reprisals. The facts also show that his terror is always directed against Egypt, the United States, the Palestinians, Saudi Arabia, and some European countries. But he never goes near Israel. What stops him fighting Israel if his planes have a 3,000 km range?

There are Israeli embassies and airline offices in most world capitals. Why do his terrorist operations not go near them?

The answer is known and understood. His terror does not go near near Israel because his terror is directed against others and his arsenal is not directed against Israel but against his Arab and African neighbors.

The result was that where he was supposed to support the Egyptian military and economic capabilities simply by abstaining from threatening Egyptian security he was instead making threats against Egypt and thus creating an unstable situation on Egypt's western border costing Egypt additional financial burdens exhausting its budget and preventing it from achieving its objective of building up Egyptian capability and continuing construction and development.

This is what Al-Qadhdhafi wants: No war with Israel, no support for the Arab capability vis-a-vis Israel, and no participation in an Arab strategy that would ensure stability and security for the Arab countries. This is the problem and this is the catastrophe the whole Arab nation is experiencing because of its silence over this strange Arab situation.

If they were really sincere in building Egypt's military capability they would have given Egypt a loan of $4 to $5 billion to be invested in financing its arms requirements just as they have financed and are daily financing the Gulf War that is exhausting the Arab capability to no end.

If they were desirous of supporting Egypt economically they would have offered it a $4 or $5 billion interest-free loan, just as they offered the United States a $35 loan at 0.75 interest as administrative expenses.

But apparently they do not wish to do so, for they are busy supporting the U.S. economy, the French economy, and the British economy despite the fact that North Sea oil was the cause of the catastrophe of the fall in oil prices.

They are also busy supporting the Gulf war. They are busy backing Syria against Iraq and Iran against Iraq and being silent over Al-Qadhdhafi because his danger is far from their borders. They are also turning a deaf ear to the call for Egypt's return to the Arabs and for supporting Egypt's capability, which is their only protection in the area.

Will I therefore be going too far if once again I ask the bitter question: Cain, what are you "doing" to your brother now?

The article is to be continued.

[Communique No 2,207 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 29 April 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. With the power of God all arms strike, with the courage of all men we safeguard Iraq, and with every deadly weapon we destroy the aggressors. Thus, we confirm our loyalty to the land and embody our march along the roads of victory. The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. Last night enemy forces attacked some of our valiant units' positions on the VII Army Corps front. Our fighters confronted them very bravely and boldly, using all types of weapons. Following a series of fierce battles all night long yesterday and today, and effectively supported by our heroic Air Force, our capable artillery, and the bold Army helicopter gunships, our forces succeeded in halting the failed enemy offensive and in inflicting massive losses in personnel, weaponary, equipment, and hardware.

In other areas in the same sector, the following was achieved: One excavator and two vehicles, one of which was laden with ammunition, were destroyed; eight ammunition dumps and four machinegun emplacements were destroyed; and several fires were started in enemy positions.

2. Our Air Force resumed its bold assaults in order to mete out just punishment to the criminal aggressors. Our planes today lent the best and strongest support to our ground forces on the heroic VII Army Corps front, inflicting massive losses in 183 combat missions after which the brave eagles returned safely to base in God's care and protection.

3. The bold Army helicopter gunships played a memorable role in supporting our ground forces in the VI Army Corps northern sector and on the VII Army Corps front. The helicopter cavaliers carried out 227 combat missions against enemy forces, inflicting large losses. They then returned safely to base, praise be to God.

4. Our brave forces in the V Army Corps northern sector seized the following weaponry, hardware, and material, in addition to that mentioned in our previous communiques: two 57-mm antiaircraft guns, two 120-mm mortars, one 81-mm mortar, three RPG-7 launchers, three GC rifles, four radios, one vehicle, two tractors, one telephone exchange, six field telephones, and a large quantity of military hardware and equipment equivalent to 10 large truckloads.

5. Two enemy groups attempted to approach our forward positions in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah. Our hero fighters confronted them with their strong fire, inflicting human losses and forcing the rest to flee. Elsewhere in the same sector, one enemy soldier was killed and four infantry positions were destroyed.

Lufti Praises Cooperation

JN291906 Amman Television Service in Arabic 1700 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Egyptian Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi has praised achievements made in coordinating and bolstering relations between Jordan and Egypt which were realized by meetings of the Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee and meetings between the two countries' officials. During a meeting with chief editors of local newspapers and radio, television, and news agency correspondents, Dr Lutfi discussed the fourth session of the Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee and its achievements and future plan, affirming that cooperation between the two fraternal countries will be bolstered as a result of expanding cooperation and coordination to the fields of industry and health.

Dr Lutfi said visits between Jordanian and Egyptian officials will be exchanged in order to benefit from the two countries' expertise. The aim is to reach a stage of industrial integration and coordination in the fields of health. Dr Lutfi praised Jordan's progress in the fields of services and health care.

On coordination in the fields of transport, Dr Lutfi praised the land route between Jordan and Egypt. He said this route will be used for the travel of Egyptian pilgrims to Saudi Arabia via Aqaba. He pointed out that the Egyptian Government recently built a road between Suez and Nuwaybi' which shortens the distance by 150 km. This will increase the use of this route, which was used by 650,000 people from both countries during the first year of its opening.

He said it has been agreed to establish projects, the most important of which is a holding company with a capital of $50 million. Other companies will emerge from this company such as those for forage, meat, and transport among Egypt, Jordan, and Iraq, as well as other companies which will be agreed upon in the future.

Dr Lutfi also touched on coordination in other sectors, such as agriculture, information, tourism, education, and measures which were adopted to implement the conclusions of joint committees.

London Magazine on Future Husayn Visit to Moscow

An Israeli newspaper said today that Jordanian television has organized an Israeli-Jordanian meeting in which some intellectuals from the two countries will participate in Paris tomorrow, Wednesday.

Upper House of Parliament Endorses New Electoral Law

JN271148 Amman Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Text] The Upper House of Parliament has endorsed the election law of the Lower House of Parliament for the year 1986. Addressing a house session under Speaker Ahmad al-Lawzi, Prime Minister Zayd al-Rifa'i thanked the house members for deeply examining the draft law. He said the approval reflected existing coordination between the legislative and executive authorities for serving the common benefit.

The prime minister noted that laws could not be static and that reassessment and modernization are vital phases of the legislative process. Should a law need be revised, the prime minister said, the government would not hesitate in proposing necessary amendments.

Reportage on FRG Envoy's Visit to Beirut

Examines Status of Embassy

NC291002 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 0915 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Reinhardt Schlagintweit, head of the FRG's Middle East Department [title as heard], has said that his country has made no decision to close its embassy or reduce the size of its diplomatic mission in Beirut. The FRG official made this statement after his meeting this morning with Fu'ad al-Turk, secretary general of the Foreign Ministry. He also said that the FRG is concerned about the safety of its citizens.

Schlagintweit explained that the purpose of his trip is to find out how FRG nationals and embassy employees living in Beirut are doing, and to exchange views with Lebanese officials. In addition, he noted that he will meet with Prime Minister Rashid Karami and Minister Nabih Birri later today, and will see President Amin al-Jumayyil tomorrow. The FRG official is now in West Beirut.

Karami Confers With Envoy

NC291540 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1500 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Prime Minister Rashid Karami has declared that the remedy for international terrorism lies in dealing with the political factors behind it. The prime minister noted that there is an enormous difference between so-called terrorism and the actions of people who are defending their rights, land, and future.

The prime minister made these remarks during his meeting with the head of the FRG Foreign Ministry's Middle East Department today. The FRG official came to Beirut to examine the situation in Lebanon in light of recent developments which have emerged as a result of the tripartite agreement. Discussion during the meeting also dealt with the so-called international terrorism.

The FRG official later met with Minister Nabih Birri. Their talks dealt with the current situation existing in Lebanon and the region. The FRG official expressed profound concern at the fact that the tripartite agreement had not yet been implemented within the context of efforts to solve the Lebanese crisis.

The same topics were also discussed during a meeting between the FRG official and Ambassador Fu'ad al-Turk, the secretary general of the Foreign Ministry.

Khalid Chairs Beirut Meeting on Current Issues

NC291501 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic 1400 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Parties and organizations of Beirut held a meeting today under the chairmanship of His Eminence Mufti Hasan Khalid. After the conclusion of the session at 1500, the following statement was issued:

In response to a call by his eminence Mufti Khalid, and after undertaking consultations with political, party, and social leaders in Beirut, an expanded meeting was held this morning under the chairmanship of his eminence. The conferees discussed the current political events and developments which the region in general and Lebanon and Beirut in particular are experiencing. The discussions also dealt with ways to preserve Beirut's well-being, its bright cultural heritage, and its distinguished and historic Arab role. The conferees touched on the means needed to safeguard Lebanon's leading role in the fateful Arab stands taken against Israel's aggression in the south.

The statement noted the conferees' praise for the Islamic national resistance in the south, which continues to carry out heroic and daring operations against the Israeli enemy and its agents. The conferees' viewpoints were identical with regard to all the issues under discussion. They also called for cementing the ranks in order to confront the great challenges now facing the region.

The statement said that the conferees had agreed to follow up future consultations to ensure the implementation of efforts which reiterate that they key to solving the Lebanese crisis rests in reconciliation on political bases that will preserve Lebanon's Arabism, unity, and sovereignty under the canopy of justice and equality.

Lebanese Forces Honor Cease-Fire Despite Shelling

NC291013 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic 0945 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] A responsible security source in the Lebanese Forces has emphasized that his organization remains determined not to respond to any shooting in order to give a chance to all the efforts being made to reach a firm military truce. The source noted that there has been some sporadic shelling of Bikfayya, Al-Dikwanah, and residential areas in Sodeco and Al-Barjawi since the announcement by the Lebanese Forces Executive Committee of a cease-fire, which took effect at midnight last night.

Syrian Forces Confiscate Socialists' Weapons

NC291744 (Clandestine) Radio Free Lebanon in Arabic 1645 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Exclusive reports indicate that Syrian forces in the upper Al-Matn are currently confiscating the personal weapons of socialist gunmen crossing their roadblocks. This action against the socialists was ordered by Major Rustum, head of Syrian intelligence in the upper Al-Matn and was said to be due to certain differences between the Syrians and the Progressive Socialist Party.

In another development, Syrian reinforcements, including special units and tanks, were reported in certain areas in Al-Batrun.

Voice of Lebanon Reports Attempt on Khaddam's Life

NC291253 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 1223 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpt] The Voice of Lebanon has learned Syrian Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam escaped an assassination attempt last Friday [25 April] afternoon while he was riding in his bulletproof black Mercedes near the northern entrance to Damascus.

According to the available information, there was an explosion, in which a member of Khaddam's entourage, a man named Nasir, was killed. Three others were wounded. Following the explosion, roadblocks were immediately set up to seal off the area and the Syrian security forces detained several suspects.

There are reports that two explosions rocked Damascus on Sunday, 27 April. The first explosion, which took place outside the Al-Umawiyin mosque and was caused by a booby-trapped car, left some casualties. The second occurred in the Al-'Abbasiyah neighborhood, where there was a similar explosion on 12 March.

It is worth mentioning here that the Syrian authorities executed the Lebanese Ahmad Husayn 'Id, 27, at dawn today. 'Id had been convicted of blowing up a refrigerated truck near the northern entrance to Damascus on 12 March.

Vice President Khaddam Reviews Foreign Policy

JN290942 Damascus SANA in Arabic 0822 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, 29 Apr (SANA) — In a statement yesterday, Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam reviewed Syria's foreign policy and its firm and principled stands toward the Arab-Zionist conflict and various issues in the Arab and international arenas.

During a meeting with the participants in the central political preparation course for student union leaders in the universities and institutes, Khaddam stressed that the objective of Syria's foreign policy is to safeguard the homeland, fight aggression, confront imperialist-Zionist-reactionary plots, support the Palestine question, and to achieve comprehensive Arab unity.

Khaddam pointed out that Syria will continue to confront all U.S. attempts to impose capitulatory settlements and solutions aimed at liquidating the Palestine question, closing the file of the Arab-Zionist conflict, and imposing the imperialist U.S. hegemony on the Arab nation. Khaddam said Syria wants just peace, and calls for achieving the constituents of this peace based on Israel's withdrawal from all the occupied Arab territories, and on recognizing the Palestinian people's rights, including their right to establish their independent state on their national soil.

Khaddam denounced the treacherous U.S. aggression against Libya and the fascist Iraqi regime's unjust war against the Iranian revolution — a war which exhausts the two countries' potentials and serves the Israeli-U.S. interests in the region. Khaddam also denounced the course adopted by Yasir 'Arafat and his clique in the Palestinian area, and their role in peddling the defeatist solutions.

Al-Shar' on Syria's Stand on Arab Summit

[Text] Belgrade, 29 Apr (SANA) — In a statement to KUNA, Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar', who is accompanying President Hafiz al-Asad in Belgrade, has said that Syria has agreed to Libya's request to convene an emergency Arab summit to take place in the city of Sabha, Libya. Answering a question by KUNA, al-Shar' said that if the proposed emergency Arab summit is not held in Libya, as proposed by the Jamahiriyah, to discuss an urgent subject — the U.S. aggression against Libya — it would be better to hold an ordinary Arab summit that is well prepared through contacts and consultations among Arab kings and presidents to guarantee its success.

On the subjects which Syria believes that the summit should discuss, Al-Shar' said an emergency Arab summit is supposed to discuss urgent matters. If the summit discusses ordinary matters, it would be better to convene an ordinary summit after careful and sound preparations to provide proper circumstances and atmosphere for its success. Al-Shar' said that Syria's stand was conveyed to the Jamahiriyah and the Arab League Secretariat General.

Lebanese National Executed for 'Foolish' Crime

JN291425 Damascus SANA in Arabic 1336 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, 29 Apr (SANA) — The death sentence by hanging has been carried out at Damascus' northern entrance, Qabun junction, on criminal Ahmad Hasan 'Id, born in Tripoli, Lebanon, for committing a criminal action resulting in the death or injury of a number of citizens.

It is noteworthy that criminal Ahmad Hasan 'Id's confessions left no room for doubt or wondering about the crime and its planners. Confessions confirmed that nobody except Saddam Husayn, with his rancor and fascism, and his agent, rancorous regime could degenerate to this level of spiteful, foolish crime.

Lebanon's Karami Arrives, Meets Al-Kasm

JN300923 Damascus SANA in Arabic 0855 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, 30 Apr (SANA) — Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami arrived in Damascus this morning on a visit to Syria. He was received at the entrance to Damascus by Prime Minister Dr Abd al-Rauf al-Kasm, Information Minister Yasin Rajjuh, Transportation Minister Yusuf Ahmad, Minister for Presidential Affairs Wahib Fadil, and Minister of State for Foreign Affairs 'Isam al-Na'ib. Later, the band played the Lebanese and Syrian national anthems, and Al-Kasm and Karami reviewed the honor guard which saluted them. Upon arrival at the Prime Ministry Building, Al-Kasm and Karami held a meeting in the presence of Minister of State for Foreign Affairs 'Isam al-Na'ib. The talks dealt with the current situation in the region and the developments in the Lebanese arena.

U.S. Carrier Said Leaving Suez for Mediterranean

JN291603 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 1515 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The Mediterranean — The U.S. nuclear aircraft carrier Enterprise left the Suez Canal for the Mediterranean today accompanied by five warships to reinforce the 6th Fleet. Officials in Washington announced that the Enterprise will join the carriers Coral Sea and America from which U.S. planes launched an aggression against Libya recently. The officials explained that with the arrival of the Enterprise and the ships accompanying it, U.S. war vessels in the Mediterranean will number more than 30, reinforced by more than 240 warplanes.

In this respect, observers believe that the Egyptian regime's approval of Enterprise's transit of the Suez Canal after allowing Saratoga's crossing previously confirms its involvement in the recent U.S. aggression against Libya and any future aggression. It is noteworthy that this is the first time the Egyptian authorities have allowed a nuclear vessel to pass through the Suez Canal.

Cabinet 'Battle' Anticipated on Territory Settlement

[Text] The unity government partners appeared ready to resume battle yesterday over settlement in the territories, after months in which other issues have caused the main tensions in the coalition.

Ministers Gad Ya'aqobi, Labour, and Amnon Rubinstein, Shinui, promised yesterday to raise the question of settlement in Hebron in next week's Cabinet session. They were reacting to Housing Minister David Levi's statement on Sunday that dozens more Jewish families would soon be settled in Hebron and to Vice Premier Yitzhaq Shamir's talk on the same day of "Jewish Hebron."

Industry Minister Ari'el Sharon jumped into the fray yesterday by declaring that setting up new settlements would be one of the main tasks of Shamir's government after the rotation of the premiership in October.

"For me Jewish settlement is holier than any coalition agreement but it appears in the coalition agreement too," Sharon said during a tour of West Bank settlements with hundreds of the Herut convention delegates.

Sharon said that one of Shamir's first steps as prime minister would be to set up a ministerial committee on settlement. "I was at the head of such a committee when most of the settlements in Judaea and Samaria were established," Sharon said, adding that he would be happy to head the unit again.

He said that Israel had rights not only to the West Bank but to the East Bank of the Jordan as well, but that these rights had not been realized because of political constraints. He also repeated his call for imposing Israeli law in the territories.

Shamir, speaking yesterday at a commemoration of the conquest of Yafo in 1948, said, "Just as Yafo was liberated and not given back, so Hebron was liberated and will never be given back. It will be a leading city in Israel, in the land of Israel." He had stressed the smae theme the night before at a Gush Emunim dinner in Hebron itself.

Shamir told Irgun veterans in Yafo yesterday: "People can argue today about whether the battle for Yafo was needed. But you can't forget that a short time after it was liberated, Yafo was full of thousands of immigrants, who had nowhere else to live."

Ya'aqobi also intends to ask the Cabinet to reverse a Treasury decision to give tax breaks only to settlements which have existed for 10 years or less.

According to press reports, the Treasury has already submitted the move to the Knesset Finance Committee for approval.

"The Treasury's decision is a cover for attempts to damage the development towns and to continue giving preference to the West Bank settlement," Ya'aqobi told THE JERUSALEM POST yesterday.

Sources Say Defense Circles Unaware of Arms Deal

TA290859 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 29 Apr 86 p 1

[Report by military correspondent Tali Zelinger]

[Text] Security sources made it clear yesterday that if there is any truth in the remarks made by the U.S. prosecutor that the "Bar'am group" conducted active negotiations for the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and that contracts on credit conditions and supply procedures had already been prepared, then Brigadier General (Reserves) Avraham Bar'am did violate laws of the State of Israel.

The same sources stressed that the only permit given to Brig Gen Bar'am was permission in principle to deal in military information and equipment, and that this permit is not needed by a citizen who is not in the reserves. This permit (which people in the reserves service who work in Israeli security industries also require) serves as a guarantee of oversight and scrutiny, and does not represent authorization to negotiate, mediate, or implement deals involving the export and sale of military information or equipment. For such activity, even in the initial stages, every Israeli citizen, whether a member of the reserves or not, must obtain approval.

Brig Gen Bar'am did not have any specific approval, but rather only a permit in principle. According to security sources, no one in the defense establishment knew of his or his partners' plans to launch any specific negotiations. The security sources claimed that had they known, they would have rejected outright the sale of U.S. arms to Iran from Israel. No mention was made of whether Israel would take steps to get Bar'am extradited when the facts are clarified.

Defense Sources on Aims of Rabin Trip to U.S.

[Report by Re'uven Pedatzur]

[Text] One of Defense Minister Yitzhaq Rabin's objectives during his visit to the United States in the near future will be a resumption of congressional activity to explain Israel's security needs, which require the continuation of the massive aid granted it by the United States. The minister will meet with the most important people in Congress who deal with those issues linked with U.S. foreign aid.

A senior military source believes that Israel can no longer be as confident as it was in the past of its ability to rely on the U.S. Congress to put pressure for the granting of more security aid to Israel than that recommended by the White House.

In addition to these issues and the signing of the memorandum of understanding relating to Israel's participation in the "star wars" project, the defense minister will also deal with the issues of terrorism and ways to fight it. It is thought in the defense establishment that Israel will have to act independently on this matter, but with an understanding with the United States.

Commenting on the affair of (Reserves) Brigadier General Avraham Bar'am, the senior source once again stressed that Israel has no involvement in this matter and that not a single screw has been sold by Israel. Referring to the Hebron events, the senior source said that one of the lessons the IDF has learned from the foulups that occurred when Gush Emunim members blocked the roads was the need to increase the number of soldiers in the area to supervise order and prevent a recurrence of similar incidents.

Egypt Encourages Exports to Israel Via Gaza Strip

TA291132 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 29 Apr 86 p 3

[Report by Dani Tzidqoni]

[Excerpt] The Egyptian authorities are encouraging the export of goods from their country to Israel via traders in the Gaza Strip who are given import permits by the Industry and Trade Ministry representation in Gaza.

The lack of foreign currency in Egypt and the difficult economic situation there are apparently the causes for the promotion of exports to Israel in this manner. At this stage the products involved are spices and watermelon seeds, which enter Israel through the Nizzana terminal.

The Egyptians have also approached the traders in Gaza with a request to export (Denis) fish from the Al-Bardawil to Europe through the services of an Israeli company. Previously an Israeli, Yehuda Segev, had suggested cooperating with the Egyptians in this matter, but they had refused. The (Denis) fish is in great demand in Italy and Greece.

West Bank, Gaza Strip Deficit Increases

TA290612 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 29 Apr 86 p 1

[Report by Shlomo Ma'oz]

[Text] The deficit in the balance of goods and services between the occupied territories and Israel increased by 49 per cent in 1985, to total $219 million.

The main reason for the $72 million increase was an $80 million drop in the earnings of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip workers, who are employed in Israel. They were the victims of the erosion of Israeli salaries and of a cutback in construction work.

The trade deficit of the West Bank with Israel was $425 million in 1985, compared to $428 million the previous year, according to figures compiled by the Central Bureau of Statistics.

As opposed to this deficit in trade, there was a surplus in services between Israel and the territories, but that surplus dropped from $281 million to $206 million.

The deficit of the occupied territories is covered by bringing in foreign currency across the border. That foreign currency is then sold on the black market and by currency exchangers, and is one of the chief sources of currency for the Israeli black market.

As a rule, every West Bank inhabitant can bring in $5,000 every time he enters the country.

Jordanian Television Invites Israelis To Appear

TA291017 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew 29 Apr 86 p 6

[Report by Avi Bettelheim]

[Text] Five young people from Israel who are known to have dovish views in the political field and who have in the past published articles favoring the eastern option have been invited by Jordanian television to take part in a dialogue with Jordanian intellectuals and communications people.

The meeting will take place in Paris at the end of this week and will be videotaped by Jordanian television. Part of it will be screened in Jordan.

The invitation from Jordan arrived via leading activists in the North African Jewish community in France. The meeting will take place under their auspices and the expenses, including airfare from Israel to France and living expenses there, are being met by Jordan.

The people who have been invited from Israel are: (Vicky Shiran), formerly spokeswoman for the TAMI [Traditional Movement, Israel] party; David Hemo, a sociologist; Kokhavi Shemesh, a journalist and formerly one of the leaders of the Black Panthers; (Yamini) Ben-Dror, a journalist and former TAMI member; and Avi (Bardogo), an attorney and journalist.

Commentator Zaq on 'Quiet Diplomacy With Husayn'

TA291555 Tel Aviv MA'ARIV in Hebrew 29 Apr 86 p 10

[Commentary by Moshe Zaq: "The Quiet Diplomacy With Husayn"]

[Text] Both Menahem Begin and Yitzhaq Shamir exchanged messages with Husayn when they were prime ministers. They kept all the understandings achieved with Jordan over the course of the years, but they did not meet with the Jordanian king, as Shim'on Peres is in the habit of doing.

Begin sent Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan to meet with Husayn in London and Dayan reported to him that there was no chance of an agreement with Jordan. And indeed, those who were not satisfied then with understandings, like those who are not satisfied now with understandings, suffered a disappointment when no agreement was achieved. However, it seems that Husayn then hinted specifically, just as he is now hinting, that he was interested in a continuation of the dialogue, although he would find it very difficult to reach an agreement.

In any event, since the chance of a dialogue with Egypt then appeared, the dialogue with Jordan was not continued. A year later, when the Israeli Government initiated a meeting between Deputy Prime Minister Yiga'el Yadin and Prince Hasan, the Jordanian crown prince, the meeting was cancelled at the last minute: Jordan was unable to accept the fact that Israel was conducting negotiations with Egypt without Jordan's full incorporation.

Over all the years the cessation of the senior-level Israeli-Jordanian talks did not interfere with their continuation on the operational level. Neighborhood and common interests made this essential.

Nevertheless, the rules of the "secret diplomacy" were kept: rules which enabled Israel and Jordan to reach general understanding in many fields, from border amendments in the 'Arava to the division of the Jordan and Yarmuk River water. In fact, agreements were achieved on all the issues involving the sections of the border touching the international line, south of the Dead Sea on the one hand and north of Tirat Zvi on the other. This was not the case regarding matters involving Judaea and Samaria. Even when Israel suggested to Husayn that mayors and officials of his choice be appointed, he replied that he would prefer not to be involved in Israel's decisions. Arrangements of this type are destined to be disclosed and he did not want to be exposed. The Jordanian king took this line in the past and it is difficult to assume that he will deviate from it, despite the many temptations lying in Israel's proposals.

The murder of Nabulus Mayor Zafir al-Masri came as a warning to Husayn of the danger involved in an Israeli appointment of somebody recommended by Jordan, despite the fact that Al-Masri also took care to obtain 'Arafat's prior agreement.

Therefore, even in quiet diplomacy it is better to act with caution, not to make things difficult for it by burdening it with far-reaching objectives, and not to spur it on to make immediate achievements, break-throughs. The mills of quiet diplomacy grind slowly and the secrecy must be a guarantee against the grave disappointment that could be created in the wake of fostering exaggerated expectations.

Husayn is not deluding himself that he will be able to reach an agreement with Israel. As concerns the Hashemite royal house, which has taken a beating, Jerusalem would make up for it, and he knows that he will not be able to get Jerusalem. However, for three reasons he is prepared to conduct secret diplomacy with Israel:

1. Israel is curbing the Palestinian irredentism in his kingdom.

2. Keeping the Israeli channel open gives him a chance of Israeli support for his kingdom in the event of it being jeopardized by hostile Arab elements.

3. The dialogue with Israel constitutes a sort of immunization injection for the Jordanian claim to Gaza, which has never ever been held by Jordan.

The Jordanian king recently discovered some weakening in Israel's positions, both with regard to the Palestinians and as concerns Israel's willingness to defend Jordan at a time of need, and he is very concerned. Because of this, too, he has an interest in deepening the dialogue with Israel.

In the past Husayn was disturbed by Ari'el Sharon's talk about turning Jordan into Palestine. He did not conceal these fears of his in talks with the Americans. He is now disturbed by statements from the other side of the political spectrum, when even from inside the Labor Party voices can be heard favoring an attempt to talk with the PLO. He fears the loss of the Israeli barrier which has so far blocked the anti-Hashemite forces in the Arab world.

Husayn's rest is no less disturbed by the syndrome the Lebanon war left in Israeli society. The signals he is picking up, that the willingness in Israel that was guided by the security doctrine about preserving the political status quo with its neighbor has decreased and that voices are increasing an Israeli society speaking out against any involvement across the border, have worried him. He fears that, at a time of danger, he will not be able to rely on Israel, as he did in September 1970. These fears have led Husayn into the attempts to talk with Syria.

Al-Asad's consideration is that through the dialogue with Husayn he will block any Israeli-Jordanian-U.S. agreement that could pull Jordan into the Egyptian camp. As a spinoff, Al-Asad tried to obtain the isolation of his arch-enemy, 'Arafat, who had consolidated himself in Jordan.

Husayn's considerations were that, by visiting Damascus, he would be able to force 'Arafat's organization to agree to his conditions for negotiations with the Americans. At one and the same time Husayn tried to prove to the Israelis that he was not tied only to an Israeli option.

The failure of the U.S. mediation between Husayn and Israel over the Palestinian issue mixed up all the cards.

— Husayn no longer needs Al-Asad's pressure on 'Arafat, since, in any event, the PLO leader is incapable of implementing the agreement he signed with him. And Husayn no longer needs a more flexible Israeli position since, as he sees it, Israel has already shown too much flexibility on the Palestinian issue, to the point of jeopardizing Jordan's own position.

— Al-Asad no longer fears an Israeli-Jordanian agreement, since everyone admits that it cannot be obtained and 'Arafat's isolation has in any case been achieved. Therefore, Al-Asad is in no hurry to go to Amman, as expected.

This clearing-up of the situation gives the Jordanian king the chance to go back to the channel of quiet diplomacy with Israel, so as to try to guarantee that at a time of testing the Hashemite Kingdom will be able to rely on its neighbor to the west.

Against this background we can also understand the prime minister's fine distinction between an agreement and understandings. An agreement also contains territorial components which are difficult and complicated and it is its nature to be open. This is not the case with long-term understandings, which can be achieved through quiet diplomacy.

ALGERIA

Finance Minister, French Trade Minister Hold Talks

LD291259 Algiers APS in Arabic 0700 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Algiers, 29 Apr (APS) — Yesterday, Abdelaziz Khellef, member of the FLN Central Committee and minister of finance, received Michel Noir, French minister of external trade, at his ministry. Talks between the two sides focused on the existing economic relations between the two countries and ways of strengthening and supporting them by taking into consideration joint interests especially in the fields of public service, transport, and industry. The two ministers discussed the issues that may be studied by the mixed subcommittees of the joint Algerian-French commission.

Maghreb Parties Issue Political Declaration

["Maghrebian Parties: The Political Declaration" — APS headline]

[Text] Algiers, 29/04/86 (APS) — Parties of the Maghreb countries which ended their works yesterday exhorted the Maghreb countries and all the Arab countries to efficiently face the serious consequences resulting from the imperialist aggression perpetrated by the United States and Israel against Libya and Tunisia and expressed their indefectible [as received] support to the two brother peoples.

In a political declaration released at the end of these talks the political parties expressed their conviction that the Arab Maghreb unity full part of the project of edification of the Arab unity requires the gathering of objective conditions susceptible of mobilizing the Arab peoples and to reinforce their common struggle against the imperialo-Zionist hegemony. [sentence as received]

In this regard they expressed their consideration before the heroical resistance of the Palestinian people under the PLO leadership and called for the unity of ranks of the different formations of the Palestinian resistance.

Considering the recrudescence of the imperialo-Zionist offensive and the press into aiming at the manipulation of the international public opinion, the political declaration reiterated the call of the Maghreb countries for a rapid and urgent solution of the Western Sahara conflict in the interest of the Arab Maghreb and the aspirations of its peoples for unity, progress and stability.

Tripoli Television Broadcasts Death Poem to Reagan

LD292114 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 2006 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Announcer-read poem: "A Poem and Promise From the Libyan People"]

[Text]

The child-killer will be killed without delay,
let all generations soon be witnesses.
Reagan, my people is known;
just read history and see widely known as are all circumstances, you will be killed, most certainly.
The child-killer will be killed without delay,
let all generations soon be witnesses;
your death will remain an example of joy and rejoicing
for the people,
despite masses of guards you will be killed, most certainly.
The child-killer will be killed without delay,
let all generations soon be witnesses;
you will be killed in a contemptible manner,
instantly like a stuck pig;
people will be puzzled and your heart will look like a sieve.
The child-killer will be killed without delay,
let all generations soon be witnesses;
you in this contemporary era witness;
Reagan's killing is inevitable on an ill-fated day,
ill-omened for him.
With the help of Almighty God
the child-killer will be killed without delay;
let all generations soon be witnesses.

Rome Daily Carries Al-Qadhdhafi Interview on Raid

PM301128 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 27-28 Apr 86 p 3

[Unattributed report on interview with Libyan Chief of State Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi by Saed Naqvi of the New Delhi WORLD REPORT at Bab al-'Aziziyah; date not given]

[Text] [Saqvi] Colonel al-Qadhdhafi, the entire world would like to know exactly what happened on the night of 15 April when the Americans bombed Tripoli and your home.

[Al-Qadhdhafi] I was asleep at home with my family. I could not have imagined that in this era there were barbarians planning to attack my family in their sleep. There was no reason of any kind — there was no direct war between the United States and Libya, no reason for the United States to do what it did, no reason for a major power to use its might against a small country.

[Naqvi] Let us talk about the political aspects later. First tell me how you escaped. Did the bombs hit the room you were in or were you far away? Did you see them explode?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The house collapsed into a pile of masonry. I rushed to save the children; it was difficult to make headway amid the bombs and the flames. There were many difficulties that night also because my wife was confined to bed with a slipped disk. The attack was perpetrated by 33 aircraft and centered on my home and tent. You can take a look for yourself. [Al-Qadhdhafi ends] This is the start of the interview with Al-Qadhdhafi granted to the Indian journalist Saed Naqvi, who met with the colonel at Bab Al-'Aziziyah. It is the first exclusive interview granted by the Libyan leader since the crisis. We reprint it in full. Naqvi writes: "Libya may be forced to join the socialist bloc as a result of the American initiatives. Al-Qadhdhafi told me: 'The Americans forced Cuba to become a communist country. Reagan could force Libya in the same direction.' He said that if Libya's neutrality is not observed, 'then we will choose the socialist camp against the imperialist camp.' Al-Qadhdhafi also told me that the Americans know that we [Libyans] have nothing to do with terrorism but that they conduct propaganda against Libya because Libya supports the Palestinian liberation movement. Al-Qadhdhafi also condemned the bomb explosion at the British Airways office in London. Naqvi continues: "I was taken to the hotel at Bab Al-'Aziziyah, the large complex enclosed by high walls where Al-Qadhdhafi usually lives and where his offices are. It was Al-Qadhdhafi's house in this complex that was hardest hit by the American bombs that killed Hana, his 16 month old adopted daughter, and wounded the other children. At the gates there were two tanks sunk into the ground. There were soldiers everywhere. I was taken to a large room furnished with leather sofas and two modern candelabra. The foreign minister led me to a staircase leading to another room well below ground level. In the middle there stood a table tennis table, and a dozen soldiers armed with submachine guns were watching television and smoking.

"After passing through several more rooms I reached an austere low-ceilinged rectangular room with white walls and a table in the middle — apparently a makeshift headquarters. Al-Qadhdhafi wore a dark gray pilot's uniform, with an embroidered black cape over his shoulders. He was standing behind the table and greeted me with a wave. If he was tense he did not show it: He was pensive, but smiled at times."

[Naqvi] How do you intend to respond to the U. S. act of aggression.

[Al-Qadhdhafi] By continuing mankind's struggle, the struggle against imperialism and for every peoples' right to be free and to a place in the sun. We must make every effort to maintain world peace.

[Naqvi] As a statesman and politician, how do you explain Reagan's actions? Why did he do it? For domestic reasons? To alter the political situation in the Middle East?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] There are profound psychological reasons.

[Naqvi] Namely?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The crusading spirit against Islam, an anti-Semitic spirit against the Arabs, because the Arabs are Semites. The Arabs are the real Semites. Moreover, he hates revolution, he hates socialism, he hates liberation struggles. He is a capitalist and a fanatic. He is a failed actor who has become president of a major power and wants to show that he can set big war machines in motion. He is suffering from old age and cancer. He wants the world to end at the same time as his own life is coming to an end. Why should it endure after him? I have studied psychology, so my analysis is well-founded. Reagan has a special relationship with Mrs Thatcher: He wants to show her his real worth.

[Naqvi] His worth as a man?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Yes, exactly. These are the psychological reasons for what he did. Then there are the political reasons. And here his advisers bear the greater share of responsibility: They believe that it is important and necessary to fill the vacuum in the Mediterranean before there are any changes.

[Naqvi] What vacuum?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] His advisers believe that the Soviet Union does not yet have a strong presence in the Mediterranean, which is why they want to gain control of the entire area before that happens. He wants to fill the area before the first Russian aircraft carrier reaches the Mediterranean.

[Naqvi] Do you mean that the first Russian aircraft carrier is about to enter the Mediterranean?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Reagan wants to fill the area before that happens so that the Soviets have no chance of entering the Mediterranean on a large scale. The Russians are constructing two further aircraft carriers. The Americans are afraid of changes in the region that would hinder their presence.

[Naqvi] What developments, what changes?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The attainment of Arab unity, revolutions in the Mediterranean area, the victory of the 'Greens' in West Germany and Europe. NATO's attempt to disrupt the balances achieved after World War II is a very dangerous initiative. The experiment of disrupting the balances is starting with Libya. They believe they have found the right time to alter the balance of power.

[Naqvi] How?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Through their attack, their testing of new sophisticated weapons, the intervention in the area: In the final analysis it is all directed against the Soviet Union. Libya was an obstacle. Libya has repelled the attack: This is why it deserves to be called the Great Jamahiriyah.

[Naqvi] Hijacked aircraft and innocent people killed at airports: This is what we call terrorism. Why is your name associated with such incidents?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The Americans want to put an end to the Arab liberation movement. They find an excuse for hitting the liberation movements. So when there are incidents such as an aircraft hijacking, they exploit them and carry out large-scale propaganda to shift attention away from the Palestinians' struggle.

[Naqvi] But do you deplore acts of terrorism such as the latest attack on the British Airways office?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] We are clearly and definitely opposed to terrorism. Hijacking and killing innocent people... we do not accept such methods. The Americans know that we are not the guilty parties but they want to put an end to the struggle of all peoples for their liberation. But they cannot. Empires always come to an end and the peoples triumph. Violence existed in this world before I carried out the revolution in Libya. Terrorism existed and was carried out by the Americans and Israelis before I was born — in 1936, 1940, and 1948. Those were the years of Israeli terrorism against the Arabs.

There are problems in the world that must be resolved before violence will end — the Palestinian issue, the problem in Ireland, the world's minorities, South Africa, Namibia, the problem of freedom in Latin America, racism, exploitation, colonialism: These are the causes of violence. New Caledonia is a cause of violence, so is Martinique. Violence cannot be eliminated by means of a raid on Libya or on my tent. And this raid on my tent will not end the freedom struggle.

[Naqvi] If Reagan does not heed the nonaligned countries and the United Nations and has the military strength to do what he wants, what will happen?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] He will create a worldwide imbalance between the NATO and Warsaw Pact countries. Then he will find himself having to deal with the Warsaw Pact countries. His action could lead to World War III. But his actions are also hastening the advent of the Arab people's unity.

[Naqvi] Will he drive you into the communist camp?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Whoever comes after me could be driven into the communist camp. So could I.

[Naqvi] Why are you not a communist?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Reagan is trying to show that we cannot be neutral. If there can be no neutrality then we choose to be in the socialist camp against the imperialist camp.

[Naqvi] Has the USSR helped you in the past few days?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Certainly.

[Naqvi]So there will be no more American bombings of Libya....

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The reasons why Reagan attacked us still exist and he could continue along his path.

Al-Qadhdhafi Awards Medals for Service During Attack

LD291323 Tripoli Voice of Greater Arab Homeland in Arabic 1300 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] JANA has learned that the supreme commander of the Libyan Arab Armed Forces [Al-Qadhdhafi] has granted medals of service, grade 1 to all those currently on active service, to all those discharged of service, and to the reserves who carried out their duties during the cowardly U.S.-NATO raids without being ordered to do so.

Further Reportage on Visit by Iranian Ministers

Further on Talks With Al-Mansur

LD292029 Tehran Domestic Service in Persian 1630 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] During the meeting which was also attended by the minister of the Islamic Revolution Guards Corps and by the ambassador of the Islamic Republic of Iran to Libya, Kamil Hasan al-Mansur, secretary of the Peoples Committee of the Foreign Liaison Bureau, welcomed the Iranian delegation, saying: The leadership and people of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah appreciate with great happiness the support and backing of the people and authorities of the Islamic Republic of Iran and when I was in Tehran during the time of the U.S. aggression against Libya, I closely witnessed the sympathy of the Muslim people and support of the authorities of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

In another part of his speech he said: Undoubtedly we are in a single trench and onslaughts and plots by the United States and its allies will not have the slightest effect on the revolutionary morale of the Libyan people.

Kamil Hasan al-Mansur also said: At the nonaligned conference the Iranian delegation carried out some worthy activities in connection with this U.S. aggression and the presence of this high-ranking delegation at this sensitive juncture is yet another demonstration of the depth of solidarity and unity between the two countries.

In his reply Mr Velayati, expressing gratitude for the warm welcome accorded by the Libyan authorities, said: We feel that support for the progressive and revolutionary countries in the Islamic world is a necessary duty and we are manning the same trench with you and, therefore, despite the fact that we are beset with an all-out war, nevertheless when the U.S. attack against our brothers in Libya took place our people deemed it an aggression against themselves, extensively and extraordinarily expressed their support for the Muslim Libyan people, and the presence of this delegation comprising prominent officials of the various organs of the Islamic Republic of Iran in the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah is indicative of our all-round support for the Muslim people and leadership of Libya.

In another part of his speech Mr Velayati, extolled the stances adopted by the people of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, and said: The U.S. onslaught, which took place thanks to the concerted efforts of subservient reactionaries, strengthened the firm resolve of the revolutionary Muslim people of Libya in continuing their struggles against imperialism, Zionism, and reaction and despite the propaganda and psychological onslaughts of the imperialist and reactionary mass media the morale of the people is extremely high.

At the conclusion of this meeting the Islamic Republic of Iran's high-ranking delegation, after visiting the resting place of the martyrs and paying their respects, inspected the populated areas which had been attacked and also visited those wounded during this cowardly attack and who are now in hospital.

Al-Qadhdhafi Receives Ministers

NC300728 Tripoli Domestic Service in Arabic 0500 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The brother leader of the revolution met last night with Iranian Foreign Minister Dr 'Ali Akbar Velayati, Revolutionary Guards Corps Minister Mohsen Rafiqdust, and the members of their delegation. The Iranians handed the brother leader of the revolution a message from their leaders affirming their full support for the Libyan Arab people. In its note, the Iranian leadership said it saw itself in the same trench with the Great Jamahiriyah in confronting the barbaric aggression committed by the Americans and NATO. Iran's leaders also declared that hundreds of thousands of Iranian volunteers are ready to go to the Great Jamahiriyah to join their brothers in protecting the brother leader of the revolution.

Velayati Holds Press Conference

GF290603 Tehran Domestic Service in Persian 0430 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Our foreign minister held a press conference and answered questions posed by Libyan journalists. He commented on the criminal, aggressive U.S. raid over Libya and stated that this was an attack on all Islamic countries. He said: This attack once again has revealed the nature of the U.S. Administration and showed that the world aggressors will do anything to frighten the freedom-loving people of the world. He added: The attack on the brother Jamahiriyah of Libya is another in the chain of plots by the aggressors against the Islamic ummah. My delegation and I support the desire of the great Iranian people to continue the fate-determining struggle against world aggressors and their mercenaries. We announce that the people, government, and officials of the Islamic Republic of Iran declare once again their steadfast and complete support for their Muslim brothers in Libya in the face of any attack and aggression by the U.S. Administration.

Mr Velayati also said: Without a doubt the U.S. aim in this savage aggression was to crush determination to support the just positions of the world's oppressed people. We believe that this action by the Reagan administration is nothing but a clear aggression against Islamic countries. All Muslim nations must adopt correct positions in response to this action to put an end to this kind of incorrect action.

Our foreign minister added: We support Libyan leader Brother Colonel al-Qadhdhafi and we support all Muslim countries. We want them to stand firm in the face of such terroristic actions.

Mr Velayati answered reporters' questions on his views concerning statements by U.S. officials accusing Syria and Iran of supporting terrorism and threatening a retaliatory raid. He said: A question debated by all is on the meaning of terrorism. Who supports the occupation of the land of Palestine, which has caused an entire nation to become refugees? Who supports the apartheid regime of South Africa and the killing of the Muslim people of Africa? Who attacked the country of Grenada? Who has laid siege upon the country of Nicaragua? Who supports dictatorial and anti-popular regimes before those peoples who have risen against such regimes to gain their freedom throughout the world? Who attacked the territorial waters and lands of Libya? Who kills innocent children? Is it any other than the U.S. Government, which has always undertaken such crimes? Is it not only the United States who should be questioned for supporting terrorism?

Mr Velayati concluded his interview with Libyan reporters by saying: We are not afraid of the accusations leveled against us by the United States. We know that a comprehensive cooperation between Iran, Libya, and Syria and their progressive stance toward international issues is cause for anger among the U.S. Administration. Without a doubt we shall continue our support for the just position of the downtrodden people of the world.

Former Tunisian Foreign Minister Arrives in Tripoli

LD291038 Tripoli JANA in English 0844 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, Shaban 19, April 29, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The Tunisian former foreign minister, Mohamed al-Masmoudi, has called on the rank and file of the Arab people to firmly repulse the U.S.-NATO-Zionist onslaught and paralyse its crusading march towards the Arab fatherland.

In comments he made to JANA's correstpondent on arriving in Tripoli's airport yesterday afternoon, Al-Masmoudi has stressed that Al-Jamahiriyah, having been liberated politically, economically and socially, has come to frighten imperialism due to its principled constant stands vis-a-vis freedom worldwide.

He goes on to state that the initiatives taken by Great Al-Jamahiriyah and its continuing incitement to rise to achieve the overall Arab unity have irritated and angered U.S. and its allies in NATO as well as the Zionists.

Al-Masmoudi has also evaluated the heroic stances of the Great Al-Fatih Revolution in its brave encounter with and defeat of the failed U.S.-NATO aggression.

He has, furthermore, saluted the combatant stances of the masses of the Arab nation and their immediate cohesion with their brotherly people of Al-Jamahiriyah through the demonstrations of anger and protest expressing their supportive stand alongside the Libyan Arab people.

He has, also, called on the Arab nation to combat against imperialism so as the Mediterranean Sea becomes free from imperialist influence.

In concluding his comments, he has expressed his hope that the oncoming Arab summit will pass a decisive Arab resolution up to the level of the responsibility as a practical retaliation to preserve the esteem of the Arab nation besides its pride and existence in the face of the imperialist-U.S.-NATO-Zionist onslaught.

Support Reported for Holding Arab Summit in Sabha

GF291821 Doha QNA in Arabic 1805 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Tunis, 29 Apr (QNA) — Libya has requested the extraordinary Arab summit conference — which is due to be held on Saturday — to be held in the Libyan city of Sabha instead of the Moroccan city of Fes, as scheduled.

Informed sources told the QNA correspondent in Tunis that Libya has agreed to participate in the preliminary meeting of the Arab foreign ministers which will be held in Fes tomorrow, Wednesday.

The sources said that Syria has supported the Libyan request, while Iraq has called for not fixing a date for the summit, but leaving the matter to the foreign ministers so that they can determine the need to hold the summit conference and prepare its agenda.

19 UK Nationals Said To Be Expelled as 'Reprisal'

AU301229 Paris AFP in English 1226 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] London, April 30 (AFP) — Libya will expel 19 British nationals over the next 48 hours, the Foreign Office announced here Wednesday.

The people to be expelled work for five British firms, which have been asked to choose the names of those who would be asked to leave the country, the Foreign Office said, adding that Libya had simply indicated the number of people it wanted to send back to Britain.

A Foreign Office spokesman, describing the move as "completely arbitrary", said Tripoli had described it as a "reprisal measure" for London's expulsion last week of 22 Libyans.

AFP Reports 53 Italian Technicians Told To Leave

AU300743 Paris AFP in English 0740 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Rome, April 30 (AFP) — Libya Tuesday told 53 Italian technicians to leave as quickly as possible, the five companies employing them said Wednesday.

Italy had last Saturday asked six Libyan diplomats to leave here in line with a decision by the European Economic Community to reduce the number of Libyan diplomats in Europe following the April 15 bombing raid on Libya, which the United States held responsible for recent terrorist attacks.

A first group of Italians was thought to have left for Malta Tuesday night. The 53 men were picked out Tuesday morning, apparently at random, by police who later returned their passports with "final" exit visas.

The Foreign Ministry here did not comment Wednesday morning, apparently in the hope Libya might be persuaded to change its mind.

Missile Launchers Undergoing Maintenance in France

AU291405 Paris AFP in English 1401 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Paris, April 29 (AFP) — Four French-made anti-aircraft missile launchers sold to Libya in 1973 are currently undergoing routine maintenance at workshops outside Paris of the state-owned French electronics and arms firm, Thomson-CSF, industry sources here said.

The sources said the maintenance came under a 1973 contract covering the sale by France to the Libyan Army of six Crotale missile systems, each system comprising a radar unit and four truck-mounted missile launchers.

They said the weapons, delivered to Libya between 1974 and 1980, must undergo routine maintenance every eight to 10 years.

JANA Political Editor Criticizes Egypt's Ghali

LD300839 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 0750 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Tripoli, 30 Apr (JANA) — In a statement to the Spanish newspaper EL PAIS, Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butrus the Cheap [a play on words: Ghali, the surname of the minister, means expensive in Arabic] has stated that we, the Arab countries, are agreed on denouncing the destabilizing policy that Libya pursues in the Arab homeland.

The JANA political editor, commenting on these cheap statements by the Cheap Butrus, asks from what corner did this rat, this Butrus the Cheap emerge, and on behalf of which Arab country is he uttering these fallacies to deceive himself and others. We must be suffering from the effects of opium, coming up with these muttered words and synonyms which essentially cannot be found in the Arab political lexicon, from which he has departed.

He has falsely appointed himself a failed lawyer defending a nation from which he has cast away and a people whose cause he has bartered. Butrus the Cheap fully realizes that his rotten regime that has been cast out by the Arabs, was the one who transformed the Arab-Zionist conflict from a conflict of existence to a conflict of borders, thereby disturbing stability in the Arab homeland and Africa and indeed in the world, and made the Americans and Israelis occupy Egypt and filter into Africa, providing them with the opportunity to attain their filthy objectives inside the Arab homeland and Africa.

The JANA editor recalls how the Egyptian agent regime alone was responsible for all the defeats and troubles afflicting the Arab homeland through the humiliating Stable David accords, which obstructed all efforts to heal the Arab rift and realize Arab unity.

Concluding, the JANA political editor said that Butrus the Cheap, who has been philosophizing as usual by saying that the U.S. raids on the Jamahiriyah do not pose a threat to Egypt's relations with the United States, has been providing conformation of what we had said and reiterated: that Butrus the Cheap and his likes in the Egyptian regime were no more than junior officials in the U.S. Black House and that all their actions were in accordance with the orders of Reagan and his administration.

SUDAN

Military Council Discharges Three Magistrates

JN291500 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1445 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, 29 Apr (SUNA) — The Transitional Military Council issued a decision today discharging three magistrates from their posts. The three are Muhammad Najm al-Din Sa'id, Husayn Mustafa Muhammad, and Hasan Ibrahim al-Mahlawi.

It is noteworthy that Al-Mahlawi issued a death sentence against martyr Mahmud Muhammad Taha during ousted President Numayri's era. In the wake of the April uprising, Al-Mahlawi left for an Arab oil country and has not yet returned to the country despite the existence of a case against him submitted by the martyr's daughter.

Al-Turabi Announces Islamic Front Charter

JN291853 Khartoum SUNA in English 1730 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, April 29, SUNA -- The Islamic National Front "INF" has today called for the establishment of a national government to run the country till the permanent Constitution of the country can be formulated, INF General Secretary Hasan 'Abdallah al-Turabi announced here today in a press statement.

The INF Charter called for establishing a national government formed of all political forces that enjoy Sudan parliamentary and popularity efficacy enabling it to face with unity and solidarity the foreward challenges, Al-Turabi elaborated.

As regards the representation of the communists in the national government, Al-Turabi said that the communist party did not obtain a sound parliamentary representation whereas it shows a political presence, a matter that might constitute an obstacle informing the government. If the substitute for the September laws, "shari'ah laws" is found, the INF will agree on the abolition of the laws formulated in Sept. 1983, Al-Turabi said adding that the Islamic shari'ah "legislations" represents the center of dialogueand political difference.

The INF has further called for setting up of a committee from all the political forces to work out the necessary studies for formulating a new constitution derived from shari'ah, Quran and Sunna" and other sources that don't contradict with Islam. The new laws should put into consideration the non-Moslems'rights and should be formulated by a technical committee.

The INF Charter also called for working out constitutional studies to upgrade and develop the regional government system into federal system government for all the regions. The southern region administration should continue in conformity with the regional government system till the proposed peace conference decides over it, the Charter said.

The Charter affirmed the necessity of holding the by-elections to accomplish the representation of all the southern regions in the Parliament. The Charter moreover calls for the importance of accelerating the convening of the peace conference to help solve the southern conflict and all other regional problems.

The INF's Charter, moreover, called for the backing of the military Armed Forces and all other regular forces, morally and economically, so as to carry on their national sacred duties.

It also, called for the setting up of urgent and decisive steps to curb the economic deterioration and the drawing up of an activation program for the economy based on the National Economic Charter's recommendations.

On foreign policy the proposed Charter appeals for the adoption of a foreign policy based on the propagation of international peace, exchange of mutual interests, tightening ties with African states, combatting racial segregation systems, backing of the Organization of the African Unity "OAU" and the African liberation movements. The Charter, further, pointed to the specialization of historical relations with Egypt and the profundities with Arab and Islamic countries topped by the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

On current consultations between political parties Al-Turabi said there were contacts carried out between the INF, the Democratic Unionist [Party], the Sudanese National Party and other southern parties. He indicated that in direct consultations which turned [out] to be direct have been conducted with the leading Al-Ummah Party. But, he added, these consultations had not yet decided neither on the Charter nor on the government composition.

Meanwhile, Al-Turabi affirmed that the INF, third parliamentary power, would not accept any form of coalition in the government, adding that government formation could easily be carried out. But, he argued, it was not excluded that consultations to this regard might collapse.

Al-Ummah Official Returns From Talks With Garang

JN291742 Khartoum SUNA in English 1720 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, April 29, SUNA — The Sudanese People's Liberation Movement "SPLM" has appreciated the Al-Ummah Party initiative and pledged to take part in the proposed constitutional conference agreed on at Koka Dam talks held last March in Ethiopia, chairman of Al-Ummah Party delegation to John Garang announced here today. Idris al-Banna, who led the Al-Ummah Party to John Garang, "leader of SPLM" arrived here today concluding talks with SPLM on the current political situation beside conveying a message from Al-Ummah Party leader Sadiq al-Mahdi to Garang.

The message proposed a ceasefire to last until the holding of the constitutional conference and asked Garang to cooperate with the new elected government, and official source at the Al-Ummah Party disclosed here today. Garang expressed his movement's readiness to stop the bloodshed and to bulid a new Sudan, Al-Banna said.

Defense Minister Says Rumbek 'Under Siege' by Army

JN291041 Khartoum SUNA in English 1025 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, April 29 (SUNA) — The southern town of Rumbek which had been seized by the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) last March is currently under tight siege by the Army, defence minister said.

Maj Gen 'Uthman 'Abdallah in a statement published by the daily AL-SAHAFAH today said the siege began two weeks ago and [words indistinct] the town at any moment.

'Abdallah said the remaining part of the SPLA in the town, in Bahr al-Ghazal area has no alternative but to resort to reason and surrender because we want no further bloodspill in this delicate stage of the country implicitly referring to the election of the National Constituent Assembly.

The SPLA forces overran Rumbek, a provincial capital in Bahr al-Ghazal area early last month after the Army there withdrew following an intensive build up by the forces of the SPLA around the town.

The minister said the security situation in the south is steady after the crucial initiatives undertaken by the Army to halt the escalation attempts by the forces of Colonel John Garang which coincided with the beginning of dialogue in Ethiopia.

'Abdallah described the SPLA leader John Garang as an erratic man who does not know what he wants adding that his radio had accustomed to put out contradictory ideas.

In the meantime an official military source was today quoted as saying that the complementary elections in the remaining 37 constituencies in the south would possibly be carried out in the very near future due to the stability and improvement of security situation there.

In a statement to the daily AL-AYYAM published today the source whose name was not mentioned by the daily voiced the necessity of speed up the convening of the constitutional conference for resolving all problems in Sudan.

The elections had been suspended indefinitely in the said 37 southern constituencies as a result of the military activities of the SPLA.

Foreign Minister Fetes Visiting Rwandan Counterpart

EA300848 Dar es Salaam Domestic Service in Swahili 1900 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Dar es Salaam: Foreign Minister Ndugu Benjamin Mkapa has praised Tanzania and Rwanda for their great achievement in strengthening cooperation, which, he said, was a vital weapon in the fight against poverty and underdevelopment. Speaking during a banquet in honor of the visiting Rwandan foreign minister, Mr Ngarukiyintwali, Ndugu Mkapa said cooperation between Rwanda and Tanzania had continued to grow since its inception in 1977. He said since then, the two countries had strengthened their trade cooperation and launched joint projects in the transport sector. He added that Rwandan nationals had also been trained in the administration of prisons, as well as in sugar and tobacco manufacturing skills. Ndugu Mkapa also expressed optimism that Rwanda and Tanzania would exchange Kiswahili and French language teachers and students. Mr Ngarukiyintwali's visit follows a similar one by Ndugu Mkapa to Rwanda last year.

UGANDA

Prime Minister Calls For Economic Reconstruction

EA281212 Kampala Domestic Service in English 1700 GMT 27 Apr 86

[Excerpt] The prime minister, Dr Samson Kisekka, has reiterated his call to all Ugandans to unite and deal with their problems as one, saying without unity no progress will be attained. Dr Kisekka was speaking at a luncheon of Pope Paul Memorial Community Center at the launching of a fund-raising drive for the Archbishop Kiwanuka memorial (?hotel), where he also announced government's decision to make Martyrs' Day, 3d June, a public holiday. Dr Kisekka emphasized the need for self-reliance and the need for individuals to work for the society without necessarily expecting to be paid. The prime minister described the late Archbishop Kiwanuka as a man who had complete devotion in whatever he was doing adding that the project in whose memory he was speaking deserved the very good [word indistinct]. He appealed to all Ugandans to come forward and donate to this noble cause.

Dr Kisekka said the NRM 10-point program recognizes the urgent need to be united and self-reliant in order to build the country's shattered economy. He also pointed out the need for those in leadership to general a sense of self-reliance amongst the people.

Commending the positive role of the Catholic Church in Uganda's social economic development, the prime minister challenged Ugandans to follow the example of the church in building (?a hotel) by embarking on full-scale construction and development. He reaffirmed the government's commitment to assist the people by supplementing their development efforts. Dr Kisekka declared that a strong nation is built on strong morals and urged the Ugandans to encourage children to learn morals by taking them to schools and to churches. The prime minister underlined the need for Ugandans to (?retrieve) their standards and culture and criticized educated Ugandans who do not bother to teach children their indigenous languages.

The chairman of the steering committee, Mr Edward Nsubuga, outlined the aims and objectives of the project. He said the income from the hotel when completed would be used to assist [word indistinct] and handicapped people.

CAMEROON

Seminar on Assistance to Liberation Movements Opens
AB290844 Yaounde Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] We must depart from erratic proclamations and conceive a form of active assistance that will be commensurate with the suffering of the people struggling against apartheid and racial discrimination. This statement was made yesterday in Yaounde by Cameroonian Foreign Minister William Eteki Mboumoua in his opening address to the international seminar on assistance to the peoples and movements struggling against colonialism, racism, discrimination, and apartheid.

The Cameroonian minister of foreign affairs denounced the guilty cooperation of some countries with South Africa which continues to accentuate repressive practices, to strengthen its nefarious laws, and to increase its barbaric acts against the Frontline States. Speaking to the representatives of about (?30) countries and international organizations, Mr Eteki Mboumoua upheld the imposition of economic sanctions against Pretoria. He recalled Cameroon's unequivocal position: unconditional support for liberation movements and total support for the Frontline States by the OAU and the United Nations.

Brazilian Special Envoy Brings Sarney Message to Biya

[Text] A special envoy, Brazilian minister and army chief of staff, Jose Maria de Amaral Oliveria was received in audience this evening at State House by President Paul Biya. Speaking to the press, Mr Amaral Oliveria said he was bearer of a message from the Brazilian leader to his Cameroonian counterpart. On the long-standing diplomatic relations existing between Cameroon and Brazil, the Brazilian envoy had this to say:

[Begin Amaral Oliveria recording in English] [words indistinct] we have to improve our economy; Brazil has to improve its economy; we have to improve our technology; we have to drop some of the things, the products [words indistinct] to use in special conditions. Ours is a tropical country; Brazil is a tropical country. We have to find the capital equipment and technology suitable for tropical countries. We have many facilities such as [words indistinct]. And because we are trying to do that in Brazil, I believe we could share with Cameroon our (?experiences) and what we know; and what we do not know, learn from Cameroon and together we can get fine results. That is the idea of our visit to Cameroon. [end recording]

Jose Maria de Amaral Oliveria, who arrived in the country last Saturday, leaves Yaounde for Brazil tomorrow.

AFP: Radio Cameroon Director Dismissed After Strike
AB291736 Paris AFP in French 1645 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Yaounde, 29 Apr (AFP) — The director and deputy director of Radio Cameroon were dismissed on Tuesday following a wildcat strike action on Monday which disrupted the station's programming with an uninterrupted musical program, it was learned in Yaounde.

Listeners were deprived of newscasts on Monday morning and mid-day and it was only at 2000 that they were given an explanation for this disruption in programming with the broadcast of a communique issued by the minister of information and culture, Georges Ngango.

This illegal strike comes in the wake of the creation last Saturday of a National Television Office by a presidential decree, it was stated in Yaounde.

A new director, Kome Epoulen, has been appointed to head Radio Cameroon.

AFP: Dissidents Demand Departure of French Troops
AB291710 Paris AFP in French 1429 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Paris, 29 Apr (AFP) — The Collective of Central Africans in France (opposed to the Bangui regime) on Tuesday in Paris demanded the departure of French troops from the Central African Republic and denounced the deterioration of the human rights situation in the country. The chairman of the Collective of Central Africans in France, Mr Ambroise Saraga, said during a press conference that some "secret defense agreements" had been signed between France and the regime of President Koling ba, and this explains the presence of French troops on Central African territory (about 1,600 men), their utilization "for operations of a police nature," and the use of CAR as a "military base for the attack of neighboring countries." However, he said, the only known agreement, signed between the two countries in 1966, provides only for technical military assistance by Paris to Bangui.

The recent anti-French demonstrations, which were held after the accident of a French Jaguar which had resulted in 35 deaths on 27 March when it crashed in a working-class district of Bangui, demonstrates the "categorical condemnation" of the presence of the French troops in CAR, Mr Saraga added. The chairman of the Collective — grouping opponents of the regime who are demanding a return to the 1981 Constitution which guaranteed a multiparty system and civil liberties — also condemned the human rights violations which he said General Kolingba's regime is perpetrating with the support of the French troops. Mr Saraga demanded the release of the students arrested in March this year during the disturbances at Bangui University, and who were accused of "threatening the internal security of the state." Three of them were freed on 21 April. Nine others are still in prison.

Sassou-Nguesso Asserts Need To Promote Agriculture

AB291145 Dakar PANA in French 1025 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Brazzaville, 29 Apr (ACI/PANA) — Agricultural development is necessary to give the Congolese economy a sound basis and provide the country with the opportunity for steady and harmonious development, President Denis Sassou-Nguesso said Saturday at the 7th Congress of the Congolese Trade Union Confederation.

The Congolese head of state, who stressed the need to diversify national production, set his hopes on the various natural assets of his country for the promotion of agriculture. Among these assets, President Sassou-Nguesso cited a good rainfall, an important hydrographic network, and about 20 million hectares of arable land of which only 400,000 are diversely exploited.

"We must, within this framework, stop the rural exodus, the essential cause of depopulation in our region, and find a remedy to its backwardness," he concluded.

Niger's Kountche Visits; Cooperation Talks Held

AB292110 Libreville Africa No 1 in French
1830 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The Niger head of state, President Seyni Kountche, today arrived in Lome for a 24-hour working visit to Togo. A series of talks is expected to take place between President Kountche and his Togolese counterpart, President Eyadema.

Earlier, President Seyni Kountche had paid a 24-hour visit to Gabon. Here is the outcome of that visit with Emmanuel Mbaolou, spokesman at the Gabonese Ministry of Foreign Affairs:

[Begin Mbaoulou recording] The two statesmen praised the excellent, friendly and brotherly relations between their two countries and their two peoples, relations which are commensurate with their long-standing personal bonds of friendship. The president of the Republic of Niger reiterated his country's gratitude to the brotherly people of Gabon for their active solidarity with the Niger people when confronted with the drought raging in the Sahel region.

After noting that the trade between their countries has not as yet reached a level compatible with the excellent relations which exist between the two, the two heads of state decided that everything should be done to develop and diversify trade between them in all fields. To this end, the two sides agreed on measures for the implementation of the general cooperation agreement signed on 10 April 1983 in Libreville. Furthermore, the two sides decided to revitalize and consolidate cooperation in the mining sector between their two countries, especially in the field of uranium, which they both produce and export. To this end, they agreed to exchange missions at ministerial levels.

The two delegations also agreed to exchange radio and television programs with specific reportage on important events taking place in either of their two countries. Finally, to enable their people to get to know one another better, they undertook to organize Niger-Gabon cultural weeks in each of their countries. [end recording]

Zambian Ambassador Summoned to Foreign Ministry

AB291215 Dakar PANA in French 1157 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Kinshasa, 29 Apr (AZAP/PANA) — The Zambian ambassador to Zaire was summoned on Tuesday to the Zairian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

It was said that this summons should be viewed within the context of President Kenneth Kaunda's statements last Sunday in Lusaka on the use of Zairian territory to dispatch arms to the Angolan opposition movement, UNITA.

These statements were denied Monday by the Zairian Government.

Aid to UNITA Denied

AB291726 Paris AFP in English 1637 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Kinshasa, April 29 (AFP) — Allegations by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda that United States military aid for rebels in Angola was passing through Zaire were "gratuitous lies", Zairian authorities said here Tuesday.

The state-controlled news agency AZAP quoted sources close to President Mobutu Sese Seko as saying that Mr Kaunda had no proof for his allegations that Zaire was being used as a channel for aid to the rebel National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA). AZAP said President Kaunda, as the senior head of state in the region, had a "heavy responsibility". His allegations were so serious that it raised the question what he was seeking by making them. The agency's sources expressed regret that "the head of state of a neighboring friendly country is openly trying to join a campaign of denigration and malicious propaganda without saying why or supplying the slightest proof."

Other sources here stressed that, in Kinshasa's view, the sometimes difficult relations between Zambia and Zaire were currently set fair, thanks to a system of permanent contacts.

Press reports in South Africa quoting UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi said U.S. aid to the rebels had begun reaching them in mid-April, but gave no indication of how it arrived. He also alleged that eight unnamed African states had begun backing him following Washington's support.

PRC Official Visits; Kengo Return Visit Planned

[Text] The first state commissioner, Kengo wa Dondo, will soon visit the PRC. Chen Yaobang, the Chinese deputy minister of agriculture, disclosed this yesterday afternoon in Kinshasa. The date of the visit was not specified to the press after the audience that the first state commissioner granted the Chinese economic delegation at his private residence of Binza. The Chinese delegation has been visiting our country for 1 week now. Chen Yaobang, who is leading a 6-member delegation, expressed satisfaction with the Lotokila sugar complex. This singular achievement represents the symbol of the sincere friendship existing between the Zairian and Chinese peoples.

The head of the Chinese delegation further appreciated the friendly speech made by Citizen Salumu Abisi, the MPR regional chairman and governor of Haut-Zaire, during the ceremony of handing over of the Lotokila sugar complex last Thursday. In his speech, the governor expressed his great appreciation of the cooperation between Zairian workers and the Chinese experts who spared no effort for the construction of the complex. The Chinese statesman said that during the ceremony, he was highly impressed by the singing and dancing of politically and culturally inspired songs and dances by the MPR militants — songs and dances which are purely Zairian.

Concerning Chinese investment projects in Zaire, Chen Yaobang said that bright prospects exist between Zaire and the PRC. As for the future of their bilateral relations, he specified that there is great hope and not only will the PRC try to strengthen all that they have already achieved, such as the Palais du Peuple, the agricultural projects, and the sugar complex, but it will also do its best to make all these enterprises profitable. Zaire and China, he said in conclusion, will develop a cooperation which can be beneficial for the Zairian and Chinese peoples.

President Sankara Receives Polisario Official

AB292055 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Captain Thomas Sankara, chairman of the National Council of the Revolution and president of Burkina Faso last night granted an audience to Omar Hadrani, special emissary of President Mohamed Abdelaziz of the SDAR. Omar Hadrani, who is a member of the Political Bureau of the Polisario Front, stated that he came to inform the comrade president about the latest developments in the struggle of the brotherly Saharan people and in particular about the latest diplomatic moves being made at the UN Headquarters. In fact, at the United Nations, preliminary talks are being held under the auspices of the UN secretary general and the OAU chairman. Unfortunately, Mr Hadrani said, Morocco continues to reject the framework and the basis of the peace plan drafted by the United Nations and the OAU, in particular the need for a political settlement between the two warring sides. Finally, Omar Hadrani stated that the international community which invited the Polisario Front and Morocco for another meeting on 5 May in New York, must demand concrete steps to be made in the spirit and letter of the resolution of the UN General Assembly. Concluding, he said that it is now clear to everyone that the Moroccan maneuvers are aimed at delaying the admission of the SDAR into the Nonaligned Movement and later into the United Nations.

Opposition Leader Kpoleh Released on Bail

AB291300 Paris AFP in English 1221 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Monrovia, April 29 (AFP) — The chairman of Liberia's main opposition coalition, William Gabriel Kpoleh, was freed on $10,000 bail Tuesday following preliminary hearings into charges against him of sedition, coalition sources said.

Mr Kpoleh was arrested on Friday and charged with sedition in connection with allegations he made that President Samuel Doe was planning to fake a coup attempt against his own government to provide an excuse for dismantling the opposition coalition.

The four-party coalition was formed after national elections last year which Mr Doe and his National Democratic Party won amid widespread charges of electoral fraud.

Mr Kpoleh was released on bail at a hearing Monday by Magistrate Dunbar Innis, the sources said

Meanwhile, the state-run LIBERIA NEWS AGENCY reported on Tuesday that several people were arrested on Monday in Mr Kpoleh's home of Gbarnga, 200 kilometers north of here, for holding an unauthorized demonstration against the politician's arrest.

Demonstrators Arrested

AB291952 Monrovia Radio ELWA in English 1710 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Several persons demanding the release the chairman of the Grand Coalition, Gabriel Kpoleh, have been arrested in Gbarnga, Bong County. A LINA [LIBERIAN NEWS AGENCY] correspondent in Gbarnga is quoted by LBS [Liberian Broadcasting System] as saying they were arrested yesterday for violating the law which prohibits public marches and demonstrations without permit. The report said less then 70 persons had gathered near the central market to protest the arrest and detention of Mr Kpoleh. Mr Kpoleh, who is also chairman of the Liberian Unification Party, LUP, was arrested last Friday and charged with sedition for allegedly accusing the Liberian Government of planning a fake coup to implicate members of the opposition. LINA also said the demonstrators who reportedly ignored police orders to disperse, marched into the market and disturbed the normal flow of business while causing injuries to individuals who were caught up in the disturbance. The arrests in Gbarnga came in a wake of a recent government order that any group of persons wishing to stage a demonstration within Liberia must first obtain a permit from the Justice Ministry to do so, in keeping with an act of the national legislature approved 10 February 1975.

Baba Diarra Receives Mauritanian, FRG Officials

AB281835 Bamako Domestic Service in French 1500 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Excerpts] General Amadou Baba Diarra, minister of state for planning and acting head of government, on behalf of the head of state, this morning received Lieutenant Colonel Anna Amadou Babaly, Mauritanian minister of interior. The bonds of good-neighborliness and mutually advantageous cooperation — which have always existed between our two countries and our two peoples — were at the center of their talks. Gen Amadou Baba Diarra, acting head of government, stressed Mali's preparedness to work for the strengthening of these bonds of cooperation between Mauritania and Mali, which are bound by history, geography, and culture.

On behalf of President Maaouiya Ould Sid Ahmed Taya, Lt Col Anna Amadou Babaly took the opportunity to present the condolences of the Mauritanian people to the Malian people following the rail accident. Here is the Mauritanian minister talking to Vassi Tierrou.

[Begin recording] [Babaly] As you know, I am here, first of all, as part of the periodic contacts that my country has with yours at the Ministry of Interior levels. On this occasion, President Maaouiya asked me to deliver to his brother, President Moussa Traore, his condolences following the rail accident which occurred in your country. I have delivered this message to Gen Baba Diarra for onward transmission to President Moussa Traore.

[Tierrou] Mr Minister, Mali and Mauritania are two sister countries with friendly relations, and it is within this framework that you are here, as you have rightly said. We know, however, that there is a small problem between Mali and Mauritania. Did you have the opportunity to discuss this with the minister?

[Babaly] There are no neighboring countries that do not have some problems between them. But I would describe the problems we have between us as small problems, because they are daily actions which happen between the peoples. They are people who are not as disciplined as the minister, and that is why we discussed the border problems. And I have come here so that we can find final solutions to these problems, especially concerning (?smuggling) and the other border problems [words indistinct].I am sure this is the appropriate time for both Mali and Mauritania to discuss these issues. We should not have the illusion that there should not be any border problems; the two peoples could have some problems between them, but the essential thing is for the two sides to meet at the ministerial level and try to surmount these difficulties and show solidarity each time such problems crop up. I am sure that any problem that may arise will not reach such a proportion that it cannot be brought under control between the two ministries and the regional authorities. [end recording]

Gen Amadou Baba Diarra, who is also the deputy secretary general of the party, granted a second audience to (Wissemann Kohler), secretary of state at the FRG Ministry of Cooperation. On behalf of the head of state, General Amadou Baba Diarra welcomed the FRG delegation.

Their talks also touched on the many measures taken for the economic and financial revival of the country, which has opted for an independent and planned economy based on the state, joint, and private sectors. On behalf of President Moussa Traore, the acting head of government expressed the gratitude of the Malian people, their party, and government to the German head of state, the chancellor, and the people for the consideration aid they have contributed towards their development.

Kaduna Views Ties With Libya Following U.S. Raids

AB290924 Kaduna Domestic Service in English
1700 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Mohamed Bello Mahmud commentary on the program "In Focus")

[Text]Some of us might be taken by surprise that the relationship between (?the United States) and Libya is in question again. This is the consequence of the intense military buildup that has for the past few days characterized the Mediterranean. Today our discussion would, however, center on the Nigeria-Libya relations within the context of the tension between the United States and Libya. This context would also provide one the basis to examine the future of Nigeria-Libya relations, two independent African states.

The relationship between Nigeria and Libya became evidently tense during the regime of Nigeria's first executive president, the deposed Alhaji Shehu Shagari. The whole problem came as a result of the role that Nigeria did play when it came to Libya's turn to host the OAU heads of state summit and hence occupy the seat of the organization's chairman. Nigeria [words indistinct] in conformity with the dictates of the United States and her allies, openly jeopardized Al-Qadhdhafi's chance of becoming OAU chairman after Ethiopia's Mengistu Haile Mariam. This unique role, outensibly teleguided by Washington, succeeded in denying Libya her rightful chance of occupying the OAU's topmost chair and hence denied Al-Qadhdhafi the benefit of giving the continent the desired anti-imperialist leadership in whatever form possible.

Deposed President Shehu Shagari failed to attend the summit on the illogical pretext that a quorum was not formed. One may be tempted to ask: Was Nigeria not part and parcel of the formation of a quorum or would she have to wait until other member nations have formed the quorum? Or was it probably another of the administration's techniques of playing the ever big brother? Well, if it was, one would not hesitate to state that it was nonsensical and one could also additionally assert that Nigeria's stand on African issues was basically hypocritical.

To a number of observers, the hypocritical emphasis given to African issues became a little bit more emphasized, especially with the recent eruption of Libyan-U.S. conflicts whose zenith came with the bombardment by the U.S. Air Force of the two Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi, leaving many dead and injured. A number of Nigerians, and indeed Africans, who feel the need for Nigeria's leadership in Africa, expected at least a condemnation from Nigeria. It actually took some time before the nation's leadership could issue any tangible statement. When the bombardment was announced, many expected the leadership to use some initiative as it attempted doing in the case of the Chadian crisis. A number of us were even suggesting that the nation [words indistinct] initiative at the diplomatic level in order to avoid any military plunge but it failed or perhaps the government was taken by surprise [passage indistinct]

The Voice of America, VOA — America's number one propaganda arsenal — made a lot of noise and in fact overexaggerated the security given to Americans and American interests in Nigeria. This, we are prompted to see as an aggressive attempt by the United States to jeopardize the good (?posture) of Nigeria-Libya relations. One other incident that might put Nigeria-Libya relations in a bad (?light) apart from the nation's slackness in reacting to the beastly bombardment of Libyan cities was the (?report) in the middle of the conflict that a Senegal-bound U.S. Air Force plane came to land at Nigeria's Murtala Mohamed Airport. Responding to an NTA [Nigeria Television Authority] reporter's question on behalf of the administration, General Bali, joint chiefs of staff, stated that permission was already granted to the plane since the month of March. On this, some of us believe Nigeria should have retarded (?flight) clearance in the interest of African unity and also our national security, realizing the high temperature generated by the U.S. action. Some of us were also of the view that the whole episode was carefully programmed by the Americans, first to show the Libyans that Nigeria is with them and secondly to prevent any possible reaction that may be pro-Libya, making it look as [words indistinct] hypocritical.

The CONCORD points out that alleged clandestine political meetings on schemings by the former detainees amount to insulting the intelligence of the Nigerian public who, it says, are still suffering from the economic woes brought upon the country by the same politicians. The paper calls on the authorities to treat with dispatch the current investigation in the interest of justice and fair play.

Five-Nation Summit Issues Closing Communique

MB300749 Maputo Domestic Service in Portuguese 0500 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] South Africa continues to be the main cause of tension in southern Africa which is characterized by armed violence directed against Mozambique and Angola. This is contained in the final declaration of the summit of the heads of state of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries. The summit, which began in Luanda on Monday, ended yesterday.

In the final declaration, to be known as the Luanda declaration, the five condemned South Africa's support for the armed bandits operating in Mozambique and Angola — support evidenced by documents captured from Gorongosa bandits.

The five heads of state also referred to sabotage attempts against the Malongo oil installations in Angola shortly after South Africa had declared withdrawal of its forces from southern Angola within the terms of the Lusaka Agreement of 1984. They also referred to the Nkomati Accord between Mozambique and South Africa.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, the UN secretary general, must play a legal role in the Namibian issue, the five pointed out. They rejected the United States as mediator in view of its support for UNITA and because of the way it tries to link the process to the withdrawal of internationalist Cuban troops from Angola.

The final communique appeals for intensified cooperation among the five through practical actions.

On East Timor, the summit supported the peace plan of the Revolutionary Front for an Independent East Timor and called on Portugal to assume its juridical responsibilities. The five also called on the United Nations to continue searching for a peaceful solution to the East Timor conflict.

Addressing officers at the Commander Nicolao Gomes Cesar School, the defense minister evaluatedpolitical and military problems recently faced by the country, allcreated by new troop invasions from the racist South African regime. In view of the highly negative effects of the South African counterrevolutionaries, Col Tonha urged the officers to implement their newly acquired skills and transmit them to FAPLA fighters to strengthen the national army's defense capacity. The defense minister said in his speech that all available means must be utilized for an all out fight against enemies' acts of vandalism, thus ensuring the territorial integrity of the People's Republic of Angola.

Savimbi Says U.S. 'Non-Lethal Aid' Arriving

MB290857 Johannesburg International Service in English 0630 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The leader of the UNITA movement in Angola, Dr Jonas Savimbi, says the first consignments of nonlethal aid from the United States have arrived at UNITA bases in southeastern Angola. The supplies include lorries, uniforms, boots, and medical supplies. He has declined, however, to say whether UNITA had received ground-to-air missiles from the United States. Dr Savimbi was speaking in an interview with Radio RSA's military correspondent at the strategic town of Munhango on the Benguela railway line.

He said the forces of the MPLA government in Luanda had been handicapped by low moral and large-scale desertions. Since their offensive against UNITA last October, the MPLA forces have been provided with new armaments. The UNITA leader said there had been a dispute between Soviet and Cuban officers on the one hand and MPLA officers on the other over the conduct of the next offensive. The MPLA wanted to secure Cabinda and northern Angola while the Soviet and Cuban officers wanted to lauch an immediate offensive towards the UNITA headquarters at Jamba to destroy the movement. This had led to a delay, Dr Savimbi said, but he expected the offensive to start within the next few days. Dr Savimbi said that with aid from the United States, UNITA could have an effect on the Soviet expansion. UNITA was not pushing for military victory in Angola, but only wanted to force the MPLA to the negotiating table, he said. He added that this could be possibly be achieved if the expected offensive against his forces was turned back.

DPRK Troops Said Fighting Anti-Government Guerrillas

Machel, Botha Meeting on Nkomati Accord Noted

MB281858 Maputo in English to Southern Africa 1800 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] President Samora Machel met the South African state president, P.W. Botha, in the Swazi capital, Mbabane, on Saturday when both leaders were attending the coronation festivities of the new Swazi monarch, King Mswati III. It was the first meeting of the two presidents since the signing of the Nkomati nonaggression accord on 16 March 1984. The accord was the main topic of discussion, specially in the light of last year's documentary proof that the pact was being violated by South Africa. This showed that the South African regime had never implemented the nonaggression accord and that South African armed forces had continued to supply the MNR in clear violation of the accord's provision. The meeting, which lasted 40 minutes, was described as cordial. Both presidents pledged to comply with the Nkomati accord to ensure good neighborliness and peace between the two countries.

At the meeting President Samora Machel was accompanied by the minister of construction and water affairs, Julio Carrilho, while Foreign Minister Roelof Botha accompanied the South African state president. On Friday President Samora Machel received Roelof Botha at the South African minister's request.

[Text] A member of the political bureau of the Frelimo Party, Mariano Matsinhe, has held talks in Moscow with officials of the Soviet Communist Party. Major General Matsinhe briefed the officials on Mozambique's current struggle in the face of systematic hostile acts by South Africa. Gen Matsinhe and the Soviet Communist Party officals also reveiwed President Machel's recent visit to the Soviet Union. He arrived in the Soviet Union from the GDR where he was heading a Frelimo Party delegation to the Congress of the German Socialist Unity Party. Gen Matsinhe on Friday visited the Soviet Socialist Republic of Georgia, where he held talks with the republic's first secretary of the CPSU. Both sides stressed the importance of such meetings for strengthening friendship ties and cooperation between the two parties and the peoples of Mozambique and the Soviet Union.

Rebels Claim Elimination of 172 Government Troops

AU290850 Paris AFP in English 0306 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Lisbon, April 29 (AFP) — Mozambique's South African-backed rebels said here Monday their forces had killed 172 government soldiers in recent fighting in the north of the country. A spokesman said 75 were killed last Wendesday when rebels seized the town of Chonga, in Sofala province. In Zambezia province, 97 more were killed when the town of Hile was captured. He gave no indication of any rebel casualties. The spokesman also said insurgents had attacked a train near Meconta, on the Nacala-Nampula line, in northeastern Mozambique.

The Portuguese news agency meanwhile said rebels killed three people last Saturday in an attack on a police station at Matola, 12 kms (eight miles) from the capital, Maputo.

Police Report Maputo Car Bomb From South Africa

AU290853 Paris AFP in English 0321 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Lisbon, April 29 (AFP) — A car which exploded in the Mozambican capital, Maputo, last Monday, injuring 50 people, had earlier been driven from neighboring South Africa with explosives hidden in its engine, the Portuguese news agency said Monday, quoting Mozambican police sources. Its Mozambican driver, who is being questioned by police, had been told by the owner of the Citroen car, a South African citizen, to take it to Maputo and it had crossed the border at Namaacha the previous day, the sources said. The car only appeared to be carrying food supplies and did not arouse the suspicion of customs officers, the agency said.

Unidentified Aircraft Continue Airspace Violations

[Text] Tobias Dai, the military commander of Manica province, recently denounced the continuing violation of Mozambican airspace by unidentified planes. In an interview to the FPLM "Voice of Combat" radio program, Tobias Dai said that he suspected that these planes were involved in logistical and ammunition resupply to the armed bandits. He revealed that the armed bandits were currently facing serious logistical problems and limited their actions to the pillage of people's goods and agricultural products. He added that thanks to the intensificiation of fight by the FPLM, the bandits have suffered serious losses and the small groups which still commit atrocities against defenseless civilians had been thrown into disorder. In the interview, the military commander of Manica province described the military situation in the region as having changed for the better and pointed out that at present efforts were centering on the reopening of roads and reconstruction of everything destroyed by the enemy.

Armed Forces Reportedly Kill 53 'Armed Bandits'

[Text] In Niassa province between January and March the Mozambique Armed Forces shot dead 53 armed bandits. According to a source with the provincial military command, during the same period four bandit camps were destroyed in Metete Maua, Metarica, Mecanhelas, and Cuamba, and six criminals and assorted war material captured. The source said the FPLM repelled an attempt by the armed bandits to storm the Cuamba district capital, killing 21 criminals and capturing an assortment of weapons. As a result of this operation, 8 people forced to live under the yoke of the armed bandits were released.

Public Warned Against Curfew Violation

MB291310 Maseru Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The office of the Military Council is reminding the public in general, particularly the urban public, that the midnight to 0500 curfew is still on. In a statement, the office points out that the military had not been strict to ensure that people obeyed the curfew hours because it understood and believed that the public was cooperating but, unfortunately, it has come to the notice of the authorities that certain elements are taking advantage of the leniency of the military not applying strict measures of curfew enforcement and these elements have began terrorizing the people at night an breaking into their homes and business houses. The public is therefore warned that the military and the police will again take steps to ensure that the curfew is respected. The public is once again asked to cooperate in this measure which is designed to ensure the existence of peace and the eradication of unlawful acts.

SOUTH AFRICA

Botha 29 April Television Address Reported

MB291657 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1646 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 29, SAPA — Nobody should underestimate the government's sincere determination to succeed with negotiations to find peaceful solutions for South Africa, the state president, Mr P.W. Botha, said tonight. In a TV address to the nation he said he wished to speak on issues which particularly affected black South Africans and said the government could not deal with their problems on its own. He appealed to all reasonable South Africans to join him around the negotiating table support the process of seeking peaceful democratic solutions.

The government was also aware of black aspirations, he said. "We are aware of the economic problems which beset you."

The government was also aware of the housing and education problems. "We know of the anguish caused in your society by radical intimidation, and of the frustration you experience as a result of some outdated bureaucratic practices. We are particularly aware of the problems which were caused by the pass system and by influx control," President Botha said. He pointed out that he had followed up his undertaking of January 31 to scrap these systems and that he had ordered the release of those who were detained under the laws.

"This does not mean that everyone should move to the cities. Indeed, the government will launch a development plan for rural areas to make them more viable and to raise living standards." There was not enough work for all South Africans in urban areas and attention would have to be given to the availability of accommodation, health and social conditions.

The government nevertheless believed the abolition of influx control would greatly diminish the problems of black citizens and greatly extend their freedom of movement. "I hope they will do so in an orderly way and not create unnecessary confusion and social disorder," President Botha said.

Soon identity documents, exactly the same as those for whites, would be issued to all black South Africans which would, as in many other countries, provide proof of identity needed for applying for pensions, drivers licences, marriage licences and bank accounts. Although it was not necessary to carry them on one's person, the current pass books should be kept in order to prove identity and obtain the new document. The new document would be useful and provide evidence "of our common claim to South African citizenship." All South Africans could be asked to produce them within a reasonable time.

"I am aware of your problems, and I am willing to deal with them in a positive way. But the government and I cannot do this alone," Mr Botha said. "We need to discuss solutions with black leaders in a peaceful way. I have extended my hand of friendship to all those in our country, black, white, brown, who are committed to the peaceful solution of our problems. I have invited them all to join me around the negotiating table. I appeal to all reasonable South Africans to support this process." Legislation to make this possible would shortly be introduced to Parliament.

"There are those who will not heed this appeal for reasonable negotiation. No-one should underestimate the devastation which would be caused by an escalation of violence. No-one should doubt the desire of my government to pursue peaceful democratic solutions for our country. No-one should underestimate our sincere determination to succeed," President Botha said.

'Hundreds of Thousands' To Observe May Day

MB300836 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0821 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 30, SAPA — Hundreds of thousands of workers throughout South Africa will observe the 100th anniversary of May Day tomorrow, the SOWETAN reports. Massive rallies have been planned to take place at various centres throughout the country. They have been organized by the Congress of South Africa Trade Unions (COSATU), Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA), Azanian Confederation of Trade Unions (AZACTU) and the United Workers Union of South Africa (UWUSA). Organized commerce and industry have appealed to employers not to victimise workers forced to stay away from work tomorrow.

A spokesman for ASSOCOM [Associated Chambers of Commerce], Mr Michael Brett, said his organization has advised employers that if negotiations with the workforce for a May Day holiday had not been successful, employers should stick to the "no work, no pay" dictum

The National Federated African Chamber of Commerce (NAFCOC) said its stand is that black business people should allow their workers to honour May Day and not penalise them in any way.

The South African Police said they would do everything possible to ensure the safety of people wishing to go to work tomorrow. In a statement the SAP Directorate for Police Relations said security forces would take strong action against intimidators if it was found that they were preventing people from going to work.

The African Teachers Association of South Africa (ATASA) called on all black teachers to stay away from work tomorrow.

But the public recons officer of the Department of Education and Training, Mr Peter Mundel, said schools will be open because many pupils were behind with their work. Teachers would make personal choices of either staying away or going to work, he said.

Soweto businessmen will close their shops tomorrow to allow their workers to commemorate May Day, said Mr Sydney Mahlanga, secretary of the Soweto Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

Mr Mark Lamberti, marketing director of Jazz Stores, announced yesterday that the stores would close tomorrow and on June 16 "out of respect for what these days mean to many South Africans." He said they had decided to close their 16 outlets and the 11 Checkers stores, which were now part of their group, on these days as a mark of respect towards their customers.

The Western Cape Traders Association and the Muslim Meat Traders have called on other traders to close their businesses between 1pm and 4pm in solidarity with the international workers day tomorrow.

May Day rallies will be held at 33 venues tomorrow throughout the country. May 1 is observed as a workers holiday in many countries throughout the world. On May 1, 1886 in Chicago, United Staes, 11 people were killed during a mass demonstration when workers took to the streets demanding an eight-hour day. From then onwards, May 1 has been commemorated as labour day.

Le Grange Defends Some 'Whites Only' Signs

MB292001 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1907 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] House Of Representatives, Apr 29, SAPA — Social conditions needed to be considered before "whites only" signs could be removed from police stations, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis Le Grange, said today. Replying to the debate on his budget vote, he said he was not rejecting the call, but that he could not give an "unqualified yes." "There are places in South Africa where, as a result of social circumstances, these signs must be retained." However, new police stations were designed without separate entrances.

Members should bring specific cases to his attention if they caused offence in their constituencies. The fact that a white man was appointed commander at the Bishop Lavis Police Station in a coloured area of Cape Town had nothing to do with his race. He was appointed because he was most qualified for the post. Mr Le Grange said there were many competent officers in the coloured section of the police force and they would be promoted. It was incorrect that only white police officers were promoted on merit.

Replying to points raised by the minister of education and culture, Mr Carter Ebrahim, Mr Le Grange said it was "a serious and unfortunate matter" that children were being used "for revolutionary purposes." "These people are playing around with the lives of children I'm thankful he emphasised the strong shield under which reform must take place ... This is the spirit in which we have gone about reforming here in South Africa."

Viljoen Notes National States 'Irreversible Fact'

MB290835 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0830 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Giyani, April 29, SAPA — The system of national states in South Africa had become an "irreversible fact," the minister of education and development aid, Dr Gerrit Viljoen, said here today. Speaking at the opening of a new office complex for the commissioner-general for the Shangaan-Tsonga national unit, Dr Viljoen complimented the chief minister of Gazankulu, Professor Hudson Ntsanwisi, for achieving peace and stability in the state.

He said the system of national states was part of South Africa's constitutional evolvement and had become an irreversible fact. "Although born out of a political philosophy which has now been abandoned, it must remain as one of the successes of that philosophy." Whatever constitutional future resulted from the process of reform on which South Africa had embarked, Gazankulu, like the others, could not be undone. This underlined the fact that a certain degree of group existence and autonomy would have to form part of any future South Africa. If there was to be a peaceful and prosperous future, it was essential that each group should have "meaningful control" over its own development, Dr Viljoen said.

Emphasizes Reform Commitment

MB291056 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1052 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Giyani, Gazankulu, April 29, SAPA — The system of national states on which South Africa had embarked as a part of its constitutional evolvement, had become an "irreversible fact," the minister of education and development aid, Dr Gerrit Viljoen, said today. The rapid development of Giyani would not have occurred without "the active involvement of the people of Gazankulu as lead by a government of their very own," he said.

The South African Government had "clearly committed itself to constitutional reform to be negotiated with representative black leaders in order to achieve real power sharing involving all communities of the South African population up to the highest level of government." "This process of negotiated political reform should be expedited by the cooperation of all leaders who have the real interests of their people at heart," he said. "There is no reason for disrupting and damaging the education process in order to achieve political ends. There is also no dispute about whether all citizens should be free or not. The only matter to be ironed out through negotiations is how this freedom should be expressed and articulated."

Dr Viljoen said whatever the final outcome "of the present process of change and reform in our country, every individual will still have to cope with the new situation on his own." "And what is important is that every individual's ability to cope with that situation is presently being determined by the level and standard of education he achieves. Let there be no doubt, whatever the future holds, it can never be an utopia where there whill be freedom without any responsibility," he said.

Stability, progress and economic growth would depend increasingly on the best possible education which could be offered, and the extent to which educational opportunities were utilised. By the year 2020, black people would constitute 78 percent of the country's population. Consequently, their education and training was of vital importance, not only for themselves but for everybody in South Africa. Dr Viljoen said the state president had firmly committed the South African Government to attaining equal education opportunities for all population groups. "The minister of national education has just announced that the government is finalising a 10-year programme aiming at substantial progress towards this goal. This programme will especially provide additional resources for the education departments of the national states which are acknowledged to be suffering serious backlogs in comparison with the more developed education system of this country," he said.

Noted Businessman on Educating Labor Resources

MB252013 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1757 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, Apr 25, SAPA — While the South African Government's decision to remove influx control and the pass system is to be welcomed, there is no doubt that the country will have an inadequate per capita growth rate until solutions are found to political problems. This is the view of Gavin Relly, chairman of Anglo American Corporation, who gave the address at today's University of Bophuthatswana [UNIBO] graduation ceremony.

"The situation is serious. In 1985 South Africa experienced a negative per capita growth rate of 3.5 per cent, which emphasises that real economic growth has been unable to keep up with population growth. We hope to reverse this trend in 1986 to achieve a positive 3 per cent growth rate. With our annual population growth rate of 2.5 per cent we cannot afford anything less and we must strive to do everything possible to improve our teaching and training so as to prepare people to play their role in this important growth process."

To develop our industry we must make the best use of all our resources which is labour, said Mr Relly. Engineering needs more blacks, but there is not a single engineering faculty at a black university in SA, but it is encouraging that UNIBO is planning such a faculty. "For too long black people have been encouraged to pursue studies in areas which, while important, have excluded disciplines of a technical nature," said Mr Relly. "I do not include only the pure sciences and engineering but also other advanced areas such as accountancy, actuarial science and quantity surveying. With our huge manpower resources there can be no excuse for having to import skills from abroad if we want to have a strong and rich economy." Industry and commerce have been slow to realise the enormous potential in the numbers of school leavers, and those with tertiary level of education, he said.

In 1973, there were 5,492 black matriculation candidates in greater South Africa, in 1980 there were 43,237 and in 1984 the figure doubled to 82,442. The number of black schoolchildren has increased from some 800,000 in the 1950's to more than 5-million today. In 1980 some 10,000 blacks studied at universities in greater South Africa, now there are 30,000 students. Half of the black population in greater South Africa is under 15 years old, demonstrating the region's potential for wealth creation.

A greater commitment by commerce and industry is needed to train young school-leavers. "Fortunately both the public and private sectors are launching an ever-increasing number of schemes to assist with scholarships, bursaries as well as vacation employment in various professions."

SA's post-apartheid society is rapidly emerging but it is essential to preserve the free market system to further lift many of the existing economic controls and make optimal use of manpower resources. There is no reason why this region should not join the ranks of the world's richer countries.

Official Says Black Police Not Armed Properly

MB260515 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1352 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Bloemfontein, April 26, SAPA — Municipal police trained for duty in black townships were not armed in a proper way, the deputy minister for development and land affairs, Mr B.H. Wilkens, said in Bloemfontein today. The conference had been told by a councillor from the Eastern Cape that after their three months training the policemen were put into the townships without firearms or transport. Mr Wilkens said he would report this to the relevant minister as they could not be left defenceless to do the work that they were asked to do.

In response to delegates who had called for the removal of the Group Areas and Population Registration Acts, for the release of political detainees, the unbanning of political organisations, exiles to be allowed to return to South Africa before negotiations on future dispensations could be held, Mr Wilkens said he wanted to emphasise that differences of opinion had to be discussed to find a way of evolution.

Inkatha's Dhlomo: Black Politics Lost Direction

[Text] The secretary general of Inkatha, Dr Oscar Dhlomo, says it is disheartening that some news media, respectable churchmen, and liberal white South Africans regard the black-on-black violence in the country as something normal in the struggle for liberation, as he puts it. Addressing a conference of the Urban Councils Association in Bloemfontein, Dr Dhlomo also said that black politics had lost a sense of direction.

Chief Mangope Warns Against 'Misleading' UDF

MB252016 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1936 GMT 25 Apr 86

[Text] Mmabatho, April 25, SAPA — The Bophuthatswana president, Chief Lucas Mangope, told residents in the Taung region today the country should not be discouraged by media reports "discrediting" the independent homeland. He told a meeting at Pampierstadt some media reports gave the wrong impression about what was happening in Bophuthatswana. The president warned people to be on their guard against what he called "misleading organisations" like the United Democratic Front [UDF], which were "bent on creating havoc in Bophuthatswana," SAPA's correspondent reports. He reiterated his view that people who caused disturbances in the country — especially in the Odi region — were from outside Bophuthatswana.

Speaking at the same meeting, the education minister, Mr Lesego Holele, appealed to pupils not to be influenced by "outside forces." He said these forces wanted to disrupt their schooling and ruin their future.

Mabuza Opposes Police in Residential Areas

[Text] The chief minister of KaNgwane, Mr Enos Mabuza, says he is against the presence of the police and the defense force in the residential areas of KaNgwane, but residents must prove that they can solve their own problems and ensure peace in their own areas. Addressing a meeting at KaBokweni, Mr Mabuza said the police would not be in the residential area if there was peace there. Referring to violence by black people on fellow blacks, Mr Mabuza said it led to loss of support for blacks by friends both within and outside the country.

AZAPO Asks UDF Clarification of Attacks

MB292046 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2029 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — The Azanian People's Organization [AZAPO] has called on the United Democratic Front (UDF) and "certain other organizations" to clarify their positions on recent attacks on AZAPO members. At a press conference today AZAPO said in the light of the intensification of attacks in the past three weeks it had been decided to adopt a "advanced defensive footing." "We are calling on all our members to defend themselves in whatever manner they deem necessary. We see these attacks as calculated to disrupt our programmes, create confusion as to who is working with who and to eliminate the black consciousness movement by attacking the staff-bearer of this movement, namely AZAPO," it said.

AZAPO claims that in the last three weeks numerous attacks on its members, and members of the Azanian Students Movement (AZASM), have been preceded by warnings that they must disband and join other organizations. "These attacks are made by irrational mobs which claim to be members of the UDF and other organizations like the Soweto Students Congress (SOSCO). We call on these organizations to show that these individuals were not acting on their instructions" AZAPO's publicity secretary Mr Muntu Myeza said. In the past three weeks a pattern had developed in the attacks, he said, with most of the attacks occurring on Mondays and decreasing towards the end of the week. He said that on April 21 in Mohlakeng, near Randfontein, four members of AZAPO and AZASM had their homes attacked. Two were shot and hospitalised. Another example, he said, was an attack on two AZAPO members in Langa, near Uitenhage, on April 11. They were both stoned and hacked to death.

Man Pleads Guilty to Terrorism in Nedbank Blast

MB281150 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1135 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 28, SAPA — A Soweto man who placed a limpet mine, which exploded and injured several people, in a Nedbank building in Johannesburg last year was today found guilty of terrorism. Isaac Thulane Mabaso, 24, of Naledi, Soweto, who was employed by the South African Defence Force, pleaded guilty to the charge before Mr Justice S. McCreath in the Rand Supreme Court. Mabaso's legal representative, Mr Eric Dane, handed in a statement in which Mabaso admitted he had placed the bomb in the End Street building.

Mabaso said that in April last year, he met a friend, a Mr Caswell, with whom he had worked in a restaurant in 1980. Mr Caswell, who was a member of the African National Congress, introduced Mabaso to three other ANC members and they discussed with him the possibility of placing the bomb in the building. Mabaso worked in the building and had easy access because of his SADF identification card. On May 28 at about 2pm, Mr Caswell and Mabaso went into the building with the bomb concealed in a shoebox inside a plastic bag. Mabaso placed the bomb next to a door on the first floor and Mr Caswell set the device to go off at 3pm and they left the building. According to the indictment, the bomb substantially damaged the building and injured several people. The indictment mentioned no deaths.

On the basis of the admission, the judge found Mabaso guilty and adjourned the case for an inspection in loco of the building before passing sentence.

Action Committee Says 18 Dead in Alexandra

MB291941 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1922 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — The Alexandra Action Committee (AAC) today claiemd 18 people had died in the township since last Tuesday's eruption of violence. The committee said it received its figures from residents'reports and that of the 18 people, 10 were associated to the AAC. At a press conference held in Johannesburg this afternoon, the acting-chairman, Mr Moses Mayekiso, said the committee, which was established in December last year, believed the recent attacks on people in Alexandra were made by policemen. "The attackers were all wearing police uniforms, some were recognised as policemen and they were all followed in the township by Hippos, yet none of them were arrested," he said.

A spokesman at the Police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria gave the following figures for fatalities and injuries in Alexandra from 6am on April 22 to 6am on April 29: one person injured as a result of police action; four people injured in violence not involving police; three people died as a result of police action; two people died in other violence; one person was wounded in violence which did not involve the police; and three policemen were injured. Concerning the other allegations the spokesman said the security police were investigating.

Mr Mayekiso said the people of Alexandra had decided at the general meeting held at the sports stadium in Alexandra last Thursday to defend themselves. Although he had not seen any evidence of trenches in the streets of Alexandra, this was one of the defences, he added. The AAC demanded:

— the army and police be removed from the township; — detainees be released; — the state allow people in the township to organise themselves.

The AAC was formed to deal with the social, economic and political problems in the township with street committees which were sub-divided into block committees and yard committees, he said. All the committees had courts and if a matter was not resolved it was referred to a higher court, he said. "These structures were formed because the people believe they can deal better with residents' problems than the authorities. The people have created these structures, so the matters are resolved," he said. The role of the courts was to mediate in disputes and as yet they had not had to punish anybody, he added. "Police have disrupted committee meetings; but despite this the committees are successful because they are in the people's yards," he said. "Claims of punishment in these courts are defamatory. This violence is taking place outside these structures and have nothing to do with AAC," he added.,

When asked who controlled Alexandra he replied: "I would say the AAC has control. At the general meeting called last week, 50,000 people arrived."

Mr Sam Buti, former mayor of Alexandra, would not be welcomed back, Mr Mayekiso said. "It was his police unit (the council police) which killed many people in the township. The people won't welcome him back. We are surprised that the state allowed him to see Mr Nelson Mandela and we don't believe it," he said.

Youth Injured in House Petrol Bombing

Soweto Man Killed, Family Wounded by Gunman

MB291714 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1247 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — An unknown gunman last night shot dead Mr David Moloko Mabeba of Diepkloof, Soweto, and wounded his wife and son. Mr Mabeba (59) a father of five sons, died at Baragwanath hospital. His wife, Elizabeth, and son, David, were admitted to the hospital. A relative said today the three were sitting in their Zone 4 home at about 6.30 pm when a man arrived and asked for another of their sons, a high school pupil. He said: "The man had introduced himself as member of the Ma-Kabasa. After being told the youth was not home, without warning the man produced a firearm and fired several shots, wounding all three. He drove off in a car with other men in it."

A wave of terror has been launched in the township recently and at the weekend a number of homes were attacked and petrol bombed. Families in the area are living in fear and many youths have fled their homes. A spokesman for the Soweto police said he would not comment over the telephone.

"At Mamelodi, near Pretoria, a school was damaged by arsonists.

"At Kwazakele, near PE, a policeman's home was damaged by a petrol-bomb. Four men were arrested in connection with this incident.

"At Senterton, near Hankey in the eastern province a private home was extensively damaged in a petrol-bomb attack."

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report] Alexandra Siege

"Alexandra was in a virtual state of siege yesterday, as community leaders blamed this week's violence on policemen — and rejected any suggestion of internecine rivalry in the township," Shaun Johnson and a WEEKLY MAIL reporter write on the front page of Johannesburg THE WEEKLY MAIL in English 25 April-1 may. The Alexandra Civic Association [ACA] asked the government ot " 'denounce violence, disarm its men, and start a new state of reform.' " On the attack on activists, the mother of ANA chairman Mike Beea said the attackers " 'asked me where the "comrades" and my son were. When I said I didn't know, one of them hit me with a panga on the head. They went inside the house, overturned the bed and spread closthes all over before setting them alight.' " Beea himself said he was alerted when his wife, covered in blood, came to warn him; his house had been destroyed and everything in it.

May Day Celebrations

On the same page, Phillip van Niekerk reports that more than a million workers are expected to celebrate May Day next week with the "first national general stayaway since the early sixties." They will be attending rallies around the country. The theme is "one hundred years of exploitation."

Buti Back in Favor

"Sam Buti may soon be welcomed as an ally by the Alexandra community groups which vigorously opposed his role on the local community council," the paper reports in another front page article. After his resignation, Buti said he had never opposed such groups as the ACA but questioned whether they would accept his joining forces with them. Alexandra Crisis Committee Chairman Linda Twala said that Buti "had done what the people wanted him to do. 'We shall accept him back now that he is no longer working within the system.' " United Democratic Front Publicity Secretary Murphy Morobe called the council's collapse " 'a victory for the people of Alexandra' " and said the doors were open for councillors "to join the ranks of democratic movements."

Mogopa Defiance

Anton Harber reports on page 2 that the people of Mogopa, whose removal in 1984 caused a reconsideration of government policy, "are now threatening to return defiantly to the land from which they were evicted. And they believe this week's government reform announcements have strengthened their claim to return." With the end of Section 5 of the 1927 Black Administration Act, the state will lose the "President's Order" giving it the "power to determine that any group, tribe or black community should withdraw from one place to any other and not return." The law has been used many times in forced removals.

Doctors Defy Edict

"Almost 100 doctors at Coronation Hospital, Johannesburg, are openly defying a government order that patients be refused treatment and 'shunted' to other hospitals as part of a drive towards 'regional rationalisation,' " another report on page 2 says. Doctors ignored directives from the hospitals adminstrative offices to send patients to other hospitals according to racial categories. The hospital head has taken a 6-week " 'study leave.' "

Necklace Murders

Sefako Nyaka writes on page 3 that "gangs of rebellious youths, and not 'comrades,' were responsible for the deaths of 32 witches found buried in the rocky slopes of the Sekhukhune mountains earlier this month. The deaths apparently occurred because the gangs of youths felt the 'witches' were standing in the way of unity in the community. According to residents of the area, 'comrades' from the Sekhukhuneland Youth Congress tried to prevent the killings."

Alexandra Boycott

Another page 3 article reports that the local consumer boycott in Alexandra continues and shopkeepers " 'were starting to feel the pinch' " of the campaign. Residents meeting in a stadium to discuss the situation said they had to intensify the boycott " 'because the very same people who were aiding the state in its repression were responsible for the attacks.' " "Residents alleged some shopkeepers took part in this week's attacks on activists' homes. Shopkeepers refused to comment on the allegations."

U.S. Disinvestment

Phillip van Niekerk reports on page 4 of THE WEEKLY MAIL that "United States disinvestment from South Africa is already a reality. In the past five years, U.S. direct foreign investment in South Africa has halved, a massive decline of $1.3 billion." Last year alone, $500 million U.S. investment was withdrawn. The figures are according to James Kelly, U.S. deputy assistant director of commerce for Africa, the Near East, and South Asia, answering questions at the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Africa.

May Day in Port Elizabeth

"The Eastern Cape is trapped between three opposing forces: a massive black boycott; the local council's shack-smashing bulldozers; and white businessmen on the edge of ruin anxiously searching for a path to peace," begins an article on page 5. Mike Loewe reports from Port Elizabeth on the various crises which will come to a head on May Day, a day when shanties will be smashed in Langa and businessmen will have to decide whether to shut their businesses or attempt to carry on, although many businessmen have already decided to close down. "Support for the boycott has been exacerbated by heavy clashes in the townships between police and mourners." White businessmen decided at a meeting to appoint a committee to consider a week-long shutdown in trading; demonstrations at the city hall; the resignation of the entire city council; two columns of marchers, one from the "white" city hall and one from the townships to meet halfway; and suspended tax payments until government ended apartheid. One white businessman and former rugby player told the meeting that whites "had to form a commitment to a nonracial, democratic society in which all citizens would have equal opportunity."

Detention Deaths

"Deaths in police custody over the past three weeks now toll five —three of which appear politically related," Ruth Becker reports on page 6 of THE WEEKLY MAIL. Commenting on the deaths, Detainee's Parents Support Committee (DPSC) representative Max Coleman said: " 'Detentions are proportional to the amount of political activity taking place and in turn deaths in detention are also proportional. Also the manner in which people, activists in particular, are being rounded up and hounded increases the risk of death in the process.' " The DPSC has recorded a total of 61 deaths in security detention since 1963 and 18 in police custody during the last 18 months. An analysis of 76 case histories suggests, Coleman says, " 'that serious assault during and immediately after arrest is a common cause of death and, in fact there is during the present state onslaught on political activists a very fine line between death as a result of police action and death in police custody.' " Another fine line exists between death in detention or criminal legislation, he said.

More on Nchabeleng

Another page 6 report, by Patrick Laurence, says that "Peter Nchabeleng, the northern Transvaal president of the United Democratic Front, who died in detention only hours after being picked up by police, is most unlikely to have died of a heart attack as Lebowa police have stated," according to a post mortem conducted by a state pathologist without his family being notified. Lawyers for the family have decided to forego a second post mortem, meaning that they agree with the findings. This supports the family's contention that he died of torture, not a weak heart.

Tumahole Township Battles

Jeremy Seekings reports on page 9 of THE WEEKLY MAIL that in Tumahole, a Parys township, a gang of 14-year-olds have been battling the vigilante A-Team. With schools suspended, the militancy of younger students has increased and a group of 14-year-olds, called the 14s, was formed. Small at the beginning, the whipping of students by police politicized more youths and increased its membership. "Several houses belonging to policemen have been burnt. Teachers and other members of the 'A-Team' have left the township. Delivery trucks have been attacked." Primary school boycotts have been total since early February. The city hall has been burned, likely by some members of the gang.

Lawyer Struck Off Roll

Another page 9 report says that a Durban attorney serving a 20-year jail sentence for high treason has been struck off the Attorneys Roll by the the Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court. Patrick Maqubela was considered unfit to continue practice.

Mines Already Nationalized

On page 11 of THE WEEKLY MAIL, Jean Leger and Phillip van Niekerk report that while COSATU president Elijah Barayi has argued for nationalizing the mines, in fact the mines have already been de facto nationalized. Analyzing the mines' costs, the reporters show that the percentage of income devoted to black and white wages has steadily declined. The amount of dividends has remained steady, about the same as the cost of black wages. the great increase has been the amount of money the government has taken from the mines through taxes and profit sharing. "In 1911 only three percent of revenues were paid to the state whereas by 1984 this had rocketed to 19 percent, a sum of 12.3 billion. This bounty makes it substantially easier for the South African state to afford the apartheid system, the bloated and largely white civil service, expensive homeland bureaucracies and the massive military machine used to fight wars in Namibia, to destabilize the subcontinet and quell the township protest." With 58 percent of distributable profits going to the state and 42 percent to shareholders, it could be argued that the quasi-nationalization of the mines has already taken place. Any increase in wages will have a direct impact on state coffers.

Focus on Influx Control

Patrick Laurence contributes a "Focus on Influx Control" on page 12 of the paper discussing reaction to the change in influx control laws. He notes the skepticism concerning the move since the Group Areas Act will be retained and the government may use squatting laws to keep blacks out of other residential areas. Furthermore, the changes will not immediately apply to the homelands. "As citizens of the internationally unrecognised states, they are subject to the rigorous controls of the Aliens Act pending negotiations over the restoration of South African citizenship to them." The refusal to grant freedom of movement automatically to citizens of these territories gives the government more leverage over the homelands governments, which may be used to force them to join a confederation of southern African states. A new tougher antisquatting law would theoretically apply to all but would in practice probably be used only against blacks. The bill would make everyone identify themselves "without delay" to a policeman who makes the request but this might be applied more readily to blacks. However, the change is still a move away from the old, crude system.

'Black Cities' Planned

Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 26 April carries a report on its front page that "the abolition of influx control has galvanized government plans to build six new 'black cities' each with a population of a million or more. Cities will be built at Richards Bay, Harrismith and Nelspruit. The Witwatersrand, Durban, the Cape Peninsula and possibly Bloemfontein have been earmarked for urban development." According to the chairman of the West Rand Development Board, the country's black population was expected to double by the turn of the century and plans were being made to "spread" it throughout the country.

More AWB Action Likely

"More National Party [NP] meetings will in future be disrupted by rightwing groups 'if the NP continues on its on its present path' said Mr Eugene Terre'Blanche, leader of the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement AWB]," Hannes de Wet reports on page 2. " 'The assertion we deliberately planned to break up the meeting at Brits and the rightwingers came from all over Transvaal is nonsense. This was a spontaneous reaction against the NP's policies. If the NP continues on its present path, this could be expected to happen again in the future.' " NP MP for Brits Jan Grobler said that he had heard rightwingers say that " 'this would be their style in the future. They said that they would be travelling from town to town, breaking up NP meetings.' " Terre'Blanche denied his movement had such a deliberate strategy. He said there was no need to bring in outsiders to break up NP meetings as meetings he had held in the Transvaal had all been filled to capacity.

Buti Meets Mandela

Sam Buti, former Alexandra mayor, "has confirmed that he recently held secret talks with jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela," the paper reports on page 4. However, he refused to elaborate or speculate that he might travel to Lusaka for talks with the ANC. " 'I did meet with him, but what transpired there is something that I cannot disclose at all' ".

Whites in Court for Shooting Blacks

THE STAR reports on page 6 that three white men "alleged to have shot four pedestrians during a series of shooing incidents in Honeydew appeared briefly before a Roodeport magistrate yesterday on four counts of attempted murder." The state is charging that the men shot four black pedestrians after a hunting trip on 8 February. The hearing was postponed until 28 May and the men were released on bail of 1,000 rands each.

Reformed Church Not Political

"In an attempt to quash persistant rumours that the Hervormde Kerk [Reformed Church] is the church of the Conservative Party, a Church spokesman has emphasised that it was not affiliated to any political group," Estelle Trengove reports on the same page. The denial was made by the church's secretary general at its annual general assembly, which will also discuss "the controversial church law that only whites may be members of the Hervormde Kerk."

Political Commentary

In his "Political Commentary" on page 10, David Braun writes that the government's announcement of its intention to extend the powers of Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange at the same time that it announced the abolition of the pass laws demonstrates that the government is determined to "implement reform at a managed pace" and "not to be stampeded by international pressure or internal instability into making changes before it is ready." There was "tough talk" in the state president's advertisement about not giving in to intimidation "designed to show reforms are not coming at the point of a gun. Of course, it would be naive to believe that the Government is reforming for any reason other than that it is feeling the heat. But at the same time the type of powers that the draft legislation published this week seeks to confer on the police demonstrates just how much the Government can still do, and will do, to repress insurrection." Turning to another subject, Braun notes that Foreign Minister Pik Botha "is bucked about recent foreign policy successes," including the invitation to State President P.W. Botha to attend the Swazi coronation and his talks with French, West German, and U.S. officials. "But perhaps the most important foreign affairs development this week was President Botha's statement that talks with the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group had reached a delicate stage and that it would not be in South Africa's interests to make any further comments yet."

Significance of May Day

In an article on page 11, the Labor Monitoring Group traces the history of May Day celebrations around the world and in South Africa, noting the day is a "tribute to the value of labour" and symbolizes "internationalism and the need for workers in all countries to give solidarity to each other's struggles." Those who call for a May Day holiday are, by "espousing the cause of the poor, the oppressed and exploited," challenging "privilege, entrenched interests and unrepresentative regimes." For this reason, the call has become a "hotly contested political issue." "It seems that the Government and employers are now reviewing the whole area of paid public holidays. Put simply, the paid public holidays commemorated at present (Republic Day and Kruger Day for example) do not have the approval of most of the population," the article concludes.

SABC Denies Suppressing Truth

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 25 April reports on page 4 that SABC public relations director Leon Shirley has said that there was no chance that the SABC reports half-truths or suppresses the truth. Shirley made that statement following a report in an Afrikaans newspaper which said that the SABC's internal censor often manipulated the news.

BEELD on Reform

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 25 April says in an editorial on page 10 that one often hears the view that "constitutional reform in South Africa is not a matter of principle but really a series of opportunistic steps taken to contain a dangerous subject." However, Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis has said that the government was abolishing influx control "because the government believes in the individual's inalienable right to worker where he pleases" and President Botha also stated this in his advertisements. Nevertheless, there are still fickle-minded persons who say they do not know where South Africa is headed and that the government cannot spell out the future. In this regard, the president's announcement that a number of discriminatory laws would be reviewed by the national statutory council is very encouraging.

DIE TRANSVALER on Defense White Paper

Pretoria DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans on 23 April says in an editorial on page 18 that "it is encouraging to note that in the white paper on defense presented recently in Parliament, emphasis was placed on the army's task of maintaining law and order in times of internal unrest." Despite opposition from the Progressive Federal Party and others to the use of soldiers in controlling unrest, it has been shown that this task cannot be left to the police alone. While the solution to this problem cannot be found by fighting violence with violence and needs a climate that would make negotiation possible, the use of the army in a supportive role has apparently become indispensable to this end.

DIE VADERLAND on Alexandra

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans on 24 April says in an editorial on page 12 that it is difficult to assess the explosion of unrest in Alexandra township. What is really noticeable that it began on the eve of the tabling of the white paper scrapping the pass laws. This shows the revolutionary elements do not want the reform process to succeed, since reform would defeat their aims. The Alexandra incident steered world and internal black attention away from the white paper.

Hope for EPG Negotiations

Max du Preez and David Jackson report on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg SUNDAY TIMES in English on 27 April that "South Africa is poised for a possible breakthrough in the cycle of domestic violence and limping constitutional reform." It is believed black and white "nationalists" may be brought together at the conference table with the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group (EPG) serving as "the instrument." Among the developments that seem to point this way are indications that the government and the ANC may accept the EPG "as an honest broker able to initiate negotiations by proxy," President Botha's informal talks with Frontline State leaders at the Swazi coronation, indications that the government is "attempting to identify and woo nationalist, as opposed to communist, elements in the ANC," "a remarkable concession" whereby former Alexandra Mayor Sam Buti was allowed to meet Nelson Mandela, and "a subtle shift in emphasis in the Government's approach to political rights and negotiations." It is believed that EPG'S plan will ask the government to release Mandela and other political prisoners, recognize the ANC, and negotiate in good faith, while the ANC will be asked to guarantee "a suspension of violence and civil subversion." The EPG may also guarantee that if the ANC resorts to violence and the government is "forced to respond, there will not be retributive Western actions against Pretoria." President Botha has been "consistently positive" in his approach toward the EPG and this week distinguished between nationalists and communists in the ANC. However, he has also made it clear that he would not release Mandela "so that he could continue his 'devil's work' — thus supporting speculation that only cast-iron guarantees underwritten by a body such as the EPG will see the ANC leader released."

'Discriminatory' Contest Canceled

Charmain Naidoo and Sylvia Vollenhoven report on the front page that the Checkers supermarket chain has canceled a Marilyn Monroe look alike contest after complaints that it was discriminatory. Labor Party leader Allan Hendrickse said the contest was not fair to black women. Checkers managing director Clive West said " 'I think it's sad that politics has crept into this.' "

Buti Interviewed

On page 2, David Jackson reports on an interview with Sam Buti, who resigned as mayor of Alexandra this week and who at one time "was held to be a fearless opponent of the Government. Now he is ostracised." Buti said he was in favor of " 'selective sanctions. You have got to pressurise the businessmen to pressurise the Government to change.' " He also said that it was not intimidation that made him resign, but " 'the frustration that has built up while trying to assist the people on this side while the Government created barriers,' " adding " 'if the black people of Alexandra need my help, I'm here to serve them. After all, that's my ministry. But at the moment I have no plans except to go back to my church and serve my congregation.' " Buti also said he did not think the abolition of the pass laws meant much if a person " 'has to live in a shanty with a family of eight.' " " 'Changes can only come about when political parties like the ANC, PAC [Pan-African Congress] and the Black Consciousness Movement are recognised and they choose their recognised leaders to negotiate. That would be positive, constructive negotiation — and that is what we are pressing for.' "

Colored Education Director Resigns

"In a shock move, the director of coloured education this week resigned from his post early because he found the political interference in his department 'untenable,' " Sylvia Vollenhoven writes on the same page. In an "exclusive interview" with the SUNDAY TIMES, Abraham Johannes Arendse said it was not the problems in the schools that caused him to resign but " 'political pressure.' " " 'The problems are not from down below but from high up and from outside my department.' " " 'I handle these things on a purely educational level and the political interference is something new, it is going to break education down,' " Arendse said.

Future of Group Areas Act

"A recommendation from the President's Council for the dumping of the Group Areas Act — the last barrier to full social integration — is believed to be imminent," Max du Preez and Norman West say in another page 2 article. "After months of deliberation," it is believed that there is now a "broad consensus" in the council's constitutional committee to recomemend scrapping the act, "but it is also clear that such a proposal will encounter fierce resistance from some members of the National Party and even within the Cabinet." Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis is reported to have told a National Party seminar for women in Worcester that " 'those who needed the Group Areas Act to remain white did not deserve to be white.' " The seminar called for " 'grey' " areas for those who wished to live with people of other races, but "made a plea that all areas not be declared 'open.' " However, "there is apparently a strong school of thought in the committee that all areas should be open and that it should be left to the local authorities to apply — probably to the Administrator of the province — for certain suburbs to be exclusive."

Opposition to Security Bill

"The controversial Public Safety Amendment Bill tabled this week is set for a tough passage through Parliament — and even stronger criticism from outside," Max du Preez writes on page 2 of the SUNDAY TIMES. The Labor Party, the National People's Party, and the Progressive Federal Party (PFP) have all opposed the bill, while "academic jurists, lawyers and extra-Parliamentary groups have slammed the proposed new powers." "Opponents of the Bill have pointed out it virtually gives a blank cheque to the Minister. The only effective proviso is that if somebody is detained under the regulations for longer than 30 days, he must be named in Parliament." PFP MP Helen Suzman said she had " 'little reason to believe that these regulations will be less draconian than those implemented during the state of emergency and will include indemnity for the police, restraints on the media and stringent conditions under which detainees can be held.' "

Opposition to New ID's

Du Preez and Norman West report in another page 2 article that the Houses of Delegates and Representatives "are strongly opposed to the racial coding built into the new uniform ID book system" and there is also "widespread opposition from the House of Delegates and the PFP to the taking of fingerprints and storing them in a central register. More importantly, the fingerprinting is viewed with the utmost suspicion by blacks. It could lead to many not applying for the new document." The paper has learned that Home Affairs Minister Stoffel Botha originally opposed fingerprinting, but it was included "on the insistance of Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange and the SA police." Nevertheless, there is a possibility that the fingerprinting provision may be dropped while the bill is in committee, "but that the Government will stand firm on racial coding as it is essential while the Population Registration Act still exists."

'Growing Rift' Among Afrikaners

Allan Soule writes on page 4 that the disruption of a National Party meeting in Brits by the Afrikaner Resistance Movement (AWB) was "perhaps the most vehement display of organised white right wing might to date ... an event which boldy underscored the growing rift in the ranks of the Afrikaner." It was also the first public clash between the two organizations.

Colored Ambassador

"A member of the President's Council, Dr Willie Hoods, is likely to become South Africa's first coloured ambassador. The 50-year old Eersterus educationist is to be posted in Ottawa, Canada, the SUNDAY TIMES was told," Norman West reports on the same page. "At the same time the Department of Foreign Affairs has embarked on a high-powered recruitment campaign to attract coloured candidates for assignments abroad." At present, "several" Indians and Coloreds are serving as second and third secretaries in South African embassies.

Alexandra Situation

In a report on this week's violence in Alexandra, David Jackson, Sam Kumalo, and Hilton Hamman say that there is fear that " 'rule by comrades' will fill the vacuum left by the sudden resignation of the township's mayor, the Rev Sam Buti, and three black councillors." The " 'comrades' " have called on blacks to " 'isolate collaborators socially,' to refuse to serve councillors and their families in their shops and 'to end all personal relationships with police and other collaborators.' " Meanwhile, "angry white businessmen talk of forming vigilante squads to curb the wave of crime and vandalism which has seen open looting of some white-owned shops." The Alexandra Action Committee, a group of white businessmen in industrial areas around the township, are trying to hold talks with township residents, although " 'now that Sam Buti has resigned, there is no one with whom we can talk. But something has to be done to get talks going,' " the committee's spokesman said.

End of Pass Laws

"The pass laws are dead. And in the immediate wake has come relief, scepticism, and a large dollop of caution," Jeremy McCabe, Sylvia Vollenhoven, Shaun Harris and Cas St Leger write in a "special report" on page 19. The end of the pass laws "will return dignity to many million of black South Africans no longer subjected to night raids, arbitrary arrests, summary trials and pointless imprisonment. But for a large number of black South Africans — the eight million supposed citizens of the independent homelands — the case is not so clear-cut." Furthermore, there are fears that "the much-valued freedom of movement promised by the new pass laws may be eroded by future clamp-downs on squatting, vagrancy or even loitering."

Security Force Irregularities

Stephan Terblanche says on page 24 of the SUNDAY TIMES that the United Democratic Front (UDF) and other opposition groups have accused the security forces of regularly using torture and possibly of collusion with right-wing vigilante groups, charges which the government has denied. "This week, the SUNDAY TIMES put a series of questions to the Government on the growing allegations concerning police irregularities." Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange declined to respond, but Deputy Defense Minister Adriaan Vlok rejected claims "of massive security force irregularities and said he was not surprised by the 'anti-security forces claim.' " Vlok said that the role of the defense force in the townships is to support the police to protect " 'innocents from the barbarism of radical thugs.' " However, he did admit that some members of the Defense Force, "acting under extreme provocation under difficult and hazardous circumstances, have exceeded their powers and have been guilty of excesses." Neither he nor Defense Minister Magnus Malan will " 'tolerate or condone this type of action' " and anyone found guilty of this behavior " 'will face the full weight of the legal system of this country.' " However, UDF spokesman Murphy Morobe said "so few security force members were prosecuted for irregularities that it made little impact on the township people and merely encouraged the security forces."

SUNDAY TIMES on Pass Laws

In an editorial on page 28, the paper discusses the repeal of the pass laws, noting that the response of blacks, "which veered from the sceptical to the cautious," is not surprising. "Restoration of dignity long denied is a right — not a concession. And the legacy of years of National Party doublespeak must inevitably remain suspicious." Nevertheless, it is both "shallow and dishonest" to dismiss the reforms as cosmetic. The end of the pass laws "is, indisputably, the most tangible step yet taken by the Government in the hesitant ad-hocism it is pleased to call reform." Furthermore, "reform is indivisible" and the "pass laws cannot be scrapped without a host of implications for other discriminatory measures," including the Group Areas Act. Finally, the move "will have an immediate qualitative effect on the lives of black South Africans" and enable their "latent entreprenuerial spirit" to stop being concerned with merely dodging the law and allow them to turn their attention "towards the business for which it is needed." While there are still things to be worked out and the new urbanization policy may result in problems, "the main point is that the intitiative — belated as it may be — has begun."

Black Local Authorities 'Besieged'

In a column on the same page, Brian Pottinger writes that black local authorities, who will ultimately be responsible for handling the government's new urbanization program, "are besieged, in most cases buckling and in some cases broken." Signs of this are the wider powers to be given to black municipal policemen, the resignation of Sam Buti and other members of the Alexandra Town Council, and an admission by the Inland Revenue Department that it no longer sends tax inspectors into the townships. The government's planned regional service councils are based on a system of residential apartheid, and " 'unless the municipal councils are cleaned up, so that service therein is made attractive to serious minded and properly educated black South Africans, any superstructure which uses these council as its bricks will be of a shaky and unrespesentative nature,' " according to David Grinker, Diepmeadow's town clerk for 10 years and the author of a booklet entitled Inside Soweto. "At a time when fundamentals like pass laws are up for repeal surely it is time the proposed local authority system come under review; become chips in a far bigger game aimed at creating a completely new constitutional order in South Africa," Pottinger concludes.

Bureau of Information

In another column on the same page, Martie Meiring discusses the new Bureau of Information, noting that "too often a short-circuit between Government intention and public response has had disastrous results. An old-fashioned managerial style on the part of Government and a seeming obstinancy to employ marketing strategies has frustrated even the most sympathetic supporters." Thus there is a clear need for an agency that will explain government policies and the bureau could also act as a "listening post" to extraparliamentary groups. "It can certainly become a valuable clearing house in the present build-up of increasing black radicalisation and equally increasing white frustration by actively keeping a two-way flow of traffic between Government and the nation."

Urbanization White Paper Praised

In a column on page 29, Willie Esterhuyse, a consultant to the Urban Foundation, writes that the white paper on urbanization "marks a significant crack in the formidable walls of South Africa's citadel of injustice: apartheid," and "the authorities in general, and Minister Chris Heunis in particular, should be commended for taking this step." It would be cynical, if not deliberately dishonest, "to ridicule this step as cosmetic." The white paper presents an "open-ended and flexible policy statement on urbanisation," instead of seeking to control it through intervention and "statutory prescription." The principles outlined in the white paper, including equality before the law, rejection of discrimination on the basis of race and color, equal political rights, the private sector's responsibility to provide affordable housing, and an individual's right to occupy or own property in keeping with his means, "indicate a sincere attempt to dismantle unjust structures, setting south Africa on the course of development." However, much of the positive impact the white papaer will have on black-white relations will be "neutralised" if references to group areas are considered nonnegotiable, while "the anomalies which arise in respect of the six million blacks in the TBVC [Transkei, Bophuthatswana, Venda, Ciskei] countries not having freedom of mobility are so profound that immediate rectification is required."

Black Sash's Burton on Pass Law Repeal

In another column on the repeal of the pass laws on the same page, Black Sash Chairman Mary Burton writes that "we are relieved that there will be no more pass raids, no 'endorsements out' stamped in the reference books, no charges laid against husbands for 'harbouring' their wives ... What keeps us from joining in the general rejoicing is the certainty that while some people may benefit from these changes, maybe the majority will not." Perhaps the first among those who stand to gain is the government since if the move persuades the world that the country is abandoning race discrimination, some of the pressure on it may ease. Businessmen are also pleased with the move if it reduces the chances of sanctions or disinvestment. Finally, the 245 people who have been released from prison, the people who are now in urban areas illegally, and migrant workers who can find accommodation for their families will benefit. Those who will not benefit are the citizens of the TBVC states, black foreigners who will have to obtain permanent resident status, the unemployed and the poor, "the millions of people trapped into Bantustans at present, and farmworkers in white areas who are made redundant," of "all citizens and for every colour who will have to submit to being fingerprinted for the new identity document, who will all be subjected to having information about them recorded in the Population Register, and who will have endless difficulties if erroneous information is once entered in that register." The fact that the Group Areas Act is to remain, local authorities will fall under the "own affirs" departments in Parliament, the security forces will be given wider powers all lead to the conclusion "that the State is using the appearance of reform to maintain and even strengthen its control over all facets of the lives of all South Africans."

Golf Club Opens to All Races

A report on page 2 of the SUNDAY TIMES "Metro" section notes that a previously all-white golf club has decided to accept members of all races. In a referendum 60 percent of the members of Roodeport's CMR Club favored the move.

Upturn in Building Trade

Another report on the same page notes that the Johannesburg City Council's planning department has noted an upturn in the building trade. "The number of plans submitted in January this year was sharply up on January last year — 438 compared with 307."

Airline Beats Sanctions

"A new Bophuthatswana airline, Afro Air, starts flying freight from South Africa to anywhere in Africa, the Middle East, or the Far East early in May. In a style reminiscent of Rhodesian sanctions busting, Afro Air has avoided the ban on SA aircraft flying to black Africa by sub-chartering two DC-8 jets from a Zimbabwean air-freight company Affretair. The crew is also foreign," Ciaran Ryan reports on the front page of the BUSINESS TIMES supplement. The managing director of Afro Air said that "as trade between black Africa and SA approaches R1.5 billion a year, the demand for faster transport to central Africa and beyond has increased."

Staff Lay-Offs

"Reports on staff lay-offs are still filtering through from many sectors in spite of statistics supporting the contention that the economy reached its nadir towards the end of 1985," David Southey writes in another article on the front page of the SUNDAY TIMES BUSINESS TIMES section. "Many employers still need firmer evidence that things are improving before they start taking on additional employees. Many businesses which are not retrenching have reduced staff numbers by not replacing those who retire or leave for other reasons."

General Electric To Leave

"The giant General Electric Company of the United States is quitting South Africa, and is selling its operations to management for a secret sum," David Carte writes on the same page. "GE is the third large American corporation to withdraw in the past two weeks. It follows AT&T and Marriott Corporation." "These blue chip withdrawals have raised fears that other mega-corporations might 'rush for the disinvestment door' while it is still open and the rand is still worth nearly 50 U.S. cents."

IBM, Phillips To Stay

Kerry Clarke reports on the same page that IBM and Phillips have denied suggestions that they are considering closing their operations in South Africa. Phillips group chief executive Joop van Tilburg said he believed the company's presence "is a positive contribution to current developments in SA," while IBM President John Akers said he was misquoted in a NEW YORK TIMES report and that he had said the company was constantly reviewing its position in South Africa rather than constantly reviewing whether it should close its subsidiary in the country. "However, Mr Akers says he is increasingly discouraged by the slow pace of change in SA and he is more pessimistic than a year go. The lack of progress is making it difficult for IBM to maintain as a sound business and contribute to peaceful change." IBM recently cut its staff by 300.

No Tax Inspectors in Townships

Ciaran Ryan reports on page 3 that the Department of Inland Revenue has stopped sending tax inspectors into the townships. "Comrades" have reportedly told black shopkeepers to stop paying tax. The Inland Revenue's chief director said " 'we do not want to cause more unrest by sending in tax inspectors so we are withdrawing from the townships until things simmer down.' " The move has raised fears that the department will lose millions of rands in taxes.

Business 'Devastated' in Five Cities

"Recession, strike action and consumer boycotts have devastated business in Port Elizabeth, East London, Queenstown and Uitenhage in the Eastern Cape and Howick in Natal," Ciaran

Ryan writes on page 9. Approximately 35 businesses catering to the black market closed in Queenstown after a 7-month consumer boycott and dozens have already closed in East London due to the boycott there. Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage have been severely affected by the fall in car sales and "the number of staff employed by car manufacturers has fallen by 41 percent since 1982 — in Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage, more than half the car-workers have been sacked since 1982." In Howick, a consumer boycott over the dismissal of 970 workers at BTR Sarmcol has meant that "the number of houses being put on the market is 50 percent above normal." East London and Port Elizabeth have been affected by a decline in harbor traffic and "housing values in these towns have fallen in line with their economic fortunes."

Hotel Chain Promotes Equal Opportunity

"The Protea Hotels & Inns group aims to have 50 percent of all departmental and supervisory posts in the group filled by blacks, coloureds and Indians by mid-1987," another report on the same page says. "It will be the culmination of the group's black leadership development programme. The Protea Group's policy is equal opportunity."

Record Fruit Exports

"The Deciduous Fruit Board expects record receipts from exports this season, says general manager Louis Kriel," Alex Paterson reports on page 11. "Asked about consumer resistance to South African products, he says: 'In the European countries where we have always been supported there has been no resistance.' " In Britain, which accounts for 30 to 40 percent of deciduous fruit exports, the campaign against South African goods has "made no noticeable impact on sales" and Kriel said that while Sweden and Norway have banned South African goods, "there has been no trouble in finding other markets for fruit."

Bophuthatswana Prisoner Set Alight

"A Bophuthatswana prisoner who made a daring daylight court excape this week was set alight by a mob which apparently mistook him for a memebr of Bop's Defence Force," Andrew Lefoka reports on the front page of Johannebsurg THE SUNDAY STAR in English on 27 April. The prisoner escaped wearing his prison uniform which is similar in color to that of members Bophuthatswana's security forces. He managed to escape to a police hostel and is now in the hospital. "The incident, which took place the trouble-torn Winterveld township on Thursday, has highlighted the ongoing conflict between Bop security forces, the police and residents in the homeland."

Alexandra 'Lawlessness'

"Chilling tales of lawlessness by groups of men wearing police-type uniforms and being escorted by an armoured personnel carrier are emerging as the story behind the outburst of violence in Alexandra unfolds," Jon Qwelane writes on the same page. The men are said by residents to have been both black and white, "The white people sometimes blackening their faces, but their necks and arms revealed their race," and are reported to have "screamed political slogans, pretending they were 'comrades.' " "A police spokesman said the matter is being investigated." In a related report on the same page, Qwelane reports that the death toll in Alexandra from this weeks's unrest is believed to stand at 10 according to township residents, while another report on the Alexandra unrest by Qwelane on page 2 notes that the death toll in the township after 9 weeks of unrest stands at 49 according to residents, while the official figure is 20.

NF To 'Internationalize' Position

Mudini Maivha reports on page 2 that the "National Forum (NF) this week announced a plan to 'internationalise' its socialist position in Africa and the world." As a first step, the NF will open discussions with OAU President Diouf and is to open an office in London. At a press conference, the NF also announced that it wants blacks to consider withholding taxes, not disrupt meducal supplies and ambulances during boycotts, initiate an "alternative socialist education programme," create "democratically-constituted Parents Teachers Associations," and work toward the formation of a single teachers union.

MAWU Criticizes Restrictions

"The Metal and Allied Workers Union (MAWU) yesterday reacted angrily to the imposition of wide-ranging restrictions on tommorrow's funeral of MAWU member Mr Mphumelelo Kortman," anogher page 2 report says. In a statement, MAWU said that it feared " 'the imposition of these conditions may lead to unneccessary confrontation with people attending the funeral,' " as " 'thousands of workers' " had planned to attend an all-night vigil and the funeral.

Jack Expects Murder Attempt

Community leader Mkhuseli Jack said that a report that he had been shot and killed was " 'a calculated ploy on the part of a small group to prepare the minds of the people for an attempt on my life.' " Jack said that a Johannesburg newspaper received a similar report 3 weeks ago. He added: " 'If anyone thinks we are going to be intimidated by such scare tactics they are very much mistaken, and if this just a build-up to an attempt to my life, well, all I can say is that even if I am killed, the struggle will continue with out me.' "

Evaton Meeting Banned

"A meeting to discuss the education cirisis in Evaton was yesterday banned by police under Section 46 of the Internal Security Act," Mudini Maivha reports on the same page.

Black Government Crisis

A report by David Breier on page 4 says that the government's urbanization policy will place a heavy burden on black local authorities "at a time when black councillors are resigning in droves." PFP MP Helen Suzman said that the government was " 'obviously ignoring the realities of the local government situation.' " Councillors have resigned, several have been killed and local government has collapsed. However, the new white paper devolves power on to entities that are in poor condition. Suzman said "the only solution was for townships to be incorporated back into the major local authorities as was the case before the development (previously the administration) boards, and for blacks to be represented on town and city councils on a non-racial basis."

Pass Laws Remembered

Jon Qwelane reviews the history of the pass laws on the same page. He says that the trials of pass law offenders were among the fastest since the Wild West, with it taking only a minute to turn an innocent civilian into a criminal. Blacks would not ask a policemen for directions for fear of of having his pass looked at and often being quickly banished from Johannesburg in 72 hours. However, "with the right money and contacts, having one's pass fixed was not an insurmountable problem." You could buy your way out of a raid with a policemen "with the right level of corruption" and pass-office clerks, like a friend of his, often bought drinks with his "pocket money" taken at the pass office.

Confusion Over Group Areas

"Total confusion reigns in government over the future of the group areas act which regulates residential apartheid. The President's Council is examing the act with a view to suggesting rforms but the signals it has been receiving from the government have been contradictory and have left the council floundering," David Breier reports in another story on page 4 of the SUNDAY STAR. According to sources in Cape Town, this has left the President's Council totally confused and rudderless, as government leaders have said the law can be changed but the government supports the essence of it. Technically, the President's Council is supposed to take an independent view but in fact the Nationalists on it take their cue from the government. The colored and Indian members and PFP members want to scrap the act while the Conservatives want to return it. Options such as giving the local option to local municipalities have been considered. Another possibility is to declare new suburbs nonracial. The council hopes to report in time for the special session of Parliament.

Action on NP Dissidents

David Breier reports on page 5 that "the National Party [NP] aims to force a handful of its most outspoken leftist MPs out of the party in order to avert an even bigger split. According to Parliamentary sources this week, the NP is gunning for at least three of the most obvious dissidents on the leftwing of the party caucus, although as many as nine could be involved." The three are Wynand Malan from Randburg, Albert Nothnagel from Innesdal and Leon Wessels from Krugersdorp. They have long been a thorn in the party's back by supporting scrapping groups areas and talking with real black leaders. The party wants to prevent a walkout by a larger group of moderates, perhaps 50, led by Foreign Minister Pik Botha, "by precipitating a split by a few 'maverick' MPS who have little personal following."

SUNDAY STAR Editorial

An editorial on page 18 says that the president lacks credibility with its reform moves because he refused to set out "a proper statement of intent and timetable of reform." However, "almost by accident, the Government is stumbling towards the goals that it could have. and should have, reached by bold steps before the present crisis was upon it." The paper says that there are several interesting straws in the wind recently that suggest something is happening behind the political scenes, as well as in front of them, which could hold out an inkling of hope. Foreign countries are being warmer and according to a Parliamentary source, the proposals of the Eminent Persons Group "have not been rejected out of hand." The sudden lifting of the pass laws may be connected with this. Contrary to what some think, the country's traditional allies do not want chaos but peaceful solutions. However, by refusing to specify a timetable and using opaque language, President Botha "is ensuring that this climate cannot be generated at home or abroad."

Businessman Encourages Youth to Remain

On the same page, the paper prints an edited version of speech given at Hyde Park High School by Mervyn King, executive chairman of the Kirsh Trading Group, urging young whites to stay in South Africa. King says the choices are a collapse of the government, unlikely because of the power of the army, a "perpetual stalemate" where the government does not fall but the country is in constant turmoil, or an internationally accepted strategic plan to create a political system "that has legitimacy which is accepted not only locally but world-wide." Whites would be best served now if they used their power not to protect their privileges but to establish checks and balances in a truly democratic socity. Reviewing anti-democratic acts, he says he believes that ultimately the solution will be found based on power-sharing. Unlike in other countries where doctors and lawyers have trouble finding work, many opportunities abound in South Africa. He cannot believe a solution cannot be worked out and he believes that students will be able to pursue their careers and be part of history by staying.

Ciskei Economic Growth

In a report on pages 1 and 9 of THE SUNDAY STAR's "Finance" Section, Malcolm Fothergill notes that "Ciskei's free-market experiment, the boldest in Africa, is bearing sweet and juicy fruit — an inflow of capital unparalled in South Africa, if not the world, and the creation of thousands of jobs." In the last 10 months of 1985, capital investment increased by 70 percent, while the number of Ciskeians in registered employment increased from 18,086 in 1983-84 to 25,455 on 31 March this year. The number of industries has risen from 67 to 116 in the same period. Most of the investment has come from South Africa, but countries such as Taiwan, Hong Kong, Italy, France, and the United States account for about 30 percent of investment in Ciskei and have been increasing their stakes. "The inflow of capital is being matched by an inflow of skills as professionals such as doctors, lawyers and architects either open branch offices in Ciskei or move their main bases there from the Eastern Cape." Ciskei tax laws, which "are among the most liberal in the world," are behind the economic growth.

Government Seeks Decentralization

On page 13 and 24 of the "Review" section David Breier discussed the government's white paper on urbanization, noting that the government has acknowledged that its old policy of discouraging black urbanization had "failed utterly" and that "blacks belong permanently in South Africa." The government's goal now it not to turn the tide of black migration to urban areas but to keep it to manageable proportions and to ensure that "most development for blacks take place in the platteland." What the white paper really aims at is an " 'orderly decentralization of urban functions,' " which would "promote rural development and limit urbanization." However, decentralization in South Africa has a political connotation since it has been linked to the homelands policy and influx control. "Now that influx control is going, it remains to be seen whether decentralization can be shorn of its ideological content."

Political Center Key to Future

In his "Talking Cents" column on page 14, Harry Schwarz notes that supporters of the political center have often been accused of being indecisive or wishy washy, but it is not understood that the centrist view "has a direction and philosophy of its own." "The center of the political spectrum in South Africa has its objectives and policies. Regretfully, however, despite this it is fragmented on what are in the main, minutiae." Centrists in South Africa "want to remove discriminatory laws, eliminate apartheid and create a society which is just in every respect, politically, socially and economically." It wants speedy reform, but not a "headlong rush that may turn the country into turmoil overnight." It wants safeguards for the individual and minorities. It favors capitalism but rejects explotation and wants social services for the needy and feels the "haves" must make some sacrifice for the "have nots." There can be not future for South Africa if the extremes fight it out among themselves, but there is a future for all "if the centre holds, unites, advances and prevails."

Illegal British Exports

A report from London in Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 26 April on page 12 says that "two men have been committed for trial in London on charges of exporting military aircraft parts and surveillance equipment to South Africa, Yugoslavia and South Korea." The men allegedly "tried to export military aircraft parts and photoreconnaissance systems for use in military aircraft in South Africa." An Uxbridge court was told the parts were for the American-made Harvard T6 aircraft and had been brought to Britain as "scrap."

Medical Costs

"The cost of medicine has risen faster than the consumer price index," according to the minister of national health, Brian Stuart reports on the same page. He said that " 'a market-related policy would be of greater a advantage to the people of South Africa.' " The only other choice to reducing costs was greater state intervention. He said it would be preferable to " 'create a competititive market at all levels.' "

Friendly Neighbor

Brian Stuart reports from Cape Town on page 2 of Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English on 28 April that P.W. Botha's visit to the Swaziland coronation "publicly reinforced South Africa's commitment to live in friendship with its neighbours, regardless of their internal political systems. This is the view of Western diplomats in South Africa after the State President's visit to Swaziland." " 'Your State President has shown that you are the southern African country willing to work and co-operate within a Southern African context,' THE CITIZEN was told." In government circles, however, speculation that the visit was linked with proposals of the Eminent Persons Group (EPG) was dismissed as " 'rubbish.' Nor was there any 'fiercely guarded and secret' plan between South Africa and the EPG."

PFP Opposes RSCS

"The Progressive Federal Party [PFP] has condemned the 'attempt by the Government to further institutionalize apartheid through Regional Service Councils [RSCS] based on racially structured and segregated local authorities,' " the paper reports on page 3. This was announced after a PFP conference on RSCS this weekend in Johannesburg.

Probe of Nchabeleng Death

On the same page, THE CITIZEN reports that "an official police inquiry is being held into the death of United Democratic Front (UDF) leader, Mr Peter Nchabeleng, who died in police custody on April 11." The commissioner of police for Lebowa, however, refused to comment on press reports that Nchabeleng died from injuries sustained while being detained by Lebowa police. " 'An official police inquiry is at present being held into the incident and I cannot comment as the matter is sub judice.' "

NP Retaliation

Andrew Thomson reports on page 4 that the National Party (NP) in the Waterberg constituency will meet this week to determine what action to take in the face of militant right wing disruption of party meetings. " 'We will not be intimidated' " said NP organizer for the area Daniel Botha who was reacting to an Afrikaner Weerstandbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement, AWB] attempt to prevent Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee from addressing a public meeting in Nylstroom. He was shouted down by AWB members from various areas of the Transvaal. Botha said the AWB members had been joined by Conservative Party members.

CITIZEN Editorial

In its editorial on page 6, the paper says that "robust political opposition has beeen commonplace in the past" so it was not surprising when AWB members attempted to shout down Deputy Information Minister Nel Last week. Feelings are running high among Afrikaners over reform, both for and against. People want a return to a controlled situation in which the black man was kept in his place. However, all that failed even before the government began the reform process. Blacks improved their skills and job reservation failed as the economy became "absolutedly dependent on Black workers." Color bars fell and "the Whites, even with the self-governing homelands and independent Black States excluded, lost the numbers game." Although Afrikaners have been divided before, there is one difference: this time "all Whites are being challenged by a Black nationalism that seeks to overthrow White rule. A divided White community is exactly what the African National Congress and its associates want, since it will be easier to contend with a weakened ruling White tribe, with factions at each other's throats, than with a united Afrikanerdom knowing what it wants and where it is going."

Pressure on Rand

THE CITIZEN reports on page 18 that an economist of Barclays Bank says that "the rand is unlikely to make much headway this week after its poor performance last week, particularly against the dollar." Corporate demand for dollars at the end of the month will exert pressure on the currency and May Day unrest might also have an impact. The rand is not expected to fall below $0.48, however.

Bank Rate Expected to Fall

On the same page the paper reports that the Volksas Merchant Bank believes that a bank rate cut will still take place despite the fact that short-term interest rates have topped the 12 percent bank rate level for the past 2 weeks. The fall below 12 percent reflected the drop in bank cash reserves, together with an easing of the shortage in the money market, a fall-off in real bank credit and the moderate growth in money supply within the official targets. Additionally, economic growth is sluggish and government policy appears to be moving toward stimulation.

Group Areas Act To Go

"With influx control now on the legislation scrapheap, it is only a matter of time — measured in months rather than years — before the Group Areas Act goes the same way," Chris Cairncross reports on pages 1 and 2 of Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 28 April. "This is the consensus in Parliamentary circles in Cape Town, openly acknowledged by many in the National Party hierarchy." It is believed that the President's Council will recommend that regions be allowed to choose a local option, but it is also thought that this recommendation will not have the support of the entire council and there may be one or two members who will refuse to sign the report.

Antiapartheid Stock Exchange Index

Richard Walker reports from New York on page 1 on the "South Africa-Free Equity" stock exchange index which is "designed to help investiment managers operating under political constraints to function competitively in the overall market through companies without a presence in SA." Investment in companies that do not do business in South Africa "has consistently out-preformed the rest of the market."

Barclays Bank Video

In keeping with its campaign to project itself as the "antiapartheid bank in SA," Barclays Bank has produced a video which will be shown to staff at its outlets in the UK which shows how Barclays "pioneered a succession of measures aimed at breaking down racial barriers — from employing the first black cashier to recognising a black trade union — which it claimed was against the law at the time." The "star of the video" is Barclays National (SA) chief executive Chris Ball who claimed some of the credit for the meeting between businessmen and the ANC last September.

Decline in U.S. Imports

"The 26 percent tumble in imports from the U.S. during the first quarter was largely the result of cancelled maize shipments," Cherilyn Ireton reports on pages 3. Although figures for imports from most parts of the world to South Africa improved, imports from the United States fell from 1.045 billion rands in the first quarter of 1985 to 766 million rands in the first quarter of this year. One foreign trade consultatnt said that at least half the decline could be attributed to the fall-off in maize imports.

KwaZulu Journal on Indaba

Stephan Cranston reports on the same page that the quarterly journal of the KwaZulu Finance and Investment Corporation THE DEVELOPER has called on the government to extend the life of the Natal Provincial Council beyond 30 June so it can retain its representative status at the Natal-KwaZulu indaba. The journal also envisaged "the creation of a joint executive authority (JEA), with its own bureaucracy and budget, that would be accountable to the KwaZulu Cabinet and Natal Executive Committee."

No Insurance in TBVC Countries

"Riot insurance cover for transport companies operating in neighbouring territories has again come under criticism," Alan Peat reports on page 4. A transport company was unable to collect compensation for the South African Small Risks Insurance Association (SASRIA) when a truck was burned out, because the incident had taken place in Bophuthatswana. SASRIA coverage extends only to vehicles within the boundries of South Africa, including the nonindependent homelands, but excludes Transkei, Bophuthatswana, Venda, and Ciskei (TBVC).

Bitumen Price Falls

In another report on page 3 of BUSINESS DAY, Alan Peat reports that "the price of bitumen has fallen by more than 25 percent in the past five months, but industry sources say tariffs are still way above 1984 levels. The SA Bitumen and Tar Association said the price had been reduced by R40/ton to R306."

Breakdown of Law and Order

"The breakdown of law and order in South Africa has become a grim reality, says PFP spokesman on finance Brian Goodall," Mick Collins reports on the same page. Commenting on the Department of Inland Revenue's withdrawal of tax inspectors from the townships, Goodall said this proved that " 'law and order had broken down.' " "The collection of taxes is fundamental in any country. When a country cannot collect taxes, a very serious breakdown of law and order is indicated.' "

BUSINESS DAY on Inflation

"Despite the slight slowdown in price rises since January's record 20.7 percent year-on-year increase in consumer price index, the outlook for inflation is not good," BUSINESS DAY says in an editorial on page 6. Because the economy is suffering from "classic stagflation — high inflation combined with economic stagnation —" any stimulation of the economy that is needed to provide jobs and restore consumer confidence may help ensure that inflation remains high. "Clearly, government's political priorities at present are economic growth and job creation. While there is a case for arguing that in the short term inflation will have to wait until more important issues are resolved, its control is critical in the long term." One of the short-term measures the government can take to control inflation is to keep the rand from falling below U.S. $0.50. "Nobody any longer has real confidence that the rand will rise, but with a little luck it could be held at present levels."

BUSINESS DAY on Right Wing

In a second editorial on the same page, BUSINESS DAY comments on the disruption of a meeting that was to have been addressed by Louis Nel by white right wingers. While "the obvious reaction is to urge P.W. Botha not to be daunted by such behaviour," "at the same time it is naive to expect Botha to ignore political tolerances. There is danger from the right, and it's time Botha's critics started to appreciate this." "A little breathing space" might help make it easier for the white right to accept change. Just like the ANC, the Afrikaner has a central role to play in change in South Africa.

SAIRR Publication

Claire Pickard-Cambridge reports on the same page that the South African Institute of Race Relations (SAIRR) has put out a new publication, QUARTERLY COUNTDOWN, "which takes stock every three months of promised reforms, moves towards equality, and expected changes which have been delayed." The publication will also identify areas where apartheid has been extended, such as Moutse's incorporation into KwaNdebele and the further segregation of hospital services.

CAPE TIMES on End to Pass Laws

The Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English for 25 April in an editorial on page 10 calls the end of the pass laws a "momentous development, lifting an oppressive burden from the shoulders of the black population of South Africa." The next great challenge is to the private sector "to turn the new situation to economic advantage." The government will also have to do its part to increase economic opportunities. With the pass laws now gone, the editorial concludes, all other restrictions which place blacks at a disadvantage will have to be done away with. "If it is agreed that apartheid is the root of South African evil, it should likewise be agreed that no constitution can resolve this country's problems which retains race as its fundamental concept, built into the structure of law and government."

Deaths in Alexandra

Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 28 April reports on its front page that three people died from gunshot wounds in Alexandra Friday night. The father of one of the victims said that his son " 'had left home with a friend to escape a terror gang roaming the township.' "

Family To Sue Mangope

"The family of a 25-year-old man who died a few hours after being arrested and allegedly assaulted by security forces in Maboloka, Bophuthatswana, recently is to claim R60,000 from the country's Minister of Law and Order, President Lucas Mangope, for loss of support," the paper reports on page 2. The man was allegedly assaulted and " 'trampled upon' " after he had been taken to the Garankuwa police station and died in the hospital.

Councillor Resigns

"A well-known Bophuthatswana businessman, whose house was recently petrol-bombed by unknown people, has resigned as a community councillor," another report on the same page says. Manley Ntile "told the SOWETAN yesterday that he resigned because of ill-health and pressure from his family."

Law Students' Demands

"The Law Students Intervarsity Council is demanding the unconditional release of the fellow student who is charged under the Terrorism Act in Venda," Ali Mphaki reports on the same page. At a conference, the council also resolved to "make the legal system more relevant to the present socio-political realities in the country," to call for the abolition of detention without trial, and "to urge lawyers to condemn the proposed Bill of Rights as the majority of the people still have no rights to protect."

Diepkloof Houses Petrol Bombed

"Three houses were petrol-bombed and stoned in a pre-dawn raid on homes of student activists in Diepkloof's Zone 4 at the weekend," the SOWETAN reports on the same page. Residents say men wearing black "conducted the lightning raids on the three houses soon after 1 am on Saturday." Students who lived at two of the houses had been detained recently and residents believe the third house, which is close to the other two, was raided by mistake.

SOWETAN on Swazi Coronation

Commenting on State President P.W. Botha's attendance at the Swazi coronation and his talks with black leaders there, the SOWETAN says in an editorial on page 4 that "we hope this was some opportunity, however fleeting and heady, for these heads of state to share their secret hopes and fears for the future of the entire region. It took the coronation of the handsome young prince, in this little kingdom, to bring political friend and foe together." Turning to the new king's reign, the paper says that it hopes he will restore some dignity after "the rather odious manner in which the Swazi government has tended to bow to Pretoria."

'Focus' on Bophuthatswana

In the "Focus" column on the same page, Sam Mabe writes "police assaults, detentions, torture and restricted political activity in Bophuthatswana have made nonsense of the Bill of Rights enshrined in the bantustan's constitution." President Lucas Mangope "is as much of a dictator as his peers in Venda, Transkei and Ciskei." In the "over-crowded squatter camp in Winterveld," "police have brutalised residents and harassed non-Tswanas who are accused of being foreigners." "Incidents of police shooting have been on the increase during April" and after the police killed 11 people in Winterveld earlier this month, Mangope prohibited the holding of any meeting and any form of political activity. He has also blamed what he called outside organizations such as the UDF and the Azanian People's Organization for the unrest.

'On the Line'

In his "On the Line" column on page 5, Aggrey Klaaste writes that "we are going through the most infuriating, fascinating, dangerous, beautiful, maddening, tragic, engrossing intellectually and otherwise days of our lives. Every minute sends the adrenaline going this way and the other in made pursuit of channels of release. Sometimes we weep in anger. sometimes, as when we see the little girls brave in tunics, fists aloft, marching on the Hippos; we weep with pride and joy. Many is the time we cry in anger and sometimes the lump in the throat is caused by considerable tragedy."

Policeman's Death

The SOWETAN reports on page 7 that one of the six men arrested for the murder of an Atteridgeville policeman last week told the Pretoria's Magistrate Court that the six hacked the policeman with an axe and then set him alight because the policeman's sister-in-law told them " 'there is a policeman in our house. You must come and kill him.' "

Vaal Triangle Houses Stoned

"Several homes in the Vaal Triangle including those of political activists, have been stoned and in one instance tear smoke was fired into a house by Right-wing elements travelling in a number of cars," the paper reports on the same page. At least 20 Sharpeville residents say their windows were shattered over the weekend. A spokesman for the police Directorate of Public Relations said he could not confirm the allegations, but told those involved to report the incidents to their local police station.

New Councillors for Lekoa

"Two new councillors who were elected unopposed will join the Lekoa Town Council, despite calls by opposition groups that councillors should resign," another report on the same page says. "A spokesman for the Vaal Civic Association said they found it 'ridiculous' that here were still people who were joining the 'oppressive system' which had failed blacks."

More Land for Mamelodi

In another report on the same page, the paper says that the Mamelodi Town Council will negotiate for more land with the government to ease the housing shortage in the area.

Advice Center Association

"The Advice Centre Association [ACA] — an umbrella body of advice centres countrywide — was formed at Johannesburg at the weekend," the paper reports on page 8. "Chairman of the ACA Mr Oule Pule said the association was a community based organisation membership of people from different political beliefs who have come together to stamp out problems facing the black community."

Deaths, Injuries in Diepkloof

Johannesburg THE STAR in English for 28 April reports on page 1 that 5 people are believed dead and at least 13 others are in serious condition in the hospital after being shot and attacked with pangas at a night vigil for a pupil in Diepkloof, Soweto, early Sunday morning. Eyewitnesses said the attack was carried out by about 40 men wearing balaclavas. Several youths are reported missing after being taken away during the attack in vehicles which residents say resembled police vehicles. Police are investigating the incident.

Pressure on German Car Firms

The managing director of BMW South Africa has warned that unless the situation in South Africa improves and tensions are "drastically" reduced, German car companies which have investments in South Africa might come under pressure, a page 3 article reports. Until now it has been mainly U.S. car companies which have had to fight off disinvestment pressures, but German firms like BMW, Mercedes, and Volkswagen might also become involved in political action against apartheid.

Editorial on Press

It was with relief we learned that the state is not planning further legislation affecting the media, THE STAR says in a page 12 editorial. For many years the government viewed as " 'negative' " any reporting on issues that embarrassed it, such as influx control laws and population removals. It has now denounced both policies as outdated. The home affairs minister and his colleagues should remember that it was the opposition press "which kept alive the spirit of reform through the 'dark ages' of Nationalist rule," the editorial concludes.

SWAZILAND

Foreign Minister Asks Cooperation on RSA Turmoil

MB291800 Mbabane Television Service in English 1630 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The minister for foreign affairs, Mr Mhambi Mnisi, today called on southern African states to come together to find ways and means of resolving the current turmoil in South Africa. Addressing the ambassador of the Republic of South Korea, Mr Ding Jin Choi, at the opening of the Korean Embassy in Mbabane this afternoon, Mr Mnisi said the problems of the region can only be overcome through the cooperation of all those countries neighboring South Africa.

The minister dismissed allegations that the government had barred ANC president, Mr Oliver Tambo, and PAC [Pan-Africanist Congress] president , Mr Mlambo, from attending celebrations of the coronation of his majesty, King Mswati III. He said the two men were sons of Swaziland and were free to visit this country whenever they liked.

Mr Mnisi lauded the Republic of Korea for opening an embassy in Swaziland, saying this move will help to further strengthen the bonds of friendship between the two countries, and he said the presence of Korean diplomats in Swaziland would help promote their understanding and appreciation of Swazi culture.

ZAMBIA

Kaunda Discusses Regional Situation, Economy

MB280842 Lusaka Domestic Service in English 0600 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] The president, Dr Kaunda, has revealed that the United States was now using Zaire to deliver arms to the UNITA rebels in Angola. The president, who was speaking on a special television Sunday interview program to mark his 62d birthday in which all heads of the mass media took part, said the move was a deliberate one aimed at antagonizing Zaire and Angola. He said when he learnedabout this recently during a meeting of the Frontline heads of state in Angola, he suggested a meeting of Angola, Zambia, and Zaire to try and find a way of resolving this problem.

Dr Kaunda, who was asked to give his future projection as regards the international situation, said he was very pessimistic of the situation in southern Angola. He said he did not (?fail) to see the situation exploding in South Africa by 1987, adding that only a miracle would save the region.

The president has also reiterated that copper would continue to be Zambia's foreign exchange earner despite the economic diversification. Dr Kaunda said at present only the copper industry could give the country the required foreign exchange and was the largest employer. He was answering a question on what the role of the copper industry would be since the party and government was moving away from the industry because of the emphasis on diversification into agriculure. Dr Kaunda emphasized that Zambia has no choice but to make doubly sure that the mining industry continued to [word indistinct].

The president pointed out that it was because of the uncertainty about sources of foreign exchange that businessmen were today [word indistinct] because they were not sure whether the government was able to raise the foreign exchange for auction. On the auction system, Dr Kaunda said that the decision by the party and its government to auction Zambia's foreign exchange was the right one, which, taken with other measures, would ease the economic hardships in the country. He said the auction system was the only way in which the country would go about planning the economy on scientific basis. The president disclosed that among the measures to go hand in hand with the auction will be the tariff commission which will monitor the importation of goods into the country. Dr Kaunda also announced the formation of a tariff commission of inquiry which will compile a report [word indistinct] will be analysis of what is taking place in the vairous economic sections in the country. He stressed that the amim of the tariff commission was to ensure the goods imported into the country were within the reach of the low-income sector as compared to now when a lot of luxuries were being imported for a few people who would afford them.

Dr Kaunda has also said the recent reshuffle of leaders in economic and commercial sectors was aimed at bringing fresh minds to implement the laid-down government programs. He said he was aware that the recent government reshuffle had caused some apprehension in certain Western circles and had been misconstrued as signalling a departure from the government's laid-down economic recovery plan for a socialist economy. The president stressed that holders of various posts which had changed hands after the reshuffle had not been incompetent but had only been moved to enable fresh minds to implement programs which the former incumbents themselves had helped to draw.

Giving a projection of the country's economy, Dr Kaunda said that the country's economy had now began to take on a pattern which will lead to its success as long as its implementation is based on love, truth, and social justice.

The president also called on the nation to be alert and maintain maximum vigilance to counter the impending political conflagration which he said would soon engulf the region. Dr Kaunda said the political situation inside South Africa and Namibia had reached a stage where an explosion was now imminent, adding that when this occurs, the entire region will be affected through loss of innocent human life. The president, who was speaking at Chambu Valley Zambians National Service Officers mess during a reception to mark his 62d birthday, said Zambians needed to fortify themselves as a nation to ensure that when the explosion comes, they are well prepared. He said the situation in which the country found itself was not out of choice but was due to its geographical situation. He said it was imperative for Zambia to be prepared because the nation may be called upon to do more for the region than was now anticipated.

Border Agreement Reportedly Signed With Zaire

AB291854 Paris AFP in English 1828 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Lusaka, April 29 (AFP) — Zambia and Zaire signed an agreement at the weekend to end their frontier dispute which has resulted in a number of deaths in recent years, authoritative sources said here Tuesday. The agreement was signed before relations worsened again in the wake of allegations by Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda that Zambian [as received] territory was being used by the United States to channel arms to anti-government rebels in Angola.

The agreement, signed after a meeting of a special joint committee, provides for a joint review of the border demarcation in disputed areas in a two-year exercise along 200 kilometres (125 miles) of frontier in the Northern and Luapula Provinces. These two Zambian provinces, east of the Zairian town of Lubumbashi border on a band of Zairian territory sticking out into Zambia which is used by Zambians as a "short cut" to the northern copperbelt area. Incidents have included deaths, kidnappings and expulsions.

President Kaunda's allegations were dismissed by Zaire Tuesday as "gratuitous lies." The ZAIRIAN NEWS AGENCY AZAP queried whether the Zambian leader had any ulterior motive in making them.

Iranian Trade Delegation Arrives 25 April

MB270717 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1100 GMT 26 Apr 86

[Text] Harare, April 26, SAPA — A four member delegation from the Ministry of Trade in Iran arrived in Zimbabwe yesterday, a spokesman for the Iranian Embassy said here today, according to the official news agency ZIANA. He said the purpose of the visit was to look into the possibility of buying Zimbabwean tea, sugar, maize and other commodities. The visit is a follow-up of the economic protocol signed by Zimbabwe and Iran during the visit to Zimbabwe by Iran'sPresident Hojjat ol-Eslam 'Ali Khamene'i in January this year.

The foreign afffairs minister, Dr Witness Mangwende, also visited Iran earlier this month to discuss trade cooperation.

MIDDLE EAST & SOUTH ASIA REVIEW

1 MAY 1986

Iran-Iraq War

The Iraqi IV Army Corps commander claimed that Iraq "occupied" 252 square km of Iranian territory during a 30 April offensive against Iranian positions in the Faqqeh area in the south central sector, Voice of the Masses radio reported. A communique carried by the radio said the Iraqis "penetrated" 12 km "deep into their targets," taking "extremely important" territory and killing and capturing "large numbers" of Iranians. Although not acknowledging an Iraqi offensive in that area, communiques cited by IRNA divulged that the Iranian Air Force carried out two bombing raids on Iraqi positions there 1 May, asserting that the Iraqis sustained heavy personnel and materiel losses.

In continuing reportage on fighting in the Al-Faw area, a military communique broadcast by Tehran radio claimed that Iran liberated more territory during an "intense" clash the night of 29-30 April, "crushing" several Iraqi battalions and bringing the number of Iraqi casualties to over 5,100.

Iranian military reports also announced that over 300 Iraqis were killed in the southern Majnun Islands in an unsuccessful Iraqi counterattack late 29 April, according to Tehran radio.

In further air action, a communique cited by IRNA asserted that Iranian anti-aircraft fire downed an Iraqi plane in the northern Persian Gulf, while an Iraqi communique carried by Voice of the Masses radio reported that the Iraqi Air Force bombed the Iranian oil fields of Ahvaz, Marun, Bibi Hakimeh, and Agha Jari. The Iraqi communique also mentioned that Iraqi planes attacked "one large and another very large" maritime target off the Iranian coast, scoring "direct" hits.

Qatar-Bahrain Territorial Dispute

An official Qatari statement carried by WAKH asserted that Qatar "deeply regrets" its disagreement with Bahrain over maritime borders, adding that Qatar had attempted to resolve the dispute through "all fraternal and amicable means" which proved fruitless because of Bahrain's "insistence" on continuing to "violate" Qatar's maritime sovereignty. Bahrain's attempt to transform Fasht al-Dibal into an "industrial island" violated a Saudi-brokered agreement in which each side pledged not to carry out any action to strengthen its legal position concerning disputed territory, the statement added. Qatar was accordingly "compelled to stop" Bahrain's land filling and construction activity in Fasht al-Dibal in order to restore the status quo ante. The statement went on to express Qatar's gratitude and appreciation for Saudi Arabia's mediation efforts and for the GCC leaders' concern to resolve the issue.

Diplomatic sources cited by Tehran radio's Arabic service stated that Qatar has begun withdrawing troops from Fasht al-Dibal and that 29 construction workers seized by Qatari troops will shortly be permitted to return to Bahrain.

Libya

AFP reported Libya's decision to expell 19 Britons and at least 36 Spaniards, while ANSA noted that the authorities have asked over 60 Italians to leave.

In the UAE, AL-ITTIHAD published an interview with Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi 1 May, KUNA reported, noting the Libyan leader told the paper that President Reagan is pushing Libya "to become another Cuba and to declare its alignment with the Warsaw Pact." Al-Qadhdhafi also said he is expecting a "greater role" from the Soviet Union, which has "already started" to move toward this role.

As for the forthcoming Arab emergency summit, JANA announced 1 May that the leaders of Syria, Algeria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the UAE have agreed to hold the conference in the "Great" Jamahiriyah.

Arab Foreign Ministers' Conference

Arab foreign ministers held a closed meeting in Fes after hearing speeches from Arab League Secretary General Chadli Klibi and Moroccan Foreign Minister Abdellatif Filali in a public opening session, Rabat radio reported. During the closed session the ministers exchanged views about the agenda and some delegations expressed their wish to carry out more contacts with their governments on the matter, Filali revealed afterward in remarks cited by the radio.

Syria

During his visit to Belgrade, President Hafiz al-Asad received FRG Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher at the latter's request, Damascus radio disclosed in a brief report that did not mention the content of their talks. Genscher, however, divulged details about the meeting in remarks to journalists reported by DPA, saying he told Al-Asad that "small terrorist groups" must "not destroy the good relationship between Arabs and Europeans" and that the FRG will not allow terrorist actions on its soil. Al-Asad stated that Syria wants to cooperate with the FRG in combatting terrorism, Genscher disclosed. As for Al-Asad's talks with the SFRY President, Belgrade radio said the two sides took a "serious and responsible" position on the problem of terrorism and stressed the need for joint action to combat it.

Egypt

Police arrested a number of demonstrators in Aswan during a 29 April clash with members of an "extremist Muslim faction" who were attempting to hold a demonstration and to "storm" a mosque in the town, an Interior Ministry official announced in a statement reported by Cairo radio.

Southern Lebanon

Two "terrorists" were killed and three IDF soldiers were wounded in a 29 April clash in the eastern sector of Israel's security strip, Jerusalem radio reported. Beirut radio said the Israelis moved some 50 tanks into the security strip 29-30 April.

Maghreb Affairs

Party Meeting — Following a 27-28 April conference in Algiers, four Arab Maghreb political parties issued a joint communique that called for Maghreb unity and urged a "speedy solution" to the Western Sahara problem. The communique, which was broadcast by Algiers radio, noted that the conference was attended by Algeria's FLN, Tunisia's Destourian Socialist Party, and two Moroccan parties — the Istiqlal and the Socialist Union of Popular Forces. The communique added that the parties have agreed to ask the leaders of the three countries to swiftly convene a meeting of a Maghreb "advisory council," whose establishment was urged at the parties' 1984 conference in Tunis.

Tunisia — Opposition leader Ahmed Mestiri has been temporarily discharged from jail on health grounds, Paris radio reported, adding that the decision was made pending a 14 May court ruling on Mestiri's appeal.

DRA

The DRA lodged a protest with Iran over a 21 April Iranian television interview with Afghan "counterrevolutionaries," and warned that such "propaganda" and "hostile" action by Iran against the DRA will have "grave consequences" for bilateral relations, Kabul radio reported.

On the internal situation, BAKHTAR reported that 200 members and the "ringleaders" of the "Jamiyat band" surrendered to the authorities in Faryab Province, in addition to 14 others of various rebel bands. Kabul radio admitted that 3 persons were killed and 17 others were wounded in a rebel mortar and missile attack on Aybak city, Samangan Province, according to a Sarandoy spokesman.

Foreign Ministers Arrive in Fes; Meeting Begins

Iraqi, Libyan, Saudi Ministers Arrive

LD302013 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 1600 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Within the framework of the preparations for the emergency Arab summit Tariq 'Aziz, Iraqi foreign minister, Hasan al-Mansur, secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, and Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal, Saudi minister of foreign affairs, have arrived at Fes-Sais airport.

In his statement to the press, the chief of Iraqi diplomacy said:

[Begin 'Aziz recording] The firm policy of Iraq is to participate in the Arab meetings at all levels because we deeply believe in the need for joint Arab action with respect to all problems, challenges, and dangers facing the Arab nation or concerning its countries. So we responded to the generous invitation issued by King Hassan II to an Arab summit preceded by a meeting for the foreign ministers. We are here today to attend the foreign ministers' meeting in order to study the situation and to adopt the necessary measures. [end recording]

On the importance of this meeting the chief of Libyan diplomacy stressed:

[Begin al-Mansur recording] We believe that the importance of this meeting does not need the comments of the secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Foreign Liaison Bureau. I believe that the importance of this meeting is known to Arab people everywhere. The meeting also has international importance. This meeting comes after a superpower — at least it is known as such — carried out a completely unjustified flagrant aggression against a small people. This aggression is not the first, because that same country previously committed another aggression and threatened to use force. Even after the latest aggression and [words indistinct] Condemnation, at the level of countries, peoples, organizations or institutions, this country is still planning aggression, or at least is threatening to use force. This aggression is not only aimed at the Jamahiriyah, but it is primarily aimed at the Arab homeland, and thus it is aimed at what the Arab homeland represents of civilization, progress, and the struggle for freedom and spreading peace. Its goal is to enable that superpower to control and influence. This is the example set by the United States to the world. If the world will not oppose this aggression, the whole Arab world should oppose this aggression. It should abandon this rabid campaign, [words indistinct] in accordance with international law, abandon it completely, or others will behave just as the United States. [end recording]

The Saudi foreign minister expressed his optimism for the success of the Arab meeting, saying:

[Begin Al-Faysal recording] This is the preparatory conference for the summit. Thus we hope that this conference will be able to prepare well for the summit, prepare the agenda, and also prepare an atmosphere appropriate for the convention of the summit. Of course, this is what we hope, but we are also optimistic because this meeting is being held in this good country, which has always been a firm pillar for the causes of the Arab nation. We wish this meeting success. [end recording]

The chiefs of the delegations of the Arab diplomacy were received by Minister of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Abdellatif Filali and the secretary general of the Province of Fes.

Filali, Klibi Comment After Session

LD010221 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 2300 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The conference of Arab foreign ministers in preparation for the emergency Arab summit will resume its work tomorrow in Fes after it ended its closed session today, following the public opening session.

After the closed session which lasted for about 1 and 1/2 hours, Abdellatif Filali, the minister of foreign affairs, stated that the session was characterized by an exchange of views and proposals on the agenda and that some delegations expressed their wish to carry out more contacts with their governments about this matter.

[Begin Filali recording] There was an exchange of views about the points and the numerous proposals on the agenda. Naturally, there were some new proposals, and many delegations wished to contact their governments and their [word indistinct]. Therefore we will wait until tomorrow to meet again.

[Unidentified speaker] Which countries made the proposals?

[Crosstalk passage indistinct]

[Unidentified speaker] When is the next meeting?

[Filali] We have not decided yet. Probably late in the morning or early in the afternoon.

[Unidentified speaker] But there definitely will be a meeting?

[Filali] Definitely. Definitely.

[Unidentified speaker] What are the agenda items that have been agreed on?

[Filali] We have so far been talking in general about generalities.

[Unidentified speaker] Does this mean that you have not yet started to discuss the agenda?

[Unidentified speaker] What about the Iraq-Iran war?

[Filali] It is one of a number of points that will be studied. [end recording]

As I said before, the ministerial conference opened its work at the beginning of this evening in the Conferences Palace in Fes. The opening session was characterized by the speeches delivered by Mr Chadli Klibi, the Arab League secretary general, and Abdellatif Filali, the minister of foreign affairs and cooperation. In their speeches they stressed the necessity of closing the Arab ranks and the solidarity among the Arab countries as a basic and necessary condition for facing up to the challenges and dangers that face the Arab nation.

Chadli Klibi said in particular that it is very important that the conference of the Arab foreign ministers is being held to prepare for an extraordinary summit only about 8 months after the summit in Casablanca last August. He praised the efforts exerted by His Majesty King Hasan II toward establishing Arab solidarity. He said:

[Begin Klibi recording] There is no doubt that another meeting, which we are preparing for today, of the supreme leadership of the Arab nation in Morocco, which hosted four previous Arab summits, again proves that active efforts are continuously exerted by His Majesty King Hassan II for consolidating Arab solidarity as the only means to face up to the grave dangers that surround our nation. In the name of the Arab League we address our most sincere thanks and gratitude to his majesty for the great services he continuously does for the joint Arab action.

Mr Chairman: Recently, events followed each other so rapidly in the Arab arena that two emergency sessions of the Arab League Council had to be held in a few months along with six meetings of the UN Security Council. In fact, the rapid events that necessitated all these witness the (?escalation) of the threats against our nation and our national security, whether through the U.S. bombing of Tripoli and Banghazi or as a result of the grave path of the Iraq-Iran war, the obstruction of the peace efforts toward finding a legitimate solution for the Palestinian issue and the Arab-Israeli conflict, or the escalation of the Zionist terrorism in occupied Palestine, the Golan and south Lebanon — terrorism that extended all the way to Tunisia and piracy that reached civilian Arab airliners. The bad effects of this Zionist terrorism include planting despair that international justice cannot deter Israeli aggression. [end recording]

The secretary general of the Arab League concluded by saying that perhaps the picture he presented in his speech is not very promising, but honesty requires facing up to reality with understanding, responsibility, and bravery, and that the great abilities of the Arab nation will allow it to overcome all difficulties, provided that Arab solidarity is built on firm bases.

In his speech, the minister of foreign affairs and cooperation stressed the necessity of achieving Arab solidarity and the closing of ranks in order to face up to the challenges. He also stressed the necessity of rising above the small disputes.

[Begin Filali recording] When we see the dangers that threaten the Arab nation, we should rise up to the level of the responsibilities we shoulder. We should avoid disputes, close our ranks, and concentrate our will to face up to the challenges that threaten us.

Brothers: Our disputes have increased, our ranks have become divided, and our stands diverted in the past months to an extent that some of those who are waiting to harm us thought that the era of Arab solidarity has ended. There are some people even in our Arab world itself who do not believe any more in the possibility of achieving this solidarity and are now joking about it. If this means anything, then it means that the people's confidence in us has diminished and that our credibility has become subject to doubts. Perhaps the most important of our duties under these circumstances is to work toward restoring this credibility and that lost confidence. Can we achieve these without respecting our words, fulfilling our promises, and adhering to what we believe of Arab principles and stands? [end recording]

PLO Central Council Holds Second Session

JN301305 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1200 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Baghdad, Apr (INA) — The PLO Central Council held a second working session here today to complete its discussion of the agenda topics. At the beginning of this session PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat submitted a report about the Palestinian and Arab political situation and the developments of the Palestine question. The council, which met under PNC Speaker Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih, also listened to a report prepared by a special committee called the National Unity Committee on the results of its contacts with the revolution factions. INA has learned that the report was positive and that the special committee will adopt subsequent steps and hold contacts agreed upon to declare the unity of the Palestinian revolution factions.

A Palestinian source told INA that at the end of a third and final session to be held this evening the council will address an appeal to all these factions asking them to ignore their differences and respond to the call for restoring Palestinian unity within the framework of legitimacy, for dealing with the new developments in the Palestinian arena, and for confronting the dangers and challenges to which the Palestinian Arab people and their revolution are exposed.

'Arafat Reviews Situation

JN301846 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1718 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] For the 2d consecutive day, the PLO Central Council continues its meetings in Baghdad in the presence of brother leader Abu 'Ammar [Yasir 'Arafat] and under the chairmanship of PNC Speaker His Eminence Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih. The Council listened to a comprehensive review by Abu 'Ammar of the political situation both in the Palestinian and Arab arenas as well as of political developments that have taken place since the PLO Central Council's previous session.

Reviewing the political situation, Abu 'Ammar asserted that attempts to overlook the PLO still exist, adding that our people's steadfastness and their great support for the PLO as their sole legitimate representative have foiled all previous attempts and will certainly foil all the current attempts. Abu 'Ammar reiterated that the Palestinian reality will continue to exist and that no power can overlook the PLO.

Brother Leader Abu 'Ammar voiced his deep pride in and greetings to the Palestinian people in the occupied homeland for their great rallying around the PLO, for their daily confrontation of the Zionist occupation, and for their firm adherence to the right to self-determination and the establishment of an independent Palestinian state. During his comprehensive review of the political situation, Abu 'Ammar said that the current stage requires the strengthening of national unity within the framework of the PLO in order to confront all the dangers and challenges to which the Palestinian question and the Arab nation are being exposed.

The PLO Central Council also heard a report prepared by the National Unity Committee, which is made up of nationalist Palestinian figures, as well as the results of its contacts with all parties concerned. The Council highly valued the committee's good efforts to strengthen national unity, which the Council considers necessary.

The PLO Central Council will issue a political statement at the end of its work containing all the points and issues discussed by the Central Council. We hope to broadcast the text of the statement tomorrow, Thursday, God willing.

Meeting Ends; Statement Issued

JN011054 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1005 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 1 May (INA) — The PLO Central Council has stated that it completely supports the PLO Executive Committee statement issued on 7 March containing the PLO's stand on all the current issues that were mentioned in the referent statement. In a statement following the conclusion of its meetings here at dawn today, the Central Council also supported the PLO's stand on UN Security Council Resolution 242, a stand which reiterated the PLO's commitment to the Palestinian people's national inalienable rights, chief among which are their right to repatriation, self-determination, and the establishment of their independent state on their national soil with Jerusalem as its capital.

The PLO Central Council called on the Palestinian masses inside and outside the occupied homeland and on the Arab masses to firmly and decisively confront U.S.-Zionist schemes seeking to undermine the Palestinian people's unity and the attempts to harm Palestinian legitimacy represented by the PLO with the purpose of imposing capitulatory settlements and separate deals. In its statement, the PLO Central Council says that it has tasked the PLO Executive Committee to follow up the issue and take the necessary and appropriate measures for confronting these schemes and attempts. On the Iraq-Iran war, the statement says that the PLO Central Council emphasized the need to exert all efforts to end this war through peaceful means. The Central Council also stressed that all the aggressions against the Arab nation are part of the same scheme seeking to impose capitulation on the Arab nation. The Central Council also called for holding an Arab summit to confront all the challenges the Arab nation faces.

The PLO Central Council affirmed that the only course for the attainment of a just and lasting peaceful settlement in the Middle East must be based on the recognition of the Palestinian people's national inalienable rights, and through an effective international conference under UN auspices with the attendance on equal footing of all UN Security Council permanent members and all the parties to the conflict, including the PLO. The PLO Central Council meetings began last Tuesday under PNC Speaker Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih and in the presence of Yasir 'Arafat, PLO Executive Committee chairman and Palestinian Revolution Forces commander in chief.

Algerian Named as New Arabsat Director-General

JN010753 Amman JORDAN TIMES in English 1 May 86 p1

[Text] Algiers (REUTER) — Space telecommunications engineer Abdul Kader Bairi of Algeria has been nominated director-general of the Arab Satellite Telecommunications Organisation (Arabsat), officials said Wednesday. Mr. Bair replaces Ali Mashat who was dismissed because of what was officially described as "poor coordination" between him and Arabsat's board of directors. Mr. Bairi was appointed during Arabsat's ninth annual general assembly which ended here Tuesday night. The organisation decided a series of measures to encourage Arab states to make maximum use of the Arabsat satellite, since only 1,300 of its 9,000 circuits are being used at present. The assembly decided to modify rates for rental of Arabsat circuits to bring them in line with those for the Intelsat satellite, and to allow the board to accept applications for circuits from non-Arab clients and non-government Arab users. The next general assembly will be held in Libya.

His highness the amir expressed gratitude, appreciation, and pride for the pioneer role played by His Excellency President Husni Mubarak and the government of the Arab Republic of Egypt in the service of Arab issues.

DAILY NEWS on Mediation of Fasht al-Dibal Crisis

GF010535 Manama GULF DAILY NEWS in English 1 May 86 pp 1, 2

[By David Tucker]

[Text] Hopes were high last night of a successful mediation to the Fasht al-Dibal crisis between Bahrain and Qatar.

Observers in the Gulf were optimistic that mediation efforts by GCC countries would lead to a settlement following a policy of self restraint by Bahrain. Sources said a statement by Qatar issued last night appeared to indicate that the Qatar Government accepted the principals of the mediation in the dispute by GCC states. Observers praised the mediation by the Saudi Government.

Diplomats taking part in the negotiations to secure the release of the 29 men being held in Qatar have still been unable to make contact with the captives. British, Dutch and now Phillippine Government representatives spent most of yesterday anxiously waiting for a call from the Qatari authorities granting them consular access to the detainees.

Last night a British official in Qatar said:

"We are obviously very concerned to get consular access to them, but there is no reason to believe they have been ill-treated or harmed," he said. "We will just keep plugging away."

Several Gulf-based diplomats who did not wish to be identified said they were mystified why the Qatari authorities were still denying any access to the men. The 29 men have been held since Saturday when Qatari forces landed on the Bahraini island of Fasht al-Dibal, 18 kms from Muharraq.

The British Foreign Office has been drawn into the negotiations for their release and it's known that a senior Dutch politician in the Hague made contact with the Qatari ambassador to Holland.

Spokesman for the companies involved in the incident — Ballast Nedam and Muharraq Engineering — said they had no new information. "We are still completely in the dark."

The two Britons among the captives are chief engineer Richard Thompson and surveyor Brian Davies. The Dutchman is Mr Wim Hoekendyk - Mr Hoekendyk and Mr Thompson both have wives in Bahrain, living at the Ballast Nedam compound at Jasra. The other Briton, Mr Davies, is from Wrexham in Wales and is single. The identities of the two Thais and the 24 Filipinos among the captives have still to be released.

KUWAIT

USSR Official on Relations With Gulf, PLO

GF301715 Kuwait AL-ANBA' in Arabic 29 Apr 86 p 25

[Interview with Valeriy Sukhin, deputy chief of the press department at the USSR Ministry of Foreign Affairs, by AL-ANBA' correspondent Ya'qub Shiha in Moscow — no date given]

[Excerpts] [Ya'qub Shiha] What are your expectations on the future of the Soviet Union's relations with the Arab Gulf countries, particularly with Kuwait, in light of recent developments?

[Valeriy Sukhin] We believe that the relations between the Soviet Union and the Gulf countries should be relations of cooperation and friendship. The Soviet Union has diplomatic relations with Kuwait, the UAE, and Oman. There are still a number of Arab Gulf countries that do not have diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. This is up to those countries, but in general we believe that the non-existence of cooperation and friendship relations between the Soviet Union and some Arab countries is not normal, since the history of the Soviet Union's relations with the Arab world has proved for centuries, particularly during the past 60 years — since the establishment of the USSR — that the Arabs and the Soviet Union have benefited from the friendship between them, particularly if we consider the current events in and around the Arab world. I mean the Zionist-imperialist march which the Arab world is being subjected to. When we see U.S. bombs falling on the heads of the Lebanese and Palestinians, we should think and remember that those bombs are not a threat to the Lebanese, Palestinians, and Syrians alone, but they are also a threat to the whole Arab world. In those circumstances in particular, the relations between the Arabs and their real friends should be relations of friendship and cooperation. It is known that we welcome the establishment of diplomatic relations with the Arab countries which have not yet established diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. But this issue requires efforts and readiness from both sides. In general, we look with optimism on the future of the relations between the Soviet Union and Gulf countries.

[Shiha] What is your evaluation of the current PLO situation, and is there any new development which requires that Yasir 'Arafat visit the Soviet Union?

[Sukhin] We have already talked about the Palestinian issue. I do not think it is in our interest or in the interest of the Palestinian movement that we talk more about or concentrate on the current points of weakness. With regards to Yasir 'Arafat, the Soviet Union's doors are open to any Arab struggler from the Palestinian movement.

Premier Calls for 'Arab Economic Integration'

GF301138 Kuwait ARAB TIMES in English
29 Apr 86 p 1, 12

[Text] HH the crown prince of Kuwait, Shaykh Sa'd al-'Abdallah Al Sabah, has called for Arab economic integration, saying it could lead to political unity.

"The Arab world has enough economic capabilities to become economically integrated ... if there are political issues dividing us, then let us use economic issues to unite us," he told the opening session of a seminar on Arab investment. "There are several cases in history where an economic bloc later became a political one," he added.

Shaykh Sa'd said Kuwait welcomed the conference because it believed in the role of Arab businessmen and investors in serving the pan-Arab economy, particularly at the present circumstances when "our nation is facing numerous economic challenges."

Shaykh Sa'd cited as most important economic challenges "ensuring food security, acquiring technological progress and dealing with international economic blocs which necessitate an effective coordination of our economic efforts in a comprehensive cooperation, grouping all Arab countries' plans and goals."

The premier called on Arab investors to formulate their plans and projects with an overall pan-Arab strategy. "Investment means security and development for the Arab world which is the natural place for activities of Arab capital," Shaykh Sa'd said. "Stability, facilities, proper administration and guarantees are the basic factors that should be available to attract capital and encourage it. "Hence it is only natural to shift from the policy of assistance and loans to that of joint projects as it is more feasible for the development and integration process and more effective in straightening links and exchanging interests among Arab countries and peoples," the crown prince said.

Some 600 Arab bankers and investment officials are taking part in the seminar, the third such gathering organized by the Arab League. Topics to be discussed at the three-day meeting are prospects for a common Arab strategy on investment, wider economic cooperation and the need to invest capital in the Arab world.

The chairman of Kuwait's Chamber of Commerce and Industry, 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Saqr, said dwindling Arab oil revenue, which dropped from $216 billion in 1980 to $95 billion in 1985, would also be discussed. He said he believed such a decline was not tragic "because almost all Arab oil-producing states have completed infrastructure projects ... while non oil-producers will have a smaller fuel bill."

Declining revenues would allow the opportunity for treating social, economic, and political problems such as curbing consumption and dealing with soaring prices, and would prompt a return to farming and to operating factories to elevate production, Al-Saqr said. Al-Saqr advocated investment of Arab capital in Arab countries describing contrary policies as "illogical and dictated by circumstances of backwardness and partioning."

Al-Saqr highlighted that phenomena in the 1980s proved that financial, economic and political dangers were threatening investment in advanced countries in a way that affected the dignity of the investors and their free decision-making. He cited the world debt problems, confusion in the currency markets, and the freezing of assets, as evidence of his warning. He conceded that Arab markets still lacked large investment opportunities and there are difficulty in money transfers in addition to red tape and administrative corruption. Al-Saqr ended on a bitter note, questioning the validity of any progress in industry, agriculture or other spheres as long as Arab lands were open to foreign aggression and no response was made to this aggression.

The GCC assistant secretary general for economic affairs, 'Abd al-Muhsin Zalzalah, reviewed in a speech the difficulties facing Arab industries on international markets citing specifically protectionist measures abroad and a deluge of foreign goods in Arab market.

Oil Minister on Oil Prices, Diversifying Revenues
GF301949 Manama WAKH in Arabic 1800 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Muscat, 30 Apr (WAKH) — Sa'id ibn Ahmad al-Shanfari, Omani minister of petroleum and minerals, has stressed that his country's economic situation is strong despite the deterioration of oil prices.

In a statement to JUND 'UMAN magazine to be published tomorrow, Thursday, the Omani minister said the Sultanate of Oman has adopted measures to confront the decline in oil prices. He said: These measures were taken in such a way that they will not affect basic matters or performance efficiency.

He explained that his country's 5-year plan takes into consideration future circumstances. He noted that this plan is characterized by great flexibility in dealing with priorities and a timetable for carrying out the essential projects without affecting the basic goals. Sa'id ibn Ahmad al-Shanfari said that Oman's oil revenues represent 80 percent of Oman's total foreign currency income which indicates the great reliance on oil as a source of foreign currency.

He added that the Omani Government has made great efforts to develop other sources for national income including agriculture, fisheries, industry, and trade to limit his country's total reliance on oil.

In this regard, he added that although oil represents 80 percent of the income of the Sultanate of Oman, it represents 45 to 50 percent of the total national income, while other activities such as agriculture, fisheries, industry, and trade represent the other half of national income.

Government Issues Statement on Dispute With Bahrain
GF010548 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0520 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Doha, 30 May (WAKH) — Qatar has expressed deep regret over the disagreement between it and Bahrain concerning their maritime borders. In a statement issued tonight and broadcast by Doha Radio, Qatar expressed its full gratitude and profound appreciation to His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz Al Sa'ud, king of Saudi Arabia, for the continued attention that his majesty has demonstrated to end the dispute between the two friendly countries and the efforts he has made in this regard.

Qatar also expressed its full gratitude and great appreciation for their majesties and highnesses the leaders of the GCC countries for the sincere care and great attention that they have shown toward resolving the issue in a fair and just manner and for the good of the two fraternal peoples.

Following is the text of the statement issued by Qatar tonight:

Statement by the State of Qatar.

The State of Qatar deeply regrets the disagreement between it and the State of Bahrain concerning their maritime borders. It is a disagreement which Qatar has attempted to resolve through all fraternal and amicable means in a way that secures justice and restores rights to its owner. However, all of its attempts were fruitless as a result of Babhrain's insistence on continuing to violate the sovereignty of the State of Qatar over its maritime province.

Despite this continued violation of its sovereignty, the Government of Qatar maintained the greatest patience, tolerance, and self-control for long years to preserve fraternal relations. Bahrain, however, continued to violate the sanctity of good neighborliness which the State of Qatar takes the utmost care to preserve. It has carried out actions, which include transforming Fasht al-Dibal into an industrial island, an action which violates one of the principles of the mediation carried out by the fraternal Kingdom of Saudi Arabia — which has our gratitude and appreciation — and which provides for a pledge by each party not to carry out any action which could strengthen its legal position, undermine the legal position of the other party, or benefit the current situation concerning the issue disagreed upon.

Any such action is considered not to have happened and has no legal effect. This principle was asserted by a resolution adopted by the GCC Ministerial Council during its meeting in Riyadh in 1982.

Concerning this violation, the Government of Qatar has been compelled to stop the land filling and construction which Bahrain has carried out at Fasht al-Dibal designed to restore the situation to what it was previously, which is what the principles of mediation and the rulings of the GCC Ministerial Council's resolution were directed at and to which Qatar had totally committed itself.

On this occasion, the State of Qatar wishes to assert its continued commitment to these principles and rulings and to express its full gratitude and profound appreciation to His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz Al Sa'ud, king of fraternal Saudi Arabia, for his good efforts in seeking to end the dispute between the two fraternal countries. It also expresses its full gratitude and great appreciation for their majesties and highnesses the leaders of the GCC countries for the sincere care and great attention they have shown toward resolving the issue in a fair and just manner and for the good of the two fraternal peoples.

Lutfi Returns From Amman, Makes Statement

NC301706 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1630 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo, 30 Apr (MENA) — Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi and his accompanying delegation returned to Cairo from Amman this afternoon. He had led Egypt's representation to the meetings held by the joint Egyptian-Jordanian Higher Committee, beginning last Monday.

In an arrival statement, the prime minister announced that he is carrying the Jordanian King's reply to President Husni Mubarak's message on following up developments in the Middle East issue and the efforts being made by both countries to achieve a comprehensive and just peace in the region. King Husayn's message, he added, also deals with his majesty's view of the recent dispute between Qatar and Bahrain and his desire for President Mubarak to undertake a role to end this sudden flareup between two fraternal countries.

Dr 'Ali Lutfi said that he will submit a report to President Mubarak tonight on the results of his contacts with senior Jordanian officials during the meetings of the Joint Higher Committee and the overall results of the committees' fourth session in Amman.

The prime minister was received on his arrival by Information Minister Safwat al-Sharif, Local Government Minister Hasan Abu Basha, and Major General Zaki Badr, the interior minister.

Egypt, PRC Discuss Shipbuilding Cooperation

NC300917 Cairo MENA in Arabic 0830 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Cairo, 30 Apr (MENA) — Eng 'Izzat 'Adil, chairman of the Suez Canal Authority, returned to Cairo from Beijing today. Eng 'Adil has been on a week-long visit to the PRC, in response to an invitation from the PRC minister of transport.

In an arrival statement, Eng 'Adil said that during his visit he examined ways of promoting cooperation between Egypt and the PRC in shipbuilding. He also discussed proposals for the improvement of services in the canal. He added that the Suez Canal Authority has approved the establishment of a PRC maritime inspection office, which will issue seaworthiness certificates for PRC ships passing through the canal. Talks also dealt with cooperation between PRC shipyards and the Suez Canal Authority in shipbuilding, in accordance with the requirements of the Egyptian ministry for maritime transport.

It is worth noting that the PRC is one of the heaviest users of the Suez Canal. More than 1,000 PRC vessels pass through the canal every year.

Renewed Soviet Presence in Egypt Criticized

PM301258 Cairo AL-JUMHURIYAH in Arabic 19 Apr 86 p 5

[Muhammad al-Hayawan "Word of Love" column]

[Text] Some people observe the resumption of Soviet activity in Egypt with concern. They are very disturbed by the return of the red, bulky faces to the television news bulletins and by radio news reports about Soviet delegations coming and going. They are astonished by some papers that make their pages available to the Soviet ambassador in order to advocate communism, justify the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and claim that Egypt is a Soviet gift. These people are even more astonished when they read statements by Soviet officials defending Egyptian-Soviet friendship despite the fact that they have destroyed Egypt and its economy with this friendship, that they conspired against its Armed Forces in 1967, and that we were not spared their attempts in 1973. People become even more alarmed when they see some writers defending Soviet presence in Eastern Europe and the communist occupation of a Muslim state. The latest irony would be when a delegation known as Soviet jurists will visit Egypt. We know very well that the communist system does not recognize human rights nor the profession of lawyer. It only knows the suppression of the people's will and their humiliation.

The concern over the Soviets' return is a general phenomenon. It does not come from nowhere; rather it is the result of a harsh experiment and even harsher memory. People still recall the sixties when the Soviets were everywhere in Egypt; this was a presence which they associate with the era of suppression of freedoms, the opening of detention camps, nationalization, and custodianships. This was when the Communists launched the slogan that there is no freedom for the enemies of the people, monopolized freedom, suppressed the freedoms of others, and exploited the media in order to spread communism, attack religion, promote atheism, and create hatred among people and classes.

The people's experience of freedom that came after the departure of the Soviets is still recent. The Egyptians have enjoyed the freedom to work, to travel, to express their views, and to have a multiparty system. The people have tasted freedom and they are craving for more. The people have a right to be concerned because the Soviets' return could mean the stifling of this breeze of freedom whose increase rather than decrease we are looking forward to.

The people feel greater concern when they find that the voice of the Communists has become louder; sometimes they call themselves socialists and other times Nasirites because they realize the Egyptians' hatred for communism. Concern becomes even greater when this Soviet campaign comes at a time when the United States is behaving very stupidly; the Communists are gaining new ground while the United States is behaving like a thug and while the Soviet Union is content with talking and some people are still being deceived by its words despite the fact that the Soviets do not help a friend or dare to stand up to the United States. But with words they may fool some people. This is the gravity of the situation in the Arab world: The United States is losing because of its stupidity and the Soviet Union is winning over some public opinion yet it is sucking the blood of the peoples that cooperate with it.

Provisional Agenda To End Iran-Iraq War Reported

LD011337 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic
1325 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Iraq and Iran have provisionally accepted the agenda for direct negotiations between them to end the war. However, they have failed to agree on the cease-fire arrangements. Announcing this, the UN secretary general affirmed that the agenda of the Iraqi-Iranian talks will center on eight points, but he did not reveal what they were.

He said that he will try to persuade Iran to encourage the UN efforts to bring peace to the Gulf. Tehran has been opposing the UN Security Council's resolution to end the war with Iraq.

The U.N. secretary general said, according to the broadcast, the nature of the eight points are not yet divulged.

Reportage on Combat Operations in War With Iran

Forces Occupy Iranian Territory

JN301609 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic
1545 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Communique No 2,208 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 30 April 1986]

[Excerpts] O proud Iraqis, the IV Army Corps, whose victories you have enjoyed throughout the years of the war and at whose fighters feet the heads of despotism fell in fire and blood, is today storming their homes, sending a mammoth steam of fire to their positions, hoisting the banner of victory over their stockpiles. Your IV Army Corps is today kindling the fire and turning things upside down.

At 0600 [0200 GMT] of this blessed day, the valiant Al-Nasir and Abu Ubaydah forces attacked the despotic enemy in the area between Fakkeh, (Sheykh Hayyawi), and (Jananah). Through field planning by the IV Army Corps Headquarters under the command of Staff Major General Thabit Sultan Ahmad and in a premeditated, sweeping offensive, amid splendid artillery support and colossal support by our gigantic Air Force and bold army helicopter gunships, our armor and infantry forces advanced, thundering and roaring in the face of the enemies, along a front exceeding 21 km, wiping out the enemy's strong defenses, compound obstacles, barbed wire, mixed mines, and fortified positions. Our forces penetrated 12 km deep into their targets and seized an extremely important strategic and vital tactical area of more than 252 square km. With the help of God, all the enemy forces in this area were almost completely destroyed. Only the few who fled escaped death.

Your enemy retreated far inside Iranian territory. A large number of enemy personnel, including some officers, were taken prisoner. Large quantities of serviceable weaponary and equipment, including tanks, armored personnel carriers, and mortars, were seized. We will announce details of losses at a later time

Saddam Cabled on Successes

JN301732 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic
1655 GMT 30 Apr 86

["Text" of cable from IV Army Corps Commander Major General Thabit Sultan Ahmad to President Saddam Husayn on 30 April]

[Excerpt] The heroic Al-Nasr Forces and the valiant Abu 'Ubaydah Forces mounted a sweeping, destructive, and resolute offensive against the vile Khomeyniites' positions at 0600 [0200 GMT] on 30 April and occupied 252 square km of Iranian territory. The road of Martyr Mohammad Sharif, the Sheykh Havi area, and the lands controlling the (Jananah), Shakheh, and (Tall al-Athal) areas were seized. Our brave units imposed their full control on these areas after fierce battles in which your brave knights fought with all the pride of forefathers and genuineness of great Iraq.

Strong Iraqi fire poured down on the dens of the scared Khomeyniite rats from every direction. Your brave men invaded them from all sides, killing large numbers of their remnants, capturing other large numbers, and destroying or seizing large quantities of tanks, armored personnel carriers, and various types of serviceable weapons and equipment.

My lord the victorious leader, while taking pride in this new victory which God has granted to us on this glorious day thanks to your sound directives and enlightened inspiration which is filling our hearts and consciences and giving us determination, power, and insistence on crushing the enemy and teaching it the most bitter lessons and defeats, we pledge on behalf of all fighters of the IV Army Corps — commanders, officers, and other ranks — that we will continue to strike with an iron fist the heads of the charlatans until we empty them from their rancor, recklessness, and ambitions against our cherished country.

May your live long for this beloved country. May this country live free, strong, and victorious under your leadership. God's peace and blessings be upon you.

Jets Raid Iranian Oil Pumping Stations

JN301647 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 1600 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Communique No 2,209 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 30 April 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. God has ordained great victory for us and humiliation and loss for our enemies. This is the reward of oppressors.

The following is a roundup of activities for yesterday evening and today:

1. Iraq's anger is resounding over the Khomeyniite heads, which are filled with baseness and evil. They have no escape from Iraq's strikes. Woe to them while they are receiving devastating strikes that are daily harvesting their heads. A miserable destiny awaits them at a time when most of the vital targets in Iran have turned into littered debris at the hands of Iraq's brave eagles.

There is no reward for those who harbor evil, carry out misdeeds, and insist on war and destruction other than dismemberment of their bodies and destruction of their means of aggression. Thus, the destructive thunderbolts of your Air Force planes, O proud Iraqis, carried out bold, sweeping raids on the two oil pumping stations in the Ahvaz oil fields, on the Marun stations and oil fields, on the so-called Bibi Hakimeh oil stations and fields, and on the oil pumping stations and oil fields in Agha Jari at 1415 [1015 GMT] today. With the courage and great intrepidity of Iraq's men, our planes dropped tons of bombs on their targets, destroying them and leaving them covered with fire and smoke.

Our Air Force planes today carried out 150 combat missions against enemy concentrations and personnel, lending the best support to our ground forces. Our planes then returned safely and triumphantly, carrying the glad tidings of victory, praised be God. Glory be yours, O men of our Air Force — command, eagles, officers, and other ranks. Blessed be your hands. Let your squadrons continue to fly over the heads of the enemy, bringing them catastrophe and their ill fate with their bombs.

2. Our brave naval force, the capable and honest guard of the Arab Gulf waters, mounted a destructive attack on two maritime targets, one large and another very large, off the Iranian coast at 0140 and 0230 today [2140 and 2230 GMT 29 April], scoring direct hits. After carrying out their duty with courage and perfection, the brave lions of the sea returned safely to base in God's care and protection. God bless you, O brave men of the sea. God bless your effort.

3. The brave cavaliers of the helicopter gunships continued their efficient activities against enemy units in the operational sectors, destroying enemy concentrations, armor, equipment, and vehicles in 85 combat missions, after which they returned safely and triumphantly to base, praised be God.

4. In a brave and bold operation, a heroic combat patrol from our units in the northern operational sector under the I Army Corps intercepted a vehicle carrying 11 enemy personnel. It managed to destroy it and kill seven enemy soldiers, including an officer. The four others were captured.

5. Our forward units in the VII Army Corps front continued their combat activities by directing strong fire at enemy units, inflicting massive losses in men and equipment. They also destroyed five vehicles, six positions of various types, and one crane, set seven ammunition dumps ablaze, and started large fires in enemy positions.

6. Eight enemy soldiers were killed, others were wounded, three vehicles were destroyed, and ammunition of various caliber equivalent to five large truckloads was seized in the northern operational sector under the V Army Corps.

Saddam Speaks to GFTU on Equal Opportunities

JN300900 Baghdad INA in Arabic 0648 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Baghdad, 30 Apr (INA)— President Saddam Husayn has affirmed that the revolutionary society led by the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party does not recognize class distinction and that the people are one class and one status from the humanitarian and national viewpoint and also with regard to equal opportunities. The president made this statement during his meeting yesterday with the president and members of the Executive Bureau of the Iraqi General Federation of Trade Unions on the occasion of his birthday.

The president also affirmed that the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party is determined to train all the sons of Iraq —the sons of the merchant, the unviersity professor, the worker, and the peasant —even when there is no war. He said that during the summer vacations and also during periods when there are no studies, we must train our men to endure the hardships of life. This training, he added, will not just be confined to the carrying of arms. Civilization, the president explained, will only be built properly and the message will only be conveyed by strong men who can endure hardships for the sake of the values they believe in.

Further Reportage on Visit of Egypt Prime Minister

More on Comments to Press

JN300843 Amman AL-RA'Y in Arabic 30 Apr 86 pp 1, 24

[Majid 'Asfur dispatch]

[Excerpt] Egyptian Prime Minister 'Ali Lutfi has said that Egypt contacted Libya following the U.S. raid on Libyan territory. Egypt offered medical aid and equipment, and equipped a medical team to leave for Libya to help treat the victims of the raid. However, Lutfi said that Egypt apologized for not supplying Libya with weapons when a Libyan envoy arrived in Cairo to ask for weapons.

Regarding the Tabah issue, the Egyptian prime minister, who was speaking during a meeting with chief editors of local newspapers, directors of information departments, and a number of journalists yesterday, said that Egypt will find a solution to the Tabah issue soon, a solution that will return Tabah to Egypt, because Egypt possesses historical documents proving Egypt's rights in Tabah.

Regarding the normalization of relations between Egypt and Israel and the return of the Egyptian ambassador to Israel, Dr 'Ali Lutfi said that President Husni Mubarak will make a decision in this regard and he will announce this decision to the public. He said that following this decision, the Egyptian ambassador's return to Israel will be determined. The Egyptian prime minister stressed that Egypt does not fail to help any Arab state which faces crisis. He said that Egypt has always been and will continue to be an Arab state, and that when Egypt talks about peace it does not mean peace for Egypt only, but a just and comprehensive peace for all Arabs.

Dr 'Ali Lutfi pointed out that Egypt did not offer weapons to Libya because weapons in Egypt are for defending Egyptian territory, and because there are bilateral issues that should be discussed before the issue of weapons. He said that when the Libyan envoy arrived in Cairo, the Egyptian leadership thought he would discuss bilateral relations and good neighborliness, and not immediately talk about weapons.

On political coordination between Egypt and Jordan, the Egyptian prime minister said the relations between the two countries are excellent, and that there are direct continuous contacts between the two countries' leaders, His Majesty King Husayn and his brother President Husni Mubarak.

Minutes Signed; Lufti Departs

JN301555 Amman Domestic Service in Arabic 1500 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Amman — Egyptian Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi left Amman for Cairo this evening after a 3-day visit to Jordan during which he led the Egyptian side to the Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee. An official sendoff was held for Lutfi and the accompanying delegation. Prime Minister Zayd al-Rifa'i and a number of ministers saw the Egyptian delegation off.

Minutes on the fourth session of the Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee, which was held 28-30 April 1986 in Amman, were signed at the Prime Ministry today. Prime Minister Dr 'Ali Lutfi signed the minutes on the Egyptian side and Prime Minister Zayd al-Rifa'i signed on the Jordanian side.

The minutes include decisions and recommendations by the committee in its fourth session to reinforce cooperation between the two countries in the fields of economy, trade, agriculture, transportation, planning, telecommunications, culture, education, tourism, information relations, manpower, supporting steadfastness in the occupied territory, oil, mining, health, and industry.

It has been decided to hold the fifth session of the Jordanian-Egyptian higher committee during the second half of October 1986 in Cairo.

An agreement on tourism was also signed at the Prime Ministry. The agreement was signed on the Egyptian side by Dr Kamal Ahmad al-Janzuri, deputy prime minister and minister of planning and international cooperation, and on the Jordanian side it was signed by Muhammad al-Khatib, minister of information, culture, tourism, and antiquities.

Joint Talks With Norway Begin in Amman 30 Apr

JN301621 Amman PETRA-JNA in Arabic 1445 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Amman, 30 Apr (PETRA) — Talks were held at the Foreign Ministry here today between the Jordanian side led by Dhuqan al-Hindawi, minister of state for Prime Ministry Affairs and acting foreign minister, and the Norwegian side led by Foreign Minister [title as heard] Torbjorn Froysnes. The talks dealt with international issues, the current situation in the region, and bilateral relations.

Al-Hindawi reviewed the current situation and the dangerous tension resulting from not reaching a just, comprehensive, and durable peace in the region. He also reviewed the danger of the Iraq-Iran war for the region. He noted Jordan's role in reaching a just, comprehensive peace that guarantees the Palestinian people's legitimate rights through the convocation of an international peace conference with the participation of all sides concerned and the UN Security Council permanent member states. The minister also touched on the practical and effective role that the European states can perform to boost efforts to establish peace in the region.

For his part, the Norwegian minister reviewed the results of his visits to a number of countries in the region. He reviewed Norway's assessment of the grave dangers resulting from the continuation of the Arab-Israeli dispute and lack of a solution to this dispute through peaceful means. He said that the continuation of the Iraq-Iran war will lead to further tension whose dangers go beyond the region to reach Europe and the entire world.

The two sides reviewed bilateral realtions, fields of cooperation, and ways to promote their relations.

AL-DUSTUR Calls for Clear Definition of Terrorism

JN250904 Amman AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 25 Apr 86 pp 1, 19

[Editorial: "International Terrorism and Arabs' Responsibility"]

[Excerpts] It is clear that the U.S. Administration has succeeded in dragging the West European states into its fierce campaign against so-called international terrorism. This was shown by the expulsion of Libyan nationals from the EEC states, the reduction of the Libyan diplomatic missions in those countries, and the imposition of economic and trade restrictions on Libya.

This stand has refreshed President Reagan's morale to the extent that yesterday he threatened to strike at other capitals in the Middle East. He also asserted that he will make the subject of international terrorism a major point in his talks with the industrialized countries' leaders at the Tokyo conference that will be held soon.

Amid this violent U.S. campaign against terrorism, matters became confused, facts were lost, and nobody realized the urgent need for a clear and specific definition of the terrorism that should be combatted on the international level.

Perhaps the most serious thing about the whole subject is that the legitimate struggle of the national liberation movements, including the Palestinian people, to obtain their rights and liberate their countries from the remnants of colonialism — a struggle which is supported by international law and human rights — has been included in terrorism, which gives a colonialist country the right to pursue terrorism everywhere on the pretext of self-defense. Israel did this when it raided the PLO Headquarters in Tunis.

The countries in this region are required to act in two ways: first, warn the United States and Europe about the results of mixing up the legitimate resistance to the Israeli occupation of Palestine with the irresponsible acts against innocent civilians in the world capitals. Second, earnestly work on the Arab level itself with the aim of curbing the terrorist incidents against civilians which clearly harm the Palestine question and the reputation of the Arabs and Muslims.

Killing hostages, hijacking planes, blowing up trade markets, assassinating tourists, and attacking places of worship have stained the image of the Arabs and Muslims with barbarism and savagery, disgusted the civilized peoples, and made them hostile to everything that is Arab and Muslim. Moreover, these things do not support a cause, liberate a land, or restore lost rights.

The Arab world cannot stand idly by in view of this world clamor about terrorism, especially if it portrays the Arab world as the first defendant.

The responsibility for safeguarding the Arab and Muslim image, with the magnanimity and chivalry it has been known for throughout history, should be shouldered by every Arab.

Standing by fraternal Libya when it was subjected to the U.S. raids does not necessarily mean that we agree with Colonel Al-Qadhdhafi's plan to export revolution from Tripoli. He who declares war on world governments in this manner should not find it strange that these governments will reply to him using the same methods.

If Col al-Qadhdhafi expects support from his Arab brethren when he is subjected to aggression, which is his right, then his brethren have the right to call on him for self-control and to avoid unnecessary encroachments on foreign countries, and to stop creating problems that will involve both them and him in problems with others.

In its conflict with Israel, the Arab nation is in dire need of the friendly peoples' understanding, sympathy, and support for Palestinian rights.

FRG Official, Al-Jumayyil Discuss Terrorism

NC301824 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic
1630 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] President Shaykh Amin al-Jumayyil met with Reinhardt Schlagintweit, head of the FRG Foreign Ministry's Middle East Department, today. The FRG official was accompanied by his country's ambassador to Beirut.

After the meeting, the German diplomat said: We discussed bilateral relations, as well as regional issues. I took the opportunity of my visit, which comes at a time when an Arab summit might be convened, to explain our stand on mutual problems and the issue of terrorism to President al-Jumayyil, a stand based on Arab-European cooperation. I stated our belief that Europeans and Arabs must cooperate in a joint battle against terrorism.

He added: President Al-Jumayyil clearly explained to me his view on terrorism and its causes, as well as his analysis of the issue. I believe that what he said was important. President al-Jumayyil's position is a correct one. For my part, I explained the European stand to him. We then discussed the internal situation in Lebanon and the ways and means to ensure thatthe European initiative will be constructive, including the German contribution. The president explained to me his political and economic views, which I have promised to convey to my government.

[Text] Foreign Ministry Secretary General Fu'ad al-Turk left Beirut this morning for Morocco. He will represent Lebanon at the Arab foreign ministers meeting that will prepare for the emergency Arab summit conference.

In a predeparture statement Al-Turk said that the purpose of holding a meeting of Arab foreign ministers is to prepare for the summit conference which is scheduled in principle to be held on Saturday. He explained that the foreign ministers will discuss three matters: The venue of the summit conference, its date, and its agenda. Views on the agenda differ. Some are demanding that it be confined to one subject, that is, the Libyan-U.S. conflict, while others want other topics to be discussed. In any event, Lebanon will support whatever the Arabs agree upon. If it is decided to include other topics on the agenda, we will be sure to raise the issue of the South at the conference.

Al-Turk affirmed that the issue of the South does not concern the Southerners alone but all Lebanese. He said that the entire Lebanese situation continues to be overshadowed by cloud, but expressed the hope that the next few weeks will bring developments that could prompt us to be optimistic about the future.

Mashariqah Addresses May Day Rally in Latakia

JN010952 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 0638 GMT 1 May 86

[Speech by Vice President Muhammad Zuhayr Mashariqah at May Day rally in Latakia — live]

[Excerpts] Comrades, brother workers, and compatriots: Our steadfast country, our people's struggler masses, and the masses of our toiling class are celebrating workers' day on 1 May, the day of the toilers, along with the masses of workers all over the world. It pleases me to represent struggler leader Hafiz al-Asad, secretary general of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party and president of the republic, in this celebration and to convey to the masses of our workers' class his cordial greetings and great appreciation of its distinct role in all fields of construction and to also convey his cordial greetings to our people's struggler masses in Latakia Governorate — a strong Ba'thist bastion in our steadfast, struggler country.

The celebration of this noble occasion is a true expression of the great esteem held by our people, party, and secretary general President Hafiz al-Asad for the workers' class — the class that toils and sweats, gives abundantly to the homeland and citizens, wages the battles of internal reconstruction with all available means — battles of building the solid material bases for steadfastness and confrontation, effectively participates in our popular masses' progress and socialism march under the leadership of struggler President Hafiz al-Asad, leader of the Arab nation's march on the path of victory and liberation, and plays a basic role in confronting the conspiracies that are being hatched by imperialism and racist Zionism — conspiracies that are aimed against our country's steadfastness and leading pan-Arab role as well as the gains of our popular masses and workers' class on the path of progress and socialism. The worker's class has presented many righteous martyrs in the confrontation against the savage imperialist-Zionsit onslaught and the defense of the popular masses' gains and achievements. If this is the workers class' role in the process of reconstruction and confrontation, then it is no wonder that this class has enjoyed the care and attention of the party and leader. Comrade leader Hafiz al-Asad has honored our workers' class by issuing a number of decrees entrenching this class' role in the fields of production in the interest of the homeland and the citizens by granting this class the Omayyad Medal in appreciation of its constructive role and continuous sacrifices and by ordering the promulgation of the Workers Basic Law, which is considered a revolutionary achievement and a great endowment by the Party and leader for the toiling masses.

Brother workers, having failed miserably in its political efforts to dominate the Arab region and control its political, economic, military, and cultural resources, completely liquidate the Palestine question and entrench the Zionist entity in Palestine and give it the opportunity to attack and expand at the expense of Arab territory and the Arab nation, the United States resorted to direct military action and carried out its criminal aggression against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. Many innocent citizens, including women, children, and old people fell victim of this aggression. Furthermore, the Untied States has begun to threaten Syria from time to time. The U.S. imperialists forget that steadfast Syria under struggler President Hafiz al-Asad cannot be terrorized by threats. These threats will not prevent Syria from continuing its national and pan-Arab struggle policy. The Americans and the Israelis must understand that aggression against Syria will not be a picnic and that the steadfast Syrian people, who are led by President Hafiz al-Asad and who have produced from their ranks youths who have chosen the path of immortality and noble eternal life — the path of martyrdom for the sake of the homeland's victory and dignity — will succeed in repulsing the aggression of the aggressors and foiling the imperialist-Zionist plan. The United States may claim that it is preventing terrorism. However its use of of armed force and its threat to use this armed force confirms that it is engaging in the worst form of international terrorism. The Americans should know that we will find the ways and means that will enable us to reply to any aggressive acts. They should also know that threatening with aggression or carrying out direct military action will only make us more determined to confront the plans of the aggressors and will confirm the inevitability of the conflict with the imperialist and Zionist forces which, as leader President Hafiz al-Asad said, are pursuing an aggressive policy and that we have no choice but to face this policy.

Comrades, brother workers. Regarding Lebanon, Syria continues to extend absolute support for the fraternal Lebanese people for the sake of regaining their national unity, achieving accord among all the Lebanese, and foiling all attempts at fragmentation, partition, and hegemony. We assert here what President Hafiz al-Asad recently said that if accord is not achieved in Lebanon with Syria's support, then nobody will be able to achieve it. Consequently, if the fighting in Lebanon does not stop with Syria's help and if the civil war in Lebanon does not end with Syria's assistance, then this war will not end. Regarding the Lebanese national resistance, which is struggling to liberate southern Lebanon from the Israeli occupation, Syria constantly affirms its unlimited backing and support for this resistance — resistance which records more heroic epics everyday until the southern Lebanese soil is purged from the filth of the Zionist occupation.

Comrades, the Iraq-Iran war was one of two big blows dealt to the Arab nation. The first of these blows was Egypt's removal from the trench of Arab confrontation due to the treacherous Camp David accords that were signed with the Zionist enemy by the killed traitor Anwar al-Sadat. The second was the collusion of the agent fascist right-wing regime of Baghdad with the imperialist and Zionist forces through waging a war against the Iranian revolution. This resulted in removing Iraq from the arena of conflict with the Zionist enemy, dissipating its potentials, and exhausting its resources in a war in which the Arab nation has no interest and which only serves imperialist and Zionist interests. This war resulted in destroying the potentials of a fraternal country, which is Iraq, and a friendly country, which is Iran — potentials which were on the confrontation front with the Zionist enemy in Palestine. The agent fascist right-wing regime in Iraq is responsible for removing Iraq from the arena of the Arab-Zionist conflict and obstructing Iraq's pan-Arab role. It is also responsible for the Iraqi people's agonies and tragedies as a result of this regime's bloody policy that directly serves the interests of the imperialist and Zionist policy in the region.

Comrades, brother workers, and brother citizens. Our popular masses, with their workers, peasants, and all other militant groups, are determined to continue the triumphant militant march of construction, liberation, progress, and socialism under Comrade struggler Hafiz al-Asad, leader of the Arab nation's march on the road to victory and liberation, secretary general of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party, and president of the republic. They are also determined to confront the schemes of the U.S. imperialists and the racist Zionists as well as their aggressive policies in the Arab region. They are also determined to work to build the solid material base for steadfastness and confrontation and to achieve the strategic balance between Syria and the Zionist enemy to liberate the occupied Arab territories and regain the usurped pan-Arab rights, foremost being the Palestinian Arab people's right to repatriation, self-determination, and the establishment of their independent state on their land. Nobody can liquidate the Palestine question and Zionism will not be able to achieve its expansionist ambitions. Our conflict with Zionism is one of existence and will continue until it is decided in favor of the Arab nation and rights and until the Arab nation is able to achieve all its pan-Arab objectives. Our policy toward all of this is a principled, firm policy. No obstacle can obstruct our struggle to achieve the objectives of this policy and we will not be weakened by threats. Our popular masses will not be diverted from attaining the objectives of their struggle by a criminal activity carried out by some treacherous criminals and hirelings here and there. Our popular masses fully know that the treacherous criminals and hirelings who shed the blood of innocent citizens, including children, women, and old men, in recently-committed crimes in the service of the Arab nation's enemies will not escape the people's grip and will receive just punishment for their crimes and sins agaisnt the homeland and citizens.

We call on the toilers in Egypt, the workers of Arab Egypt and 'Abd al-Nasir's Egypt, to continue the uprising in the face of Camp David and to confront the attempts of U.S.-Israeli hegemony over Egypt and also for regaining the Egyptian workers class' status and position alongside the Arab workers class in its struggle against and confrontation of the imperialist and Zionist schemes and in resisting all forms of exploitation and injustice.

ALGERIA

Communiques Released by Maghreb Parties

LD301230 Algiers Domestic Service in Arabic
1900 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Joint communique and "political communique" issued by the Arab Maghreb Parties meeting in Algiers; date not given]

[Text] The political talks between the Arab Maghreb parties taking part in the commemoration of the 28th anniversary of the Tangier Conference, continue this morning at the Maqam al-Methaq Hotel.

The current Algiers meeting culminated in the issuance of a political communique — which aims to deal with the Arab situation, whether in the Arab East or the Arab Maghreb, with all its developments — in addition to a joint communique between the four parties, which will determine ways of enabling the consolidation of initiatives which aim to bolster the historical and civilized ties between the peoples of the region of the great Arab Maghreb along the path of unity.

This is the text of the political communique:

The parties taking part in the fourth Tangier Conference, held in Algiers on 27 and 28 April, having reviewed the situation existing in the Arab homeland, whether in the Arab East or Arab West; igiven the repeated aggressions against the Arab nation and its right to freedom, sovereignty, self-determination and unity; given the escalation of the imperialist-Zionist onslaught and the sophisticated information campaign which has misled world public opinion; believing that the unity of the Arab Maghreb is an undivisible part of the initiative for the comprehensive unity of the Arab nation; and out of their conviction to provide the objective conditions for the mobilization of the Arab peoples and the consolidation of their common stuggle against colonialism and imperialist hegemony; and to eliminate factors leading to division, fratricide, and perdition, they state their high esteem for the steadfastness of the brave Palestinian people under the leadership of its sole and legitimate representative, the PLO. They call for siding by it and endeavoring to achieve the unity of rank between the various detachments of resistance.

They also hail the fighting spirit of the people in the occupied Arab territories against the practices of the Zionist entity. They support the resistance of the fraternal Lebanese people against the Israeli occupation and they affirm their support for all efforts which aim to preserve the unity of Lebanon, its Arab character, and the independence of its decisionmaking. They call for increasing and coordinating efforts at all levels to put an end to the Iraq-Iran war on the basis of an immediate halt of the fighting; withdrawal from all occupied territories to international borders; the start of peaceful negotiations to put an end to the problems between the two countries, in accordance with Algiers Agreement. They also call for eliminating any foreign intervention in the region for the sake of sparing the blood of Muslims, and to avoid the squander of their potentials and in an endeavor to unite the two countries' potentials for confronting Zionist and imperialist challenges. They call on the Arab Maghreb countries and all other Arab countries effectively to face up to the dangerous consequences resulting from the aggression of U.S. imperialism and Zionism against both Libya and Tunisia and they express their absolute solidarity with the fraternal peoples to ward off any new imperialist aggression. They call for cleaning up the atmosphere between neighbors and eliminating the causes of tension in relations between the brethern on the basis of noninterference in the internal affairs, respect for the right of each people to self-dermination and choice in the political system that it wants. They reiterate their call for a speedy solution to the Western Saharan problem, in the service of the interests of the Arab Maghreb and in accordance with the aspirations of its peoples for unity, progress, and stability.

They affirm their support for the fraternal Moroccan people in Their struggle to recover sovereignty over the the towns of Seuta, Mellila, and other islands belonging to them and they condemn the continuation of practices which aim to implement the policies of wiping out and imprisonment.

The joint communique between the parties of the Arab Maghreb contains the following:

At the invitation of the FLN Party, in commemoration of the 28th anniversary of the historical Tangier conference and in implementation of the established recommondations of the Tangier conference that was held at the same town, in 1983; and the 3d conference held in Tunis in 1984; the 4th conference was held in Algiers on 27 and 28 April 1986, with the participation of the following parties' delegations:

The Tunisian Socialist Destourian Party led by brother Bedi Bakkouche, member of the Politburo and the director of the party; the Moroccan Istiqlal Party led by its secretary general, brother Mohamed Boucetta; the Socialist Union of Popular Forces (USFP) led by its first secretary, brother Abdelrrahim Bouabid; the FLN party led by brother Mohammed Cherif Messaadia, member of the Politburo and the official in charge of the FLN Central Committee permanent Secretariat.

The members of the delegations were received by Brother Chadli Bendjedid, secretary general of the FLN party and president of the People's Democratic Republic of Algeria. They also took part in a grand popular meeting, during which they affirmed the necessity to continue efforts which aim to honor the spirit of the Tangier Conference and implement its resolutions to surmount circumstancial obstacles and to lay the pillars of unity between the peoples of the Great Arab Maghreb.

The parties taking part in this conference consider, having recalled the fundamental principles agreed upon during the Tangier Conference and which have stemmed up from a common and historically deeply rooted [?source] in the Arab-Islamic civilization, which has stamped with one stamp the societies of the Arab Maghreb and was confirmed by the common struggle of the three peoples against colonialism. These principles are also based upon our era's logic: The inevitability of the common fate in facing up to the prime challenges in all spheres and at all levels to achieve the quest of progress and building a better future; that dangerous tension, being witnessed by the Arab Maghreb region and the Mediterranean basin as a result of the escalation of the imperialist onslaught and the endeavor of the hegemonist forces to see the unjust international economic order continues, compel us to intensify efforts and make opportunities available for securing a meeting betwen the peoples at all levels and through all channels; in a manner that would secure an end to the causes of division, help escape from economic and cultural dependency, and link up the peoples of the region with a solidarity which is stemming from the common interests; in a manner that would affirm historical relations and epitomize the aspriations of the masses vis-a-vis a free and dignified existence.

Proceeding from what already has been stated above and in an endeavor to strengthen the will of the peoples of the Arab Magreb in safeguarding and consolidating their independence, preserving their originality, and providing means for their thrust toward the establishment of a fixed structure; and in [an] endeavor to lay down the bases of an inegrated economy which aims to achieve a comprehensive and balanced development that would secure the material and intellectual level for the sons of the region with the help of some practical projects, which stem from the present and look forward to the future, the representatives of the four parties decide the following:

Note the efforts taken by the four parties with leadership of the three countries to implement the recommendations of the first Tangier Conference, recently affirmed by the Tunis communique, with regard to the establishment of an advisory council at the level of the Arab Maghreb, stemming from the legislative bodies. Its task is to study all issues which aim to achieve the edifice of the Arab Maghreb in all fields — political, economic, and social — and to put forward some suggestions in this respect to the concerned leadership.

The participating parties have committed themselves to exert all efforts with the presidents of the three countries for the first meeting of this body to be held as soon as possible.

The establishment of a permanent political committee, which includes three members from each of the four parties, to be convened at least twice a year to lay down the unionist developments, [as heard] future visualizations and to follow up their implementation.

The four parties are committed to continuing the intensified efforts which aim to popularize the idea of the unity of the Arab Maghreb and spread it among the large popular masses, national institutions, masses' organizations, scientific, cultural, and vocational organizations, and particularly plant it among the young generations.

The delegations of the four parties, while they noted the good and fraternal atmosphere which prevailed over this meeting and which might help in achieving a new momentum toward the very much sought after unity, in accordance with the peoples' aspirations and the masses' longing, express their thanks to the FLN party for its warm welcome and hospitality, and for its effort to make this fourth conference successful.

'Large-Scale' Campaign Will Explain U.S. Agression

LD011039 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1020 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 1 May, (JANA) — JANA has learned that the Great Jamahiriyah will undertake a large-scale campaign to explain the dimensions of the U.S. Atlanticist aggression against the Libyan Arab peoples and to thank the countries and peoples of the international community that resolutely stood by the side of the Libya Arab people in their brave and heroic confrontation of this aggression. For this purpose, delegations will pay visits to certain countries.

Al-Qadhdhafi: America Launching 'Tenth Crusade'

LD010950 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0840 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Abu Dhabi, 1 May (KUNA) — In an interview with the United Arab Emirates newspaper AL-ITTIHAD published here today, Libyan president [as heard] Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi affirmed that the superpowers' use of military force was an expression of their desperation and lack of justification and argument and that the American aggression on Libya used as a cover the so-called issue of terrorism at a time when the United States had no proof to support its allegations. Had the United States had such proof, he said, it would have presented it to the European community. He added that the truth of the matter is that the conflict is one of willpower — "the will to be independent and the will to dominate." Al-Qadhdhafi affirmed: "Our willpower is up to the level of the strength of our objectives, and it is definitely stronger than the Sixth Fleet."

Colonel al-Qadhdhafi asked "are we responsible for everything that happens in this world just because America says so to justify its plots and aggression? Should we be dragged into a logic that mixes between terrorism and resistance?".

Al-Qadhdhafi stressed that the American aggression has helped to bring out the Arab solidarity with Libya on the official and popular level. This was clearly evident in the call by the Arab kings and presidents for the holding of an Arab summit conference, without us asking them to do so, he said. Speaking of the Libyan conflict with the United States, he said that the issue at stake is not terrorism — nor is it Rome or Vienna. There is not one single piece of evidence to show that we have participated in acts of terrorism, "and if the United States possesses any proof, why has it not presented it to the European community until now?"

He said that the truth of the matter is that the issue is one of imperialism and a conflict of wills between independence and subservience between liberation and domination, between unity and division. He added it is one of Palestine, freedom, and the independence of decisionmaking.

Al-Qadhdhafi also said that America now leads the tenth crusade campaign. It bombed towns, universities, and hospitals and killed women and children. We will not surrender to the American will; we will not relinquish our personality, and we will not neglect our rights. He also pointed out that the matter is not open to hesitation. He said that the question is a matter of life or death, and this is our principled belief. If we preserve it, we will survive and if we abandon it, we have doomed ourselves to death.

He said that the Italians, the Spaniards, the French, and the Germans have made contacts with him and have asked him to wait for Reagan for 24 months until Reagan goes after his presidential term expires. The Libyan President [as heard] said that Reagan's behavior is pushing Libya to become another Cuba and to declare its full alignment with the Warsaw Pact. He emphasized that he is expecting a greater role from the Soviet Union, and that the Soviet Union has already started to move toward this role.

With regard to the Iraq-Iran war, he said that he is against it, and that he is personally very hurt about the fall of victims from both Muslim sides. With regard to the Arab summit, he said that it will, God willing, be held soon without an agenda to discuss the NATO-American aggression. And anyone who wishes to raise an issue may do so.

Jallud Warns of Summit Exploitation of Jamahiriyah

NC301114 Beirut AL-SAFIR in Arabic 29 Apr 86 P 1

[Text] Tripoli, Ghassan Mukhal dispatch — Staff Major 'Abd al-Salam Jallud has accused certain Arab countries of attempting to exploit the forthcoming Arab summit, scheduled to be held in Morocco, to force the Libyan Jamahiriyah to make concessions and, consequently, to achieve politically what the United States failed to achieve militarily through its aggression against Libya.

In an interview with AL-SAFIR in Tripoli, Jallud noted that Arab governments will try to take advantage of the upcoming summit to achieve their own objectives or those compatible with American designs in the Middle East. As a result, they would like to have this summit deviate from its basic aim, namely, a discussion of the effects of America's aggression and the preparation of a collective Arab response to Washington.

Jallud went on to say that the Jamahiriyah will resist any attempt to force a change in its Arab revolutionary line, or to compel it to make promises that run counter to this policy.

He added that these countries are trying to achieve politically what America's barbaric raids failed to achieve militarily. He noted that these states are trying to exploit the convening of the summit to apply pressure to get Husni Mubarak's regime readmitted to the Arab League without having abrogated the Camp David accords, to get 'Arafat reinstated as the legitimate chairman of the PLO, and to adopt a position that supports Saddam Husayn's regime in the Gulf war. All these attempts will be made in the name of Arab solidarity.

Continuing, Jallud explained the Jamahiriyah's insistence that the summit's work center on a discussion of the U.S. aggression against Libya and a collective Arab response with the goal of preventing any repetition of it.

Jallud reiterated that the American raids failed to attain their principal objectives, which were to assassinate Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, destroy Libya's military infrastructure, and force the Libyan Jamahiriyah to amend or change its revolutionary line.

Jallud also touched on the losses suffered by Libya as a result of these raids. He said 37 people were killed and 93 others wounded, the majority of whom were civilians. Maj Jallud warned that Libya's reply to any future attacks would be firmer and more painful, as the Jamahiriyah has benefited from the lessons of the last confrontation. He explained that the Jamahiriyah is determined to take advantage of its victory over U.S. aggression through a sound policy, which will be employed on the pan-Arab and Islamic levels.

Jallud stressed the importance of unity among the Libyan Jamahiriyah, Iran, Syria, the fighting forces in Lebanon, and those of the Palestinian revolution. Jallud expressed hope that the Libyan experiment in meeting U.S. aggression head on would inspire the unification of the Arab masses in a confrontation with the new imperialist-Zionist onslaught.

Support Reported Growing for Libyan Summit Venue

Explains U.S. Raid Motives

LD010604 Tehran IRNA in English 0550 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, May 1, IRNA — Major 'Abd al-Salam Jallud, member of the Libyan leadership council, said here Wednesday that the objective of the recent U.S. attack on Libya was to force the latter to compromise and keep silence vis-a-vis treasons committed against Palestinian cause and freedom-fighting movements in the region. Major Jallud was speaking in a meeting with the visiting Iranian Foreign Minister 'Ali Akbar Velayati and minister of Islamic Revolution's Guards Corps Mohsen Rafiqdust.

He stressed that the Libyan people were determined to live in a revolutionary manner or die for the sake of their revolution. He expressed assurance of Iran's support for Libya [as received] and added that their visit to Tripoli was a proof to the deep solidarity and unity between the two Muslim countries.

Meanwhile, Velayati reiterated full support of the Islamic Republic of Iran for the Libyan people and government and praised their firm determination. No doubt, he added, the U.S. had no reasonable excuse for launching and attack against Libya and noted that the attack was carried out with the cooperation of reactionary regimes in the region. Velayati stressed that Muslim nations were decisive to confront plots of the enemies and root out the Zionist regime.

Velayati, Delegation Leave

UN Protest Lodged Over UK's Expulsion of Students

LD301232 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1150 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] New York, 30 Apr (JANA) — The brother secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison has denounced the "arbitrary measures" adopted by Thatcher, the murderer of children, against the Libyan Arab students in British universities and educational institutes.

In a note delivered to the UN secretary general yesterday, he condemned the British authorities' use of methods of intimidation and terrorization and all means of threatening, instigation, and pressure against the Libyan students in a desperate attempt to force them to accept political asylum in some cases and to mobilize them to work against their country in other cases, thus committing another act of conspiracy against the great Jamahiriyah.

He said that all these acts "were a cheap attempt to defame Libyan citizens and an overt use of all means of psychological pressure and the fabrication of false charges against them." The brother secretary affirmed that Britain's arbitrary practices are a violation of all international convention, usages, and principles of behavior. They also violate the spirit of the Human Rights Declaration and of the International Institute of Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights.

The brother secretary considered all these arbitrary measures to be part of an aggressive political program pursued by the British Government in collusion with the U.S. Administration against a small peaceful country which is a member of the United Nations.

The secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign liaison drew the attention of the UN secretary general and the international community to the gravity of this premeditated escalation of aggression by the British Government against the Libyan Arab people — a matter which constitutes a clear premediated violation of the principles of the United Nations, the UNESCO, and the principles of human rights.

The brother secretary requested the circulation of this note as a document of the UN General Assembly under the article pertaining to human rights and scientific and technical development.

SUDAN

Libyan Praises April Uprising, Affirms Aid Role

JN291835 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1745 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Khartoum, 29 Apr (SUNA) — Bashir (Huwayyij), secretary of the vocational popular congresses affairs in the Jamahiriyah, has said that the Sudanese people's April uprising has given momentum to the pan-Arab struggle. He noted that this uprising was able to uproot the agent Numayri regime, proving that the masses can seize power. The head of the Libyan delegation now visiting the country added that the delegation is visiting Sudan to represent the fraternal Libyan people in the convocation of the Constituent Assembly and to attend the next session of the Assembly on 6 May.

On the brutal U.S. raid on the Jamahiriyah, the head of the visiting Libyan delegation said that the raid endangers peace in the entire world and may cause a third world war. He added that U.S. strike at civilians and children is considered terrorism. He said the raid expressed imperialism's rancor against the whole Arab nation, and not against the Jamahiriyah alone.

His excellency affirmed that the Libyan military support for Sudan falls within the framework of the military agreement reached between the two countries to develop defensive capabilities against imperialism and colonialism, and not to wage a war in the south.

Siwar al-Dhahab Receives Delegation

JN301527 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1450 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Khartoum, 30 Apr (SUNA) — The delegation of the Libyan General People's Congress Secretariat General has praised the heroic stand of the Sudanese people toward the U.S. imperialist onslaught against Libya aimed at destroying the Libyan people's militant role. This came during a meeting with Transitional Military Council Chairman General 'Abd al-Rahman Hasan Siwar al-Dhahab this morning. The Libyan delegation conveyed the greetings of the Libyan Basic Popular Congresses to the Sudanese people as well as the greetings of Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi to Gen Siwar al-Dhahab.

Bashir Huwayyij, secretary of the vocational popular congresses and member of the Secretariat General, touched on the emergency Arab summit in Morocco. He noted that the Jamahiriyah had called for this conference to adopt practical measures to confront that brutal onslaight aimed against the Arab world, to respond to the EEC decisions against the Jamahiriyah, and to face the U.S. economic decisions against the Jamahiriyah.

Essebsi Says Libya Obstructs Maghreb Construction

LD300413 Tunis Domestic Service in Arabic
2300 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Report on the address by Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebsi to the Tunisian House of Representatives in Tunis on 29 April]

[Text] Beji Caid Essebsi, the minister of foreign affairs, today addressed the House of Representatives about the march of constructing the Maghreb unity. He pointed out the meeting that took place in Algeria on the anniversary of the Tangiers conference at the level of the Maghreb parties that led the liberation battles in Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco. The Tangiers conference showed the will of the peoples of the regions to achieve the unity of the Arab Maghreb. It opened the door for wide hopes for the Maghreb peoples who hoped, especially after the independence of Algeria, that the march would continue [word indistinct] the joint interests. Unfortunately, the march slowed down, and the countries of the region began a stage of sensitivities, primarily because of the loss of trust and the worsening of the border disputes. He pointed out that the situation grew worse, especially with the establishment of the Libyan regime in September 1969.

Beji Caid Essebsi pointed out the negative stand adopted by that regime toward the construction of the Arab Maghreb. Since its beginning, the Libyan regime has hastened to obstruct the work of the Consultative Committee of the Arab Maghreb and the consultations that have taken place among the countries of the region.

The minister of foreign affairs talked about the developments after that period and the crises that shook the region — crises that were mainly incited by the Libyan regime. He pointed out that the situation continued to be tense until the deep change in the Tunisian-Algerian relations took place. He pointed out that the beginning of the era of President Chadli Bendjedid was a new starting point for serious action in the region.

Beji Caid Essebsi recalled the historic visit paid by President Chadli Bendjedid to Tunisia and the summit meeting that took place during that visit between President Bendjedid and President Habib Bourguiba. He also recalled the subsequent concentrated action [words indistinct] and the signing of the fraternity and concord treaty, which materialized the mutual trust between the leaders of the two countries and the will to cooperate in the interest of the two peoples. He pointed out that the two countries worked toward keeping the treaty open to all the Maghreb countries that would like to join it. It has actually been presented to all the countries of the region, including the Jamahiriyah. Mauritania immediately responded to the treaty (?in order to solve) its border problems with Algeria.

The foreign minister talked about the emergence of the Arab-African Union between Libya and Morocco. He pointed out that the action, in spite of the fact that Tunisia blessed it, created new sensitivities in the region and gave the Arab Maghreb the image of a confused Maghreb in the eyes of international public opinion.

Then he talked about the Tunisian initiative in 1985, when the crisis between Morocco and the Saharans escalated. The initiative called for holding a Maghreb summit to discuss the presented issues. The summit was agreed to be held in Tunisia under the chairmanship of President Habib Bourguiba. Its agenda was agreed. The agenda concentrated on constructing the Arab Maghreb in order to face up to the existing challenges, especially the protectionist policies of the EEC. Because of the special wish to continue the dialogue about the Sahara issue, the summit was postponed. After recalling the difficulties that faced the dialogue, the foreign minister talked about the visit by Colonel Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi to Algeria and the subsequent consultations between Tunisia and Algeria. In this regard, the Algerian stand was honorable. He said that the meetings between the Algerian and Libyan sides are continuing. As for Tunisia and Algeria, there is a general agreement that every move in the region should be within the framework of the fraternity and concord treaty.

The foreign minister said that the issue of constructing the Arab Maghreb today is seriously presented. The achievement of this aspiration requires overcoming the problem of the Western Sahara and changing the policies adopted by the Libyan regime in the region, which constitute a negative factor in construction the Arab Maghreb.

Concerning the issue of the Western Sahara, the minister of foreign affairs pointed out the efforts of the UN secretary general, with the cooperation of the OAU, to achieve an agreement between Morocco and the Polisario about the conditions of the referendum on that issue. He stressed that Tunisia blesses these positive efforts to limit the tension in the region and to contribute to the achievement of a relaxation of the situation.

The minister of foreign affairs talked about the Tunisian-Libyan relations. He pointed out the severance of these relations when the current government was formed as a result of the Gafsa operation. He added that that government, the constants of whose policies include the construction of the Great Arab Maghreb, called for clarifying the atmosphere between Tunisia and Libya and introduced a new momentum into its relations with Libya and with the various countries of the region. Therefore it drew up with the Libyan side conditions for bilateral cooperation. Several agreements were contracted, including an agreement signed in Tunisia on 31 December 1984. The Libyan side, however, after 24 hours went back on what was agreed in the commercial and social sectors. From [word indistinct] of that year, the situation developed as the Libyan regime started to expel the Tunisian workers in a concentrated and [word indistinct] way and under inhuman conditions. This was followed by the Libyan threats to Tunisia, in addition to addressing letter bombs to the men of the media. This rapid and grave development compelled Tunisia again to sever relations with the Libyan regime.

It is noteworthy that one of the Libyan regime's criticisms of Tunisia is the fact that Tunisia established relations with the United States. It goes without saying, in this concern, that Tunisia will not allow anyone to interfere in its affairs, and that Tunisia does not interfere in the affairs of the others.

The minister recalled the mediation efforts exerted by some sides between the two countries. He stressed that the Tunisian rediness to restore its normal relations with Libya will remain subject to the conditions that confidence in the Libyan authorities is restored and that these authorities will agree to compensate Tunisia for the various damages that have resulted from the aggressions of the Libyan regimes, including freeing the assets of the Tunisian organizations in Libya.

Beji Caid es-Sebsi said that the Libyan regime considers itself to be a revolutionary regime with the heavenly mission of achieving unlimited revolution and spreading it in the region and everywhere in the world. He stressed that Tunisia does not interfere in such matters and cannot at all be asked to adopt a stand towards an issue which ahs nothing to do with it and about which it was not consulted in advance.

The minister recalled the results of the Yalta Agreement, which was contracted after WW II between the Soviet Union and the United States, for dividing the world into spheres of influence. This is a fact that still exists and every politician should take it into consideration. Now the armed clash that took place between the United States and Libya was over the waters in the Gulf of Sidra. The U.S. side considers them to be international waters, as does the Soviet Union, that should be open to everyone. The international law of the high seas specifies that any gulf whose width exceeds 24 nautical miles cannot be considered an internal gulf. He pointed out that the Libyan authorities specified the width of the Gulf of Sidra as 300 miles, which was rejected by the Soviet Union and the United States.

The Soviet Union, together with Libya, have refused to consider the Gulf of Sadiz, whose width exceeds 24 miles, as an internal gulf.

This dispute between Libya and the United States led to the recent events Libya witnessed, especially after the Libyan announcement that the maritime line between Tripoli and Banghazi is a line of death and after it obtained the advanced SAM-5 Soviet missiles and deployed them on the coast.

After the Libyan-U.S. military clash, which took place in an atmosphere characterized by the deterioration of the Tunisian-Libyan relations and the tension that resulted from terrorist operations in some areas of the world, Tunisia joined the Arab and Islamic group in calling for protecting the region from reflections of the East-West conflict. The minister recalled the Tunisian stand toward the economic blockade of the Libyan Jamahiriyah. He pointed out that Tunisia, during the recent meeting of the Arab League council, stressed its condemnation of the military threats and its solidarity with an Arab country exposed to an armed aggression. When we were asked to help in imposing an economic blockade on the United States, we rejected this request, however, because we are [word indistinct] and because we are the victims of an economic blockade imposed on us by Libya itself.

When the first military conflict occured, Tunisia hastened to issue a statement in which it condemned that operation. When Tunisia was exposed to an Israeli aggression at the beginning of last October, however, the Libyan stand was represented by calling on the Tunisia Army to rebel against its government.

When U.S. Vice President George Bush recently visited us, we received him within the framework of Tunisian sovereignty, exactly the same as we received the chairman of the Supreme Soviet. The Libyan regime addressed a critical memorandum to us, in which it described our reception of the U.S. vice president as an aggressive action and stressed that Tunisia will be considered a party to any clash between the Jamahiriyah and the United States.

The Libyan authorities continued in that direction and accused Tunisia, in the recent military operaiton, of enabling the United States to use Tunisian airspace for its military operations against the Jamahiriyah. This was officially and firmly denied by Tunisia.

Within the framework of the Bourguiban official and wise policies, we decided that the Tunisian stand toward the U.S.-Libyan military conflict should be silence, and to make reason prevail over sentiment. We did not issue a statement (?condemning) or condoning the aggression. We believe that this is the best stand; there are many factors that make this silence of ours a positive stand.

The minister expressed his hopes that the Libyan regime will return to [word indistinct] in its relations with Tunisia so that the efforts will gather to face up to the march of constructing the Arab Maghreb, which is the only [word indistinct] for winning the battle of development and progress and for facing up to the internal and external challenges in front of the region. This will not be achieved unless there is trust between the leaders of the countries of the region, and when the policies of its leaders are based on the following established points: respect for the sovereignty and security of the territories and borders of each country; nonintervention in the internal affairs of the others; and relations of fraternity and mutual respect. This is a goal that is not too difficult if there is the will and good intentions.

[Text] President Habib Bourguiba today received Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebsi in the presence of Mohamed Mzali and Mansour Skhiri. Beji Caid Essebsi was given the president's instructions before his departure today for Morocco to attend the preparatory conference of Arab foreign ministers and the agenda of the Arab summit which is due to be held next Saturday in Fes. President Habib Bourguiba entrusted Beji Caid Essebsi with a written message for King Hassan II of Morocco. Beji Caid Essebsi this morning left Tunis for Morocco.

Opposition Leader Given Conditional Release

LD302249 Paris International Service in French 2030 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpt] In Tunisia, one of the opposition leaders, Ahmed Mestiri, was today given a conditional discharge on health grounds. The general secretary of the Socialist Democrats' Movement, MDS, was sentenced on 22 April for having organized a demonstration against the U.S. raid on Libya. His release may contribute to calming things down in Tunisia while the unrest continues in the country, both in the universities and among the trade union members. the decision to release President Habib Bourguiba's former minister is not, however, a commitment for the future.

Karim Artaoui reports from Tunis: [Begin Artaoui recording] The release is merely temporary. This was decided by the prosecutor's office while awaiting the ruling by the Court of Appeal on 14 May concerning Ahmed Mestiri's appeal. [end recording]

Minister Co-Chairs Economic Talks With Morocco

LD292252 Tunis TAP in Arabic 1130 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Tunis, 29 Apr (TAP) — A Tunisian-Moroccan working meeting was held yesterday afternoon in Tunis which was chaired by Finance Minister Rachid Sfar from the Tunisian side and from the Moroccan side by Minister of Finance and Economy Tahar Sfar [name as received], who arrived in Tunis yesterday leading an important delegation which included in particular Mohamed Balkhiat, the director general of the Moroccan chamber of industrial development and Hassan Abu Aioub, director of external trade.

During the working meeting the two sides agreed to form a joint technical commission which will control the list of joint projects that are possible to establish in the two countries in the context of industrial integration; these projects concern manufacturing spare parts for vehicles, railway carriages and textiles.

Mengistu Addresses Trade Union Congress Opening

EA302220 Addis Ababa Domestic Service in Amharic 0900 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Comrade Mengistu Haile Mariam has said that Ethiopian workers are in a situation in which power belongs to the working people so they should prepare themselves for self government through the means won as a result of heavy sacrifices. More than ever before, he said, workers should enhance their historical role in order to build a new society through their trade unions. The WPE Central Committee secretary general, PMAC chairman, and commander in chief of the revolutionary armed forces, Comrade Mengistu Haile Mariam, said this today in a speech opening the third congress of the All Ethiopian Trade Union, AETU, at the WPE Congress Hall.

In his speech, the comrade secretary general pointed out that in order to bring about a people's political system, it is necessary to form a people's democratic government based on the people's interests and wishes. He noted that the current major activities are centered on this. The comrade secretary general stressed that in order to enhance productivity, curb waste, and control production and distribution properly, the trade unions must participate fully, tirelessly, and with care.

He added that when compared to the experience of our country's working class, the responsibility that rests on their shoulders is very great. Our comrade revolutionary leader recalled that since the working class has a historical responsibility to liberate not only its own members but the whole working people, it must struggle very hard to increase its capabilities so as to fulfill its responsibilities. He added that the trade unions need to reactivate the working system for the enhanced implementation of our party's program and the 10-year economic, social, and development plan.

Present during this opening ceremony were: Comrade Fiseha Desta, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the WPE Central Committee; WPE Central Committee Political Bureau members and candidate members; and WPE Central Committee members and candidate members. In addition to representatives from various sections of the country's workers, those who have distinguished themselves as a result of their special contributions, creative abilities, and model workers are participating in the congress.

Present at the congress are also representatives of trade unions from the USSR, free Germany [GDR], Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Cuba, Romania, Yugoslavia, South Africa [not further specified], and representatives of the OATUU and World Federation of Trade Unions.

The WPE Central Committee member and chairman of AETU, Comrade Tadese Tamirat, presented a report on the general activities carried out in strengthening the AETU and preparing for this congress.

UNLA Attacks Refugee Camps in Sudan; Thousands Flee

EA011050 Kampala Domestic Service in English 1000 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] The Ministry of Defense has announced that last Sunday and Monday remnants of the defeated UNLA [Uganda National Liberation Army] attacked 17 refugee camps in the eastern flank of the Nile in the Sudan, killing a number of people.

In a statement issued in Kampala today, the Minister of State for Defence Mr Ronald Bata said women were raped, huts burned down, and other property destroyed during the attack. The minister said that the motive of the attack was that the camps are occupied mainly by the Madi and the tribes of Okello's sectarian army, mainly Acholis. (?UNLA) said the Madi collaborated with the NRA [National Revolutionary Army] in their defeat.

By yesterday, 14,000 of these affected people were crossing Nimule in an effort to return home. The UNHCR representative in Juba has offered vehicles for repatriation and the UNHCR representative in Kampala has sent a delegation to Moyo comprising of rehabilitation (?officials) and an NRA officer.

The statement concluded that the Ministry of Defense will keep the public informed of further developments.

BURKINA FASO

Sankara Interviewed by Foreign Journalists

AB301910 Ouagadougou Domestic Service in French
1300 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The comrade president of Burkina Faso [Captain Thomas Sankara], as we were telling you yesterday — or rather this morning — yesterday hosted a reception at the Presidential Palace for a group of foreign journalists who are presently in our country within the framework of a seminar organized by the United Nations. The journalists, about 20 in number, come from France, the Scandinavian countries, the United Kingdom, and the United States. There are also some Africans from Mali, Kenya, Zimbabwe, Nigeria, and from our country. They were introduced by Mr Roger Gardin, UNDP resident [title as heard] and coordinator of the UN system in Brukina Faso. He said that the visit of this group of journalists falls within the framework of a seminar organized by the United Nations in order to enable foreign journalists to penetrate into the realities of the Sahel, and to gain an awareness of the development efforts made by both the Burkinabe Government, and by the people.

On that occasion, the comrade president spent nearly 3 hours answering the questions of our colleagues. He addressed the issues ofnational policy, desert encroachment, the Third World's indebtedness, and the condition of the Burkinabe woman. In response to a question on the possible creation of a political party in Burkina Faso, the comrade president stressed that one does not create a party just because one wants to do what others are doing. The creation of a political party goes hand-in-hand with the rise in political consciousness, he said. If one does it as a bureacratic measure, one only creates a label . Following are excerpts of this press conference, beginning first of all with Franco-Burkinabe relations.

[Begin recording] [Sankara in French, with consecutive translation into English] Our relations with France, as you have observed yourself, have been through ups and downs. France stood aloof from us, and many things were said against us. But through perseverance we have managed to say our word. And today we realize that even if they do not always agree with what is being said and done, we have at least a point of view which we are defending, and which we are getting others to respect.

We do not known the new government which is in France, and we are waiting for its actions in order to appraise them. If the actions are positive, we will applaud them, but if they are negative, well, then we should not be asked to applaud.

[Unidentified reporter] Formerly, many observers said Burkina Faso was the enfant terrible of West Africa. (?For example) the declarations, they say what they like, they do what they like, and so on and so forth. But now, people (?see) some kind of realism, an improvement in the declarations, the behavior of the Burkinabe authorities. For example, when Libya was attacked, Burkina Faso did not issue a statement, it did not hold a march like Ghana. They sent a telex to Libya and the United States. So, people are now wondering, is Burkina Faso changing a little in its behavior? Does that mean there is a new kind of approach to (?relations) [words indistinct] for example, with the United States?

[Sankara] Well, perhaps it is the others who have changed. It is the others who did not want to accept us in the beginning, and who considered our standpoints as being systematic provocation. Today it is being realized that Burkina Faso, with its revolution, is a normal state like the other states. We have a national anthem, a flag, we are capable of holding cabinet metings, we have a 5-year plan, we have presided over heads of state summits, and so on and so forth. What I want to say is that in the beginning, the others thought that we only got there by accident. And they had thought that by the end of 1 month, we would have disappeared. I ask you to re-read the newspaper LE MONDE of 7 August 1983, which however is a very serious newspaper. Well, exactly 3 days after we took over power, this newspaper wrote in black and white that France cannot let this regime to establish itself; it is written. Today, I have been reading some parts of LE MONDE which indicate that Burkina Faso is a good example of the fight against desert encroachment.

By that I mean if from the onset the others had accepted our message, our language, as being simply the cries of a people who want to develop, a people who want to fight against their internal and external enemies, of course, we could have understood one another straight away. Unfortunately, in the beginning, they did not even want to receive us. Every week, every month, they foresaw our downfall. They fomented subversion, subversive movements, coups against us. Even witch doctors were consulted for that purpose, against us. But people have ended up by accepting us as an unavoidable reality. We are different, but we do exist. And, because they accept us, we no longer need to raise our tone of voice either, to affirm our totally different standpoints. And many countries, many leaders who had harbored distrust or even hostility toward Burkina Faso, realize today that even if Burkina Faso is different from them, from the point of view of political regime, at least Burkina Faso is, among their partners, one of the countries which keep their word, with dignity and honor. So we have some sort of modus vivendi. [end recording]

Diplomatic Missions To Detail Land Acquisitions

AB301900 Accra Domestic Service in English
1800 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The Lands Commission has asked all diplomatic missions and personnel to submit to it details of all arrangements regarding their occupation of land in Ghana. Copies of any deeds, conveyances, correspondence of writing affecting such interests should also be produced. A statement by the commission today said this has become necessary because of irregularities in transactions affecting public land against which the commission intends to take remedial steps. The statement said subleases and the assignments of public lands are being affected, especially to foreigners, including diplomatic missions and investor companies without the consent of the Lands Commission. In the case of stool lands [lands belonging to tribal chiefs], the requirements contained in section 47-1 of PNDC [Provisional National Defense

Council] Law 42 of prior consent and concurrences of the Lands Commission for assurances of stool land is being flouted.

The commission is aware that a major reason for failures to notify it of these transactions is to enable illegal foreign exchange dealings in connection with lands to go unchecked. The commission informs the public that failure to seek its consent to certain transactions as required by law entitles the commission to claim nay leases and forfeit any interests a lease may have acquired. The statement said for the protection of their own interests, any persons, who have obtained interests in land without the requisite involvement of the commission, must notify the commission forthwith to remedy the situation.

Rawlings Seeks Compromise for National Budget

AB301458 Accra Domestic Service in English
1300 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpt] The chairman of the PNDC [Provisional National Defense Council], Flight Lieutenant Rawlings, has called on Ghanaians to come out with reasonable compromises for a sustained national budget. Such compromises should be so formulated as to make conditions tolerable for workers. Chairman Rawlings made this declaration in Kumasi today when he addressed the inaugural meeting of the Ashanti Regional Consultative Council.

Chairman Rawlings said any move which tends to upset the carefully calculated expenditure of the government would undo whatever gains the country has made so far. Flight Lieutenant Rawlings paid tribute to Ghanaian workers on the occasion of May Day, which falls tomorrow, for the way they have been contributing to production and the elimination of waste for the benefit of society and humanity. He said May Day should bring to the fore the desired solidarity among workers and the possibility of securing employment for future generations. Flight Lieutenant Rawlings said the government has already made considerable sacrifices in terms of increased wages and salaries together with substantial tax concessions. The money to cover this extra expenditure and the reduced revenue from taxes could be used to accelerate development and improve services and thus make a greater impact on the economic recovery program, but because of concern for the welfare of the worker, the government has decided otherwise. He said that this should be a signal for greater effort and not for further demand.

[Text] We deplore the fact that Chadians are fighting among themselves, this was declared this afternoon at 1710 [GMT] at the Palace of the Nation by the head of state, General Lansana Conte, who was thus addressing Brother Gouara Lassou, the Chadian foreign minister. It is imperative that this fratricidal war that has lasted for too long cease and that Chadians work hand-in-hand for the reconstruction of their country.

President Lansana Conte, who welcomed President Hissein Habre's special envoy, stressed the need for national unity in Chad. In this respect, the head of state said that the Guinean Government, which appreciates the positive developments in favor of national peace and reconciliation efforts in Chad, will act with more efficiency to accelerate this process. For this reason, President Lansana Conte again stressed that it is necessary for African countries to strengthen their common front, because they stand to gain by remaining united. Brother Gouara Lassou, who brought a message from President Hissein Habre, was received in the presence of Major Jean Traore, member of the CMRN [Military Committee for National Redress] and Major Kerfalla Camara, minister and CMRN permanent secretary.

Justice Minister Discusses Opposition Leader Arrest

MB291001 London PBC World Service in English
1615 GMT 28 Apr 86

[From the "Focus on Africa" program]

[Text] The chairman of Liberia's opposition grand coalition, Gabriel Kpoleh, was arrested this weekend and charged with sedition. It is in connection with his recent allegations that Samuel Doe's government was cooking up a fake coup plot to discredit opposition leaders. President Doe set up a special inquiry into the allegations. Kpoleh refused to take part, saying that the judicial process should be used. Well, the inquiry reported that the authorities should basically forgive and forget for the sake of reconciliation or if necessary go to law. Well, they went to law. On the line to Monrovia, Robin White asked Justice Minister Jenkins Scott why they had arrested Kpoleh rather than forgive and forget.

[Begin recording] [Scott] Well, the commission recommendation was in the alternative, either forgive and forget or proceed judicially and I think one has to look at Mr Kpoleh's own position, that he would prefer for it to proceed judicially.

[White] You are not saying that Mr Kpoleh wanted to be arrested?

[Scott] Well, obviously, if one says that he prefers judicial proceedings, he knows what the implications are.

[White] Where is Mr Kpoleh being held?

[Scott] He is being held at the central prison.

[White] Will he definitely be brought for trial?

[Scott] Definitely, as far as I am concerned.

[White] When do you think the trial might start?

[Scott] Well, I hope it should begin within a month.

[White] What would you say to the claim that might be made that basically you are persecuting the opposition?

[Scott] Well, I would say it is unfounded allegations, because clearly Mr Kpoleh as a political leader is not immune under our law from prosecution. The commission cited him on several occasions and he refused to show up and I, minister of justice, feel very strongly that if we allowed these things to become norm, then we are inviting some level of anarchism, we are inviting some situation whereby individuals [words indistinct] will begin to violate the law and expect that nothing will happen to them because they are politically important.

[White] Mr Jenkins Scott, I think you have been urged by the church in Liberia or [are] being urged by the American Government to patch things up and go easy on the opposition. Then you do this kind of thing...

[Scott] Look, the thing is, while we have been urged this does not necessarily mean that we cannot enforce our law. Reconciliation notwithstanding, the law exists and we cannot invite anarchism in our desire to achieve some real reconciliation. Everyone must be seen to be willing to abide by some rule of law. Government has bent backwards to bring about that level of reconciliation. For example, the law was violated, the government set up a commission, but Mr Kpoleh in his position as opposition leader decided not to even obey that approach toward reconciliation. Church members were members of that commission and not only the members themselves appealed to Mr Kpoleh, people outside of that commission, church members as well, went to him and he still refused. So what can we do? Somewhere along the line there has to be some degree of law and order in our society. He cannot (?do it) and get away with it and at the same time expect to me to arrest a common burglar when he violates the law. [end recording]

AFP: 200 Students Arrested Since 18 March Rioting

AB302045 Paris AFP in French 1833 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Monrovia, 30 Apr (AFP) — Two hundred university and high school students have been arrested in Liberia since the 18 March disturbances, the Liberian National Students Union (LINSU) announced on Wednesday.

It will be recalled that all Liberian schools were closed down following student riots organized in solidarity with the teachers' strike. The schools would have re-opened on 21 April but about 1,000 striking teachers in the capital said they would not resume classes as long as their grievances were not met. Among the grievances were in particular the payment of the salary arrears for December and January and the issue of transport allowance.

Elsewhere, the Electoral Commission has asked the Supreme Court to curtail the political activities of the United People's Party (UPP) until this opposition party obtains legal status, the independent newspaper STAR announced on Wednesday. [words indistinct] "detrimental to peace and stability." However, last March, the party resumed its activities, citing provisions of the new Constitution.

Ministerial Border Talks With Mauritania Conclude

AB301820 Bamako Domestic Service in French
1500 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Excerpts] The Mali-Mauritania joint ministerial council meeting ended this afternoon at the Ministry of Interior. The closing ceremony was jointly presided by the Malian and Mauritanian ministers of interior, Lieutenant Colonel Abdourahamane Maiga, and Anna Amadou Babaly. The meeting, which lasted for 3 days, was mainly devoted to problems pertaining to the border between the two countries.

In his speech, Minister Abdourahamane Maiga pointed out that the solid bonds of friendship between Mali and Mauritania should be further strengthened by the efforts made by our two heads of state. Let's listen to Minister Maiga:

[Begin Maiga recording] At the conclusion of 3 days of deliberations devoted to issues on our common border, I am happy to congratulate you for the work accomplished.

Mr Minister and dear brother, the 3 days which this meeting has lasted explains the desire to maintain a healthy climate of good-neighborliness between our two countries; good relations between our brotherly peoples. There is not, and there can never be quarrels between our two countries and that is why we should try to strengthen the sense of brotherhood among the people on both sides of our common border, and should quickly demarcate this common border. [end recording]

On his part, the Mauritanian minister of interior expressed delight over the establishment on our common border of [words indistinct] for the movement of goods as well as trade.

[Begin Babaly recording] This cooperation between our two countries, encouraged by our two heads of state — their excellencies General Moussa Traore, secretary general of the Democratic Union of Malian People and president of the Republic, and Colonel Maaouiya Ould Sid Ahmed Taya, chairman of the Military Committee for National Salvation and head of state — has enabled our peoples (?to live in harmony).

Your Excellency, Mr Minister and dear brother, cooperation between our two governments has enabled us to improve the living standards of our peoples on the border. First of all, considerable progress has been made in the field of security, in the field of movement of people and goods, as well as in many other fields. Our local representatives along the border should maintain close contacts between them [words indistinct]. The concrete measures we have taken for the (?limitation) of conflicts on the border between our two countries, are certainly likely to bring about a still more lasting solution to problems facing our peoples living along the border. Federal Government Reacts to Botha's Latest Address

AB302133 Lagos Domestic Service in English
2100 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The Federal Military Government has called on the racist regime in South Africa to address itself seriously to the crucial issue of apartheid by dismantling the monstrous system so as to allow the blacks to resume their rightful role in that country.

The Federal Government was today reacting to yesterday's address by the president of the racist regime in which he purportedly invited African leaders in South Africa to join hands with his regime in seeking solutions to the problems of the country's economy, particularly, unemployment. It expressed regret that the racist president in his address was silent on political matters.

Nigeria feels that the core of South Africa's problems is the urgent need for the total eradication of apartheid and the full involvement of the blacks in the power structure. A Radio Nigeria correspondent quotes political observers as saying that Mr Botha's latest statement is in many respects similar to his previous political declarations which contained only cosmetic proposals and nothing concrete. These are invariably designed to deceive the international community into believing that the racist regime, afterall, is genuinely making efforts toward political reforms.

Immigration Posts Set Up To Check Alien Influx

Dos Santos Speech Closes Five-Nation Summit 29 Apr

MB301203 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 0500 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Speech by President Jose Eduardo dos Santos at the closing session of the sixth session of heads of state of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries in Luanda on 29 April — recorded]

[Text] Dear comrades, invited guests, ladies and gentlemen: We have just concluded the proceedings of the sixth summit of the heads of state of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe. The wealth as well as the importance of the approved documents now made public and the realism of the programmed actions leave us with no doubt that the objectives of this summit meeting have been achieved in full and correspond to our expectations.

During 2 days of intense work, we carried out a fruitful exchange of experience and information on the building of new societies of justice and social progress in our countries. We assessed our economic cooperation, we made an in-depth examination of the most burning issues affecting international relations and paid due attention to problems affecting our continent, particularly southern Africa.

We concluded that, despite difficulties in the process of national reconstruction facing our young countries, cooperation has been developing at the level of our possibilities both with regard to bilateral and multilateral cooperation, thanks to the traditional spirit of unity, militant solidarity and fraternity existing among our countries. Accordingly, our common institution is bound to play an increasingly important role in our life and in our manner of confronting problems notwithstanding the geographical location of our countries in different subregions.

Our five countries speak a common official language and have set up a common institution. However, there is a sacred foundation that must not be violated, that is, the independence of our actions in fighting the negative external influences and attempts of interference which, for sure, will always be there. Our organization has the noble objective of serving the interests of our five states and peoples, consolidating their independence, intensifying their struggle for economic independence and contributing with creativity and a high sense of responsibility to the peaceful solution of the regional and international problems that concern mankind.

We have achieved progress in the fields of transport, health, information, cadre training, justice and others which enable us to face with optimism the broadening of our cooperation and trade exchange. We are certain that the realism which has once again characterized our deliberations and our pragmatism will convince everyone that our cooperation no longer limits itself simply to declaration of intentions but it slowly but surely projects an exemplary model of South-South cooperation within the framework of our fight for the new international economic order that we so much desire. [applause]

In our understanding, the gradual and traditional implementation of the principle of complementarity for the full utilization of our potentialities and abilities with reciprocal advantages is of paramount importance in fulfilling the plan of action that we have approved for 1986. In fact, it represents a challenge to the imagination and commitment of the organs charged with this task.

Your excellencies, esteemed comrades, invited guests: the identification of our viewponts with regard to the most burning issues presently facing the world, particularly southern Africa, have enabled us to justly and correctly formulate our position on the world's main conflicts.

We cannot remain passive or indifferent when we continue to observe on our continent interferences from foreign powers in the internal affairs of some African countries or when these powers mount maneuvers to hinder peaceful and speedy solution of existing conflicts. What is more, we cannot fail to mention the worsening economic situation of most African countries which are confronted with demands imposed on them by certain financial and monetary institutions — a situation which is worsened further by natural disasters and threatens the survival of million of human beings.

In solving this serious situation, it is our desire to contribute to strengthening the OAU's role in promoting more energetic actions which will enable us to speed up the total political liberation of Africa and ensure the development of the fight for our economic independence. The identity of principles governing the foreign policy of the five Portuguese- speaking African countries lies in our commitment to independence, nonalignment and peaceful coexistence — principles which, in different circumstances have enabled us to actively participate in the adoption of measures of vital importance both at the OAU level and at the level of the Nonaligned Movement. Accordingly, it was within the framework of these principles that the ministerial conference of the Nonaligned Movement, held in Luanda last year, reached a consensus to enable Zimbabwe, an African and Frontline State, to host this movement's eighth summit this year. The adoption of this important decision was not only based on geographical position. It was, above all based on great concern in the world and within the movement with regard to the real danger that the apartheid regime represents for regional and international peace and security. The movement's summit in Zambia will certainly mobilize the entire international community toward adopting measures aimed at diplomatically isolating the apartheid regime and applying economic sanctions that would also facilitate the broadening of support for the heroic struggle of the South African people for liberty and democracy.

The just and peaceful solution of the serious situation prevailing in southern Africa where the apartheid regime represents a constant threat to the sovereignty and independence of the countries of the region, must be the principal guiding point of our political and diplomatic action.

Excellencies, comrades, ladies and gentlemen: the summit meeting of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries has come to an end: its importance as well as its decisions are contained in the final communique, the Luanda Declaration, and in other resolutions.

It is our duty to express our deep appreciation for the joint effort at the levels of the meeting of experts and the meeting of ministers which enabled us to successfully carry out this summit and reach such important decisions for the future of our institution. [applause]

From now on, the People's Republic of Angola has the honor of coordinating cooperation relations among our five countries. We should like, therefore, on behalf of the government of the People's Republic of Angola, to express our total commitment and devotion to the implementation of the approved decisions. We are convinced that the expectations and confidence that our people place in us will once again be a source of inspiration for our success despite the difficult periods we are now going through. I will certainly have the usual support and commitment of the comrade presidents of Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe to enable me to fully and positively carry out the task that was charged me for the strengthening and consolidation of friendship, solidarity and cooperation among the peoples of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe and our respective countries.

I wish the comrade presidents and your distinguished delegations a good return home and reiterate my wishes for the best of success in your task of leading your respective peoples. Ideclare the sixth summit officially closed.

The struggle continues, victory is certain.

KUP Reaction

MB300903 (Clandestine) KUP in French to Southern and Central Africa 0600 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Free Land of Angola, 30 Apr (KUP) — The five African countries allied to Moscow have met in Luanda to discuss various issues of interest including what they call diplomatic pressure against UNITA. This is no doubt a Soviet orchestration aimed at concealing the truth. The situation in Angola demands a negotiated solution between the fighting parties, thus making irrelevant the question of diplomatic pressure.

SOUTH AFRICA

Reportage on Development of May Day Stayaway

UDF Backs National Action

MB301728 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2119 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — The United Democratic Front [UDF] today backed calls for a national stayaway on Thursday in observance of the International Workers Day and warned that reluctance to recognise May Day by the government could "exacerbate the ... chronic conflict situation in the country, especially industry."

"The UDF stands behind the call for a national workers stayaway on May 1 and demands that May Day be declared public holiday with full pay for all the workers," UDF acting publicity secretary, Mr Murphy Morobe said in a statement tonight. "For the workers of South Africa the 100th anniversary of May Day has a very special significance in the history of the labour movement," he said. "That the South African Government and the business world still show a reluctance to recognise May Day and grant workers full wages is a reflection of the continued reluctance by white capital, in particular, to recognise the major contribution and sacrifice workers made in South Africa. This reluctance will in the long run only serve to exacerbate an already chronic conflict situation in the country and especially industry. The UDF must of course emphasise that the stayaway call is only for May 1 and not longer. We hope that this point would serve to clarify whatever confusion that may be there about the length of the May Day stayaway," said Mr Morobe.

East Rand Meetings Banned

Le Grange Spokesman Comments on Ban

MB301826 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1808 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 30, SAPA — The banning of countrywide May Day meetings organised by the Council of Unions of South Africa [CUSA] fell within an existing prohibition of all open-air meetings, a spokesman for the minister of law and order, Mr Louis Le Grange, said today. The spokesman was replying to a request by the general secretary of CUSA, Mr P. Camay, to reconsider the decision to ban the meetings because it "destroyed freedom of assembly and association" Mr Camay said the banning was a serious breach of faith and would increase tension and exacerbate the volatile situation in the townships.

The spokesman for Mr Le Grange said that in terms of an existing prohibition, all open-air gatherings that were not bona fide sports meetings were banned unless prior permission had been obtained. No application for such permission had been received by Mr Le Grange, the spokesman said.

3 Miners Injured

MB010556 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0549 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Three mineworkers were injured during unrest at the Libanon gold mine in Westonaria early this morning as thousands of miners in the Transvaal began a legal work stoppage to celebrate May Day.

A spokesman for the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM), Mr Marcel Golding, this morning told SAPA that the night shifts at a number of mines had not gone down the shafts in accordance with a union decision to observe May 1 as an international holiday for workers. He said all mines in the Phalaborwa and Carltonville area were affected by the stoppage. Workers at the Grootvlei, Western Deep Levels, Elandsrand and Geduld mines had also gone out by early this morning.

Mr Golding said three NUM members were shot by mine security officials at the Libanon mine in Westonaria. They were not seriously wounded. He also reported that police detained five mineworkers under the Internal Security Act at a mine in Carletonville.

Security forces in the township of Galeshwe near Kimberley were conducting house-to-house searches and "warning people not to stay away from work", he added.

A mine security officer for Goldfields, which owns the Libanon mine, said there was a "minor disturbance last night caused by workers intimidating other workers into not going to work." However he said he had not received any reports of workers being shot. Miss H. Mendes, a spokesman for Goldfields, this morning said she would only be able to comment on the disturbances at the mine after recieving reports from the mine stations.

The NUM has obtained a supreme court ruling allowing its members to stage a legal May Day strike on certain gold and coal mines.

Meanwhile officials of the NUM were involved in a scuffle with police outside the union's offices in Johannesburg in the early hours of this morning. According to Mr Golding, police arrived at the offices soon after midnight to remove a banner proclaiming "May Day Is Workers Day" which union members had strung across the street outside the building. Mr Golding said the police broke down the front door of Lekton House in Wanderers Street, which houses a number of trade unions, in an attempt to enter the NUM offices. The fire brigade was then called in to remove the banner. Union officials and police were involved in a "scuffle" when the police announced they were confiscating the banner, he said.

A spokesman for the SAP Public Relations Division in Pretoria this morning said he had not yet received any reports on the alleged incidents in Galeshewe and Johannesburg.

'Biggest' Stayaway Ever Reported

MB011104 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1054 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — More than a million of black workers and school children today heeded the call for a nationwide May Day stayaway, making it the biggest in the country's history.

The Associated Chambers of Commerce (ASSOCOM) said absentee figures ranged between 70 and 100 percent countrywide. The only areas not significantly affected were urban regions in the Free State. Anglo American Goldmines reported an 83 per cent stayaway — one of the biggest ever. Six of Amcoals coal mines were affected by the stayaway.

Bus, train, and taxi services were disrupted almost country-wide. Black commuters trickled to work on foot or were given lifts by white motorists. Many who risked coming to work arrived late or spent the night in white areas to ensure that they got to work safely.

On the Reef there was an almost 100 per cent stayaway by PUTCO [Public Utility Transport Corporation] drivers. ASSOCOM's Mr Vincent Brett said transport difficulties had swelled the number of stayaways. "Without doubt this is the biggest nationwide stayaway ever," said Mr Brett. ASSOCOM has once again appealed to the governemnt to review the country's public holidays.

Apart from businesses, black and many coloured schools were deserted.

Businessmen around the country, except centres in the Free State, reported massive absentee figures but hoped that the situation would return to near normal tomorrow. Anglo American Goldmines had an average 83 per cent absentee rate among morning shift workers — one of the biggest ever. With white miners refusing to do the work of striking black colleagues, production losses were estimated at millions of rand. "At a few shafts, between 60 and 90 per cent of workers reported for duty but at most shafts absenteeism varied between 70 and 96 per cent," an Anglo spokesman said.

Amcoal reported that 9,500 of its 21,000 black mineworkers at collieries did not report for work, crippling six coal mines and reducing production at a seventh.

In contrast, today's stayaway had little effect on the Johannesburg city council. Ony 15 per cent of the city's 13,000 black municipal employees were reported absent from work today, and some were still trickling in later on the day. No essential services were disrupted.

A city which bustled with May Day activity was Durban. Busses and trains converged on the city carrying thousands to two mass rallies — the biggest being the launch of the Inkatha-backed United Workers Union of SA at the Kings Park rugby stadium, attended by about 80,000 people.

Several incidents of violence have been reported in the last 24 hours. Police said there had been 140 incidents of unrest overnight — far more than in the last few days.

Miners hurt in unrest at Libanon gold mine in Westonaria were being refused admission to the mine hospital, the National Union of Mineworkers claimed today.

A spokesman for the mine, which is owned by Goldfields, denied the claim. Mr Marcel Golding, a spokesman for NUM, said today 25 workers had been injured since unrest began and last night's shift refused to go underground. He said Libanon mine hospital staff refused to treat the miners, and he tried today to send ambulances to transport them to other hospitals.

A company spokesman denied the injured had been refused admission to the Libanon hospital. Of the 13 miners who were hospitalised, he said, one was in a serious but not critical condition. Five were injured by rubber bullets fired by mine security officials, he said. Eight were hurt in incidents of "intimidation," he added.

There have been reports from the townships of intimidation of workers wishing to go to work.

Six of the sixteen Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) rallies around the country had either been banned or had permission for using certain venues rescinded, according to the national general secretary, Mr Jay Naidoo. He said two of the rallies which had to be called off were in Natal, at Emphangeni and Ladysmith. He said these were barred to COSATU affiliates only hours before they were due to start. Three rallies in the eastern Cape, East London, Port Elizabeth and Uitenhage, had been banned by ministerial decree, he added. A major rally in Pretoria was also stopped, Mr Naidoo said, and members of his organization were being harassed by rival groups. Some of them were being intimidated by a strong police presence in the townships, he claimed.

Rallies in Durban, Pietermaritzburg, and Newcastle went ahead along with those in Soweto, Secunda, Witbank, Welkom, Kimberley, and other areas.

The independent labour monitoring group reported more than one million workers stayed away in the PWV, [Pretoria-Witwatersrand-Vereeniging] constituting more than an 80 per cent absentee rate. In Natal, more than 200,000 workers took the day off accounting for a 70 percent stayaway. Absenteeism in the western Cape was "uneven" and fairly low.

Foreign Minister Discusses Swaziland Talks

MB291526 Johannesburg Television Service in Afrikaans 1900 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Interview with Foreign Minister Pik Botha in Cape Town by Freek Robinson in Johannesburg on the "Network" program; introduced by Ruda Landman — live]

[Excerpts] [Landman] Tonight, Network focuses on the events in Swaziland on the weekend. The gathering of a large number of leaders and representatives of governments in that country for the coronation ceremony of King Mswati III provided an opportunity for the state president and Minister Pik Botha to meet and hold talks with some of these people on matters affecting South and southern Africa. Freek Robinson is ready to speak to Mr Pik Botha in Cape Town on the significance of these discussions.

[Robinson] Good evening, Minister Botha, and very welcome to Network. We are happy you were able to arrange your program in order to be with us here, but perhaps I should also say the fact that you are here reflects our powers of persuasion. But, nevertheless, welcome. Minister, at the weekend you were in Swaziland, you and President Botha, and the newspapers speculated on the significance of your particular delegation to Swaziland. What would you say on that?

[Botha] First, it confirms that South Africa is irrevocably and undeniably a part of the southern African region, that the Swazi Government and the Swazi nation not only recognize this, but appreciate it, that this neighbor, South Africa, also means much to them, and that cooperation between the two states brings prosperity and stability to both states. It also confirms the value the Swazis themselves place on their own culture, their own language, and their own specific ways, traditions, and their monarchy, which is a binding factor in their country. What struck me in particular was the spontaneous applause given our president and Mrs Botha, Mrs Elise Botha, throughout, not only from officials, but from thousands and thousands of ordinary Swazis who were standing kilometers deep alongside their vehicle. [as heard] When they recognized the president and his wife they cheered spontaneously. This was not staged. It was not acting. It was spontaneous. It reflects what is in the hearts of those people, in their thoughts. It was all spontaneous.

[Robinson] Mr Botha, we must assume that you also held discussions with the Swazi Government. Would you say that, during these discussions, you found the same positive spirit you are telling us about?

[Botha] I believe so, yes. The discussions I held with President Machel, and the discussions the following day when President Botha was also involved, achieved, in my opinion, very important results, which we will now have to translate into something concrete after further discussions.

[Robinson] You would not like to elaborate? What are these results? Are they related to the problems which surfaced over Nkomati?

[Botha] Yes, of course. We traded accusations over and over again. That is a fact, and it is good that it is so, in the sense that we will have to reestablish a mechanism to delve into these complaints. But the two leaders did not limit themselves to the negative aspects. They also reached certain understandings, which we are now going to implement. And this will mean further talks between the various ministers. And that, to me, is very important.

[Robinson] So the Nkomati Accord still stands firm?

[Botha] As far as I am concerned, the Nkomati Accord is back on the rails. It always was working well, except for a group of enemies of the accord, both on the left and the right. Here in South Africa ... [changes thought] it is very interesting that the people in South Africa who do not want reform are both the communists and a group of rightwing whites.

[Robinson] Minister, earlier I asked you about Swaziland. Did you specifically hold talks with the Swaziland Government, and what was the outcome?

[Botha] I do not need to hold specific talks with the Swaziland Government because I am in constant contact with my friends there. Indeed, I am accepted there as a son of King Sobhuza, late King Sobhuza. I talked with him for many hours during his lifetime. He placed a real trust in me and our government, and this remains the case; the spirit remains the same.

[Robinson] Did you also meet the new king? Were you able to speak with him?

[Botha] Yes, I greeted him briefly, and told him that he should remember that his father was also my father. I told him I was at his disposal, to stand by him in any way, should he need any form of assistance. But I cannot force this on him, and I will not do so. He will have to take advantage of the offer voluntarily.

[Robinson] Minister, there was some speculation that both you and President Botha also made contact with other leaders, such as President Masire of Botswana and possibly also [Zambian-]President Kenneth Kaunda. Was that the case?

[Botha] Yes. The president sat for hours in the stadium, naturally. He sat beside President Machel and alongside President Machel was President Masire, and after a while these statesmen began to talk with each other. I do not want to say what they spoke about, but it was useful and promising.

[Robinson] But would you say, generally, following your contacts at the weekend with the various heads of state in Swaziland, would you say there is now a better, more positive spirit between the South African Government and the different countries of southern Africa?

[Botha] As far as Mozambique is concerned, this meeting was very useful to us. I am expecting considerable positive results to come from that. As regards the others, I cannot say. Time will have to provide answers as to whether the discussions and the good attitude shown can be developed further. In my view, it will have to be a process. The leaders of soutehrn Africa should long ago have got together. They do not need burials or coronations in order to meet each other. I regret that they only meet at such occasions. We ought to have had structures long ago through which we could discuss the problems of development, of peace, of ending terrorism.

[Robinson] So nothing definite was decided, between yourself and other governments, perhaps like Botswana, to meet again?

[Botha] Well, look, I cannot go ahead tonight here in public and tell of everything we discussed behinds the scenes.

[Robinson] Very well, minister. I understand. But there was one negative note, if one could put it like that, in the whole of the weekend celebrations, and that was the withdrawal of President Moi of Kenya. How do you see that?

[Botha] President Moi was looking for an excuse not to come because he has internal problems in Kenya, and he knows it. And it is time that he faced up to the truth and admitted it. He should not think we are too stupid to see the truth. He was desperately looking for an excuse to stay away, and the Swazis told him that he, Moi, was not going to dictate to the Swazis who they should invite. And I think it was a bold, a very great action, by the Swazis, and I respect them for it.

[Robinson] Minister, there were also reports that President Kenneth Kaunda was fairly negative towards South Africa's presence, and that he said, inter alia, that the things South Africa is busy with domestically, the reforms, really mean nothing. Are you aware of that? And do you want to say anything about it?

[Botha] Yes. I am aware of that. But that is his old habit. As you know, anything which does not suit him 100 percent, he denigrates. He himself has a full packet of problems in his country. He had made a mess of his administration, and the sooner he admits this, the better. And the sooner someone told him that, the better. And I am saying it tonight. Perhaps he could hear about it through the medium of this television program. The days are long gone when they could hide their own shortcomings behind dramatic and hysterical gestures. President Kaunda should give his attention to the upliftment of his own people, and he should leave South Africa alone. The government here has announced its program for progress in this region. We have said apartheid is dead. We have said we are going to get rid of it. We have said we are going to share power with all communities up to the highest level. What President Kaunda wants is a one party state. He thinks that is the solution to all problems.

[Robinson] Even in South Africa?

[Botha] Even in South Africa. Because, as he sees things, that is his solution. And it solved nothing in his country. In fact, the situation has deteriorated there. I am not annoyed with him. I know him well. We have often met. Just let me tell you, though, that if I had tried to arrange a meeting there between him and our president, then I can tell you right now that he would have refused, and leaked it to the press. So, because we did not try to arrange a meeting, he told the press [switches to English] no effort has been made to contact me. [reverts to Afrikaans) But I have learned to know them. They cannot bluff me any longer. This country is on a new path, and the sooner our neighbors accept this, as has Swaziland — and I appreciate their stand — that a new South Africa is dawning for us all, the better.

[Robinson] But do you then want to say, minister, that South Africa is not interested in good relations with Zambia or with President Kaunda?

[Botha] No, no, no, no. We are very keen on good relations, and we will continue to assist him by taking care his imports and his exports, and helping him in that way. And we will continue to assist him in many respects, and get him out of difficulties, as we have so often in the past. We are keen to do so. But I do not like being shouted at, from morning to night, by an African leader who ought to know better. If he would like us to accept his sincerity, then I demand of him now, too, that he also accept our sincerity. Our president has made full announcements on the reforms in this country, which can be accepted by any reasonable African leader.

[Robinson] Is it your feeling that they have accepted the president's announcements? Did you, for example, use the opportunity to explain what is taking place, and do the black leaders accept what is taking place in this country?

[Botha] I have taken the trouble to personally go and tell a number of black leaders around us what we are doing, and when we are alone, in private, they express understanding and appreciation, because they know our circumstances. But I am sorry to tell you that the ANC headquarters is in Lusaka, and they are stuffing Dr Kaunda's head with piffle.

[Robinson] But, in the light of that, would it not have been a good thing to have got into a discussion with President Kaunda about this matter, since he is also the chairman of the Frontline States?

[Botha] There is no need to discuss the matter with him, Mr Robinson. In the past 2 years, I have been to Zambia four or five times. And I personally told the president there what we are planning. And he expressed satisfaction at what we told him. And I went into much more detail than I had planned to. All he should do is, he should understand the reality and the extent of the reform which this government has begun, and he should stop lending his ear to this bunch of communists.

[Robinson] Minister, earlier on you said that in private some leaders have told you they understand and appreciate what is taking place in this country. Do you perhaps want to say who they are?

[Botha] No, no, no.

[Robinson] Or the names of the countries?

[Botha] No, no. Because then these diabolical forces will swoop down on them again and flay them. I do not want to get my friends in trouble.

[Robinson] And which are these diabolical forces you mention?

[Botha] The communist elements in the ANC, and an element in the West, in Washington, on the Hill, and in Europe, and in Britain, who see only salvation and good in everything the communist elements in the ANC does. They are being hoodwinked. They use apartheid and the negative elements in apartheid to persuade Western governments to do the work of Moscow at this time. And this is a very serious problem we are facing, but we should not shy away. We should continue trying to persuade the reasonable elements in Europe and America of our sincerity.

[Robinson] Minister, at the weekend there was speculation that the discussions held in Swaziland were also related to the efforts of the Commonwealth's so-called Eminent Persons Group [EPG], and that one of the aspects being worked on is that South Africa some time will eventually speak with the ANC, provided the ANC, under pressure from Europe wherever, ends its violence. Is that the case?

[Botha] Look, let me explain the situation very clearly. The president and the government of this country have stated very clearly: we will speak to any leader or party which rejects violence in achieving political goals. This principle was not created in order to make things difficult for the ANC or for Mandela. This principle applies to all the people in this country. Whites too. Whites on the right, the rightwing radical side. Those who use violence to gain power are doomed to govern with violence too. Please, let us accept this reality. All this government has said, is that if the ANC, or any organization, or leader, stops violence, then they are obviously welcome to sit around the conference table with us.

[Robinson] Minister, you are reaffirming the principle which the government has stated time and again. But my question was specifically about the Commonwealth group, and the fact that the negotiations with them are at a delicate stage and, as you are aware yourself, they are meeting again this week in London. My question is about their actions and South Africa's actions, and the ANC as a partner in dialogue.

[Botha] No, you are wrong. Not only the ANC as partner in dialogue. Our discussions with these prominent persons from the commonwealth, as they are known — and among them are persons of real eminence — have up to this stage gone well, and as the president himself said, a delicate stage has been reached. What do we mean by that? They reported to us. We have now answered. We are awaiting further ifnormation, further reaction, from their side. I personally believe that this group — and the president has permitted me to say this — can play a useful role. The stage is delicate in the sense that at this stage we cannot reveal in public what has taken place between us, because then we would be breaking a relationship with them which we have reached, namely, that we would not do our negotiations in public. But, as far as I am concerned, there is very good hope, and there is very good reason to expect that this group can play a useful role to promote dialogue and to help end violence as a means of achieving political goals, Now, whether this will happen, I cannot say. But nothing has happened to cancel the potentially useful role of this group. I think that is the stage we hase now reached and I believe it is a very postive and promising stage.

[Robinson] Is that more or less the message you got during your recent visit to Europe, that there is a spirit in Europe which makes it possible to move ahead?

[Botha] No. The Europeans are in a different position. Their problem is that they do not have among them a black person like General Obasanjo, who knows Africa and Africa's realities. That is their problem. They live in a vacuum. Some of the European nations were themselves the most brutal colonial oppressors the world ever knew, and we are still paying part of that price today. But the EPG group, what is important about them is that they include a number of prominent — you could say, leaders — who, in their time, fulfilled important roles. And I have accepted that these people will not want to deliberately destroy the reputations they have built up over the years simply by resorting to irresponsible actions. And we found a reasonably realistic approach, an objective approach, among this group to the problems of Africa. And they are trying to put us in this context, the context of Africa, while Europe and these do-gooders in America never see us in the context of Africa, but in the context of Europe and America.

[Robinson] Speaking about America, minister. During the weekend you also met the daughter of President Reagan. Was that something substantial, or was it simply a pleasant friendly meeting?

[Botha] No. You must not underestimate that lady. She has a will of her own, and she is her father's daughter.

[Robinson] But do the daughter and her father discuss matters?

[Botha] I believe she is very close to her father. You can see that she is concerned about the pressure which is being applied on President Reagan as a result of the actions in the Congress and Senate.

[Robinson] Specifically over South Africa?

[Botha] Specifically over South Africa. She is concerned about this, and, while I would not like to reveal the whole discussion, I believe the president really took the trouble to brief her very fully what he stands for, what our problems are, our dilemma, and also asked her to judge this. He told her, you are now in Swaziland. Judge for yourself how these hated white racists of Pretoria are received in black state. I believe we had a particularly useful meeting. Our president has invited her to South Africa for 2 weeks. She is a very busy lady. She is very interested in political matters in America. And I hope she will be able to come. I hope she will be able to visit us for 14 days, then we can give her even more attention.

[Robinson] But the questions I actually wanted to ask, minister, is, following the discussions with you, can she return to America and take a specific message to her father or other government leaders back home, and carry the point home?

[Botha] I hope so. I really hope so. We spoke very fully with her. Of course, you will realize that given only an hour, there are limitations. But substantially we spoke in depth. As far as I am concerned, it was a good meeting. And there should be follow-up discussions. But of course this is not our only contact. The president as you can imagine has his own contact with President Reagan, very regularly.

[Robinson] Minister, let us move to the internal situation. You all had the opportunity in Swaziland to speak to King Zwelithini of Zululand. What was the significance? Could it have any significance to further developments inside South Africa?

[Botha] Yes. Let me say, as a fellow South African, I was pleased that the Zulu king was invited. It think it is a feather in the cap for Chief Gatsha Buthelezi. There was a time, let me say quite honestly, with the Ingwavuma issue, when we were negotiating with the Swazis, and the Swazis wanted very dearly to have Ingwavuma incorporated into Swaziland. At the time relations between us and KwaZulu, on this matter, had reached a very low point. The KwaZulu government at the time made harsh statements.

[Robinson] And now, after your discussions with the king?

[Botha] I believe it was very good that he was there himself, that he was invited. In fact, he was given head-of-state treatment. If you could have seen the arrangement of the seating, he was in fact sitting alongside the new Swazi king and the queen mother.

[Robinson] But my question, minister, is on the relations between Zululand and South Africa. After all, it is known that there is little agreement between Chief Buthelezi and the South African Government. Was this cleared up during your meeting now in Swaziland?

[Botha] I cannot give you a categorical answer. But the good will and friendliness we showed each other must necessarily, I am sure, extend to Chief Buthelezi. And I have no doubt that as time passes a greater understanding will come about, because the South African Government sincerely means that in this country real power-sharing must take place.

[Robinson] On that point, minister, let me make a little political capital on that point. It would appear that the South African government, and especially Deputy Minister Louis Nel, do not like the kind of statement you have just made, and that the AWB [Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging — Afrikaner Resistance Movement] is not very happy about the goals you have outlined.

[Botha] Earlier I said that there are two main elements in this country who do not want change or reform. One is the white right; the other is on the left. Not necessarily black, because they also have white, colored, and Asian elements, these communists. They have always been like that. But the outcome of all these attitudes necessarily leads to the destruction of the freedom of the individual and the community in southern Africa. And the message we have to get across to our people, both black and white, colored and Asian, is that there is only one way in which stability, progress, and peace can come to this country, and that is for the different communities to trust in each other, and to come to agreement on how to share power in a manner which will maintain self-determination for the various communities. Because then you would have power-sharing in the most democratic manner possible. What is very important — and I am glad you asked the question — is this: Oour friends in the AWB must ask themselves only one question — and they must at least show that responsibility to the public — where is their policy and direction going to lead this country? The South African Government ... [changes thought] we are permanently on the edge of total boycotts and sanctions and isolation, on the edge of total isolation regarding scientific knowledge, our exports, the products of our farmers, our minerals. Our mines face having to close down. What answer do they have? They will not be able to eat all the oranges produced. They will not be able to export the corn. They will not be able to process the minerals.

[Robinson] But, sir, are they not gaining support in the country?

[Botha] I cannot say if they are gaining support. But let me say to you, it is false support. False in the sense that if our people know what is happening, if we can get the message across, surely there must be very few whites in this country who could be so stupid as to dig their own graves in this manner.

[Robinson] Thank you very much, minister, for taking part in this Network program. We appreciate it. Unfortunately, we have to end now. We have reached the end of our program. Thanks once again.

Applications for New ID Books Taken 1 May

MB3016[illegible]2 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1511 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 30, SAPA — All people who are legally resident in South Africa can apply for the new uniform ID book from tomorrow, a Department of Home Affairs spokesman said in Pretoria today. Applications may be lodged at the department's regional or district offices (formerly the "commissioner's office"), or magistrate's offices.

ANC Denies 'Communist' Movement Charges

MB301431 Umtata Capital Radio in English 1400 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] The ANC has rejected President P.W. Botha's claim that it is a communist organization. This week, Mr Botha, speaking in Parliament, appealed to what he called nationalists in the ANC to return to South Africa and become part of the reform process. Howard Barrell reports from Harare.

[Barrell] Lusaka-based ANC spokesman Tom Sebina said today that Mr Botha's allegations that the ANC was a communist organization was an attempt to distract from the fact that apartheid was responsible for the chaos confronting South Africans. Mr Botha was applying warped concepts to classify South Africans, he said. We regard all people who give their lives for our freedom, said Sebina, as patriots and nationals above all else. The ANC, he added, is not a communist movement, but a bulwark movement which has always accommodated people from a wide spectrum of the society, without any distinction based on the ideologies they may profess.

ANC Secretary General Discusses Mandela Release

MB281707 Maputo in English to Southern Africa 1100 GMT 28 Apr 86

[From the "Indaba" program]

[Excerpts] The United Nations recently adopted a resolution calling on the South African Government to end violence against black people and to release all imprisoned political prisoners. One of the prisoners is the internationally known South African leader, Nelson Mandela. Today, Indaba looks at the issue of the release of Nelson Mandela. Here is the secretary general of the African National Congress, Thomas Nkobi.

[Begin Nkobi recording] Rumors are widespread because of the utterances of the South African regime. Botha, when he opened Parliament last year, mentioned that he was prepared to release Mandela provided Comrade Mandela would renounce violence. He said again when he opened Parliament this year that he could release Mandela on humanitarian grounds provided certain conditions are met. For example, if the Soviets would release Shcharanskiy and Sakharov and a South African military bandit who has been captured in Angola, trying to sabotage oil installations in Cabinda.

The release of Comrade Mandela has remained a current topic for more than a year because of these kinds of verbal provocations by the South African regime. Whether Mandela is about to be released or not, the South African regime is in a dilemma. If they don't release Mandela and anything happens to him in jail they will have to answer.

It is absolutely impossible for Comrade Mandela to renounce violence. Violence, particularly in South Africa, came about as a result of legalized state violence. That is why the African National Congress in 1961 took to arms after 50 years of nonviolence, but during these peaceful years the state legalized violence was something and therefore it is absolutely unfair for the South African regime, the perpetrators of violence against innocent people, to ask Mandela to relinquish violence. He is not violent at all. It is the regime which is violent. [end recording]

PFP Member Says Police Behind Alexandra Violence

MB301917 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1819 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] House of Assembly, April 30, SAPA — Mr Dave Dalling (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Sandton) said today that there was overwhelming evidence that the latest round of violence in Alexandra township was planned and executed by policemen and their friends. Speaking during the debate on the law and order budget vote, he said policemen had set up roadblocks at the entrances to the township north of Johannesburg on April 22 and sealed it off. He alleged that:

— Three teams attacked selected targets;
— Some teams were supported by Hippo riot vehicles;
— The teams were dressed in civilian clothes but some members wore police blue shirts and trousers;
— They assaulted the wife of the Civic Association Chairman, Mrs Rebecca Beea, who identified police uniforms;
— When she could not tell them where her husband was, they assaulted her children too and burnt their house down;
— Witnesses had seen several blacks in blue uniforms emerge from behind a Hippo with guns and pangas in front of the house of a Youth Congress member, Mr Colin Ntola. When he tried to run, he was shot dead;
— A witness attending a "peoples court" dealing with a matrimonial matter, when it was attacked and several occupants shot or wounded.

"Alexandra looks today like a scene from the movie "The Killing Fields." "A leadership vacuum exists as every known leader has fled, fearing death at the hands of the police," Mr Dalling said.

The minister, Mr Louis le Grange, asked him whether he would supply the names of these leaders. "Certainly, I have them all," Mr Dalling replied. "Houses belonging to leaders have been gutted, burnt out cars litter the streets. The pall of death hangs over that community. What has happened there is nothing short of madness. There is overwhelming evidence that the latest round of violence and killing was planned and executed by policemen and their friends."

"Unless this insanity is stopped, and quickly, Alexandra will experience a new dark era," he said. The police should withdraw as a matter of urgency and call off "the military occupation of the town." Normality had to be restored and leaders should be allowed to return to their homes in safety. "This cannot happen while the police behave in this manner," Mr Dalling said. It was time the minister stopped making excuses and exercised his authority without delay. "The perpetrators of arson, murder and violence, no matter what the provocation, must be brought to book," he said.

Mr Jurie Mentz (NP [National Party] Vryheid) said Mr Dalling was the enemy of peace, or law and order in South Africa, because he accused the police of causing the unrest. "He and the member for Houghton (Mrs Helen Suzman) sit safely in their rich palaces but if a bomb should be hurled at them, they will be the first to call the police. But these things do not touch their own skins," Mr Mentz said.

SAAWU Organizer Found Dead in Transvaal

MB301605 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1527 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 30, SAPA — An organiser of the South African Allied Workers Union (SAAWU) has been found dead after he and another official were allegedly kidnapped and severely assaulted by three white men in Lichtenburg on April 14. A SAWU spokesman said the organiser, Mr William Olifant, was found dead on a farm in Koster, in the western Transvaal. His colleague, Miss Dorothy Morobe, was discharged from Leratong Hospital yesterday. She was admitted to hospital after being assaulted and thrown from a moving vehicle.

The union spokesman said at the time of the alleged kidnapping both Mr Olifant and Miss Morobe were key figures in SAWU's efforts to gain recognition at the Lichtenburg firm where they were employed.

Police comment was not available.

Two Petrol Bomb Caches Uncovered in Durban

MB010926 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0924 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — Police in Durban today confiscated two hauls of petrol bombs — one of which was found in a bus parked near the venue for the Congress of South African Trade Unions May Day rally. A police spokesman said that a total of 24 petrol bombs and five litres of petrol were confiscated. Early this morning police stopped a car in Kwamashu and found 19 petrol bombs. Five people were arrested. In an empty bus at the Warwick Avenue bus terminus near Curries Fountain, near Venue for COSATU rally, police found five petrol bombs and five litres of petrol. No one was arrested.

Two people had been arrested in Chesterville for intimidation, police added. It was alleged they were trying to stop people going to work.

Police Issue Unrest Situation Report 30 April

MB301820 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1807 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Pretoria, April 30, SAPA — The following is today's 7pm unrest report as issued by the police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria:

"In Mbekweni, near Paarl, at 7am this morning, police arrested 25 black men over 18, two black women, 12 youths and one female youth for public violence.

"Twenty-eight black youths and 19 black men over 18 years have been arrested at Mohlakeng, Randfontein, in connection with unrest. Eighteen petrol bombs plus four rounds of 9mm ammunition were confiscated.

"During police action at the stoning of a house in Wattville, near Benoni, at 12.15pm yesterday, two black men, over 18 years, were wounded by the police.

"A black youth has been arrested in Kwamashu, Durban, after about 50 youths stoned a police vehicle.

"A member of the police was slightly injured when black youths — the number unknown — stoned a police vehicle at Kabokweni, near Nelspruit.

"Blacks stoned taxis in Atteridgeville near Pretoria at about 2pm today. A black man has been arrested.

"At Sabelo Township, near Middelburg, Cape Province, 200 blacks stoned an SAP vehicle. Police had to use tearsmoke and their duty pistols. Two black men were slightly injured and arrested. Another two black men and one youth were arrested.

"At Tumahole township, near Parys, two members of the Development Board and four of the community council followed a suspect in an arson case. One member of the Development Board fired one round of birdshot in the direction of the suspect, wounding one black girl, 6, fatally. Her name is Vivian Thati of 807 Tladi Street. One black female was slightly injured. The suspect was arrested.

"In Guguletu, western Cape, a number of blacks stoned a bus during which a coloured female was slightly injured. The police were not present.

"In another incident in the Cape at Eblhar Township about 150 coloured youths gathered and rioted. The police had to use tearsmoke to disperse the mob. There were no arrests or injuries."

Report ends.

WEEKLY MAIL Publishes 'Apartheid Barometer'

MB270735 Johannesburg THE WEEKLY MAIL in English 25 April-1 May 86 p 4

["Apartheid Barometer"]

[Excerpts] Detentions:

According to DPSC [Detainees Parents Support Committee] Report) since April 1 there were:

April 1: Joel Phoshoko, 28, of Mabophane. He died in the HF Verwoerd Hospital a few hours after presenting himself to Pretoria Central Police. He was a trade unionist working for Cawusa (Catering and Allied Workers Union of S.A.)
April 6: Lucky Kutumela, 25, died in the police cells at Mahwelereng, Lebowa, near Potgietersus. He died within a day of his detention by Lebowa Police. Kutumela was a journalist, a member of AZAPO [Azanian People's Organization] and Mwasa (Media Workers Association of SA.)
April 11: Peter Nchabeleng, 59, died in Schoonoord Police Station a few hours after being taken from his home in Apel by Lebowa Police. Nchabeleng was UDF [United Democratic Front] president for the Northern Transvaal region.
April 12: Eric Ngomane was 22, from the Nelspruit area died in Hazyview Police Station three weeks after being arrested by the South African police. Ngomane was a high school pupil.
April 19: Johannes Mashego, 26, of Tumahole, Parys. He died at Parys police station a few hours after his arrest by South African police. His employment situation was not stated.
The total number of known deaths in security detention since 1983, according to DPSC figures, is 61. This does not include 18 more deaths in police custody and political detentions over the past 18 months. In a written reply to Helen Suzman (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Houghton) Louis le Grange, Minister of Law and Order said a total of 150 persons had died in police custody in 1985. Of these 81 died from injuries sustained before and during arrest, six from assaults by fellow prisoners, 33 were suicides and 30 died of natural causes.

Detainees Hospitalised:

A total of 40 detainees were hospitalised in 1985 with various illnesses, including gunshot wounds and mental disturbances, Le Grange said in reply to questions by Marius Barnard (PFP Parktown).

Cases Brought Against Minister:

A total of 137 lawsuits, of which one case succeeded with a counterclaim and 88 were settled out of court, were brought against the Minister of Law and Order, Le Grange said. Of these, 68 related to damage to vehicles, 29 to unlawful arrest, 29 to assault, four to shooting incidents, three to being bitten by police dogs, one each to loss of maintenance, confiscation of a vehicle, damage to property due to police action and loss of prisoners' property while in police custody. Le Grange added he had not paid out any money as a result of successful lawsuits brought against him, but had paid out R146, 668 in out-of-court settlements, of which R111, 379 was for damage resulting from motor accidents.

Firearms and Community Councillors:

The state has provided firearms to black community councillors on an ongoing basis since 1984. Of the 1,227 community councillors representing 194 community councils, 245 councillors from 55 councils have been issued with 9mm parabellum pistols and in a few cases .25 .32 and .38 calibre pistols or revolvers, Chris Heunis, Minister of Constitutional Development and Planning, told Peter Soal (PFP Johannesburg North).

Land Allocated to Non-Independent Homelands:

(As at the end of last year) as released by Gerrit Viljoen, Minister of Education and Development Aid.

KwaZulu: 3,188,295 ha
Lebowa : 2,212,897 ha
Gazankulu: 744,570 ha
KaNgwane: 385,337 ha
Kwandebele: 103,370 ha
Qwa Qwa: 62,000 ha

Employment in Public Service:

As at September 30 last year the total number of people employed in the public service was, according to figures by Eli Louw, minister for administration and economic advisory services:

Whites: 140,199
Blacks: 94,842
Coloureds: 35,653
Indians: 6,104

SADF (Official Figures):

The White Paper tabled in Parliament this week by Magnus Malan, minister of defence, states that at present the full-time force of the SADF comprises 76 percent whites, 12 percent blacks, 11 percent coloureds and one percent Indians.

Religious Objectors:

Between July 1985 and the end of February 1986, 116 people classified as religious objectors were placed in the employment of state and parastatal bodies said Minister of Manpower Piet du Plessis.

Removals (Official Figures):

No decision has as yet been made about the removal of 64 of the 67 "black spots" in SA because they are likely to be affected by the consolidation proposals for KwaZulu, said Minister of Constitutional Development Chris Heunis. According to his figures about 60,000 blacks have been "assisted" to movE since the Department of Cooperation and Development declared a moratorium on forced removals in 1985.

Banned Books, Publications and Objects (April 18 - April 25):

Since the above date it is an offence to import and/or distribute the following: Pamphlets: "We Salute the ANC" (not stated); "A Tribute to Our Comrades Who Were Killed Monday 1986/03/03;" "These Boers Will Never Do It Again" (both by CAYCO [Cape Youth Congress]). Publications: South Africa: the Road to Revolution (by Alex Callinicos); Umsebenzi [Work] No 3, 1985 (by South African Communist Party).

Since the above dates it is an offence to possess the following "undesirable" publications: "Congress Review No 4" (not stated); "Azania Frontline No 11, September 1985" (by Azanian Liberation Support Committee, London); "SOYA Bulletin No 3" (by Students of Young Azania, Salt River).

Publications which have been declared not undesirable by the Directorate of Publications are: The Testimony of Steve Biko — Black Consciousness in South Africa (by Steve Biko); The Teachings of Karl Marx (by V I Lenin); Labour: Forced Or Free? CFMAG [expansion unknown] Topics No 1 and Women of the Revolution, CFMAG topics No 3 (both by Committee for Freedom, London); Wereldraad van Kerken en die Vrijheidsbewegingen in Zuidelijk Afrika [World Council of Churches and the Freedom Movements in Southern Africa] (by persons unknown).

Prisoner of Conscience — Chris Maake:

Chris Maake, 28, was detained in the Pietersburg area on August 16 last year. He is being held at Hannesburg Prison, near Pietersburg, Northern TVL [Transvaal], under section 29 of the Internal Security Act. Maake was on the SRC [Student Representative Council] at Turfloop University and was publicity secretary for AZASO [Azanian Students Organization] in the area at the time of his being detained. A formal request for visits to the detainee by his wife and family has been refused.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report] Eglin Meets Fabius

David Braun reports from Cape Town on the front page of Johannesburg THE STAR in English on 29 April that "the Progressive Federal Party [PFP] told former French Prime Minister Mr Laurent Fabius yesterday that external pressures which damaged the South African economy were unlikely to be helpful in resolving the country's problems." PFP leader Colin Eglin and MP Mrs Helen Suzman met with Mr Fabius and former French Culture Minister Jack Lang. Eglin said: " 'We expressed our view of the seriousness of the situation and the need for constitutional reconstruction. We said the abolition of the pass laws was going to be helpful in creating a better climate, but that so far the gap between rising black expectations and the rate of change of the Government in the constitutional field was still dangerously wide. Our view is that South Africa is going to change from inside and that external pressures which damage the economy are unlikely to be helpful.' "

Nelspruit Boycott

The paper reports on page 3 that a consumer boycott called for by Nelspruit and White River people calling themselves the "comrades" has failed. The boycotters asked blacks not to buy from white-owned businesses. However, all day yesterday, the day the boycott was to begin, business was normal. Pamphlets were distributed in Kabokwenin and Kanyamazane calling for a boycott and making the following demands: Withdrawal of SADF from townships, release of detained students, and reemployment of all those fired during the last stayaway. It threatened that the "comrades" would note those not observing the boycott.

Desperate Farmers

"In an unprecedented move, Transvaal farmers have appealed for a two-year moratorium on thier debts to avoid financial collapse," the paper reports on the same page. The recent rains have come too late and extraordinary emergency aid is needed to save the agricultural sector, they say.

Minister on May Day

David Braun reports from Cape Town on page 3 that "Home Affairs Minister Mr Botha has not had any formal approaches for May 1 to be declared a public holiday, his office said yesterday." This was the first reaction to reports that momentum is building for a national holdiay to be declared.

Hendrickse Request 'Evaded'

"The state president, Mr P.W. Botha, has evaded a request from the chairman of the Council of Ministers in the House of Representatives, the Rev Allan Hendrickse, to serve on the State Security Council," the political staff reports from Parliament on page 4. Mr Hendrickse said that as a member of Parliament, "I must serve on the security council. We must know what is going on." Botha said he had invited Hendrickse to "share with him" on the security council many times.

Catholics Against Disinvestment

On page 6, the paper reports the results of a survey conducted among Catholic groups after the walk out at Victory Park in opposition to the Catholic proposal to back disinvestment. In the survey, "many parish spokesman said there had been such a dealy in the papers reaching them that they had not had time to formulate adequate replies. But the general feeling was that the country's problems would not be solved by disinvestment."

Pick'n'Pay Strike

Another page 6 report says that thousands of Pick'n'Pay workers in key jobs in 76 supermarkets were poised to go on strike on 2 May and the chairman, Raymond Ackerman, said "this was one of the most serious situations the supermarket chain had ever experienced." He said no emergency plans had been formulated and he hoped that talks would avert the strike.

EPG as Mediator

"The Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group [EPG] will discuss reports tomorrow that it might be called on to mediate between South Africa's white and black nationalists," THE STAR's bureau reports from London. However, a spokesman refused to speculate and said that the EPG was determined to maintain a low profile. The Commonwealth Secretariat is hopeful that Pretoria has accepted some of the EPG's offers, "notably to act as intermediaries until proper dialogue can be arranged."

RSC Rethinking Urged

In its editorial on page 10, THE STAR says that it shares the PFP's misgivings about the regional services council [RSC] system, both practical aspects and political. Local ratepayers will have far less control over these bodies and they will likely become ponderous, self-protecting machines. Blacks are unlikely to buy the idea. The paper agrees with the PFP that apartheid is the foundation of the RSC but says "things have changed since then, even in the Government's own thinking. If it is still in the mood for bold changes then we appeal: let's spend another year working on a fairer system of regional and local government. This time, bring in everybody."

Call for General Election

Roger Hulley, PFP MP for Constantia, writes on the same page that had the new constitution not been introduced, the government would have been forced to call a general election before now. Although it is legal to postpone one, "I don't believe it is honourable or democratic." He has heard the argument that it is too soon after the colored and Indian elections and that the government won a "yes" vote in the 1983 referendum, both of which he rejects. He says that the president's extension of his 1981 mandate is "adrift down the slippery slopes of dictatorial rule" and believes that as a matter of principle an election should be called.

Buti Interview

The paper reports on page 28 on an interview reporters Colleen Ryan and Mike Cadman had with the former mayor of Alexandra, Sam Buti, who says he remains committed "to upgrading the poverty stricken township despite his resignation from the town council." He told the paper he was going to concentrate on his work as a minister. " 'I am not a politician — I am a minister of religion — a minister involved in issues that cannot be divorced from politics.' " He confirmed he had met with Nelson Mandela but was "not willing to say whether this discussion prompted his resignation."

CITIZEN on Brain Drain

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English for 29 April says in an editorial on page 8 that "there is a growing executive-middle management-professional brain drain from South Africa" composed of people who are convinced that South Africa is " 'finished.' " It is no good berating them for "black unrest has reached a peak of savagery which has stunned the country." "Yet saner counsel asks: Is this country really finished?" The government is genuinely on the road of reform but it must "end the violence that is tearing South Africa apart and give the country a better perception of where it is going and where it will be in, say, five years." "When confidence is restored, those who are afraid will stay to play their part in the brave new South Africa that is developing."

NP Denies Newspaper Report

Brian Stuart reports on page 8 that the National Party has described as " 'utter hogwash' " a SUNDAY STAR report that there is a move within the party to kick out some of its more liberal members of parliament. A Nationalist MP asked THE CITIZEN how any journalist could believe that a party committed to reform would evict from membership those members committed to reform. Chris Rencken, National Party chief of information, told THE CITIZEN that " 'this story is so farfetched that it hardly warrants comment.' " Members of other political parties, in off-the-record conversations, also dismissed the report.

Editorial on 'Mixed Signals'

Public opinion abroad is confused by the mixed signals emanating from the Botha government, the Cape Town CAPE TIMES in English says in an editorial on page 8. "On the one hand, there is the admirable decision to scrap the pass laws. On the same day, however, a bill is published giving the minister of law and order permanent emergency powers to proclaim certain areas as unrest areas where sweeping police powers will be applicable by proclamation." "The good impression of one measure is wiped out by the other." Many blue-chip American companies have already pulled out of South Africa, the editorial notes, and many more are reviewing their positions. "Perceptions in America and elsewhere would change rapidly for the better if negotiation with representative blacks was seen to be getting underway, leading to a new non-racial constitution and paliamentary rights for all. What is needed is for negotiations to replace violence and counter violence as the central theme of South African politics."

SOWETAN on Police Role in Violence

The Johannesburg SOWETAN in English for 29 April comments on page 4 that "now that it is becoming clear that some policemen, even unoffically, have been involved in revenge attacks on communities, the Government should take action as this is leading to the breakdown of law and order." When communities believe members of the security forces "apply law an order selectively, this leads to anarchy." "We are loathe to criticise the police," the editorial says, "for even if we might not agree with them all the time, we believe, to be effective, they need our support." However, the thinking, rightly or wrongly, "is that the police only react when one of their members or somebody supportive of the government is hit. That selective justice, if it is true, has led to the present cycle of violence."

Labor Disputes

Claire Pickard-Cambridge reports on pages 1 and 2 aof Johannesburg BUSINESS DAY in English on 29 April that wage talks in the metal industry broke down when 3 of the 15 unions participating in the talks walked out of a meeting in protest over an offer by the Steel and Engineering Industries Federation of South Africa. Pickard-Cambridge also notes that 259 workers at Foschini stores are staging a legal strike, according to a company spokesman while a spokesman for the Commercial Catering and Allied Workers Union claimed that almost all of the company's 5,000 employees were on strike. The strike was called over the retrenchment of workers.

UCASA To Seek Overseas Loan

"The Urban Councils Association of SA (UCASA) is to apeal overseas for a loan of R500 for the upgrading of black townships," Thelma Tuch reports on page 2. UCASA president Steve Kgame "said appalling conditions faced the blacks in townships" and criticized the government for "pumping money into the homelands instead of providing money for debt-ridden councils."

'Economic Siege' To Continue

"South Africans will remain under economic siege this year, says the latest issue of Economic Prospects of the Bureau for Economic Research (BER)," John Tilston reports on page 3. Consumer spending is expected to drop by 1 percent and spending on durable goods is expected to fall by 9.4 percent this year. "The personal savings ratio (personal savings as percentage of disposable income) should fall to 3.7 percent in the last quarter from the first quarter's 6.9 percent" and "fixed investment should continue in the doldrums."

Black Tax Returns 'Normal'

"GST [General Sales Tax] returns from black traders were normal, Inland Revenue's chief director Schalk Albertyn told BUSINESS DAY in Pretoria yesterday," Gerald Reilly and Chris Cairncross report on the same page. Albertyn said that unrest in the townships "had not caused any dramatic decrase in general sales tax payments." He also denied "millions of rands were being lost because inspectors were being prevented from entering townships."

SATS Unions Protest

"The Department of Transport is turning SA Transport Services [SATS] into a second-rate organization with an uncertain future, Federation of SATS Trade Unions chairman Jimmy Zurich said last night," Gerald Reilly reports on page 5. "He said that while the federation accepted that personnel at SATS had to be cut by 50,000 they never expected that workers would be forced to retire or that personnel would be cut by a further 25,000 people." Zurich also dismissed the recently announced 10 percent pay raise for SATS employees as a " 'hand-out.' "

Dairybelle Interdict

"An order interdicting striking Dairybelle workers from intimidating and assaulting other employees, destroying property, interfering with deliveries or preventing entry to and exit from the company's premises in Midrand has been confirmed in the Pretoria Supreme Court," the paper reports on the same page.

BUSINESS DAY Editorial

"The evidence accumulates week by week that economic recovery is likely to be painfully slow and, probably, much delayed. To say that confidence is lacking is to state the obvious; to hope that the international climate will improve before the internal political climate is to indulge in self-deception," BUSINESS DAY says in an editorial on page 6. The "tepid" reaction to the abolition of influx control shows that "there is little the government can realistically be expected to do to bring the crisis to an end." "Yet there is a kind of bitter consolation to be found in the fact that the country, willy-nilly, is adjusting to the reality from which the white ruling class has tried for a generation to hide As the more bizarre aspects of apartheid are peeled away, we come closer and closer to the core problem: the management of the country as a whole has for most of this century been simply inappropriate." The government has "squandered capital resources," "protected fat and lazy industries," and "imported skills when we might has trained our own people." "For most South Africans, even most whites, emigration is not a realistic possibility. So, sooner or later, the country will have to recover its nerve, learn to cut its cloth, and find the ingenuity to make innovative solutionss."

RAPPORT on Urbanization

Johannesburg RAPPORT in Afrikaans on 27 April says in an editorial on page 10 that "those who reagrd the scrapping of influx control as the biggest step to reform this decade have reason to believe this." The end of influx control is one thing, but what follows, the handling of the complex urbanization process, is another matter. It is one of the greatest challenges, not only for the government and private enterprise but for the people as well. The purposefulness, motives, and common sense with which urbanization is to be tackled is not only in the interest of blacks but of the country as well.

DIE TRANSVALER on White Radicals

Pretoria DIE TRANSVALER in Afrikaans on 28 April says in an editorial on page 16 that "the ugly face of white radicalism at its most brutal has emerged at a National Party meeting in Brits." On the one hand it is good that the scandalous rightist action was revealed in public. But on the other hand it is regrettable that white politics has sunk to such a low level and sad that such action was perpetrated in the name of Afrikanerdom. "We regret that manner in which black radicals are forcing those in authority to silence, and we equally reject those white radicals." Concluding, it says the question which unavoidably comes up is: "Why do these people want to shout down the message of the National Party?"

BEELD on Friendship With Africa

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 29 April says in an editorial on page 8 that "Swaziland's coronation ceremony was an object lesson for South Africa as well of how white South Africans, despite everything, can reach out to Africa." President Botha has shown that it is not impossible to offer the hand of friendship to Africa. If it was destined that white and black in South Africa should live in continued conflict, then President Botha would have had difficulty communicating with African leaders. The answer to the South African problem lies in black and white attitudes. Concluding, it says: "If we overlook the Swaziland lesson regarding attitudes in South Africa, then everyone should ask himself the question if he is not really his own biggest enemy."

Editorial on New Youth Group

BEELD says in another editorial on page 8 that "young people have a significant role to play in building anew South Africa." Therefore, the establishment of a multiracial organization such as Jeugkrag South Africa [Youth Power South Africa] is being welcomed as a necessity in the present transitional period in South Africa. The establishement of Jeugkrag South Arica comes at a time when the energy of misguided youth under the wing of the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [Afrikaner Resistance Movement] is being directed in a misplaced manner. Jeugkrag South Africa should be afforded an opportunity of showing the youth of all races that they can contribute constructively without having to burn, murder, or fight.

Postponement of Arab Summit

The Arab foreign minister's failure to set a date, venue, and agenda for a summit conference is a "terrible failure" which expresses the Arab states' inability to confront the United States, Tripoli radio asserted 2 May. The Libyan comment followed Rabat radio's announcement the previous evening that the foreign ministers would attempt to fix the date and agenda for a summit at another meeting in Morocco after Ramadan, which ends 8 June. A communique broadcast by the radio said the decision was made after it became clear that subjects for the summit agenda are in need of "more study, close examination, preparation, consultation, and exchange of views."

Iran-Iraq War

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq 'Aziz denied reports attributed to the UN secretary general that Iraq and Iran have agreed to begin direct negotiations to end the war, according to Amman radio. The Iraqi denial, which has not thus far been mentioned by monitored Iraqi sources, followed a Rabat radio report on the UN secretary general's announcement that Iran and Iraq have "provisionally accepted" an eight-point agenda for direct negotiations though they have failed to agree on cease-fire arrangements.

As for the military situation, military communiques cited by IRNA reported further Iranian air strikes on Iraqi positions in the Faqqeh region, inside Iran's Khuzestan Province. Iraqi planes raided Iranian oil-pumping stations at Ahvaz, according to a communique broadcast by Voice of the Masses radio. Regarding the situation in the Al-Faw area, Iraq's VII Army Corps commander asserted at a news conference reported by INA that his troops "completely destroyed" an Iranian offensive west of Al-Mamlahah 28-29 April.

In the Gulf, an unidentified aircraft fired missiles at a Saudi tanker 1 May, killing the captain and two sailors, and injuring six others, according to an official source in Abu Dhabi cited by WAM.

Bahrain-Qatar Dispute

Saudi King Fahd has succeeded in containing the Bahraini-Qatari maritime border dispute in a way that "preserves the interests of the two fraternal countries as a first step," a Saudi spokesman disclosed in an official statement transmitted by SPA. He said the Kingdom will also seek to establish a joint agreement between the two countries covering other disputed issues.

Iranian Delegation's Tour

A joint statement at the end of the Iranian delegation's visit to Libya warned the United States that Libya, Iran, and the "Islamic masses" will resist any "new aggression" against the Jamahiriyah. The statement, which was carried by JANA, also urged European countries to cancel their "aggressive measures" against Libya, rejected accusations of Libyan and Iranian involvement in terrorism, and urged Muslims worldwide to "kindle their jihad fervor" to confront the "10th crusade" being led by the United States.

The Iranian delegation held talks with President Hafiz al-Asad and other Syrian officials in Damascus 1 May, IRNA noted.

Syrian Internal Differences

The clandestine Radio Free Lebanon reported that Major General 'Ali Haydar is under house arrest following his "open criticism" of Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam's policy on Lebanon. The radio spoke of "tension and rebellion" in the special units which Haydar commands.

Southern Lebanon

The army of southern Lebanon (ASL) commander has ordered a reinforcement of ASL positions on the border of Israel's security zone following a "large terrorist attack" on an ASL position 1 May, Jerusalem radio reported. IDF radio noted that three ASL soldiers were kidnapped, five were wounded, and one terrorist was killed in the attack, which occurred in the southwestern Al-Biqa' area. The Islamic Resistance claimed credit for attacking ASL positions in the area in a statement cited by Beirut radio.

PLO

A PLO delegation headed by Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat informed FLN officials in Algiers of the PLO Executive Committee's "unanimous" agreement to the Algerian president's proposal for a "comprehensive dialogue" among all Palestinian revolution factions at a conference aimed at "closing the Palestinian ranks," Algiers radio reported.

Egypt

Dr 'Umar 'Abd al-Rahman is one of 56 members of an "extremist Muslim group" who were arrested in connection with the attempt to "storm" a mosque in Aswan 29 April, MENA reported. Al-Rahman, who was described by MENA as a professor at the Foundations of Islam College in Asyut, has been arrested on several previous occasions because of his links with Muslim fundamentalist groups.

Afghanistan

DRA Revolutionary Council President Babrak Karmal returned home 1 May after medical check-ups in the Soviet Union, Kabul radio reported, adding that Karmal was welcomed at Kabul Airport by PDPA and Soviet officials.

Emergency Arab Summit Conference Postponed

JN011937 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1929 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Fes, 1 May (INA) — The Arab foreign ministers have decided to postpone the emergency Arab summit until after the blessed 'Id al-Fitr. They agreed the summit should be preceded by a meeting of the Arab foreign ministers to prepare an agenda and fix a date for the summit. The Libyan and Syrian foreign ministers expressed reservations over the decision.

Ministers To Meet After Ramadan

LD012139 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 2027 GMT 1 May 86

[Unscheduled announcement: apparent final statement of the Arab foreign ministers conference in Rabat 30 April-1 May — monitored in progress]

[Text] [The Arab foreign ministers] met on 30 April and 1 May 1986 to prepare the agenda of the emergency Arab summit. Following the discussions, which were conducted in an atmosphere of frankness and brotherhood, and after reviewing [words indistinct] and the challenges currently confronting the Arab nation, it was determined that these subjects are still in need of further study, close examination, consultation, and the preparation and exchange of views. Therefore, the foreign ministers have decided [passage indistinct] The upcoming Arab foreign ministers conference will be held after the month of Ramadan [Ramadan is 11 May — 8 June this year] on the territory of the Kingdom of Morocco.

Communique: 'More Study' Needed

LD012357 Rabat Domestic Service in Arabic 2300 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpt] The Arab countries' foreign ministers have decided, at the end of their work this evening in Fes, to hold their next conference in the Kingdom of Morocco after the holy month of Ramadan. The Arab League secretary general will fix the date of the conference after consultations with the member countries to arrange the agenda and fix the date for the Arab summit. This was stated in the final communique of the conference after 2 days of meetings. Following is the text of the communique:

The Arab countries' foreign ministers held a meeting in Fes 30 April-1 May 1986 to prepare the agenda for the emergency Arab summit. After the discussions which were carried out in an atmosphere of frankness and fraternity and after reviewing all of the dangers and challenges facing the Arab nation at the present circumstances, it became clear that these subjects are in need of more study, close examination, preparation, consultation and exchange of views. Therefore the foreign ministers have decided to hold another meeting in the Kingdom of Morocco, the date of which will be fixed by the secretary general in consultation with the member countries to lay down the agenda and fix the date for the Arab summit conference.

Iraq Asks League To Rethink Libya, Syria Membership

LD021338 Rabat MAP in English 1233 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] London, May 2 (MAP) — Iraq has officially requested the Arab League to reexamine the membership of Libya and Syria in the Arab organization, revealed here the news bulletin of the Iraqi Embassy in London. The news bulletin quoted Iraqi Deputy Premier and Foreign Affairs Minister Tariq 'Aziz as saying in a statement to the Iraqi daily Al-THAWRAH that "this question has become urgent and any delay might contribute to the split of the Arab League".

"In backing Iran in its occupation of the Iraqi territory, the two regimes have violated in a blatant manner the charter of the Arab League and the Arab treaty of common defense", Mr. 'Aziz said.

On the other hand, Libya and Iran Thursday [1 May] cautioned Europe to "cancel the aggressive measures taken against Libya" otherwise "it will have to support the consequences, which will also affect the whole of the industrailized world".

In a press release after the visit of the Iranian delegation to Tripoli, published by the Jamahiriyah news agency JANA, the two countries affirm their solidarity and warn the United States and the European countries against the consequences of the new tension created by America, Europe and the Zionist enemy against Islam and the Moslems

PLO Executive Committee Meets in Baghdad

JN011006 Baghdad INA in Arabic 0920 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Baghdad, 1 May (INA) — The PLO Executive Committee met here late last night under Chairman Yasir 'Arafat. The Executive Committee reviewed during its meeting the latest developments of the Arab state of affairs and developments in the Palestinian arena. The executive committee also discussed the convocation of the proposed Arab summit and the need for this summit to discuss all current Arab issues and the means for confronting the perils of the aggression against the Arab homeland.

'Text' of Statement

JN011747 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic 1640 GMT 1 May 86

["Text" of statement issued by PLO Central Council at conclusion of meetings in Baghdad on 1 May 1986]

[Text] Meetings of the PLO Central Council were held in Baghdad 29-30 April 1986 under the chairmanship of PNC Speaker Shaykh 'Abd al-Hamid al-Sa'ih and in the presence of Brother Yasir 'Arafat, PLO Executive Committee chairman and commander in chief of the Palestinian Revolution Forces. At the beginning of its meetings, the Council heard the 4-hour report by the brother chairman of the PLO Executive Committee. In it he reviewed the situation in the Palestinian arena and the Arab and the international situation and their reflection on the Palestine question. Following discussion and debate, the Council expressed its full support for the Executive Committee statement issued on 7 March 1986 which contains the PLO stand on all current topics mentioned in the statement.

The Council also affirmed the PLO stand on Security Council Resolution 242 which was declared by various PNC sessions and which affirmed adherence to the Palestinian people's inalienable national rights, foremost of which are their right to return, their right to self-determination, and their to establish their independent state on their national soil, with Jerusalem as its capital.

The Council held a lengthy discussion on U.S.-Zionist designs aimed at striking at the Palestinian people's unity and attempts to attack Palestinian legitimacy, represented by the PLO, with the aim of imposing capitulatory settlements and separate deals. The Council entrusted the Executive Committee with the task of following up this serious subject and adopting the necessary and appropriate measures to confront these issues. The Council calls on our Palestinian masses inside and outside the occupied homeland and the Arab masses to firmly and decisively confront these new aggressive designs.

The Council hails our Palestinian people's heroic and magnificent resistance against the abhorent Zionist occupation, which has confirmed its power and effectiveness following the glorious escalation of armed struggle. The Council affirms the importance of continuing this struggle using all means.

The PLO Central Council, which is proud of our Palestinian masses' steadfastness, heroic struggle and their rallying around the PLO and its legitimate leadership, calls on all factions to respond immediately to President Chadli Bendjedid's initiative so as to reinforce Palestinian national unity in order to confront the new hostile designs. The Council entrusts the PLO Executive Committee and the Council chairmanship to follow up this issue with the Algerian brothers in order to make this important initiative succeed.

The PLO Central Council strongly condemns the organized U.S.-Israeli terrorism against the Arab nation in general, and against the Palestinian people in particular, which is represented by the continuing repressive Israeli practices against our Palestinian and Arab people who are under Zionist occupation, the settlement policy, the confiscation of land, the attacks on liberties, the attempts to alter geographic and demographic characteristics, the descration of holy places, the obliteration of the Palestinian identity, the attacks against Palestinian refugee camps and the PLO headquarters in Tunis, the barbaric, aggressive U.S. raids on Libyan cities and the fraternal Libyan people, the U.S.-Israeli threats to launch new aggressive attacks against other Arab countries, and the U.S. and Israeli air piracy against Egyptian and Libyan planes.

The PLO Central Council hails the fraternal Lebanese mmasses and their national and Islamic forces which are valiantly confronting the partitioning conspiracy and confronting and resisting the Israeli aggression against Lebanese territory and which support our kinfolk in the Palestinian refugee camps against the Israeli aggression and its agents. The Council also hails the magnificent resistance by the Lebanese and Palestinian masses against Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon. The Council affirms its firm support for Lebanon's Arabism, its unity and the unity of its people and institutions, its stability, security, and sovereignty.

The PLO Central Council reviewed the Iraq-Iran war and its adverse impact on the Arab and Islamic nations and on the Palestine question in particular. It affirmed the need to exert all efforts to end this war peacefully. In this regard, the Council praises fraternal Iraq's stand which calls for ending this destructive war and hails the officers and fighters of the valiant Iraqi Army who are bravely defending the eastern flank of the Arab nation.

The PLO Central Council regards the aggressions directed against the Arab nation as related links of the same chain aimed at subjugating the Arab nation and imposing capitulation on it. It regards the latest Israeli-U.S. escalation as a serious threat and declares that Arab efforts must be united to confront it. Therefore, the PLO Central Council seriously calls for abandoning Arab differences and convening an Arab summit to confront these challenges and adopt the necessary measures to face the new danger.

The PLO Central Council reviewed the PLO's international relations following the visits by official Palestinian delegations to friendly countries and their participation in international conference and meetings. The Council held a lengthy review of the important meetings in Berlin between PLO Executive Committee Chairman 'Arafat and CPSU General Secretary Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev and GDR Chairman Erich Honecker and the important topics discussed during these meetings. The PLO Central Council praised the principled Soviet stands in supporting the Palestinian people and their sole legitimate representative, the PLO, in their just, legitimate struggle to achieve their legitimate rights and establish their independent state in accordance with international legitimacy and resolutions.

The PLO Central Council appreciates the stands of the friendly PRC and the stands of other socialist countries. The PLO Central Council hails the stands of Islamic, African, and nonaligned countries in supporting the Palestine question and the Palestinian people's just struggle. This support and backing represent strong pillars of our people's struggle.

The PLO Central Council affirms that the only way to acheive a peaceful, just, and permanent settlement in the Middle East is to recognize the Palestinian people's inalienable national rights and convene an effective international conference under UN auspicies in which all permanent members of the Security Council and all sides to conflict, including the PLO, will participate on an equal basis.

The PLO Central Council condemns the U.S.-Israeli role which hampers the implementation of international resolutions on the Palestine question and which paralyzes the international will to establish just and permanent peace in the Middle East.

As it concludes this session of meetings in Baghdad, the PLO Central Council extends gratitude, greetings, and appreciation to militant President Saddam Husayn for Iraq's great support for the PLO at a time when Iraq is waging its great battle on behalf of the Arab nation. The PLO Central Council extends its greetings and appreciation to our heroic Palestinian people under occupation and in the diaspora and urges them to intensify their struggle to confront and defeat the imperialist and Zionist conspiracies.

Long live the unity of our people inside and outside the occupied land. Long live the struggle of our militant masses. Glory and immortality to our pure martyrs. Revolution until victory!

U.S. PLO Envoy on Move To Close Information Office

LD020902 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0719 GMT 2 May 86

["Margo Nahhul Dispatch" — KUNA byline]

[Text] Washington, 2 May (KUNA) — Hasan 'Abd al-Rahman, PLO representative in the United States, last night [as received] issued a strong warning about moves in the United States to close the PLO's Information Office and to bring to trial any person connected with it, even if only a sympathizer.

'Abd al-Rahman told a press conference here that Congress, the U.S. Administration and Jewish organizations have launched an intensive campaign "to strip the PLO of its legitimate character and to deprive its institutions and staff of such legitimacy, and consequently to deal with it as a terroristic organization in the United States." He called for a discussion of this campaign and an explanation of its dimensions at the forthcoming Arab summit confernence. He said he acquainted the Council of Arab Ambassadors in Washington with the dimensions of this question during its meeting last Tuesday [29 April].

'Abd al-Rahman told KUNA that the campaign has been in existence a long time but "this is the first time it has acquired such concentration and intensity." He pointed out that while in the past statements were made attacking the PLO in the United States, there are now attempts to bestow a character of legitimacy and legality on such attacks.

"Abd al-Rahman said that during a Senate Judicial Committee meeting on 23 April, numerous discussions took place on the issue of "the combat of terrorism." Some participants in the debate called for the promulgation of laws under which the PLO could be described as a "terrorist organization," and consequently create pretexts to close down the Palestinian Information Office in Washington and terminate the PLO's mission to the United Nations in New York.

He warned against the attempts taking place in this regard which involve the possibility of asking him to appear before the courts in his capacity as a representative of a "terrorist" organization. The same would apply to the rest of the staff of the Palestine Information office.

He said that the discussions at the Senate Judicial Committee revealed the existence of a tendency for calling for investigation into the political activities of those working in the United States for Arab causes, and in particular the Palestine question.

Joint Forces Attack Israeli, Lahd Forces

JN011859 Baghdad Voice of PLO in Arabic
1715 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Palestinian-National Lebanese Joint Forces attacked a Zionist military patrol in the occupied border strip at dawn today. A statement by the Joint Forces said that its men used automatic weapons in a clash with Zionist soldiers. Three Zionist soldiers were wounded. A Zionist military source admitted the attack and the wounding of three members of the patrols.

The joint forces fired mortar shells at a Zionist-agent position in southern Lebanon yesterday. Enemy artillery shelled two towns in the area.

The joint forces fired mortar shells at a position belonging to the occupation forces and Antoine Lahd's agent militias in Al-Luwayzah in Al-Rayhan yesterday morning. A communique by the joint forces said that the position sustained direct hits and that enemy ambulances were seen rushing to the scene of the attack and quickly leaving for the Marj 'Uyun hospital in the occupied border zone. Following the attack, Zionist forces and agent militias shelled 'Arab Salim and Hawmin al-Fawqah in Iqlim al-Tuffah using tanks and 155mm field artillery.

The occupation forces' artillery positioned in Tallat al-Sujjad and Jabal Safi in the Jazzin area yesterday shelled Jarju' west of Al-Luwayzah, wounding 15 citizens and causing grave damage to houses and property.

[Text] A military spokesman for the General Command of the Palestinian Revolutionary Forces stated the following:

Our heroes of the Martyr George Khalid Abu Hadid group operating inside the occupied homeland planted a remote-controlled explosive charge in front of an enemy intelligence center in the center of Tel Aviv. The charge exploded at 0900 on 29 April, setting the center on fire. All contents were burned. A number of the enemy intelligence personnel were injured and a number of cars parked near the center were destroyed.

Our revolutionaries from the Martyr Abu Muhammad (Idayh) group operating inside the occupied homeland on the evening of 29 April attacked an enemy soldier patrolling in northern city of Acre. He sustained fatal injuries. His side arm was confiscated. The group eluded capture successfully according to plan. Immediately the enemy forces closed all roads leading to the city of Acre and arrested tens of Palestinian citizens allegedly connected with the operation.

The military spokesman for the Palestinian Revolutionary Forces also stated the following:

At 2250 on 29 April, a Zionist Border Guard patrol tried to confront the Martyr Bassam Shahrur group operating inside the occupied homeland while on its way to carry out combat operations assigned to it in [name indistinct] District in Tel Aviv. The group attacked the patrol vehicle with hand grenades and injured a number of its members. The group left the area safely. Immediately a large force of the Zionist security personnel and policemen extensively combed the area searching for our revolutionaries after closing the district for more than 7 hours.

Oil Minister on Status of Iraqi Gas Pipeline

GF011708 Manama WAKH in English 1600 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Kuwait, 1 May (WAKH) — Kuwaiti Oil and Industry Minister 'Ali al-Khalifah al-Sabah said in a press statement today that final measures for the Iraqi gas pipeline project will be implemented soon.

In a statement to the Kuwaiti daily AL-SIYASAH, Shaykh 'Ali said that the first stage of the gas pipeline project will be under way next May. He added that the initial load capacity of the pipeline will reach 200 million square feet per day.

The Kuwaiti National Assembly endorsed an agreement on the supply of Iraqi natural gas to Kuwait and the Kuwaiti Santa Fe Brown Company was assigned consultancy work on the project.

Kuwait and Iraq have signed an agreement in Baghdad on November last year, according to which 400 million square feet of Iraqi natural gas will be transported daily to Kuwait.

PDRY

YSP Secretary General's May Day Address

GF020830 Aden Domestic Service in Arabic 0557 GMT 1 May 86

[Speech by 'Ali Salim al-Bayd, YSP Central Committee secretary general, on the occasion of 1 May Labor Day celebration — live]

[Excerpts] This year the centennial celebrations of the international day of the working class in our country have great importance and vitality, particularly as they come after the foiling of one of the most serious plots to which the power of the workers and peasants in the PDRY have been subjected — the bloody 13 January conspiracy planned by the conspirator 'Ali Nasir Muhammad and his clique designed to strike at the YSP and turn it into a nominal facade to void the power of the toilers of its class and progressive content, and to lacerate the people's national unity by organizing brutal massacres, which included the revolution's historical leaders and the founders of the YSP, and numerous experienced cadres. Nonetheless, our party, the YSP, emerged from this conspiracy, stronger and tougher, by virtue of the deep-rooted revolutionary, national, and class traditions in the consciousness and life of our party's struggle and our country's toilers. These traditions were deepened and consolidated in various stages of our people's glorious national history and through various stages of the birth and development of our Yemeni revolutionary movement, and its organized vanguard, the YSP — the party of the working class and the toilers.

Comrades, our celebrations of the international day of the working class should be a new incentive for us to continue our struggle to implement the party's class policy, remove the traces of the 13 January bloody plot, and strengthen efforts along the road of socialism. In this direction, the issue of achieving the people's national unity and healing wounds takes priority in the great efforts our party and people are making to remove the traces of this vile plot. The general amnesty decree embodies a national and humanitarian meaning for these efforts. A great number of the misled have returned to their families and (?homes). A great number of detainees have also been released. A high committee has been formed to implement the general amnesty decree.

Out of our confidence in our brothers and out of our national responsibility toward our people and country, we renew our welcome to the return of all who were misled by the plotters and who were included in the general amnesty decree so that they can contribute toward the active efforts to reconstruct the homeland. Comrade, the next stage will witness incessant and ceaseless efforts by all party members and masses to realize the tasks defined by the party.

Comrades, by celebrating the international day of the working class, we embody our loyalty and sincerity toward national, pan-Arab, and international causes for which the Yemeni working class is fighting. Our recent national history has bright examples of the struggle by the Yemeni working class for the victory of our national, pan-Arab, and international causes. It continues its struggle along this path by allying itself with all toilers.

Reachieving national unity of the Yemeni land and people on peaceful and democratic bases and strengthening the struggle cohesion with all Arab and international revolutionary forces is to receive the utmost attention in the struggle of our Yemeni working class on all national, pan-Arab and international levels. Along this path, we will continue joint efforts with our brother leaders of the northern part of the homeland to strengthen peaceful unity efforts to achieve the great goal of our people — reestablishing the unity of the Yemeni homeland through peaceful and democratic means by making efforts to improve all unity achievements accomplished in the Yemeni arena since the signing of the 1979 Kuwaiti agreement and the following agreements and unity successes.

We are determined to continue serious efforts with our brother leaders of the national part of the homeland to achieve more concrete unity and measures to establish more bases for political coordination, economic integration, and trade exchanges, and to facilitate communications and transport and the movement of citizens between the two parts of the homeland and remove all obstacles and difficulties obstructing this.

In this connection, we will continue our struggle in the service of the just causes of our Arab people, foremost being the cause of the Arab Palestinian people and their legitimate struggle, led by their sole and legitimate representative, the PLO, to achieve their right to return to their homeland, to self-determination, and to establish their independent state.

Considering the critical and serious current situation in the Arab arena, we emphasize the need to mobilize all Arab efforts and energies and employ them to rise to the level of the conspiratorial designs and aggressive challenges against our Arab people by forces of the imperialist-Zionist alliance which are aggravating [words indistinct] and taking various forms of aggression, the most recent of which was the U.S. armed aggression against Libya. Our country has expressed its condemnation of this aggression and expressed support for Libya [words indistinct]. We believe that the current circumstances still require a decisive Arab stand toward the imperialist military presence in the Arab region. This presence is considered part of the strategy of aggression by imperialist forces designed to impose hegemony on the Arab region, control the destiny and resources of the Arab people, and disavow our just rights and causes.

Comrades, the struggle of our party and people, the Arab people, and all factions of the Arab revolutionary movement is closely linked to the struggle by the international revolutionary movement to achieve victory for the causes of the world's socialism and freedom and preserve and strengthen world peace.

Along this road, we will continue to strengthen and develop our struggle alliance with all forces of the world's revolutionary movement which oppose world imperialism. The foremost of these forces is the USSR and the socialist bloc countries. We seize this glorious occasion to applaud the great and eminent role the USSR plays on the international level to support the legitimate causes of all world peoples and countries which struggle against the policies of neo-colonialism and conspiratorial and aggressive designs by world imperialism. We would also like to praise the great contribution the USSR makes toward curbing the aggressive tendencies of imperialist circles and averting for humanity the threat of the militarization of space and a devastating nuclear war.

Chairman on Arab Summit, Relations with GCC

GF011740 Manama WAKH in English 1545 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Manama, 1 May (WAKH) — South Yemeni President Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas said his country was keen to establish good relations with GCC states.

In interviews with Bahraini daily AKHBAR AL-KHALIJ and UAE daily AL-ITTIHAD published today, President al-'Attas described the visit to the Gulf states by S. Yemeni Foreign Minister Dr 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Dali as positive.

"The Gulf states understand the situation in my country and expressed readiness to help in reconstruction that was destroyed in last January's events," he said.

President al-'Attas disclosed that S. Yemen suffered $120 million as the result of the January battles.

On S. Yemen's response to the call for holding the emergency Arab summit to discuss the U.S. raid on Libya, he said "we agreed on holding the summit ... [elipses as received] but we do not want the summit to come out without positive results."

He said his country wants the summit to focus on the U.S. aggression on Libya because there are many issues and many Arab differences and there are other fields to discuss these issues. [sentence as received]

Al-'Attas denied any skirmishes at the borders with North Yemen.

"Our relations with brothers in North Yemen are good and they understand the situation and will not allow the superpowers of former President 'Ali Nasir Muhammad to work against South Yemen," he added.

'Kidnapped' Foreigners Reportedly Safe in Doha

NC012147 Paris AFP in English 2132 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Manama, May 1 (AFP) — The 30 [as received] employees of a Dutch firm kidnapped Saturday by Qatar in a Gulf islet dispute with Bahrain are "in good health and well treated," a Dutch Government envoy told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE Thursday.

Cornelius Van Hese, consul at the Dutch Embassy in Kuwait, said he had met Thursday with the only Dutch member of the crew lifted off the construction site on the Fasht al-Dibal islet.

He added that the British ambassador to Qatar, Julian Walker, was able to meet the two British crew members on Thursday. All three Europeans were allowed to speak to their wives living in Bahrain, diplomatic sources said.

A total of 25 Filipinos and two Thais were also kidnapped on the islet.

"I think all of them will be freed soon," Mr. Van Hese said, without disclosing where he had met them. A spokesman for the Bahrain-based Dutch construction company, Ballast Nedam, said the crew members were being housed in hotels in Doha, the Qatar capital.

The members of the construction team were building a Bahraini defence post on the islet when they were lifted off by four Qatar Army helicopters. Mr. Van Hese said they were not hurt during the operation.

The Qatari Army then landed on the islet, which is located some 20 kilometers (12.5 miles) east of Bahrain and north of Qatar, and apparently reinforced its positions there. Qatar stated Wednesday night it had reaffirmed "its sovereignty" on the islet.

The 10-square kilometer (four square miles) islet is part of zones disputed between the two countries. These include the larger island of Hawar.

Tehran Alleges Crown Prince Shoots Defense Minister

GF021458 Tehran International Service in Arabic 1445 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] French press reports have revealed that Saudi Defense and Aviation Minister Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz was the target of an assassination attempt inside the royal court early last week and that he is now being treated at a special hospital 25 km from Geneva, Switzerland, as he had sustained injuries.

The Paris weekly (?OUI AFRIE), citing reports from Riyadh, says that it was Prince 'Abdallah, commander of the National Guard, brother of King Fahd, and Saudi crown prince, who carried out the attempt. The weekly says that the Saudi Government had officially announced that Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz was admitted to a very luxurious clinic in Switzerland for treatment from extreme obesity. According to the reports, clinic workers said that they do not know the reasons the Saudi prince was admitted to the clinic.

The Paris weekly notes that shooting and assassination attempts among members of the Saudi family is usual and is not new in view of the rivalry and internal opposition to the ruling family in that country.

King Fahd Reportedly Contains Bahrain-Qatar Dispute

GF011942 Riyadh SPA in Arabic 1855 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Riyadh, 1 May (SPA) — An official source in the Kingdom made the following statement to SPA:

Out of the constructive role played by the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia to bring closer the views of the brothers — in accordance with the official authorization which the Kingdom's government accepted from the governments of the two fraternal states of Qatar and Bahrain to bring about a suitable solution to the maritime border issue between them — and owing to the recent events which have resulted in an intensification of the atmosphere between the brothers in the two countries, His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz has exerted intensive and unstinting efforts and good offices to contain the transient differences through cordial and desirable methods.

With God's help and due to the appreciated and positive response of his brothers the ruler of Qatar, His Highness Shaykh Khalifah ibn Hamad Al Thani, and the ruler of Bahrain, His Highness Shaykh 'Isa ibn Salman Al Khalifah, His Majesty King Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz succeeded in containing this dispute in such a way that preserves the interests of the two fraternal countries as a first step.

As for other issues, the completion of which requires some time due to their procedural nature, the Kingdom will continue to endeavor to establish the bases for a desired joint agreement which is in the interest of everybody.

The spokesman concluded his statement by saying that while the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia expresses its deep appreciation for the genuine Arab positive spirit demonstrated by the brothers in the states of Qatar and Bahrain, it expresses thanks and gratitude for the efforts exerted by the brother leaders of the GCC countries in this direction. May the good will proceed, God willing, toward attaining that which is hoped for.

Appeals Issued to Qatar, Bahrain To End Dispute

GF020518 Dubayy Domestic Service in Arabic 0500 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] The UAE has appealed to fraternal Bahrain and Qatar to resolve the dispute between them by making the supreme Arab interest rise above it and by referring to principles of fraternity and good neighborliness.

An official source has made a statement to WAM. He said: The UAE has followed with concern the developments which took place between the two fraternal countries a few days ago. The source added: The bonds linking fraternal Qatar and Bahrain are far stronger than any justification for a dispute or misunderstanding.

In conclusion, the source expressed the UAE's confidence in the wisdom of officials in the two countries and in their eagerness to make all possible efforts to avoid what could lead to a crisis between them and to make efforts to end the dispute which only benefits the enemy, who is laying in wait for the Arab nation.

President Mubarak Delivers May Day Address

NC011316 Cairo Domestic Service in Arabic
0937 GMT 1 May 86

[Address delivered by Egyptian President Muhammad Husni Mubarak at a celebration held at the Institute of Social Labor in Shubra al-Khaymah on the occasion of May Day — live]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful and compassionate. Before delivering my speech, I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate all of our brothers on the approach of the great blessed month of Ramadan; Many happy returns. I also take the opportunity to congratulate our Christian brothers on their [Easter] holiday, which begins next week, and to offer them many happy returns, as well. [applause]

Dear brothers and sisters, good workers of Egypt: Our noble people celebrated their great day of victory a few days ago. It was on this day that our people achieved their most glorious victories and greatest accomplishments in a splendid epic of struggle in which every Egyptian, male and female, participated. You were in the forefront, preparing for the great historic crossing. You stood with your brothers, the valiant sons of the armed forces, [applause] in the trenches, setting up the barricades and fortifications. In the meantime, you also turned the wheels of production and comprised a solid domestic front upon which our armed forces relied when dealing the crushing blow with which they reversed the balance of power in the region and changed the course of history. Thus, you were partners in the achievement of a clear victory. [applause]

You again led the ranks in the battle for peace, which was no less ferocious and important than those of war. Egypt was able, through you, to face all challenges with an iron will and to prepare its requirements, in terms of human and energy resources, for each successive stage. You realized from the very beginning that construction is the most important step toward liberation. The liberation of our land and return of our independence cannot be rendered visible, tangible facts, that ensure our present and future needs unless each generation works to translate them into farms, workshops, factories, and centers for developed services that are capable of changing the way of life in the pure land of Egypt, driving it torward the threshhold of the 21st century and securing the benefits of the contemporary technological revolution.

Today we are celebrating Labor Day, which embodies the most noble human values, honored by God's laws and entrenched by the prophets and the traditions of the first caliphs. These laws and traditions placed work on the same level as worship of the Almighty Creator and defined it as the means of proving man's worthiness to undertake his mission and duty in the temporal world and to build civilization.

We have promised to turn our meeting on this day each year into an occasion for frank and sincere discussion. This promise reflects my devotion to Egypt and my faith that you will continue to constitute our strikeforce in the battles for development and reconstruction, holding the keys to the future in your good hands.

The first element of the dialogue is the great question which must be on the minds of us all: Where are we now and where are we going in terms of the questions affecting the homeland? Here we find that the major issue occupying our serious attention is that of production. It is the core of work and development at this decisive point in our lives. We do not want our talk of increased production to be nothing more than a repetitious discourse that loses its substance and value from overrepetition.

I have promised both you and the people to report the facts frankly and to disclose everything openly. We do not work in the dark and will never do so. The road of work will always be that of light and of honest strugglers.

I tell you honestly and without any bias or reserve that Egypt is proud of its labor force at home and abroad. [applause] Throughout all the grave events we have faced, Egyptian workers have shown themselves to be loyal men and vivid symbols of commitment to national issues. This commitment subsumes faith, strength, and positive work marked by honesty and devotion.

The country has witnessed grave events on many occasions. Egypt has passed through dangerous and decisive hours several times, during which our manhood, patriotism, and character as Egyptians were tested. Egyptian workers never faltered. Their conscience and creed were unshaken, and their hearts remained strong. None of them resorted to the sin of taking advantage of an opportunity for excessive gain. They always proved, and this is testimony before history, that they are equal to the highest level of responsibility. It is with patriotism that they view the preservation of Egypt's security, safety, and stability as a supreme duty which all, regardless of creed or idea, must perform.

During the recent riots, which were the work of a minority, we saw how Egypt's heroic laborers were the watchful eyes that protected factories and public property and kept the wheel of production turning without letup or interruption. They even doubled their output in several instances while the curfew was in force. History will undoubtedly record the stands taken by this faithful group of Egypt's sons. It is testimony to the deep consciousness of Egypt's working class which, by protecting the factories and tools of production, defends its own gains, rights, and basic interests. Thanks to you, o brothers and sons, from the bottom of our hearts. [applause]

All who fought in the immortal October war know the great sacrifices made by Egyptian workers, who accepted self-sacrifice and martyrdom. Much of the equipment used by the Armed Forces in the great crossing [of the Suez Canal] was manufactured by Egyptian workers. Before, during, and after the war, the output of Egyptian factories was the safety valve for all the needs of the domestic front and all the requirements of the battlefront. This is the real status of Egyptian workers. They are the ramparts of the fortress, and are first in courage and daring. They are like the good son of a united family. [applause] I say this in recognition of right for those who deserve it. No one denies the positive role that Egyptian workers have played and continue to play throughout the Arab world in terms of construction and development.

Brothers and Sisters; Following this greeting, I return to the great question we asked earlier: Where do we now stand with regard to national issues and where are we going?

Briefly speaking, I say that we are facing a decisive year of construction. We are waging a difficult and bitter battle because of a shortfall in foreign revenues for reasons beyond our control. We are required not only to offset this deficit but also to make broader strides in the economic and social development plan. This means that investment in production and services must be expanded.

In essence, workers' day is a day for human work. Human work means producing material things as well as spiritual values that give quality to life. This is the key to civilization and progress for individuals and nations.

Civilization and progress would have no meaning or future in any society if they were only the province of a limited group in society. Attempts to monopolize them can be thwarted only by the exercise of freedom, by intellectual creativity, and by ensuring justice in a stable and secure society.

In the 19th century, Rifa'ah al-Tahtawi, the leader of our modern cultural renaissance, counselled us to make the homeland a place for general happiness by building it on freedom, intellect, and factories. Al-Tahtawi's advice still shines with wisdom and truth. Nevertheless, from my position of responsibility and commitment, I wish to add social justice to freedom, intellect, and factories [applause] in building the homeland in the eighties.

Social justice does not simply mean that we must observe good conduct or call on all to be generous and pious; it primarily means making a sociopolitical choice about the kind of foundations on which a democratic system and a productive society should be established.

It is abhorrent for an individual to build his happiness on the misery of others or on the misfortune of the community; the social order would be threatened and the homeland destabilized if citizens were unable to enjoy the fruit of their labor and sweat; if differences in living conditions were to widen and give rise to hate among the people. This situation can no longer be acceptable in any society in our contemporary world irrespective of the society's system, because such a situation would prevent the marshalling of enormous human resources to produce and make progress, and to continue the process of development and advancement. Such a situation would also greatly narrow the role of society in national issues and kill the hope of every citizen to develop his potential, to attain self-realization, and to improve his standard of living through legitimate work, commitment to responsibility, and affiliation to the homeland. This would eventually bring about adventurism and engender individual and collective violence.

Therefore, social justice is important on the grounds that it is morally, politically, socially, and economically necessary. It is an imperative factor to ensure the continuation of democracy, development, and progress and achieve security for both the nation and the citizenry. It is our destiny to wage a hard battle and traverse a difficult path to build and to achieve social justice. We do not want our society to be divided into two classes: an affluent class that has much more than it needs and that lives unaffected by others' worries and pains, and a poor class, which constitutes the majority, that cannot make ends meet and that feels that the other class has divorced itself from its worries and pains.

Our society welcomes those who work, earn money, and possess a surplus as long as they honestly honor their obligations to the state, as long as they create work opportunities for honest workers, and as long as they produce for their country whatever it takes to realize its goals. We encourage these citizens and offer them the prospects of expansion in work and production and we wish them more progress. However, we would also like every family in Egypt to have a decent standard of living.

This can be achieved through a collective belief in the integration and cohesiveness of sons belonging to the same society. In this way we can work to ensure that the life of every citizen will meet the basic standards. No isolation or separation should exist between a financially capable group and one which does not have such resources. There is a safety valve and a source of security for this large single family; namely, the achievement of social justice. Without this kind of justice, balances will be upset, ties will be loosened, conflicts will arise, and hatreds will grow. A penetrating look at the essence of social justice shows that we must encourage the capable and care for and protect those who are not capable. No class can have ascendancy over another. There can be no distinction between one citizen and another except for the efforts which he makes to enrich society and the fruits these efforts provide for all. The democracy in our lives allows us to think, to debate, and to choose the best and most correct course of action to achieve social justice based on clear and sound logic. The heavenly messages urge us to take the correct course. Toward this end, the state is shouldering huge burdens to provide food, education, health, transport and communications, energy, housing, and so forth.The recent economic decisions we have made seek to achieve this. We were careful to take into consideration that such decisions should not affect the incomes of the poor. Yes, we have taken this into consideration very accurately. As you have noticed, a number of lengthy meetings have been held. Every decision was studied in detail and from every angle in order to ensure that it would not affect the incomes of the poor. We thank God that these decisions have been unanimously supported.

On this occasion, I would like to praise the great efforts made by the ministerial council during the past months, both with regard to decisions on economic reform and confronting an increasing deficit in the monetary budget and on the formulation of next year's general budget and the preparation of the second 5-year development plan. This would not have been achieved had we not agreed on the correct priorities.

Our greatest issue, then, is production that will achieve an increase in resources, as well as an increase in services and social justice. This in turn will allow us to realize the philosophy of integration and cohesiveness among sons belonging to the same society and to guarantee the continuation of stability and social peace. It was no easy task to decide that economic and social development should be made within the context of precise planning that will successfully and justly exploit available resources in a way that compensates for much of what has been lost and achieves fair distribution. To discern the facts, we must look back at the world and local economic conditions which existed prior to the first 5-year plan. Oil prices were high, and interest on loans rose. The price of finished products imported by developing countries also rose. At the same time, the price of raw materials exported by developing countries dropped. The only exception was oil. This created a drop in the world's development rate. The debts of developing countries reached $109 billion in 1977. Six years later, in 1983, this debt rose to $810 billion. The interest on the developing countries' debts and installments, which was $16 billion in 1977, rose to $100 billion in 1983. [all figures as heard]

This was the situation which existed in the world and from which all developing countries suffered. Some industrial countries, where the rate of unemployment had risen to frightening figures, were also affected.

What was our internal situation like? In 1971, we imported 1.7 million tons of foodstuffs at $185 million. This figure jumped to 7.4 million tons at a cost of $1.9 billion in 1981. The volume of foreign debts, which was $1.4 billion in 1971, rose to $18.6 billion in 1982; that is, a ninefold increase. The overall deficit reached approximately 6 billion pounds in 1981, while the net defict was 2.2 billion pounds. This was coupled with a weakness in resources: Electricity, trained manpower, construction, land reclamation, the opening of roads, and the building of factories.

Therefore, the mainstays of the first development plan rested on five objectives:

1. Achieving growth rates in agriculture, industry, and energy higher than that of the increase in population.

2. Employing idle resources and conserving existing ones.

3. Increasing exports, rationalizing imports, and correcting our borrowing policy.

4. Completing unfinished projects and replacing and refurbishing old machinery.

5. Attracting investment.

Our achievements here should be a source of pride. Rates of production have increased. Investment in the public and private sectors reached 20.8 billion pounds. The net budget deficit was trimmed from 2.2 to 1.3 billion pounds. The balance of payments deficit also fell.

Yes, these are praiseworthy accomplishments. I do not want to burden you with too many figures, but I will give you some examples:

As far as the sewerage system is concerned, most of the services are in a state of semi-collapse. I think the brother governors and ministers are present and can hear me. There is no end to their demands. Naturally, we began to see these priorities as part of the plan. A total of 9575 million pounds have been spent thus far on sewerage and water projects in the development year ending in June of next year. I do not want to give you any details, as these sewerage projects have not been completed. This figure does not mean that the sewerage and water projects have been completed. They are still being implemented under the current plan and will be included in the coming one as well. There are sewerage plans for Cairo, Alexandria, Ismailia, and other cities. Our brothers the governors know about them.

Transport and communications: From the time that telephones were introduced in Egypt until the beginning of the plan, we had 540,000 lines. That was all. I think you know what the condition of our telephones was. You could not talk with another person over the telephone in Cairo. You had to take a car in order to speak with someone or convey a message. Foreign investors used to go to Beirut, make a telephone call from there, and then return to Cairo. A total of 710,000 lines were added during the 5-year development plan. This is one and a half times more than we had since telephones were introduced in Egypt. This is in addition to the improvement of cables and communications.

The entire Sinai is now covered by a telephone network that allows you to call any country in the world. Before the plan, only eight Egyptian towns were connected by an automatic dialing system. Sometimes it was even difficult to make a phone call. Now we can reach 92 countries directly. The number of telex machines rose from 3,200 to 8,600. There would have been no foreign investment or projects if we had failed to repair these services. A total of 890 million pounds were spent in these areas in 4 years.

Railroads were also expanded, with a total of 1,200 million pounds expended in 4 years. Our railroads were a shambles. The rolling stock and engines were overhauled, and the lines were renovated. A tremendous amount of work was done in this field.

More than 4,200 km of new roads were paved, and many more must still be opened. We have many demands before us, but this depends on our capabilities and the availability of loans, both foreign and local. We face a long march, and have another 5-year development plan in front of us. However, we work on the basis of priorities.

And now we come to housing. Some 778,000 homes were built in the 20 years before the plan. I speak clearly and on the basis of documents. In the 20 years before the plan, 778,000 housing units were put up. This means 39,000 units a year.

In 4 years, that is, from the beginning of the plan until 30 June, 675,000 units have been built at an annual rate of 168,000 housing units. We still have a pressing housing shortage. I tell you that we alone cannot end this crisis in 1 or 2 years. Around 185,000 units are scheduled to be built during the 5th year of the plan. We have spent 6.5 billion pounds on this. The figures are in the thousands and hundreds of millions.

Electricity: If we had not paid interest on the services I have mentioned, then no factory would have operated, no investor would have come, no cities would have been built, and no projects would have been set up on this land. God only knows what our situation would have been. Our electricity production from 1905 until 1981 reached 18.4 billion kilowatts per hour; that is, from the day electricity was introduced to Egypt until 1981. In these 76 years, the overall investment was 1,374,000,000 pounds; this was in 76 years and not in 76 months or 76 days. Our electricity production will increase from 18.4 billion to 37 billion kilowatts per hour by the end of the plan in July, with an overall investment of 2,825,000,000 pounds. This takes care of the electricity sector.

Agriculture and land reclamation: During the 4 years of the plan 1,619,000,000 pounds were spent. The goal in the 5th year is 656 million pounds. Thus the overall investment we are making in agriculture and land reclamation during the 5-year plan is 2,275,000,000 pounds.

I want to remind you of something so that we can know what our situation is. How much our income is. How much our expenditure is. What our situation will be next year. This is so that all of us may know things as they stand and so that no one will say that the president is painting a grey or black picture. No. We must all know and understand our situation. We must know. You must know as I do. [cheers] God willing. There is no cause for despair. This is an incentive for us to do more, to be more united, to preserve our country, to increase production, and to work hard.

The estimated budget for 1987 is 12,728,000,000 pounds. This is the projected income. I would rather not say how much the income tax is. The expenditures are 12,535,000,000 pounds. There will be a surplus of 193 million pounds. Mr President, how about a bonus? No, wait. What bonus? [laughter] We have local commitments, bank loan installments. These expenditures do not include a single cent for construction, development, roads, telephones — nothing at all. These expenditures include approximately 3.9 billion for wages and 1 billion for wage subsidies; that is, 5 billion; 1,746,000,000 pounds in commodity subsidies; 4,119,000,000 for all state service organization expenditures; and 1,849,000,000 for interests on loans which we take out for the needs of our telephones and railways. We make these loans abroad so as to develop our services, to develop our country. Debt is no shame. The entire world obtains loans but what is important is to be able to pay our debts. Our income is spent on, let us see, five articles. What is left is 183 million [figure as heard]. There are the installments for domestic bank loans. There are deficits in organizations; some companies continue to operate at a loss. There are cases such as the railway which we have to subsidize. There are many things. Naturally, 183 million will not be enough. I do not want to go into this any further. I only want to tell you: This is our situation and our income. We are going to have a huge deficit in hard currency this year. We use the hard currency we get from oil, tourism, and from some Egyptians, to bring in food and production equipment. You must know that we will be facing one of the most difficult years. We must cope.

We will try as much as possible to meet the basic needs of the people but everyone must cooperate. We have a shortfall of $1.2 billion from oil. Some say that the state failed to anticipate it, but no one in the world expected the price of oil to drop from $28 to $9. A drop of $1 costs us $70 million. That is, when the price of oil drops from 28 to 27, we lose 70 million, and we lose 700 million when it drops by $10. We were able to overcome the difficulty last year because it was a matter of only 4, 5, or 6 months. But from the beginning of this year, if the price remains as it is, it will be one of the most difficult years. We will overcome it but we must keep production up. This is necessary; otherwise, we will lag behind. The matter is not difficult but we must cope until we pass this phase. God willing, the hope is great and may God grant us success in this. [applause]

From all this I conclude the following facts: The achievements of the first 4 years represent 82 percent of the objectives set forth in the general plan. This means that by the end of this year we will have achieved 82 percent of the plan's objectives. This is very good.

What has been accomplished during the 4-year period ending on 30 July is equivalent to 86 percent of what was achieved during the 20-year period from 1960 to 1979 prior to this plan. A comparison will prove the extent of the work accomplished during these 4 years: 86 percent of what was achieved from 1960 to 1979!

I believe this to be a great achievement. The housing investments provided for in the plan are approximately 4.6 billion pounds. During the last 4 years, 3.7 billion pounds have been spent. An additional 1.2 billion pounds has been targeted for expenditure this year. By the end of the fifth year, what is being spent on potable water and sewage will be almost four times the amount spent during the 20 years preceding the plan. This is just to show you what our services were like. We cannot skimp. We must establish complete and long-lasting systems for the generations to come.

Another example concerns education. The number of classes which were established during the first 4 years totaled 10,600. This is the equivalent of 30 to 35 classes per day.

The facts pertaining to the industrial sector in general are as follows: For the 1982-1986 period, the plan allotted a sum of 6,369,000,000 pounds for industrial investment. This included the establishment of new plants and the renewal of existing ones. In this area, 1,726,000,000 pounds are needed for investments in the fifth year of the plan.

Compared with the preceding year, the average production development in the industrial sector increased by 20 percent in 1984. In 1983, it amounted to 5,395,000,000; in 1984 it was 6,448,000,000 pounds.

The profits realized by 83 companies have been valued at 363.9 million pounds, while the losses incurred by 34 companies reached a total of 141.5 million pounds. It is estimated that the number of companies working at a loss will decrease to 20 during the current 1985-1986 year. The losses themselves are expected to decrease from 141 million pounds to 85 million pounds.

Regarding workers and wages, the number of workers in industrial companies reached 600,000 during the 1984-1985 year period. Their wages increased from 1,091,000,000 pounds in 1983-1984 to 1,275,000,000 pounds in 1984-1985. This is an increase of 184 million pounds, or 17 percent. Wages are expected to increase by 20 percent during the 1985-1986 period. The average annual wages of the industrial worker increased from 1,794 pounds in 1983-84 to 2,118 pounds in 1984-85. This is an increase of approximately 324 pounds, or 18 percent.

Brothers and sisters, these are all good steps forward and along the right track. However, are these steps enough? I tell you clearly, and I believe that you will agree with me, that they are not enough. Why? The average profit made by public sector companies does not exceed 4.5 percent. We are not saying that we should pull down the public sector. No, we should improve it. The price of loans has reached 12 percent. An end must be put to the existence of companies in the public sector which are working at a loss, regardless of the causes for this loss. The reasons for this are clear. They are represented in lower profits as compared with expenditure, the fact that 50 percent of raw material is imported, an increase in the percentage of write-offs due to a rise in the prices of machinery [as heard], and loans and the interest paid on them.

I fully appreciate the efforts which have been made during the past 4 years. However, we want to eliminate loss for good. Our aim is not to reduce loss but to achieve profit, a profit which is commensurate with production output stimulated by conditions of quick growth.

We have two choices before us: Either we creep or we leap. I believe that we only have one choice, and that is to leap with the longest jumps and with the maximum human effort. We can no longer accept repetitious talk about improving administration and freeing it of restrictions. The talk must turn into great and decisive deeds. There is no room for accepting any excuses. The responsibility for this rests squarely on everyone: Those in administration, workers, and technicians.

We want firm and long-term solutions. For example, we must take the stage of manufacturing machines by storm with good planning and to the extent that our capabilities will allow. Our limited experiments in certain factories have been crowned with success. Why don't we proceed along this path? Through discipline and serious endeavor, we must create the maximum output possible during working hours. I do not want to indulge in a discourse about leave time and high rates of absenteeism. I leave such matters to your conscience and to your awareness of national responsibility.

With total resolve and insistence, we must seek to achieve perfection in quality and workmanship. By doing so, we not only respect the right of the consumer but we will also be opening wider scope for export competition. If the worker or the manager does not feel perfection in production to be a reflection of his dignity more than his duty, then we will not achieve the desired goals. I do not think that Egyptian workers, technicians, and managers are unable to achieve this objective. They have proved their distinction and proficiency when they work abroad, attaining marvelous achievements by their efforts.

The demands made by life and high prices require that they be balanced by an increase in income. Here, we have a solution before us: More output means greater profit and greater profit means higher wages. Therefore, let workers, managers, and technicians cooperate, and let the competitors compete. [applause]

There are some facts which I would like to submit to you so that they will be in our minds while we put our house in order. Wages in the government and the public sector have more than doubled in 5 years. This is due to an increase in the number of workers, an increase in the number of job opportunities available as a result of the population growth, and an increase in the wage average. We need to create 400,000 new jobs annually.

The number of workers in the government sector has reached 3.1 million people. This figure cannot be increased without creating grave dangers to the national economy.

Our only answer is to increase productivity, both quantitatively and qualitatively, and to achieve more profit. It will then be possible to increase the wages of workers and enable them to face rising prices.

If we now turn from public sector investments and discuss private sector investments in industry, then we will see that we must increase the available facilities and open several closed doors. There are still great prospects for private investment in Egypt. This fact is proved by absolute figures and confirmed by the Egyptian market's need for more goods manufactured in Egypt by the hands of Egyptian workers.

The number of applications for investments in new towns reached a total of 425 during the first 3 months of this year. Approval has been given for the establishment of 208 projects costing 227 million pounds. It is estimated that these projects will create jobs for about 10,000 employees or workers. This is a practical indication of a growing confidence in Egypt, something which we hope will increase daily.

Perhaps it is opportune to refer in particular to the huge prospects available for investment in the tourism and industry sectors. The state has cut down on the procedures necessary to discuss investment projects in fields which benefit the Egyptian economy.

We visited several areas in liberated Sinai a few days ago and saw for ourselves the opportunities available for the proliferation of medium and small industries and for the establishment of tourist projects all along the Egyptian shores of the Mediterranean and Red Seas. We can benefit from the unique amenities which these areas offer to visitors, whether they be local citizens or foreigners.

Brothers and sisters, the specter of a fearsome growth in population threatens us every year. The population is expected to increase by a minimum 7 million people at the end of the next 5-year plan; that is, by June 1992. The existing communities cannot possibly absorb more than 2 to 3 million people. The new communities, therefore, will have to absorb 4 to 5 million people. In essence, this means that we will need 20 new communities each of which must absorb between 200,000 and 250,000 people. Such communities cannot begin as cities. We must start by relying on different development projects undertaken in accordance with the needs of a particular location. This necessitates a horizontal expansion in agriculture alonside the current vertical expansion which is being achieved at an astonishing rate. It also requires increased housing and the establishment of an infrastructure such as roads, ports, communications, electricity, sewers, and drinking water. You can appreciate the magnitude of this burden and its challenge.

We must provide food, clothing, housing, health care, education, and then work for every newborn child. Can the state alone bear all these burdens? The answer is no. [shouts of God is great; may you live for us, o Mubarak]

Can the various departments of the state succeed in family planning alone without the full cooperation of the citizens and without a complete awareness of the enormity and seriousness of the problem we are facing? I say again that the answer is no. Personal efforts and individual initiative are indispensable if we are fully convinced of the goals of social cohesiveness and justice.

The truth is that during my recent visits to certain provinces, I did indeed notice a great awareness and realization of the importance of the people's cooperation with the government in providing basic services and in raising their standard.

For example, I visited the Al-Daqahliyah, Al-Sharqiyah, and Dumyat Governorates. [Mubarak is interrupted by a question from someone in the audience] Yes, I will visit Sawhaj, God willing, and Port Sa'id as well. Then you will be able to see what is imported and what is produced locally. [laughter] I went to Dumyat and to Al-Daqahliyah. I saw the new communities and the productive families there. I saw what the villages are doing, villages which are so active that they seem to be private factories. What they are producing is in the public interest. In Dumyat I saw...[Mubarak changes thought] The natives there are obese. [laughter]

We have a problem. For example, dialysis machines are expensive and the state cannot provide them to every area. In the city of Damietta, people collected money and bought six such machines, bringing the total there to nine. They then distributed these machines to hospitals. They did not ask for anything from the government. Whoever can contribute must do so. Whoever is capable of cooperating must do so. Personal efforts must be made to help the state, for the state means all of us. Such efforts will see us through difficult times in the field of development.

[Words indistinct] every family goes to the pharmacy to buy a box of aspirin. When factories reduce the number of (Vistal) pills in the box, people complain. Does this matter so much? Are you going to use all the pills? Of course not, because you are going to throw the rest away.

However, the brothers in Damietta go around and collect all the surplus medicines in their homes. They volunteer to contribute all this surplus medicine to those that need it instead of throwing it away. They note the date of expiry so that this medicine can be given to the needy to use. I salute all personal efforts made in this field. [applause]

I was pleased with that. No one can imagine how happy I was when I saw this in Damietta and when I saw other such examples in Al-Daqahliyah and in Al-Sharqiyah. I wish that these efforts would spread to the other state governorates. These are the personal efforts with which we can help each other. This is the inter-reliance we want so as not to have a society with hatred, tension, violence, and the like. This spirit should exist in all the governorates. Each governorate must benefit from the experiences of others in accordance with its circumstances. Those financially able should realize that they are strengthening society's security and safety by sharing their services with all. The richest capitalist countries depend on their own efforts to build institutions and universities — not the socialist countries. No. The capitalist countries cooperate and take action. They build universities, schools, institutes, and engage in various other activities. I always shy away from making comparisons with the major countries because their circumstances are different from those of the developing countries. But in the self-help area, we must look to these countries, which are extremely rich with natural and industrial resources. Despite the immense income from production activities, individuals and private companies in these countries contribute and give to society because they see in this help protection for the entire society. There can be no happiness at the expense of the misery of others. Gluttony is fatal if at the expense of empty stomachs. [applause]

In socialist societies, he who does not work does not eat even when he reaches a ripe old age. In capitalist societies, there are many areas with poverty, disease, and slums. But, various groups in society are always there to work persistently to help those not financially able. Though the ills of individualism have prevailed in materialistic societies, we, in Egypt, live in a human society that believes in family ties and the inter-reliance of generations.

I will give an example but I do not want you to think I am making excuses. No. I have met many people and officials from very rich capitalist countries. I do not want to mention the names of these countries or of those people who told me, but these are facts and they were senior officials. I was telling one person about a reduction in our poverty level and that we are a developing country. He replied by saying: Mr President, if you think you have poor people, then come to our big industrial country and see the poverty in this European country. Come and see our poverty. We have terrible poverty. There are Egyptians who have travelled to European countries — I do not want to give their names — and saw people searching for food in garbage cans. This is not to excuse us. No. What I am saying is that the rich countries have this kind of poverty. But we must work. We have principles and values that make the difference. We must help each other and there must be inter-reliance. The financially able must help those who are not, so that the process may go on.

Brothers and sisters. Let no one misinterpret my words. [cheers] Be careful if someone tells you: The president is moving to the left or... [Mubarak pauses] No. No. No. [applause] I am telling you frankly — and those who like headlines — I am one Egyptian citizen looking out for the interest of the helpless Egyptian citizen. [applause]. No one should ask me: What kind of economy is it? Leftist or rightist? Our economy is middle-of-the-road and in our own interest. I take from here and I take from there. It is an Egyptian economy. Our circumstances differ from those of others. [cheers]

Brothers and Sisters, because I speak of justice and inter-reliance, they will say: Aha, he is moving left; he is moving right. [cheers]

Brothers and sisters, while our population increase at such a frightening rate is one of the difficult challenges facing us, we are also faced with a large number of other challenges, and at a time when we are on the threshhold of our second 5-year plan. We are confronted by the challenge of food. We import 5 to 6 million tons of wheat per annum, which amounts to 5 percent of the world's wheat surplus. While our population does not exceed 1 percent of the world population, we consume 5 percent of the surplus. Though our population is increasing, we will never be able to find more than the 5 percent of the world surplus that we now bring in. Therefore, we will have to manage somehow. How can we manage? How can we handle this deficit if our agricultural land has increased by only a million feddans from 1909 to 1986? From 1909 — before you were all born — to 1986, our agricultural land has increased by only 1 million feddans, giving us 6 million feddans in all. Meanwhile, our population during the same period grew from 9 million to 50 million.

We are also facing the challenge of dealing with the decrease in the price of oil. A $1.00 drop in the price of a barrel of oil means a decline in our income of $70 million.

We are confronted with the challenge of maintaining our development growth rate at a level of 7.8 percent; this must be done. And this means that we are in need of 50 billion pounds for the second 5-year plan, which begins in July 1987, God willing. Investment in the first 5-year plan amounted to 35 billion pounds. Electricity production alone requires investments of $4 billion at current prices.

We are facing the challenge of prices versus incomes. Actual government employees currently comprise some 3.2 million, while there are 1.6 million additional workers in the public sector, giving us 4.8 million in all. If the average family comprises 5 to 6 persons, this means that over 24 million citizens depend upon the government and other public sector facilities for their incomes.

We must face all of these challenges at the same time, in a way that prevents an adverse impact on development efforts in the various domains and does not require that we resort to loans from abroad. In other words, we must do so by depending upon ourselves, finding new sources of production, limiting overconsumption, and putting a stop to losses of all kinds.

I call upon the ministries concerned, as well as the universities and specialized research centers, to draft a plan of action for a broad national project that would seek to achieve a tangible increase of no less than half a million feddans of agricultural land in the next 5 years. This means half a million feddans, at the very least. If we could come up with 1 million feddans, it would be a great achievement. We have no alternative but to work in this direction, seeking to approach self-sufficiency in essential crops. This horizontal expansion in agricultural production should accompany the vertical increase that has been achieved in the last few years. This project must be given priority, and obstacles must be eliminated. Land has to be reclaimed, so let's find a solution.

I would prefer that the state not bear the burden of implementing this project alone. The role of the relevant executive bodies should be limited to the provision of the basic infrastructure, such as roads, irrigation and drainage equipment, and electricity. If there are good private institutions that can contribute, so much the better. The land will then be offered to private companies and cooperatives that are capable of reclaiming and cultivating additional land, placing it in the service of the people.

I do not want to see anything similar to the groups on the northern coast, where each person had reserved something for a tourist project. As a result, nothing has happened since 1974. Each person is sitting on his land, leaving it undeveloped. When will it be developed? Will it be developed only after 100 years have passed? No one knows how to build a tourist project, and so no one wants to do anything. There is land and there is water. In contrast, the foreign ministry has developed a project there. The ministry has provided electricity, water, all of the necessary resources and services. It has brought companies in for that purpose. I believe that they use the land for some portion of the year and then rent it to the people. They bring tourists in, etc. This is a self-operating process.

There is also land in the Nile valley, some 250,000 feddans of acreage in all. It has been given to small farmers, after being reclaimed and prepared for cultivation. I agreed to give them possession, which will be done in the next 3 months. We hope that this will lead to more production and work, for the sake of Egypt.

The Egyptian people struggled prior to the 1950's for liberation and independence. During the fifties, we began our struggle for social justice, which continues today. In the seventies and early eighties our struggle was for democracy. As of today, let us struggle for true economic liberation; let us struggle to provide food through our will, our hands, our sweat, our resolute determination, and our unwavering, overflowing national enthusiasm. [applause]

Our young people are pinning all of their resources and hopes on the new land. Citizens who are returning from abroad with deep feelings and yearnings for the good earth are seeking to build in the desert, to turn sand into green farms and gardens that revive hope in their souls. Those who want to invest are turning to the new land with all of their ambitions and expertise.

The sons of Egypt, who crushed the rocks, built the high dam, and diverted the flow of the great river, will find no difficulty at all, adding hundreds of thousands of feddans to their homeland in a few years, creating new societies and bringing prosperity to every family in this noble homeland.

We all know that true freedom means not to be threatened by a shortage of food. True democracy is that which changes the lives of people for the better, providing them freedom from the pressures of livelihood. We have no more room for traditional solutions. Bold action is our only course; there is no other way. The race against time is our destiny. We must confront and challenge. While saying that there is no time to be lost, we must also say, as of today, that there is no land to be lost. The people need every grain of wheat we plant; and only our sweat will produce that grain of wheat. [applause]

So then, a brief reply to the question I posed, which was: Where are we now and where are we going? The answer is that we are capable of securing victory, if we truly wish to do so. We must not simply start on the road today; we must walk its entire length. Our achievements of the past 4 years are the best herald of our coming achievements, which require that we redouble our efforts and make up for lost time, regardless of obstacles. This is the great awakening in the most splendid sense of the word.

Brothers and sisters, I have drawn a realistic picture of our internal situation for you, and have given you a practical view of the steps that must be taken in working toward a new dawn. They are steps that are filled with hope and that can be achieved through action. I have presented you a bright picture of an experience that is unique among the developing countries, which have shown great interest in following up on its development and success, amid the bitter challenges that confront all of us in the developing world.

Before moving from our domestic policy to our foreign policy, I'd like to make two observations. I ask our brothers who are journalists to be precise in presenting their facts. We are in a stage in which we cannot afford to play with fire. We must all unite; all Egyptians must unite. For example, when we heard about the subway project — and I experienced this myself, as vice president — a great number of articles were written, saying that we were delaying the project. An article would come out every day, to the point where I said to myself that this project must be a very good idea, indeed. But then as soon as the subway was built, they all said: Oh, it wasn't properly studied; it has not been properly planned; it was not the right time for it; why did they build it?

Later, various articles expressed the view that all of this talk of land reclamation and horizontal expansion is ridiculous, and simply means throwing money out the window. But the truth is, we should expand horizontally. I would answer: Let the agricultural experts have their say; we have many of them in our country. Our population is constantly increasing; are we going to pile our people one on top of the other? If things were so simple, we wouldn't be in such a quandary.

There have even been a great number of articles on the subject of garages, the multilevel parking garages. What are you waiting for, they asked, there is no longer any room to park. Then the garages were built, and up came a man who said: These garages were completely unnecessary. They've added 66 million pounds to the state debt. When I went to inaugurate the garages, I asked: How much did we pay for these garages in Al-'Atabah and ...[Mubarak changes thought], and they answered: 11.7 million pounds. They also pointed out that the office areas adjoining them have already been leased for I don't know how many years at a price of 22 million pounds. This is pure gain, over and above the cost of the garages. There is a good deal of such criticism. Still, how am I to satisfy all of these demands? Where am I to obtain the necessary resources for all of these projects? Do I have a magic wand? You know very well how much money we have.

I beg of you, do not play these games. Ours are a simple people; we must give them correct information. No one is seeking personal gain, neither myself for anyone else. Should we start tearing at each other's clothes? In the final analysis, it is our people who must pay the price for our personal squabbles.

There is one more subject to which I'd like to refer. I'm not defending anyone. I just want to stress certain facts. The late president Jamal 'Abd al-Nasir is deceased and is now a part of history. President Anwar al-Sadat, too, is deceased and is a part of history. No one now living can judge either of these leaders. Some of us were harmed, others benefited. Let us leave the judgement of these leaders to future generations. Theirs will be a fairer assessment.

I will move on to another point, and again I hope that no one will assume that I am trying to defend anything. I want to talk about Al-Ma'murah. I just want to mention some facts, nothing more. Some say that the Al-Ma'murah hamlet [haram] is 400 feddans. I will tell you the exact figures on the basis of documents. The entire area of Al-Ma'murah, including the town and the land, is 607 feddans. The town alone stretches across 229 feddans. This is based on documents, and not on my own calculations. Behind this land, where the rest houses of former presidents were located, there is an area of 53 feddans planted with fruit trees. To speak the truth, I would like to tell you that some people came to me after the death of President al-Sadat and asked me for five or six feddans. They wanted to uproot the trees in order to cultivate the land. They wanted to buy it from the Finance Ministry. I rejected the idea of uprooting even a single tree. Do we want to uproot trees in order to build a second town? I say that I will not allow a tree to be chopped down or agricultural land to be destroyed for any reason.

The rest of the land in this area consists of 57 feddans where the Agriculture Ministry has an experimental station. The 53 feddans behind the wall, which they call the hamlet, is a garden. The Agriculture Ministry is responsible for selling the produce from this garden which is worth 50,000 pounds. The remaining 238 feddans have been leased by the land reclamation authority to 85 families in Al-Ma'murah village. They live off this land. They produce vegetables which they also send to Alexandria. The 25 to 30 remaining feddans encompass the rest houses, the administrative offices, and so forth. I am just mentioning these figures so no one will say that some people have taken 400 or 500 feddans. This is just to establish the facts and not in defense of anything.

On this occasion, I want to ask the government to do something. I want the government to promptly discuss and develop the work system at the general investment authority and the free zones so that approvals will not take more than a week. I want the goverment to review the work of the import rationalization committees to provide clear guidelines as to what can and cannot be imported. The requirements of production should be taken off the rationalization lists so that the operation will keep rolling along. I want these things to be done as soon as possible. I want the government to revamp the work at the customs authority, because, as I see it, there are many problems in the customs authority. We want flexibility by easing and simplifying procedures and ending the controversy about fixing the prices of imported goods as a basis for customs.

Regarding land reclamation, a new office for land reclamation investment should be established so that the investor can secure the necessary approvals from this office within 1 week. If we want to cultivate more than half a million feddans, then we must facilitate this process as much as possible. Investors should no longer have to contact this or that person and to be told to come tomorrow or the day after. If this is going to be the case, nothing will be done, this country will not find food to eat, and in a matter of years we will reach an unfavorable situation.

I want the government to consolidate the 11 property taxation laws and find a solution. There should be a single, simple, and clear law. I ask the government to do these things as soon as possible. Decisions should be made on these things before 30 June. [applause] We now move to foreign policy. I am not going to keep you long; say, for another 2 hours. [applause, laughter] We predicate our relations with all international forces, regardless of their creeds and political and economic policies, upon the same clear foundations. These foundations do not change or vacillate, because they derive from principles reflecting our pride in our freedom and dignity. Furthermore, these foundations also derive from our concept of the factors which are necessary to the defense of our vital interests and strategic security.

As do all other developing countries, we believe that the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars on arms every year lacks ethical or practical justification. Such expenditures are taking place at a time when the Third World countries need every cent to ensure their supply of food; build needed schools, factories and hospitals; and protect themselves from the dangers of drought and famine. It suffices to recall that the developing countries' debts amounted to $1 trillion [figure as heard] at the end of last year. Experts estimate that 60 percent of these debts need to be rescheduled or that additional grace periods should be extended, so that they may be repaid in subsequent years.

The developing countries will have many opportunities to discuss these problems this year, during the 22d African summit on 28 July in Addis Ababa and the nonaligned summit conference on 28 August in Harari. The nonaligned summit will coincide with the 25th anniversary of the Nonaligned Movement, which plays an active international role in serving peace, freedom, and progress and in opposing colonialism, exploitation and backwardness.

As we are eager to defend peace throughout the world, and particularly in our region, we call for sincere and honest work to effect a peaceful resolution of the problems that are menacing security and stability. In this context, we can mention the Iraq-Iran war, which is still raging despite its denunciation by the international community. It behooves all of us to take practical steps to contribute toward bringing this destructive war to an end. We should not submit to despair, frustration, and impotence simply because one of the two sides insists on continuing the war, in an effort to achieve objectives that we neither accept nor understand.

We must also focus our attention on the Palestinian problem. We cannot allow this problem to be frozen or dropped from the international community's concerns, regardless of excuses. We believe that a just settlement of this problem is a necessary key to peace and stability in the region.

We also reject arguments declaring that it is impossible for the Arabs to achieve an agreement among themselves on the basic components of an acceptable solution to the problem. Therefore, we are in constant contact on this issue with our Arab brothers, who are directly concerned with the peace process.

I call upon the United States and Israel to recognize the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and to eliminate this obstacle on the road to peace, particularly as the PLO and Jordan have now agreed on a formula by which to guide their future relations. [applause]

This step, particularly if taken by Israel, would constitute unequivocal evidence of its good intentions and sincere desire to reach a historic and comprehensive peace [musalahah] with the Arabs. Such a peace would eliminate the vestiges and afflictions of the past.

Neither can we ignore the issue of South Africa and the need for the international community to bring firm and coordinated pressure to bear on the racist regime in Pretoria, persuading it to respect the rights of the majority, who own the land and have right on their side; to stop its attempts to obstruct Namibia's independence; and to cease its aggression against the confrontation states, which are playing their national role in supporting the fraternal African people's struggle for freedom, independence, and dignity. [applause]

Meanwhile, we believe that it is possible for the international community to achieve an adequate formula for resolving the issue of Afghanistan and the dispute over Cambodia, for these two issues throw dark shadows on the situation in Asia and relations among the combatant forces through the entire world.

Dear brothers, in my speech before the European Council's parliamentary committee in Strasbourg on 28 January I proposed that an international conference be convened under UN auspices in an effort to combat terrorism. The goal of the conference would be to bridge the gap that detracts from the international community's confrontation of this dangerous phenomenon, and to secure a broad international consensus on the means of fighting it. Recent events have proven that all parties must work together to confront this danger, which theatens humanity and renders it unable to secure the rights of peoples to freedom and security.

Therefore, the enthusiasm for convening this conference has increased in the past few days. The world has seen several moves in support of its earliest possible convocation and attempts to provide what it needs to succeed.

This, brothers and sisters, prompts me to speak about Arab relations, although the issue requires no explanation or clarification. Every Egyptian follows conditions in the Arab world with pain, sorrow, and bitterness. Each morning that shines on the Arab nation brings with it the darkness of a frightful sunset. Despite this, some remain unable to see the events and calamities occurring around them, or perhaps they do not want to see clearly and watch the masks and veils fall. I do not know what fog shrouds the eyes of these leaders, and hides the ugliness of this deterioration, which is of their making. I do not know what misguided notion keeps them ignorant of the dangers posed by the horrible abyss into which the Arabs' destiny is falling. The garment is in shreds and the body is torn apart. The blows are bloody and fatal. The hands are amputated and the feet are paralyzed and crippled. However, those who sit at the summit of power are oblivious to all this. They are drowning in a sea of error and are fighting and fumbling in the land of disability and darkness. We have issued warnings and drawn attention, but to no avail. The truly momentous events and the ugliest tribulations have caught us unawares, but the ears remained deaf, the eyes shut, and the hearts frozen in the molds of rejection and indifference. Minds have become introverted by ambitions that are both passing and selfish. Policies have turned into maneuvers and plots, some of which are reflected in a suspicious and shivering silence, and others in thoughtless moves that spill Arab blood and destroy the Arab family. No one, myself included, knows how things will turn out.

Were I to speak about the attitude of certain Arab leaders toward Egypt, I would describe it as representing two policies. The first is a policy of frank hostility, which boasts of plots against the Egyptian people based on terror spawned by murder and sabotage. It brags about its intent to destroy the Egyptian economy. The second is a policy of silent hostility, which whispers encouragement in the corridors of closed palaces. These Arab leaders have resorted to their public justification, which has become the butt of jokes. This is the Camp David accord. God knows that deep in their hearts, they wish they had the courage of the will for peace, which has liberated the land of Egypt. After 7 years of alleged leadership and purported ability to make peace, they are still standing by their positions, running around in vicious circles, and going from one failure to the next, and from division to deterioration. Egypt, by comparison and with praise for God, is building, sweating, resisting, establishing industries, developing the land, balancing its economy, and offering the weapons of knowledge and work to millions of its sons. Thanks be to God, Egypt enjoys security, stability, and international confidence. [applause and cheers]

How could this happen without dignified Egypt extending its hand to beg? How does the Egyptian giant stand on firm feet and with his head held high? They thought that depriving Egypt of Arab economic aid would make the proud and raised head bow. Their objective, which is clear to every Egyptian, is to cut Egypt down to size, to twist its arm, and to gloat over Egypt, which has made peace and is advancing victoriously in the battle of reconstruction.

No, gentlemen. Egypt is continuing on this difficult road in full nobility and strength. Egypt, with its men, is stronger than all treasures. [applause] Egypt, with its great awakening, is stronger than those who are ignorant, those who waver, and those who plot evil or maintain indifferent silence. Egypt, which is capable of striking back twice for each blow struck against it, will not retreat, be shaken, collapse, or weaken. Egypt is giving you sincere advice: Wake up from this sleep; beware, or the winds of collapse and extinction will rise in a storm and sweep away all those who refuse to rise to the level of their historic responsibility. The day will come when regret will be useless, and heaps of gold will not help when the will of men is lost.

This is the attitude of some Arab leaders toward Egypt, and this is Egypt's response. I do not need to explain further.

As to the situation in Lebanon, I appeal mightily to those who have found in Lebanon a milieu for their regional ambitions and a place to try to divert the attention of their people from their own causes and real problems: Take your hands off beloved Lebanon. Stop attacking with Arab weapons the struggling Lebanese people with all their sects. You would do better to use these weapons for the liberation of the land, not to occupy Arab land. [applause]

The people of Lebanon, with all their sects, are capable of coming together and establishing national unity; they are capable of rebuilding what was destroyed so that Lebanon can again become a beacon for democracy, civilization, and progress.

Those who make deals in the dark with those who pretend to be hostile to Lebanon must know that their cards are visible; they must stop playing with Lebanon's card. I warn that Egypt can expose all the cards.

Regarding what is happening in the Gulf, I say that our support for fraternal Iraq is based on the fact that Iraq has sued for peace and is defending its territory in face of Iranian aggression and occupation. The Arab leaders who are talking about the joint defense pact must ask themselves why this deception. What kind of pact is this that permits Syria and Libya to stand in the same trench with the aggressors and to participate in supplying weapons to strike at another Arab state, Arab army, and Arab people?

What does the aggression against Lebanon, the aggression against Iraq, the threat against the Arab Gulf states mean other than a big conspiracy with foreign dimensions?

Here we must ask: In whose interest is all this indifference? After all this, they talk about an Arab summit. Is it a conference at which those who called for it want to give legitimacy to the big conspiracy? Is it a conference to exchange further vituperation, to make disputes worse, and to point spears at the mangled body? Is it a conference by which we are meant to declare to the world again that we are a nation destined to endure the age of collapse and extinction?

I do not hide the fact that some Arab brothers have contacted us to hear what we think about the convening of a summit conference under these circumstances. Our opinion was that there is no point in holding a conference without a pan-Arab and principled commitment to close ranks and unify our positions on all Arab issues — provided there is a sincere and serious intention to turn over a new leaf.

Brothers and Sisters: I conclude my speech on this memorable day by expressing what I feel deep in my heart, amid all the surrounding circumstances, and with all the challenges we are facing. Whatever the effort entailed by my office, whatever the burden of responsibility, whatever my concerns about being responsible for every citizen of Egypt, even if these concerns are exhausting and cruel, I am dealing with the present and looking to the future with optimism, relief, and hope. If I take inspiration from the distant past, I see Egypt victorious over those who approached it with evil intent; I see the men of Egypt able to face calamity and hardship; I see Egyptian youths as heros of battles and holders of banners; I see Egyptian women honoring sacred obligations, and respecting ideals and ethical values. Yes, I see historical events reafirming that the parades of altruism and sacrifice are always marching forward, toward the highest aspirations, victorious in the battles for freedom, justice, and dignity. Our weapon has been the Egyptian individual who has been protected by his heritage, rich with civilization, strong with great hopes, pure with virtues of religion, and courageous with solid will. Whatever the effects of social change, with all its negative and positive aspects, the healthy body retains its strength and ability to regenerate and reform and take the right steps to the straight course. God the Almighty has blessed the sons of this great people with sensitivity and deep understanding. This made them differentiate right from wrong, true from false, and candor from deceit. It is a people who respect those who are honest and rejects those who take their individuality and destiny lightly, or undermine their intelligence and abilities. Thank God, we only say what is right and true. The conscious response of the people always asserts that the people are the strongest, because they are the leaders and the teachers. This is the spontaneous response of the people who encourage and provide momentum, generate will and power, and protect all the noble and glorious assets. The people protect public finance because they are the masters and the owners. The people protect their freedom because it represents their individuality and existance. The people demand seriousness and objectivity because they are fed up with maneuvers and vituperations. The people denounce frivoulous indulgence and interference with their problems because they want a renaissance and they reject those who cry over the ruins of the past. The people trust those who trust them because they are proud of their intellect, aware of their value, intent upon discrediting those who tamper with their values and destinies. The people want life now that they have broken their fetters and ties. The people adhere to their Constitution and laws because they want justice, they want to rise above greed; and they aspire to equality, both in duties and rights.

With all the enormous energy of the people, the unified parade marches toward one goal. The ultimate goal is a good life that respects humanity, secures man's present and future, and enriches his existence with love and brotherhood.

This is the pulse of the people that we feel and revere. We endeavor to make our actions a true reflection of their aspirations, motivated by their minds, and cheered by their hearts. It is for this that people work relentlessly and with all persistance and hope. We sacrifice with all modesty. We tell the truth, and fulfill our promises with sincerity and purity. We listen to every groan of pain, sympathize with every complaint of injustice, andreach out to help and share their suffering until we reach thebroad horizons in which there is only room for one whole and unified people who build a good life, protect rather than betray, gather rather than divide, and build and rise to the challenge; a people who protects Egypt, the minaret of the world, Egypt of the honest working people, Egypt of the poor and rich, Egypt the mother for all her sons.

We pledge to maintain our vigilance and awareness. It is an oath of sincerity and loyalty, an oath of pride and dignity. We pledge to keep the oath and fulfill the promise. Our course is one of work, sweat, and action. May God guide us to success. May God's peace and mercy be on you.

[Text] Baghdad, 2 May (INA) — Tariq 'Aziz, deputy prime minister and foreign minister, returned here at noon today after attending the Arab foreign ministers meeting which concluded in Fes last night.

In a communique issued following the meeting, the Arab foreign ministers decided to postpone the emergency Arab summit until after the blessed 'Ud al-Fitr on condition that it is preceded by an Arab foreign ministers meeting to prepare the summit agenda and its date. The Arab foreign ministers unanimously agreed to this decision with the exception of the Syrian and Libyan regimes, which expressed reservations about it.

VII Army Commander on Recent Iranian Offensive

JN011913 Baghdad INA in Arabic 1850 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] The southern sector, 1 May (INA) — VII Army Corps Commander Staff Major General Mahir 'Abd al-Rashid has said that Iraqi soldiers of the VII Army Corps completely destroyed an Iranian offensive on the nights of 28-29 April. He added that the enemy's offensive at the strategic axis west of Al-Mamlahah was aimed at approaching formations of our 29th Division in an attempt to reach the Basra-Umm Qasr road.

At a press conference here today attended by Arab and foreign journalists and news agency correspondents, the commander said that the Iraqi forces surprised the Iranian forces and inflicted heavy losses in life and equipment. The commander added that the Iranian enemy was attempting to find a way out of the stifling situation, not only in Al-Faw triangle, but also on all operational sectors and fronts.

Earlier, the VII Army Corps Command organized a field tour for journalists who met with the commanders of the 48th and 42d Brigades. The commanders stressed the firmness of the two brigades' fighters against the Iranian offensive. Iranian forces claimed that they had besieged the two brigades.

Communique No 2,210 Reports Latest Operations

JN011646 Baghdad Voice of the Masses in Arabic 1600 GMT 1 May 86

[Communique No 2,210 issued by Armed Forces General Command on 1 May 1986]

[Text] In the name of God, the merciful, the compassionate. Our Armed Forces congratulate our people and nation on Labor Day, the day of the working class, from which our Army derives its strength. Our Armed Forces pledge to the masses and their leader to continue their glorious defense of our territory and dignity. The following is a roundup of activities for last night and today:

1. In order to continue our strikes against the regime of charlatans in Iran because of its continuous aggression on our country and rejection of peace calls, our powerful Air Force has continued its raids, killing enemy remnants and destroying their equipment, resources, and vital installations. Our brave pilots flew 95 combat missions. Our planes also raided the oil pumping stations at Ahvaz at 1100 [0700 GMT] today, setting them ablaze. After carrying out all their missions, our pilots returned to the homeland with their planes, protected by God.

2. The brave men of our helicopter gunships raided enemy men, equipment, and weaponry, scoring direct hits in 29 combat missions. Our helicopter gunship men returned safely to base.

3. Our brave forces in the northern operational sector under the V Army Corps seized the following weapons in addition to those that were mentioned in our previous communiques: four GC rifles, two radio sets, one GC machinegun, one (PKC) machinegun, a great quantity of ammunition of various calibers, and four truckloads of ammunition including Syrian-made types.

We have ascertained that in the same sector on 28 and 29 April, the enemy suffered 124 men killed in front of one of our formations.

4. Our brave units in the VII Army Corps front have continued to direct heavy fire from their artillery and other guns against enemy positions in front of them. They destroyed 6 armored personnel carriers, killing a number of their occupants; 10 ammunition dumps; 5 infantry positions; 1 vehicle; and 1 boat. Another vehicle was damaged.

5. One of our heroic patrols in the III Army Corps sector east of Al-Basrah, while carrying out its duties in no-man's-land, captured a radio set and returned safely to base. Elsewhere in the same sector, our forces destroyed eight infantry positions, killing a number of their occupants. The enemy was seen evacuating its casualties. Our forces also destroyed two vehicles, one boat, one sniping position, three machinegun emplacements, and one (PKC) machinegun.

6. The criminal enemy forces shelled Khanaqin's suburbs with long-range artillery.

Karami on Tripartite Agreement, Damascus Talks

NC011755 Beirut Domestic Service in Arabic
1530 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Rashid Karami, who returned from Damascus yesterday evening, made a statement today. He noted that the tripartite agreement remains the only integrated solution that has been proposed to deliver Lebanon from its ordeal and to lift the heavy burden from the hearts of all its people.

After receiving a delegation from the Syrian Social Nationalist Party [SSNP] led by Dr 'Abdallah Sa'adah at his home in Miryatah, Prime Minister Karami said: Unless the others present an alternative that we accept and is based on fraternity, cooperation, and our mutual interests with fraternal Syria, I feel there is no room for any additional maneuvers to gain time. Time has become a pressing factor for every group in Lebanon.

Prime Minister Karami declared: What I found in Damascus gives me cause to be optimistic about the future. If the political solution we are looking for is not forthcoming, we must search for any other solution that will make the country's salvation our top priority.

Prime Minister Karami disclosed that he and the Syrian officials had reviewed developments in Lebanon on the basis of the common, hopes, interests, history, and views that inevitably make the two countries interested in anything that would put our march on the proper path.

Prime Minister Karami added: In accordance with the public's desire to do away with all the roadblocks that have been put up in our area, the SSNP is prepared to remove its barricade on the Tripoli Road. This will facilitate our people's affairs and consolidate the unity of the North.

Dr 'Abdallah Sa'adah then commented on Prime Minister Karami's statement by saying that the roadblock in Al-Mudfun would be dismantled in the next few days.

Hizballah, Syrian Army Clash in Ba'labakk

Casualties on Both Sides

NC011737 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic
1615 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Extreme tension continues to prevail in Ba'labakk following a clash between members of Hizballah and the Syrian Army today. Bazookas and machineguns were used during the fight, which lasted from 1230 to 1600.

According to reports, Hizballah suffered six casualties and the Syrian Army four. Several kidnappings also took place in the streets of the town.

Curfew After Clash

[Excerpt] There has been marked tension in Ba'labakk all day yesterday. Syrian roadblocks were set up in and around the town and the presence of Hizballah gunmen was particularly noted in front of the Shaykh 'Abdallah Barracks. A curfew was imposed there as of 1600 yesterday.

Action Aimed at Foreign Hostages

NC021233 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic
1115 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Will Syria seek to free the foreign hostages in Lebanon? This question has been raised by political and diplomatic circles following an armed confrontation between the Syrians and Hizballah in Ba'labakk. This impression has been strengthened by reports from our correspondent in Paris that the United States has firmly asked Damascus to end terrorism originating in areas under the control of the Syrian Army in Lebanon.

Syrian sources have said that Syrian officials intend to free the foreign hostages from Shaykh 'Abdallah Barracks in the Al-Biqa' before the conclusion of the industrial summit in Tokyo.

The Voice of Lebanon has learned that intensive contacts were held in the past 24 hours between the Libyan and Iranian embassies in Damascus with a view to stopping the release of the foreign hostages held in the Ba'labakk area and to strengthening the guard around them to prevent Syrian attempts to secure their release.

It has also been learned that Hizballah recently has been given Syrian clarification about incidents in Ba'labakk, indicating that the Syrian measures were not designed to secure the release of the hostages. Correspondents reported from Ba'labakk that Syrian forces today besieged the city after clashes that took place between the Syrian Army and the pro-Iranian Hizballah Muslim fundamentalists. The Syrian Army set up roadblocks in and around the city and imposed strict security measures, preventing entry or exit from Ba'labakk. Correspondents noted that the Syrian-Hizballah clashes reflect the deterioration of relations between the two sides. The past few hours witnessed clashes in Ba'labakk between the Syrian forces and Hizballah members. These clashes claimed 10 wounded from both sides. Meanwhile, Hizballah kidnapped two Syrian officers. The Syrians responded by kidnapping a number of Hizballah members and demanded the release of their officers. Hizballah submitted to the ultimatum and released the officers at around midnight last night. The Syrian forces then released the Hizballah detainees this morning. A Hizballah official explained that the strict security measures they adopted in the Shaykh 'Abdallah Barracks area were a precaution against possible action to secure the release of the foreign hostages in the area.

Reportage on Resistance Attacks Against Lahd

Resistance Kills Seven

Imminent Government Resignation Reported 'Likely'

PM301322 Beirut AL-NAHAR AL-'ARABI WA AL-DUWALI in Arabic 28 Apr 86 p 17

[Unattributed report: "Damascus: Economic and Government Crisis"]

[Text] A member of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the [Lebanese] Chamber of Deputies has said that according to information available to him, President Hafiz al-Asad has decided to call upon all those responsible for state institutions to pursue a new policy of cutting expenditure by 20 to 25 percent in relation to last year's budget.

He said that Syria, according to Al-Asad's instructions, is now experiencing austerity unprecedented in its history. The measures, which began to be put into effect a few weeks ago, have caused a topsy-turvy situation in the state institutions and was the reason for the considerable drop in the citizens' purchasing power.

He said that according to information available to him the economic crisis has began playing a major role in influencing the state's general policy and in compelling the government to go back to reality. Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam's flying visit to Libya during the Sidra crisis between Al-Qadhdhafi and the Americans was an indication of the Syrian regime's shift from a policy of confrontation to one of accepting existing reality.

The economic crisis, he added, was behind the oft-expressed wish by [Prime Minister] 'Abd al-Ra'uf al-Kasm that his government's resignation be accepted, but Al-Asad called upon him to remain in office "for the time being." The committee member said it is difficult to delve into the specifics of the economic crisis in Syria, but certain data indicate that the extraordinary expenses resulting from the Syrian forces' presence in Lebanon is among the reasons. The reasons also include the general financial recession in the Gulf states, the Syrian regime's increasing expenditure in the past years, and the subsequent rise in foreign debts to the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, and some Western companies. Sources close to the Syrian regime speak of foreign debts totaling 16 billion dollars, but Western diplomats in Beirut estimate these debts between 25 and 30 billion dollars.

He said that the crisis with the Iranian regime is also affecting the economic crisis, especially after the Iranians stopped supplying Syria with the necessary quantities of oil and even began demanding payment of amounts due. He said that the U.S. Government is playing the economic crisis card in bringing pressure to bear on the Syrian regime with the aim of compelling it to make concessions regarding the negotiations between King Husayn and Shim'on Peres. He said that according to information available to him, the economic crisis has put Al-Kasm's government in a crisis and, therefore, its resignation is likely to take place at any moment, depending on the Syrian's president's decision.

Special Units Commander Under 'House Arrest'

[Text] Information from Damascus indicates that a state of tension and rebellion now prevails within the special units. This follows confirmation of reports to the effect that Major General 'Ali Haydar, commander of these units, is under house arrest. Travelers from Damascus have cited informed Syrian sources as saying that the reason for Haydar's confinement is his opposition to the Syrian policy being pursued in Lebanon by Vice President 'Abd al-Halim Khaddam, as well as his sympathy with Dr Rif'at al-Asad. According to these travelers, 'Ali Haydar's open criticism of Khaddam forced President al-Asad to place him under house arrest.

Al-Asad Reportedly Requests MIG-29's, 30's From USSR

WA021500 London AL-DUSTUR in Arabic 21 Apr 86 p 3

[Text] Informed circles in London have reported that the Syrian president, Hafiz al-Asad, recently made a secret visit to Moscow at the head of an important military delegation. He requested that the Soviet officials supply him with modern MIG-29's and MIG-30's "with the utmost speed possible" as well as anti-aircraft missile batteries.

These circles added that the Soviet officials had promised to supply the Syrian president with MIG-29 aircraft within the next year, but that he is now attempting to advance this schedule to no avail.

Al-Asad, Zhivkov Messages on Treaty Anniversary

JN300640 Damascus Domestic Service in Arabic 2015 GMT 29 Apr 86

['Text' of congratulatory messages exchanged between Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad and Chairman of Bulgarian State Council Todor Zhivkov on the 1st anniversary of the Cooperation and Friendship Treaty between Syria and Bulgaria — date not given]

[Text] The following is President Hafiz al-Asad's message to President Todor Zhivkov:

Venerable Comrade. On the 1st anniversary of signing the Cooperation and Friendship Treaty between Syria and Bulgaria, it pleases me to send to you and to the friendly Bulgarian people my sincerest congratulations and warmest greetings in my own name and on behalf of the Syrian Arab people. The Cooperation and Friendship Treaty which we signed in Damascus at the end of your visit last year, during which we were pleased to meet with you and welcome you, has given the firm Syrian- Bulgarian relations new impetus and promoted them to a higher qualitative stage because it is a treaty whose objective is to achieve the mutual interests of the Syrian and Bulgarian peoples, to contribute to achieving in the Balkan region the constituents of a just peace in the Middle East, and also to contribute to achieving world peace and understanding among peoples.

I must say that the 1st anniversary of signing the Cooperation and Friendship Treaty between Syria and Bulgaria comes at a time when our region is facing a new and serious escalation of the imperialist-Zionist policy of aggression and threats —an escalation which aims at foiling the prospects of a just peace in the region and at imposing capitulation on the Arabs. This escalation exposes world peace to grave dangers. In light of these circumstances, the Syrian-Bulgarian cooperation will reinforce our confrontation of these dangers. We in Syria appreciate Bulgaria's support for our just struggle. We also support the Bulgarian initiative to turn the Balkan region into a zone free from nuclear weapons. It pleases me to seize this opportunity to praise the great achievements achieved by the friendly Bulgarian people under the BCP under your leadership, and to congratulate you on the resolutions of the BCP 13th congress. I wish you success in implementing these resolutions in the interest of achieving the friendly Bulgarian people's objectives of further progress and prosperity, and of serving the issue of peace.

Concluding, I hope that you will, venerable comrade, accept my best wishes of continued good health and happiness.

Following is the text of the message to President Hafiz al-Asad from President Todor Zhivkov on this occasion:

Venerable Comrade Hafiz al-Asad. In my own name and on behalf of the State Council and the BCP, I extend best and sincere greetings to you and to the friendly Syrian people on the occasion of 30 April, the 1st anniversary of signing the Cooperation and Friendship Treaty between Syria and Bulgaria. The signing of this treaty was the beginning of a new higher stage of promoting the relations of comprehensive cooperation and friendship between our two countries and peoples. At the same time, the signing of this treaty extends an important service to peoples' struggle against imperialism and for achieving their rights to free and independent progress within the framework of a just peace. The Bulgarian people highly appreciate the policy of progressive changes you adopt in all fields and in uniting the national and progressive forces in a progressive national front. We express our support for Syria's principled course of confronting the U.S.-Israeli expansionist and hostile policy and their schemes which are aimed at imposing separate capitulatory deals on the Arab peoples. We also highly appreciate the Syrian Arab Republic's role in bolstering solidarity among the Arab states and the Arab nationalist and progressive forces and to their struggle for achieving a just and lasting solution to the Middle East crisis. We greet the Syrian Party and Government approach toward promoting the ties of cooperation with the USSR and the other socialist bloc states, the good allies which sincerely defend the Arab peoples' interests. Once again, it pleases me to stress to you that Bulgaria will exert all efforts in the future to further promote the friendship relations with Syria based on the Cooperation and Friendship Treaty in the interest of the two friendly peoples and the militant solidarity against the imperialist, Zionist, and reactionary forces, and in the interest of their struggle for peace, democracy, and social progress.

Criticizes Meeting Proceedings

[Text] Fes — At the Arab foreign ministers meeting in Fes yesterday evening, Foreign Minister Faruq al-Shar' stressed that Syria had agreed from the beginning to hold an emergency Arab summit anywhere and anytime. He added: It is natural for kings and presidents to discuss any topic they deem fit during the summit. However, the consultations and contacts which were held have shown that some made remarks and set conditions on the agenda or raised obstacles to convening this summit. Al-Shar' wondered: What can we say to the Arab nation if we meet and emerge from this meeting having decided to postpone the discussion of a serious issue such as the U.S. aggression against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah?

At the end of the deliberations it was decided, within the framework of preparations for the forthcoming meeting, to undertake urgent consultations among Arab kings and presidents to prepare for the forthcoming summit in a manner that would guarantee its success.

Faruq al-Shar' met with Moroccan Foreign Minister Abdellatif Filali, Ahmad Kamil al-Mansur, Libyan secretary of the People's Committee for Foreign Liaison, and Saudi Foreign Minister Sa'ud al-Faysal, in Fes yesterday afternoon and discussed the Arab summit with them.

Reportage on Visit by Iran's Velayati

Arrives 1 May

LD010708 Tehran IRNA in English 0704 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Damascus, May 1, IRNA — Foreign Minister 'Ali Akbar Valayati and his accompanying delegation concluded a four-day visit to Libya and arrived in Damascus, Syria, Thursday morning.

The Iranian delegation, also comprising minister of the Islamic Revolution's Guards Corps Mohsen Rafiqdust, will hold talks with Syrian official in the framework of friendly relations between the two countries.

Velayati, heading the Iranian delegation, arrived in Tripoli last Monday to reiterate Iran's support for Libya vis-a-vis U.S. aggressions and to hold talks on bilateral ties.

[Text] Damascus — President Hafiz al-Asad received Iranian Foreign Minister Dr 'Ali Akbar Velayati, Iranian Minister of the Islamic Revolutionary Guards Corps Mohsen Rafiq Dust, and the accompanying delegation at 1215 today. Minister of State for Foreign Affairs 'Isam al-Na'ib attended the meeting. Talks revolved around relations between the Syrian Arab Republic and the Islamic Republic of Iran and the recent developments in the region, including the situation arising from the threats of the imperialist-Zionist aggression.

'Isam al-Na'ib received Iranian Foreign Minister Dr 'Ali Akbar Velayati and the accompaying delegation this morning. Talks revolved around the current situation in the region and the latest developments, particularly the U.S. aggression on the Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah. Talks also touched on the cordial relations between Syria and Iran and ways to promote them.

Dr Velayati arrived in Damascus this morning leading a delegation on a visit to Syria. Receiving him at Damascus International Airport were the minister of state for foreign affairs, the chief of the protocol at the Foreign Ministry, the Iranian charge d'affaires in Damascus, and the embassy staff.

[Text] Damascus — A celebration was held on the opening of the PFLP-GC 6th General Congress in Al-Yarmuk camp this evening. Attending the opening ceremony were Comrade 'Abdallah al-Ahmar, assistant secretary general of the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party; Ahmad Jibril, PFLP-GC secretary general; Khalid al-Fahum, [former] PNC speaker; 'Isam al-Mahayiri, leader of the National Syrian Social Party; the leaders of the Palestinian revolution factions, the representatives of the Palestinian popular organization, the Lebanese Nationalist Movement, the Arab and international liberation movements in Syria, and the representatives of the socialist states' embassies in Syria, and a crowd of participants in the congress. The celebrations began with a 1-minute silence in honor of the Arab nation's martyrs. The band then played the Palestinian and Syrian national anthems.

Comrade 'Abdallah al-Ahmar delivered a speech in which he conveyed comrade struggler Hafiz al-Asad's greetings to the participants in the congress. Al-Ahmar said: Your congress is being held under very delicate circumstances and a time when the U.S.-Zionist onslaught is escalating against our Arab nation. This escalation is aimed at imposing hegemony and control and at enabling the Zionist movement to entrench its occupation of the Arab land and to implement its plan to establish greater Israel from the Nile to the Euphrates.

Al-Ahmar added: The recent aggression against fraternal Libya is a prelude for the premeditated U.S. aggression to initimidate peoples and to destroy our cause and the fortress of Arab steadfastness, Syria. Comrade Al-Ahmar stressed that the Arab Socialist Ba'th Party and Syria under comrade struggler Hafiz al-Asad consider the Palestine question as our party's major cause that the Ba'th Party is Palestine's party, and that the Palestine question is Syria's cause.

Talas Favors Balance With Israel Before Conference

AU251223 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 25 Apr 86 p 3

[Text] Damascus/Vienna — Syria is striving for a strategic balance with Israel and as soon as this is established Syria is ready to participate in an international Middle East conference. This was stated by Syria's defense minister, Mustafa Talas, on Wednesday evening [23 April] at a reception for Austrian Army Commander General Hannes Philip and his entourage, who are currently in Syria.

Preconditions for such a Middle East conference are the implementation of the UN Middle East resolution, Israel's withdrawal from all occupied areas, and the observance of the rights of the Palestinians, Talas said. Syria is not considering a war with Israel on the Golan Heights; it is simply a matter of increasing its armed forces' defense capacity, he stated.

The representatives of the Palestinians who are to participate in Middle East conference should be people loyal to the national cause and not lackeys of the United States. Yasir 'Arafat would not be accepted as a representative. He has much money in banks all over the world — Talas mentioned the sum of $1 billion. With such a wealth there is hardly any interest in national concerns; 'Arafat only wants to enjoy life, Talas added. According to the minister, Syria supports the "left wing" of the Palestinian movement, but he did not define this. Syria does not want to cooperate with people who make radio speeches but do not take up arms.

Talas described the situation on the Golan Heights as quiet and he paid tribute to the work of Austria's UN soldiers. In southern Lebanon there are, however, clashes between the local population and Israel that also claim casualties. Talas remains convinced that at some time or other Israel will have to withdraw from southern Lebanon under the pressue of the local population. He harshly criticized the U.S. air raid on Libya; Libya enjoys Syria's full solidarity. Talas praised military cooperation between Syria and the Soviet Union.

Talas said that his country is against terrorism. Only a few days ago 73 casualties occurred in terrorist acts in northern Syria. These attacks had been supported by the Israeli secret service Mosad and by Lebanese Phalangists, and had been organized by the U.S. Secret Service CIA.

Talas also referred to the Abu Nidal group. If Abu Nidal were to act against Israel he could be sure of Syria's support. If, however, he carries out terrorist attacks against countries which have friendly relations with Syria — Talas expressly mentioned Austria in this connection — then he will not be supported by Syria because such terrorist acts would then damage Syria's friendship with these countries. In general, Syria favors armed struggle in the areas occupied by Israel, but not against countries friendly with Syria, Talas said.

TISHRIN Comments on Arab Summit in Libya

JN011017 Damascus SANA in Arabic 0750 GMT 1 Apr 86

[Text] Damascus, 1 May (SANA) — TISHRIN says that the hostile trend of the United States and Israel in the region is being countered by the positive trend represented by the solid relations and friendship between Syria and each of the world liberation movement and socialist bloc countries, chief among which is the USSR.

Under the headline "Syria's Friendships and Its Commitments" the paper says that President al-Asad's SFRY visit, his interview on Soviet television, and the cables of congratulations exchanged between President al-Asad and Bulgarian State Council Chairman Zhivkov confirm the strong friendship which exists between Syria and the world liberation movement.

TISHRIN adds that President al-Asad has emphasized the importance of the Soviet proposals and Syria's support for them, given that they are in harmony with Arab proposals adopted by the Fes summit. The paper says that there are no inconsistencies between Arab summit resolutions and Syria's public commitments. When Syria affirmed that the Fes summit resolutions are the acceptable minimum level, it did not evade these resolutions as some Arabs are doing. Peace is not an operation of artful persuasion as some Arabs believe.

TISHRIN concludes by saying that Syria does not want unanimous Arab resolutions to be used for reaching a separate U.S. solution that will be signed by Israel. Syria refuses to have Arab summit resolutions become a springboard for reaching U.S. waters. That's why Syria decided to accept Libya's invitation to an emergency summit in Libya for the discussion of the U.S. aggressions and its perils.

Rabin, Shamir Leave for Visits to the Americas

[Text] This morning Prime Minister Shim'on Peres met with visiting Uruguayan President Julio Maria Sanguinetti. The prime minister told the visitor that his visit to Israel is a historic event, important both in the context of Israeli-Uruguayan relations and regarding Israel's ties with Latin America. Israel will not forget the role Uruguay played in the establishment of the State of Israel.

Our political correspondent 'Oz Frankel reports that topics discussed in the meeting included the fields of cooperation between Israel and Uruguay as well as the agreements in the fields of economics, technology, and labor that are to be signed during the president's current visit.

Deportations From Bermuda Not To Be Opposed

TA020905 Tel Aviv DAVAR in Hebrew 2 May 86 p 2

["Exclusive" report by Washington correspondent Amir Oren]

[Excerpt] Washington — The Bermudan authorities will decide on Tuesday whether to extend the detention of the three Israelis [involved in arms trading with Iran] until 1 July, to deport them to the United States, or to rule that they will be deported but allow them to go anywhere they choose.

It has been learned that the Israeli Government informed the U.S. Administration this week that it would not oppose the deportation of the Israelis to the United States, in line with the request of the federal prosecutor who gave up on an attempt to obtain an extradition order.

To date Bermuda has considered Israel's position an obstacle in the deportation to the United States because, among other things, Brigadier General (reserves) Avraham Bar'am's telephone contacts with the military attache in Washington and with the General Consulate in New York the day after his arrest were regarded as apparent signs of an official Israeli interest in his fate.

Egyptian Document Outlines Steps To Improve Relations

TA020932 Tel Aviv HA'ARETZ in Hebrew 2 May 86 p 1

[Report by political correspondent 'Aqiva Eldar]

[Text] The directors general talks between Israel and Egypt will apparently be postponed until after Israeli Independence Day. The Egyptian delegation, which was orginally scheduled to arrive here next week, decided to postpone its visit due to the absence of delegation head Nabil al-'Arabi, who is currently in the United States. The talks will be postponed for an additional week because of Independence Day.

A document prepared by the Egyptian political echelon notes several steps taken by Egypt to improve relations with Israel. Among other things, the document mentions an experimental direct telephone line that has recently been set up between the Israeli and Egyptian defense ministers.

Other decisions taken include cancelling the special procedures for obtaining permits to trade with Israel, holding a meeting between the governors of the central banks, and sending an Egyptian trade delegation to Israel. Among other things, this delegation will deal with purchasing solar systems and cotton. It was also decided that the requirement of dealing through a third country would be canceled.

More Arab Visitors Encouraged in Territories

May Day Marked in Territories With Rallies

TA011954 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1705 GMT 1 May 85

[Report by correspondent in the territories Arye Gus]

[Excerpt] May Day was marked in the territories today with the nationalistic call for uniting the terrorist organizations and improving the conditions of workers. However, the workers organizations will never be as split as they are this year. Four general workers organizations today issued manifestos and greetings to fellow workers on the occasion of 1 May: the large workers organization that is affiliated with Fatah; the veteran communist workers organization; and two small organizations that were established this year after spliting off from the communist organization, and which are affiliated with the Popular Front and the Democratic Front.

The Palestinian Communist Party, which has been illegal since Jordan ruled in the area, issued another edition of its underground organ AL-WATAN, which contained a condemnation of the 'Arafat-Husayn agreement and a call for PLO unity and for the convening of an international peace conference.

May Day is usually marked by public gatherings in closed-off areas. Such rallies by various organizations were held in East Jerusalem today.

Lahd Visits ASL Position, Links Attack to Syria

TA011840 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew
1705 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpts] Three army of southern Lebanon [ASL] soldiers were kidnapped, one terrorist was killed, and five ASL soldiers were wounded today in a large terrorist attack on an ASL position. General Lahd has ordered a reinforcement of ASL positions on the border of the security zone. Our correspondent Ahyim Hecht reports from the north:

[Begin recording] This time we are not talking of just another terrorist act, people at the ASL Command in Marj 'Uyun stress; this was a battle, and despite the regrettable results our men put up a good fight. Following the attack on the ASL position, General Lahd arrived at the site to debrief his soldiers. He said that a new chapter had apparently begun in the terrorists' attempts to undermine the security zone in southern Lebanon. After realizing that squads of four to six people cannot break through the network of ASL positions, the terrorists are now shifting to direct attacks, with special efforts and a large force invested in each such attack. This tactic, Lahd said, is clearly a Syrian one.

It is clear in Marj 'Uyun that the kidnappers of the three ASL soldiers this morning will not adhere to the letter of the Geneva Convention, and therefore measures have been taken to guarantee that Christian ASL soldiers will not take out their anger on Shi'ite clergymen and villages, as is customary in Lebanon. Comment on Husayn's 'Deteriorated' West Bank Position

TA020825 Jerusalem THE JERUSALEM POST in English 2 May 86 p 18

[Commentary by Yehuda Litani: "Husayn's Fractured Image"]

[Text] In five weeks Israel will mark 19 years of rule in the occupied territories. Israel will then be even with the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan: it also ruled the West Bank for 19 years. Jordanian rule of the West Bank between 1948 and 1967 was characterized by intense efforts to unite the two banks. Had the Hashemites continued to rule the area after 1967, the process of "Jordanization" would have been completed during the '70s.

The Israeli occupation stopped this process. The more time that passed after 1967, the weaker Jordan's control of the West Bank became. Israel's domination of the territories struck such deep roots that what had began as creeping annexation turned into a galloping one.

"If we are to remain content with slogans and generalizations, the danger posed by continued Israeli occupation of the Arab territories as a physical manifestation of Israeli expansionism supported by military might can only become more menacing" said King Husayn in addressing his people on February 19. "Jordan has a special role to play, distinct from those of the other Arab countries. While it is true that Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Egypt share borders with Israel, Jordan is the prime target of Israel's step-by-step policy".

Husayn has always realized the danger of the existing situation, which is why he tried so hard and so long to persuade the PLO leadership to support his efforts to achieve a peaceful solution. But since his declaration on February 19 that he was suspending political coordination with the PLO it has seemed that he remained content with slogans.

Not only have words and manifestos replaced action, but the Hashemite position in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip has deteriorated considerably in comparison with what it was a year or two ago.

The king and his advisers did not expect massive Palestinian support in the territories after his break-up with the PLO leadership. But they anticipated solid backing at least from loyalists in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. That support, Jordan hoped, would gradually increase as a result of its economic and political pressures on the Palestinians in the occupied territories and East Jerusalem.

What happened instead was that the already weakened base of support for the Hashemites in the territories was even further enfeebled. Instead of applauding the king's decision, the pro-Jordanian leadership in the territories expressed loyalty to and support for Yasir 'Arafat and the PLO.

The negligible backing the king received in the West Bank was a slap in the face. For some years Israeli experts have differed as to whether the Hashemite king would be able to mobilize his support bases in the territories in an emergency. Some of them argued that the king was now neglecting them all, even those he had nurtured during the '60s and '70s, and that in an hour of need it would become evident that his following had melted away.

These experts have been proven right. For years they had claimed that Husayn was playing a game, that the projection of his image as guardian and protector of the holy places and the Palestinians in the territories was more important to him than what was really happening there. The experts — mainly from the military establishment and the universities — asserted that beneath this image was a void.

Unlike the experts, the Israeli political establishment, especially the leaders of the Labour Party, believed that this image reflected the reality. The image of Jordan as the strong protector of the territories with the potential for mobilizing effective support there was, and still is, very important to Husayn. It means that he is regarded by the U.S., Israel, Europe and maybe even the USSR as an indispensable party to any peace negotiations and diplomatic moves with regard to the conflict. One important side-effect of this recognition is financial and military support from the West, mainly from the U.S.

Now, more than two months after his latest move, the king has almost lost this image. His allies have realized that he cannot deliver the goods. The opposition to the king, PLO loyalists of all kinds, has proved to be much stronger and more effective than his few supporters.

Naturally, the king is eager to rehabilitate his fractured image. The question is, how will he cope with the new situation? Rehabilitation of a damaged image also means pouring large sums of money into the territories — money that, at the moment, Jordan does not possess.

The Hashemite Kingdom is facing a severe economic crisis. Not only have the Gulf oil states drastically reduced their financial aid, but many of the 200,000 Jordanians who have been working there have already returned home because of the rising unemployment. They represented 10 per cent of the country's population, and their foreign currency remittances were a pillar of its economy.

In addition to the serious economic effect of the return of these workers, the bulk of whom are of Palestinian origin, it will have important social and political consequences.

The Jordanian press, which usually ignores unpleasant facts concerning the country's future, has already published articles on this subject, focusing on the need to prepare for the first massive wave of returnees.

The returning workers will add to the 70 per cent (according to Israeli sources 75-80 per cent) of Jordan's inhabitants of Palestinian origin there. The authorities certainly have reason to worry on this score, and according to Palestinians crossing from Amman to the West Bank, they are undoubtedly doing so.

Ari'el Sharon's latest declaration about turning the East Bank into a Palestinian state complicates the matter even more. King Husayn is worried that repeated declarations of this nature by Sharon and other right-wing Israeli leaders will help to plant this idea in the minds of some among the overwhelming Palestinian majority in his country.

The king has his loyal bedouin, mainly in the army and intelligence, but Palestinians occupy most of the high and medium posts in all the other departments of state. Palestinians control the central government computer units as well as the main branches of the electricity company, the Ministry of Interior and many other offices.

Although internal security is still effectively controlled by an intelligence unit loyal to the king, he has reason to worry about the future. With such a huge number of the population being of Palestinian origin, he has to walk a tight-rope in order not to upset the delicate balance.

Punitive measures against large groups in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip supporting the PLO (such as denying them right of entry into Jordan, or cancelling their Jordanian passports) would certainly affect their Palestinian relatives in Jordan and lead to a deterioration of their relations with the king.

While eager to retain his credibility and his old image with the West as the chief patron of the territories, by taking measures against his PLO opponents there, Husayn has to take into account the dangerous situation that may be developing in his kingdom.

Two West Bank PLO activists were recently treated harshly when they arrived at one of the Jordan bridges. One was forbidden entry; the other was taken to intelligence headquarters in Amman for a searching investigation. Pro-Jordan personalities who did not back the king after his February speech have had unpleasant remarks made to them by officials on their visits to Amman. The message was quite clear: next time they do not fulfil their obligation, they will find themselves being treated very differently.

This added to the closure of some PLO offices in Amman and the expulsion of seven PLO officers, could be interpreted as the first stage of punitive action against 'Arafat's supporters.

On the one hand, Jordan is trying to strengthen the pro-Hashemite agricultural associations (initiated in the late '70s) by sending them more money, is almost doubling the allotments to its pensioners in the West Bank, and is financing a new pro-Jordanian publication in East Jerusalem.

On the other hand, the king did not approve the economic initiatives of West Bank investors attempting to start big projects in the West Bank, based mainly on American money (these projects were approved by the Israeli authorities). Nor did he allow a new bank to be opened there. He recently stopped the budgetary allocations to many municipal and rural councils in the West Bank as well as to the West Bank universities.

Palestinians and foreigners returning from Amman say that high ranking officials there blame Israeli Prime Minister Shim'on Peres for being "hesitant" and "lacking the courage to finalize the present negotiations because of internal coalition considerations."

What these officials seem to ignore is that their own ruler is using the tractic of one step forward and two steps back. Sitting on the fence would not help the Jordanian king to recover his credibility as the champion of the territories. It would not even restore his fractured image as their pretended champion.

ALGERIA

Messaadia Offers May Day Speech on 'U.S. Aggression'

LD012035 Algiers APS in Arabic 1655 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpts] Algiers, 1 May (APS)—Mohamed Cherif Messaadia, member of the Political Bureau and official of the Permanent Secretariat of the [FLN] Central Committee, presided at a workers' rally this morning at the Harshat Hall to mark May Day.

He delivered a lengthy speech on behalf of the political leadership, primarily President Chadli Bendjedid, and congratulated all the workers and citizens.

After noting with satisfaction and pride the political stability in the country, which has allowed great achievements to be made, he confirmed "these achievements, which must be consolidated, and these gains were achieved not as a result of the efforts of a certain group but as a result of the joint efforts of the workers, peasants and all the toilers and vital forces of the revolution, as has often been stated by the party secretary general."

On the dynamics of the Algerian revolution at home and abroad, he highlighted the role of Algeria in the Arab Maghreb, Africa and the Third World, saying: "We confirmed at all gatherings these firm principles of the Algerian revolution in relation to all political and economic issues." Messaadia added: "Algeria, in making the utmost efforts for the edification of the Arab Maghreb is doing so out of its sense of historical responsibility, rejecting all complexes and sensitivities and, being above marginal battles. We continuously strive for this region to be guaranteed security and stability, and for a real meaning for the concept of Arab Maghreb unity. The real safety valve and the shield in the face of external provocations, threats and dangers rest in the unity and solidarity of the peoples of the region and the solidarity of the Arab peoples. Algeria strives always for dialogue to overcome all the circumstantial obstacles preventing the edification of the Arab Maghreb, on the basis of our belief there is no progress and no prosperity without stability." After referring to the recent U.S. aggression against the Libyan people and to the Zionist aggression against fraternal Tunisia, he said that this is not strange for the forces of progress, because the Arab Maghreb regions as other regions is a target for imperialism and Zionism.

He said in this context: "Imperialism has weapons which enable it to destroy the world several times over, but there is one force that cannot be defeated with arms, the will of peoples, the will of man...Our solidarity with the Libyan people and with all the liberation movements is not circumstantial, rather it is based on principles, firm convictions and the belief that the struggle is the struggle of all of us."

Messaadia spoke about the meaning of terrorism, explaining that Algeria continues to reject terrorism but it distinguishes very well between terrorism and revolutionary violence, and grasps very well the meaning of crime and terrorism. If the terrorism of an individual as regarded as a crime, what about state terror, especially when it comes from a "civilized" state? There are criteria and methods for being civilized which enable all problems to be tackled by peaceful means. As to the use of force, or the threat of its use, a lack of civilization and culture, and the bombing of children cannot be a heroic action.

In this context he added: "When Algeria stands by the Palestinian people, the Saharan people and all the peoples struggling for independence and self-determination, it believes that the response to imperialism, colonialism and all forms of injustice and backwardness cannot be through demonstrations, speeches, banners or marches, rather the real response is work, knowledge, the acquisition of technology and the consolidation of political independence by the completion of economic liberation."

[APS report: "Expansion of Bilateral Cooperation"]

[Text] Algiers — Minutes were published at the end of the fourth session of the Algerian-Cameroonian Joint Economic, Commercial, technical, and Scientific Cooperation Commission which ended its session in Algiers on Wednesday [30 April].

The minutes were signed on the Algerian side by Mohamed Aberkane, deputy minister for cooperation in the Foreign Ministry, and on the Cameroonian side by Mahamat Paba Sale, minister in the Cameroonian Foreign Ministry. At the end of its meeting, the fourth session of the Algerian-Cameroonian Joint Commission made several decisions affecting the cultural, scientific, technical, commercial, and economic spheres. For instance, in the cultural sphere it was decided to strengthen inter-university ties by exchanging students, teachers, experience, and documents and by organizing cultural exhibitions in both countries.

Information: Closer coordination between information organs in the two countries through the exchange of experience.
Social: Exchange of experience in the organization of social security, the prevention of infant mortality, and protection for the handicapped.
The Economy: The commission analyzed the conclusions of an Algerian economic mission which visited Cameroon on 3 and 4 April, relating to maximum use of complementary spheres of the two coutnries' economies.
Transportation: With regard to the potential for expanding cooperation, the Cameroonian side showed its interest in the railroad cars produced by the Algerian Ferrovial Enterprise. It was also decided to start discussions with a view to a maritime and air agreement between the two countries.
Technical: Algerian technical assistance in the hydrocarbons sector, with the possibility of an Algerian enterprise intervening in the liquefied petroleum gas sphere in Cameroon.

"It is important to develop technical, cultural, scientific, and economic cooperation, particularly at this difficult time, to confront the rich countries' egotism," the Cameroon minister said for his part.

Tripoli TV Shows Alleged U.S. Pilot's Helmet

LD012309 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic 1930 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Every day confirmation is given to the whole world of the scale of the heavy losses suffered by the administration of U.S. terrorism when it imagined that waging war against this people could be as easy as portrayed to it by the conceit of the child-killer. Every day there are more and more vivid examples which prove the firmness of the brave rebuff by our air defense given to the aircraft of U.S. terrorism that dropped tons of bombs on civilians, residential areas, and innocent people.

This is a vivid picture we present tonight of the U.S. wreckage swallowed by our ebullient sea in eagerness and rebellion against the intentions of savage terrorism. Here is our correspondent in Al-Zawiyah and the report he sent to us in this connection. [video shows a pilot's helmet being washed up by the waves. It is grey with headphones attached to it. It is seen washed up to the shore next to a piece of metal painted red. Near the helmet is a second piece of metal painted green. The three objects are then seen together: the helmet put on the red piece of metal near the smaller green piece. Video then shows unidentified man holding the helmet while another unidentified man is speaking. He continues to address camera throughout video. At the front of the helmet is written the name "Lorence" — spelling as seen. On the side of the helmet the date 28 March on a small green label is visible. Video also shows a rubber oxygen pipe to the front of the helmet. Video again shows the red piece of metal being held up to the camera by one of the unidentified men]

[unidentified man] Brother viewers. Our shores are still washing up the wreckage of the enemy airplanes which tried to raid our land and the masses of our steadfast, proud, and heroic people. As other wreckage of U.S. enemy aircraft were washed up in the last few days, the shores of the town of Al-Zawiyah today washed up yet further evidence of the falling of the raiding U.S. airplanes which tried to harm the dignity of this people. The coastguards of the municipality of Al-Zawiyah found the helmet of a soldier, of a pilot of one of the raiding U.S. aircraft. This helmet belongs to one of the invading U.S. airmen. It belongs to one of the U.S. invaders who tried to commmit aggression against the steadfast Libyan Arab people. As is clear it bears his full name. He is called Lorence. it is the name carried by the paper AL-ZAHF AL-AKHDAR in the last few days. It also bears the date when he received this helmet [28 Mar] and his name, his address, and full age. [this could not be seen on video shots]. This is yet another firm example of the extent of the staunchness of our air defenses, and the ability of our heroic Arab people in the Jamahiriyah to stand up to the U.S. aggression or any other aggression seeking to harm the dignity, freedom, achievements, and changes of this great people.

On this great historic occasion, while Arab people everywhere sees the wreckage of the invaders, we greet the masses of our heroic people, its great leader and the heroes of the armed forces and air defense forces for the gigantic efforts made in repelling the U.S. aggression. We also note here the wreckage of one of the raiding airplanes which returned empty-handed as it were [video shows the piece of metal painted red] because it could not reach its targets and was confronted by the staunchness, greatness, and power of this proud people who, with the revolution, became an armed people with high morale, higher morale than America's, and higher than its aircraft which tried to raid this people.

Our people, armed with faith, with strong will, and with the pioneering spirit of mankind, is always ready to face up to any eventuality, and to administer to the United States and to the NATO alliance lesson after lesson so that we may show that force is not just material force but moral force and the faith of peoples in their right to live. It is stronger than material force, and much greater.

The peoples who believe in their right to live will, with God's help, continue along this path and will offer all sacrifices. This people who declared, through the document on the emergence of the people's power, its adherence to freedom and to defending it on its soil and everywhere, this people that has taken upon itself the call for Arab unity and for the unification of the Arab nation, and to helping liberation movements in the world, this people will not be diverted by the desperate and poor American attempts. These attempts will only add to this people's power, determination, and firmness.

There are many historic examples of this: The end of America, which was defeated in Vietnam and left Lebanon in fear and defeated, will most certainly come at the hands of the Libyan Arab people which has begun to lead a new universal revival of all mankind.

Greetings once again to the youth of the air defense, and greetings to the Arab people in the Jamahiriyah, to the armed people, and to the historic leadership thanks to whom this people now determines its own affairs. Forward. The revolutionary struggle continues.

UAE Paper Carries Text of Al-Qadhdhafi Interview

GF011518 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD AL-USBU'I in Arabic 1 May 86 p 9

[Interview with Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi by AL-MAWQIF AL-'ARABI magazine editor in chief 'Abd al-'Azim Manaf — date and place not given]

[Text] ['Abd al-'Azim Manaf] When the Suez war broke out, Eden [former British prime minister] said: We taught 'Abd al-Nasir [former Egyptian president] the lesson we wanted. It was indeed a lesson. Eden departed and Jamal 'Abd al-Nasir remained. The British empire fell and the sun of pan-Arabism rose. Reagan said the same thing. What is the lesson which Reagan has taught you or the lesson you have taught Reagan?
[Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi] Generally speaking, the superpower's resort to military force is in itself a sign of frustration and that they lack justification or proof. This is first. Second, there is no doubt that the United States is now leading the 10th crusade. Although the periods of time are far apart for us as humans, for nations they are close. The 10th crusade is now beginning. If the smoke of factories is covering up U.S. barbarism, the fire of Reagan's bombs has exposed this barbarism. In fact, it has become clear to all those who have a mind and conscience that those who are controlling the Atlantic are from a species which has nothing to do with man. Who is this man who accepts aggression against secure people? Who is this man who accepts the bombing of cities, universities, and hospitals? Who is this man who terrifies and kills women and children? Can such people be human beings and men? Both words mean civilization, understanding, respect, and response to the laws of the age concerning peoples' right to live and nations' right to choose their own path. This is the meaning of the human species, as defined by science and understood by people.

[Manaf] Brother Colonel. In doing what they have done, the Americans are using so-called terrorism as a cover. They say that you are encouraging and planning it. What is the truth? What is true and wrong in this?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] In fact, the issue is not that of terrorism or that of Rome and Vienna. All of this lacks evidence. So far there is no single evidence for this allegation. If the United States has the evidence, why has it not given it to the EEC? All of us know the Zionist lobby's immense potential in press and politics in the United States, whether among congressmen or government, Pentagon, and Department of State officials. If this evidence existed, would they hesitate to use it? They even forge justifications and information and bring false witnesses and pass judgments against Third World peoples. The issue is in fact that of colonialism which is repeating itself. It is the conflict of wills — that of independence against subservience; that of freedom against hegemony and backwardness; unity against fragmentation; nationalism against regionalism; and construction against destruction.

The issue is that of destruction of progressive forces in this region. They are insisting that the East should not rise and that the Arab nation should not unite. That is why they have been anxious to create the Zionist entity and they pledged to guarantee its existence and strengthen it against us until the present day. If we remain fragmented as we are now, suffering will continue. Logic has no place in dealing with people like Reagan. Which logic can justify his aggression on Grenada, this small country? What kind of humanity is that which justifies the mining of the port of Grenada? Was this mining done in order to give food to the fish? What kind of civilization is that which justifies demolishing houses above their owners. Was this carried out in order to turn these houses into gardens, hospitals, and universities for the next generations? Is this not terrorism itself? Which civilization justifies the U.S. fleet's continued presence against the will of the Arab Lebanese people in order to support aggression and terrorism against Sabra and Shatila? Did this fleet come to activate tourism or to conclude apple deals, or did it come to spread terrorism through cluster bombs and destroyers?

Did the Egyptian civilian airliner threaten the U.S. fleet or jeopardize U.S. interests when it was forced to land at a military base? When the pilot of this plane asked about the identity of the planes which surrounded his airliner in an air piracy act he was threatened that his plane would be attacked and blown up. When the pilot — after he landed — asked what is that law which allows such an act, the base commander said: "My law." Was this made in the framework of cooperation, freedom, equality, progress, and prosperity for the people or was it an aggresion and terrorism against human beings, people's freedom, independence and human rights, norms, and morals? Reagan, the killer of children, does not know this.

Therefore, the issue is not that of terrorism, because they do not have any evidence. It is rather the issue of Palestine, Arab unity, socialism and progress, and man's freedom and independent will and decisionmaking. This is our cause and these are our goals. But this cause is their target and they have a veto against these goals. We can say that the issue is a conflict of wills. Shall we surrender to the U.S. Administration and dismiss our character, relinquish our rights, and give up our goals, or shall we hold steadfast to prove that the world will not act upon the will of tyranny or tyrants and aggressors, and work according to the belief that these aggressors should understand that we are human beings who share with them the right to the sun and land?

What the aggressors do not want to understand is that the policy of freehandedness, hegemony, and the usurpation of the rights of peoples and nations reflect their lack of understanding of the law of history. This also shows that they do not understand that when empires have the policy of freehandedness and when they continue their hegemony and excesses this means that this is the beginning of the end. This is a historical inevitability. They should reread the distant history of the empires of the Mongols, Alexander the Great, the Ottomans, of Nazism in Germany, and Fascism in Italy. If they are not concerned with the distant past, let them read the near past as in the case with Hanoi, Beirut, and Tripoli. All these empires [as published] came to an end when they exceeded limits. This is a historical fact: Right conquers and people remain; empires perish and come to an end.

Raids and the roaring of fleets will not stop us from seeking our goal of liberating Palestine, uniting the Arabs in one state, supporting the causes of liberation movements, developing our society, defending our land and independence, and preserving our dignity and humanity. We have either to be or not to be. In this context, I would like to emphasize that our will is up to our goals. Our will is, of course, stronger than the 6th Fleet and the free hand of NATO. The legend which used to terrify people has been destroyed.

[Manaf] What is your comment, Mr Colonel, on the argument that war is a reply to Libya's terrorism?
The colonel gave a big laugh and said: You mean the United States made the war because of terrorism. He said: Was the mining of Grenada and the aggression against its people also because of terrorism? Have all the crimes in Latin America been committed because of terrorism? Their fleet went to Beirut port without any invitation or agreement; was this because of terrorism or was it done to protect terrorism? Was the U.S. role in the bombing and destruction of the PLO headquarters in Tunis not terrorism itself? Are we responsible for everything that takes place all over the world only because the United States forges allegations against us to implement its plots and justify its aggression? Were the plot by Lavon [former Israeli defense minister], the plot against the U.S. center in Egypt, and the burning of the cinema in Alexandria, for example, made by Egyptians? What is left is that they hold us responsible for Challenger's explosion and the assassination of the Swedish prime minister. We should not be deceived by the logic of the enemies who consider people's legitimate struggle as terrorism, as they say about the Palestinian revolution and the Arab liberation movement. is legitimate. They use the veto politically and they provide military hardware for the true terrorists who have usurped Palestine and killed children and women in Sabra, Shatila, Bahr al-Baqar [in Egypt], and in other places. Is this logic? Shall we be deceived by this logic which confuses terrorism and resistance?

[Manaf] Have you ever thought of revenge against Reagan's family or against civilians here?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] They said Reagan tightened security around his children. We tell him that our morals do not justify killing children and that he should lift security around his children and leave them live their childhood in happiness because it is not their fault that their father is the killer of children. We do not punish one for others' faults. We are not cowards who kill children, the elderly, and the innocent.

As for the foreigners in our country, they are free. We are Arabs and understand the guest's rights and value their expertise. Whoever wants to leave for his country can leave and whoever wants to stay can stay in peace. We need them and they need us. I do not think they are influenced in any way by the black propaganda because they can see the facts with their own eyes.

[Manaf] What about the position of the brothers? Who was first to contact you on the Arab and African levels?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] The African presidents told me that volunteers are at my disposal. The revolutionary African leaders formed political groups. They said: You fight the military battle and we will fight the political battle on your behalf. President Hafiz al-Asad, President Chadli Bendjedid, and Chairman Haydar al-'Attas called me several times a day. Despite all the circumstances, the Arab kings and presidents contacted me several times daily. Demonstrations were staged throughout the homeland in which the Arab people demanded a boycot of the United States. The Arab presidents and kings demanded the convocation of a summit. This is a good thing.

[Manaf] Brother colonel, were your political options subjected to exhaustion or uncertainty when the blood of your adopted daughter "Hana" was shed before your eyes and when your sons "Khamis and Sayf," may God grant them recovery, were wounded?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] This matter is not subject to hesitation. It is a matter of life or death. This is our doctrine which controls our principles. If we preserve our doctrine we will continue to exist, but if we abandon it we will then have passed the sentence of annihilation on ourselves. The raids cannot cancel these historical options even if the United States undertakes to drop its nuclear bombs on our territories. We are ready to die in defense of our land and adhere to our principles. There is no force capable of standing in the way of attaining this honorable goal. God is greater than the United States and NATO. As for the issue of my children, all those who were wounded or martyred have the same status as my children. These are innocent people who were martyred and wounded by the bombs of "Reagan and Thatcher, the killers of children."

[Manaf] What is your interpretation of the European position? When Britain attended an EEC conference to discuss the situation it had information about the aggression and concealed its decision to take part in the aggression while France, which inteferes along your border with Chad, did not approve of this. This affected your relationship with Europe.
[Al-Qadhdhafi] We cannot actually dissociate some Europeans from the historical crusade. The Europeans are currently falling under U.S. terrorism. They have adopted decisions. They said: "We do not know why and how these resolutions were adopted and what are their consequences." The best example of this is the position of Greece. After taking part in the meeting, Greece said: I will not implement these resolutions though I attended the meeting. I do not agree to implement them because there is no evidence or proof. I do not envisage a need that requires choosing a country like Libya and reducing the number of its diplomatic mission members. "Reagan" is the one who chose this state and did not provide evidence. What is your evidence? If "Reagan" had a piece of evidence, then why did he not present it to us? The truth is that the "Italians, the Spanish, the French, and the Germans contacted us and told us that this is a crazy man and that he wants to drive the world to a disaster that destroys everybody. We plead to you that you wait for 24 months after which he will go to hell with the end of the Reagan term of office and remain in the dustbin of history."

[Manaf] Brother Colonel, Do you see a need to revive the Arab-European dialogue — even if it were between one country and Europe — to explain political views, or is the matter confined to economical interests?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] The Europeans in general have interests with the Arabs. The Arabs can benefit much from these interests. But the United States is sacrificing Europe's interests. The truth is that the United States is not concerned with Europe's interests at all. It deals with them with extreme selfishness. It only considers its private interests at the expense of European interests. The United States sacrifices the security of Europe. The best example of this is getting Europe involved in the program of medium-range missiles. This makes Europe a scapegoat. This is designed only to protect the northern part of the American continent.

[Manaf] Has the war between you and the United States and your unilateral confrontation of the U.S. enemy without the rest of the Arab nation prompted you to review your Arab and international alliances?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] The Arabs have two choices: The present Arab governments and regimes should rise to meet the threat facing the Arab nation, which is the policy which the Arab masses want. Consequently, the Arab governments and regimes must pursue such a policy, otherwise they will begin to fall, because it is a battle in which victory is for the masses and anyone who opposes the will of the masses will be defeated. The principal desire of the masses is unity. If there had been one state from Syria to Tangiers, the United States would not have been able to pass so easily across Arab airspace and territory to reach my tent, and the task would not have been so simple or so easy. The same thing applies to the home of any old man, or to the bed of any child, or to a hospital, or to the headquarters of a king or president.

We have two choices: Either the Arab rulers establish unity, or it will be the masses who will establish unity. It is the beginning of a new history of the struggle. Let us destroy the myth of imperialism. Some people have been fearing and still fear the United States. They fear that anyone who confronts the United States or is attacked by the United States will be finished. However, there is a clear and indisputable fact: Namely, the tent remained erect and vanquished the NATO fleets.

[Manaf] What about international alliances; is there anything on the horizon?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] With regard to international alliances, the battle has somewhat activated the dialogue and the rapprochement with the socialist countries. Consultations are currently taking place in that regard. The reason is that the other side wants to do what it pleases in the world, and that is inconsistent with the international balance of forces. If the United States should act freehandedly, this will upset the balance with the Soviet Union, and if NATO should act freehandedly, then this will upset the international balance between it and the Warsaw Pact. Consequently, NATO'S freehanded action has shaken the international balance. The other side moved, and its movement was positive both for Libya and for the rest of the Arabs. Reagan's ignorant behavior could push Libya into becoming [another] Cuba. Cuba did not use to be communist and Castro did not use to be communist, but the stupidity of the United States made Cuba communist. Someone may emerge in Libya and — in order to spite the United States — declare Libya's total alignment with the Warsaw Pact. The Americans will be the losers. Otherwise, Libya — which is merely safeguarding its independence and is holding on to its experience and is defending its soil and national objectives — continues to be neutral and nonaligned. Then Reagan comes and by resorting to baseless pretexts for which there is no proof — they are all lies — pours his wrath on Libya and floods it with his bombs. What choice will such states have other than to join? [sentence as published] definitely, there will be a reaction in such a state to such tyranny. The aggression will rebound against them and will not be in the interest of the United States which will lose a great deal. Let us suppose that the entire region becomes harnessed in favor of the Warsaw Pact. What will Reagan have accomplished through his stupid behavior and his defiance of and aggression against Libya? The result will be that he will regret his action when remorse will be in vain. It may happen that anyone may come and do such a thing out of spite, or react or do anything.

[Manaf] Did you expect the Soviet Union to play a greater role?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] Firmly and confidently: Of course, we expect the Soviet Union to play a greater role, and I believe that it is now moving toward playing such a role.

[Manaf] Did you sense any kind of change from the Soviet Union?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] On my part, as someone who is following the matter I can understand or comprehend the Soviet Union's steps, but as for the ordinary citizen he may conclude that [the Soviet Union] has failed him or he may think along such lines.

[Manaf] Brother Colonel, I do not hide from you the fact that some people in Egypt say: They did it with 'Abd al-Nasir in 1967 and they are repeating it with Al-Qadhdhafi in 1986. These people are probably the ones who have ill intentions. But people of good intentions say: How can units of the Soviet fleet withdraw as a gesture of appeasement and then the United States launches a war and that there was no reaction to the ferocious and big attack, particularly when Soviet missiles were previously hit. What is wrong and what is right in these views?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] If rumors which say that the Soviet stand was negative and if rumors and doubts about the Soviet stand are true, this means we should negotiate with the United States at the expense of the region's peoples and countries, especially the Arab people and people of the Nonaligned Movement. This would make the USSR lose the people who support the world's liberation movements. This would result in a big loss for the USSR. I say here "if" because it is an assumption. I am sure the USSR would not accept this. I trust the USSR's stand. I expect that the USSR's stand will completely dispel these doubts. This stand will be in reply to the assault against all of us in this progressive Arab country which a friend of the USSR and a nonaligned country, and also against the people in the entire Arab homeland and against the Third World countries. If is also an assault against the USSR itself and its interests and against its friends who are linked with it as least through a common struggle. I hope this stand will be forthcoming, God willing.

[Manaf] Brother Colonel, did the Warsaw Pact intervene?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] This incident resulted in serious consultations between us. A discussion is going on about article 9 of the Warsaw Pact document. I do not want to add any more now.

[Manaf] Let us go back to Arab alliances. Do you plan to establish a front or a group — and I do not say an axis — as a nucleus for unity similar to the steadfastness group, particularly when warmth has begun to return to Libyan-Algerian relations and when God gave us Sudan as a compensation for Iraq?

[Al-Qadhdhafi] Generally, unity action within a unity program with Algeria is agreed upon. This is what the Algerian people said in their referendum on the national charter. Steps for unity with Syria, Yemen, and Sudan also continue. But we are envisaging unity among Arabs in general because we see a real threat to all the Arabs. The enemies' planes do not distinguish between Arab land. Israeli planes bombed Tunis and U.S. planes bombed Tripoli and Banghazi, and Beirut before them. This means that they are aiming at all of us. In any case, I generally think of the unity of all Arabs.

[Manaf] If it is difficult to establish unity among all Arabs at present, do you envisage unity among a group which is really close?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] Within a comprehensive unity or union, there are special circumstances. I mean a merger or unity can be achieved between two countries. This merger or unity can be achieved between more than two countries. It also can be a form of unity within an Arab union. I think of unifying the Arabs within federation because I see that the threat is menacing all Arabs. I believe that revolution and unity will mature with the passage of time. We want the nation to rise above the state. We want the Arab nation to rise above the regional state. Within this federation, circumstances of all systems will allow them to merge an will allow for further unity.

[Manaf] In view of your war experience with the United States and the fact that you were brought to a confrontation with a superpower — the United States — alone, have you reviewed your stand on the Gulf war?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] We are independent in our stand. We are against the Gulf war. I am personally very pained because there are victims among both Muslim parties; as Arabs and Muslims, this makes us sorry. I wish that the two countries were not involved in this war. I hope that this war will stop because Iraqi blood and Iraq's army and Iranian blood and Iran's army are dear to us.

[Manaf] In view of the current Arab situation, did you expect that the Arab summit to convene when you asked for it in order to discuss the Libyan-U.S. war?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] In fact, I did not call for an Arab summit. Arab countries — Kuwait, the YAR, and Algeria — made this call. Libya did not call for an emergency Arab summit. But summit will be held in the near future, God willing.

[Manaf] Will this summit convene to discuss one topic or will it discuss several topics?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] It will convene without agenda. The Arabs will meet in an emergency summit as a result of NATO's attack represented in the U.S. aggression. After the meeting discusses and debates this issue, anyone can propose any issue.

[Manaf] Let us go back to the subject of the Arab Libyan Armed Forces which demonstrated an honorable position in this war. Might we hear from you — the supreme commander of Arab Libyan Armed Forces — an assessment of this performance and a message to these troops?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] All Arab Libyan people are armed and a part of the resistance. We prepared for the battle we expected. The Americans were extremely arrogant. There is no doubt that angels fought alongside the Libyan fighters. God sent troops whom you did not see. "Hast thou not seen how thy Lord dealt with the people of the elephant? Did he not cause their plan to miscarry? And he sent against them swarms of birds which ate their carrion, striking them against stones of clay. And thus made them like broken straw, eaten up." [Koranic verses] The angels undoubtedly descended to earth at that moment and fought alongside the Libyan fighters and destroyed [the enemy], thus surpassing its electronic equipment. God is greater than the United States and NATO. The Libyan people were vigilant while the Libyan skies were ablaze to the point that other waves of attacks were forced to drop their bombs into the sea and flee because the Libyan skies was converted into a hell. They were surprised to see the fire confronting and repulsing them. Today we are more prepared than ever and we have expanded the circle of hell. If the U.S. planes return, they will be burned, God willing.

[Manaf] Divine power is a recognized matter and it is the Almighty's right. Did the technology with which the Arab Libyan Army was supplied play a role in this regard?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] We are a country that cannot be easily ignored on the military level. We get our weapons from the Soviet Union. They are better than U.S. weapons. These weapons are from a country opposed to NATO countries. They are not from India or South Africa. Consequently, the military power we possess cannot be ignored. The United States fears the Soviet weapons and takes them into consideration. We did not lose this battle. On the contrary, this increased our vigilance, expanded our training, and caused the further development of our defensive systems. We, moreover, made political gains.

[Manaf] These are effective weapons. But they are not used against Israel. What do you have to say?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] They are basically for defensive purposes. The Israeli existence is aggressive. Consequently, the weapons [are to be used] against Israel, the enemy of the nation. But as long as some Arabs of this nation make themselves guards of Israel how can we use these weapons against Israel while Libya is fighting NATO and Israel's guard? If Egypt starts the battle against Israel you will see where these weapons will be. In 1973 when the battle broke out against Israel, you saw Libyan weapons. At that time these weapons were not so powerful qualitatively or quantitatively. You saw how these weapons made their way to the battle as the troops crossed the canal using these weapons. During the first wave of attack, all the boats used to cross the canal were Libyan as Egypt was not able to acquire them at that time. The mobile artillery used in the canal region was Libyan. Libyan units were dispatched. I, myself, left for Cairo, but found Al-Sadat surrendering. After the elimination of the [Camp David] accords you will find these weapons in Egypt. How can we use these weapons as long as the liberation road is closed?

[Manaf] Egypt proposed dispatching a medical mission. This was met with appreciation. Was it rejected because Libya has enough medical capabilities or because of the position toward Camp David accords?
[Al-Qadhdhafi] We are very happy because we do not need medical assistance. Had it not been for the Egyptian political position we would not have people killed or wounded. If Egypt wants to treat our wounds it has to leave the stable and return to the ranks of Arab resistance against Zionism and imperialism. The Americans were trained in Egypt during the joint maneuvers and implemented their training against us. They will later implement their training against the Egyptian people. The medical treatment we want from Egypt is to stand up against our savage enemy, to differentiate between the usurpation of Palestine, the occupation of Beirut, the blowing up of the Iraqi nuclear reactor, the keeping of Tabah, the strafing of Tunis, the hijacking of the Egyptian passenger plane, the downing of the Libyan civilian plane, and the strafing of Tripoli and Banghazi. Generally speaking, we are grateful for the medical assistance offer.

Al-Qadhdhafi Message Addressed to WPC Chairman

LD011416 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1208 GMT 1 May 86

["Text" of message from "brother commander of the revolution" Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi addressed to the chairman of the WPC and read to delegates at the WPC session held in Sofia; date not specified]

[Text] Tripoli, 1 May (JANA) — Mr Chairman of the World Peace Council.

In this year, which the United Nations has decided to be the year of peace, and within which your current meeting is being held, the people of the Great Jamahiriyah have been exposed to barbaric aggression by the United States and NATO, using the most sophisticated weapons of devastation and annihilation to bomb residential quarters, killing women, children and the aged. The bombing covered also schools, hospitals and hostels for the aged. All this took place in accordance with the direct orders of the heads of states of big powers such as Reagan and Tatcher.

The child-killers Reagan and Thatcher have manifested the most adbominable pictures of deprivation of character and disregard for peoples and their values. The perpetrators of the barbaric aggression on the people of the Great Jamahiriyah have manifested the utmost degree of arrogance by creatures who have no connection with civilization and culture, who came to us with their barbaric actions from depths of barbaric bestial times. The child-killers have come with their fleets and planes on the pretext of combating terrorism. But the world has ascertained that there was no terrorism or terrorists in Libya, only women and children killed on the orders of Reagan and Thatcher.

Never before in history has a big power ammassed scores of terroristic ships, aircraft carriers, and 170 fighter and bomber aircraft to launch a raid on a small people. Never before in history have 44 planes taken part in bombing the house of a commander of one country, as happened in the treacherous U.S. aggression against the Great Jamahiriyah.

This behavior by the head of state of a big country — who is supposed to be directly responsible for safeguarding international peace and security — confirms that in this age, Reagan represents neo-Nazism. It is impossible to reach an understanding with him, just as it was impossible to reach an understanding with hitler. As Hitler fell as a result of the alliance of peoples, Reagan too must fall by the alliance of all the peoples on earth. Indeed, his fall, following his criminal behavior as epitomized by his stances, constitutes the only guarantee for world peace and security.

Efforts must be exerted to deprive the United States of its permanent membership of the UN Security Council because of its exploitation of this membership for purposes other than those originally intended, which are safeguarding international peace and security. It must be deprived of this prejudice [inhiyaz] so that it may not be able to use it to bestow a legitimate character to its aggression on the peoples, as is the case with all U.S. stances at the Security Council.

The savage and failed aggression against the people of the Great Jamahiriyah did not achieve its aims. This aggression foundered on the rock of the resistance of Libyan men and women. The Libyan revolution is still strong and steadfast; it has not surrendered, or kneeled; it is aligned by the side of the oppressed peoples, and is supporting the cause of freedom everywhere, and is still the Great Jamahiriyah.

This small country, with its small population, is resisting U.S.-NATO aggression. It is fighting in the name of the oppressed in the world in order that the U.S. alliance is destroyed, that its arrogance will bd defeated, and in order that it would be confirmed to the world that land belongs to God and to the peoples of the earth without distinction of race, language, culture, or religion.

With the political and social power it constitutes, your conference demands that decisions should be made which rise to the level of the threats constituted by the provocations of imperialism, as well as its threats and aggressions. The situation demands that the Mediterranean Sea region should occupy a paramount position. It is in the interests of the conference to emphasize the most important demands of the peoples of this vital region of the world so as to see the Mediterranean Sea free from fleets and nuclear arms, as a lake of peace, and a bridge of peaceful cooperation and of the deepening of political and civilized dialogue between its peoples.

I stress to you that we will continue — and the peoples of the world are with us — to resist imperialism until peace spreads throughout the world; until the U.S. aggression is defeated everywhere; until the United States takes its hand from Nicaragua, Palestine, South Africa and Angola; until the United States confines itself to its borders and respects the peoples of the earth and their right to life, security and peace,

Forward, the revolutionary struggle continues.

Letter Evokes 'Great Interest'

LD012248 Tripoli JANA in English 1840 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpt] Tripoli, Shaban 21, May 1, JAMAHIRIYAH NEWS AGENCY — The World Peace Conference concluded its sessions in the Bulgarian capital Sofia. Participants in the conference listened to the letter the leader of the revolution sent to the chairman of the World Peace Council.

The conference sources reported that the leader's letter was met with great interest and echoed widely. contributing delegations showed (?full acceptance) of the letter in their discussions. They confirmed the need to endorse it as a document for the conference and to be included in its resolutions.

It is worth mentioning that the council at the end of its sessions approved the lection of Great Jamahiriyah to the seat of the council's vice chairman apart from 3 seats at the chairmanship council. The council had allocated a special session to discuss the dimensions of the barbarous U.S.-NATO aggression on the Libyan Arab people and its reflections in the world and regionally [words indistinct] particular its threat to peace and security of the Mediterranean basin and the world.

The council recommended, in its special session, the organization of an international event to show solidarity with the people of Great Jamahiriyah, for world peace and the preparation of an international poster to be widely distributed to draw the world's attention to this barbarous aggressive act.

Great Jamahiriyah's delegation addressed the conference saying:

Today we meet, as we prepare for the international year for peace, the world and mankind are subjected to a U.S.-led attack exposing nations' peace and security to a real danger. It is clear that Reagan's terrorist administration has drafted a strategy of increasing international tension, threatening world's peace and widely opening the doors for nuclear and traditional arms race and started implementing this strategy. Another aim of this strategy of aggression is to test the ability of the peace-loving nations to steadfastness [words indistinct] confront the progressive state, reject the policies of calmness and [word indistinct] and then force all to accept the "bag trencheon" policy and the power madness the U.S. Administration pursues in its dealings with states nowadays.

The most prominent features of the U.S. policy of terror are:

First: Continuation of arms race and nuclear tests despite repeated initiatives from the Soviet Union aimed at total nuclear disarmament by the end of this century. The U.S. Administration by ignoring all peace calls jeopardises mankind's security and peace and force the progressive states either, to submission to its domination and nuclear superiority or enter into programmes of traditional and nuclear armament which is very costly and will be on the account of our countires progress and development.

Second: Strike the advanced positions of the progressive nations. That is clearly shown by the terrorist military aggression on the people of Jamahiriyah [words indistinct] revolutionary leadership, the constant threat to the steadfastness of the Syrian Arab people, the backing and support militarily of the agents of UNITA movements apart from the continuous military threat of invading Nicaragua, arming the opposition forces in Afghanistan. Such acts of aggression against our peoples mean that the terrorist Reagan administration is determined to confront the progressive states. It also means that the Reagan administration aims at destabilizing and toppling the progressive regime in Libya, Nicaragua, angola and Afghanistan. The U.S. Administration also celarly [words indistinct] to show that it is [words indistinct] no other power could stop it from carrying out [word indistinct] programmes of aggression.

Third: The disrespect of the Reagan administration to the U.N. and its resolutions and the constant use of veto against the U.N. Security council's resolution which condemn Zionism in Palestine, the racists South Africa and its withdrawal from UNESCO and its threats of not contributing in the U.N. budget apart from its rejection to any ruling from the International Court of Justice.

State terrorism clearly demonstrated in the programme of confrontation and aggression the Reagan administration implemented against the people of Great Jamahiriyah and its revolutionary leadership. America invented false excuses for this aggression. This is shown by reviewing the series of confrontations between Jamahiriyah and the U.S. as follows:

One: On 19 October 1973, Jamahiriyah announced the Gulf of Sidra internal (?waters). It informed all states and world organisations. This decision it has reasons, one of which is the Gulf is deep inside [words indistinct] states provinces and interlinked with them, throughout history the right of soverignty on the Gulf was admitted undisputedly and apart from the vitality of the Gulf of Sidra to the country's security and the need for full supervision over it due to its geographical position which overlooks at the heart of the country. Despite that declaration, America did not object or move militarily until August 1981 so why all this delay?

Two: Since August 1981, Reagan's terrorist administration granted itself the right to implement what it calls "the international law" by entering the waters of Sidra and its air spaces. Since then the continuous military confrontation began between us and the U.S. terrorism. These confrontations resulted in scores of victims among the civilians when last month the American fleet's aircraft bombed the city of Sirte.

Three: After that, the U.S. started accusing Jamahiriyah of being behind what it calls "terrorist acts." Reagan repeatedly threatened retaliatory actions against the leader of the Great 1st September Revolution and against the people of Great Jamahiriyah. That was clearly evident in the barbarous raids the child-murderer Reagan himself led against the leader's home and against the Libyan Arab people which led to the falling of martyrs and the killing children, old people and women including the leader's adopted child daughter.

What America claimed to be the justification for the military aggression on Libya is nothing but a screen behind which the U.S. wants to hit at the progressive policies of great Jamahiriyah and its backing of the world's liberation movements. Here I reiterate what the leader said in his statement on the second evening following the U.S. aggression on Tripoli and Banghazi when he confirmed: "We instigate revolution and the launching of people's revolution the world over. Raids will never cancel that. We will not back up from uniting the Arab nation. The raids will not deter us from this call. This is our concern and has nothing to do with America. We will never back up from struggling to liberate Palestine and the American raids will not be able to deter us. We shall never back up from supporting the liberation movements in africa, Asia and Latin America and raids will never stop us." This is what the leader of the revolution in Libya stressed. This is the stance of your friend the people of the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah.

Reagan's terrorist administration falsely claims that the leader and Great Jamahiriyah are behind the acts of terrorism that led to the killing of innocent people. By its raids on Libya it wants to punish us on this crime as it claims. Even if we went along with this American concept of terrorism, then Reagan is the terrorist and murderer of children. President Reagan and his aides planned the aggression on Libya and striking at the home of the leader in mean attempt to kill him and his family. We here can not imagine that history ever recorded a murder planned by a head of state to assassinate a leader of a revolution using his aircraft and forces of destruction.

Even in the American concept of the word Reagan and his administration are the terrorists because the U.S. raids on Tripoli and Banghazi destroyed homes, schools and led to the martyring of 37 civilians and injured 93 innocent citizens.

The steadfastness of the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership has unveiled the ugly face of America as well as the cowardly terrorist nature of President Reagan. President Reagan will never stop unless the peace-loving nations fight America and strike at its interests and bases continuously. Also the steadfastness of the people of Great Jamahiriyah in the face of U.S. terrorism has unleashed the supressed anger of the peace-loving nations even in the countries which are U.S. allies. The collective continuous resistance to America in other spots is bound to end America's influence and policies of terror For that, we call on peace-loving nations to have a real active confrontation with the U.S. and its policies of terror.

Here we must confirm that Libya does not like aggression and does not act to create reasons for it. Great Jamahiriyah aspires that the Mediterranean sea becomes a lagoon for peace and cooperation among all the states overlooking on it. In this respect, the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership welcomed the Soviet Union's initiative to free the Mediterranean Sea from the superpowers' fleets in that we saw confirmation of the Soviet Union's endeavour to preserve peace and security in the Mediterranean region. Also we are obliged to confirm that as Great Jamahiriyah faces aggression and terrorism which are imposed upon it and does not possess America's military might, still its means to reply to the aggression with the revolutionary and progressive power from all over the world.

We will all cooperate and fight the U.S. with this power until the official terrorism ends and until the American aggression pay dearly as they did in Vietnam and Lebanon.

In the end, it is important to us to greet the stances of your friendly people's which supported the Libyan Arab People and its revolutionary leadership in confronting the U.S. aggression. We also highly value and appreciate the stances of the Soviet Union and the socialist countries in supporting us. We also greet the stances of the nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America in opposing the U.S. aggression.

At the end of its sessions, the conference issued a statement strongly denouncing the barbarous U.S.-NATO confirmed that the policy of terror adopted by the U.S. Administration constitutes a dangerous threat to world peace. [sentence as received]

The statement made clear its absolute rejection of American claims and its assuming the role of international policemen or resorting to organised terrorism "state terrorism" using unfounded false excuses in what Washington calls "combatting terrorism" which the whole world was sure that Libya was innocent of such claims and condemned it. The statement expressed the conference's wrath at the new barbarous U.S.-NATO aggression describing it as a mean cowardly act. It condemned the use of British bases in the aggression which comes under the "state terrorism" category.

The statement confirmed that Washington use of force is harmful to international relations. It referred to the cancellation of the Soviet foreign minister to his scheduled meeting with the U.S. secretary of state in protest against the aggression. The statement noted with grave concern that the aggression was fully backed by the U.S. military build up in the Mediterranean basin and the giant arsenals of nuclear arms. It said that this aggression resembles a dangerous shift in the U.S. policy which is based on direct intervention. It revealed that the aggression aims, in a matter of fact, to weaken the prominent role of Great Jamahiriyah in the struggle for peace and standing in the face of imperialist intentions.

The statement called on the U.S. Administration to necessarily abde by U.N. resolutions endorsed on 17 December 1984 which forbid the use of state terrorism's policy. The statement demanded the immediate withdrawal of the U.S. Sixth Fleet from the Mediterranean and the implementation of the Soviet proposal of withdrawal of all fleets from the region. The statement stressed the need for the humane alliance against the U.S. terrorist policy which undermines the constructive efforts to establish world peace which may lead to an international confrontation the outcome which no one can predict.

The World Peace Council renewed the confirmation of solidarity with the Libyan Arab people and its revolutionary leadership in confronting the aggression, its resistance and its just struggle for its freedom and for peace.

Poem 'Promises' Reagan 'Contemptible' Death

LD020359 Tripoli Television Service in Arabic
2027 GMT 1 May 86

[Announcer-read poem: "Open letter to the child-killer; video shows cariacatures of President Reagan]

[Excerpt]

You Reagan, the Jews' dog; your days are black;
You are promised the most contemptible death, soon.
You Reagan, you Jews' dog; for your killing of a reassured child
Your people will pay prices, in tons and tons, everywhere.
Your day has come; you will be picked apart;
You Reagan, the Jews' dog, your days are black,

You are promised the most contemptible death, soon.
Let all generations be witnesses;
The child-killer will be killed;
This is a man's promise; without delay,
His day will be a day to be remembered;
You Reagan, the Jews' dog, your days are black;
You are promised a most contemptible death, soon.
We will teach terrorist Reagan, the failed, the biggest liar;
He has committed destruction [few words indistinct];
Reagan, the Jews' dog; your days are black;
You are promised the most contemptible death, soon.

Communique With Iran Warns U.S. on 'New Aggression'

LD011253 Tripoli JANA in Arabic 1130 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Tripoli, 1 May (JANA) — A joint statement was issued today in Tripoli and Tehran at the end of the visit of the two brothers 'Ali Akbar Velayati, the foreign minister, and Mohsen Rafiqdust, the minister of the Revolutionary Guard Corps of the Islamic Republic of Iran to the Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah [SPLAJ]. The following is the text of the statement:

A delegation from the Islamic Republic of Iran consisting of the brothers: Dr 'Ali Akbar Velayati, the foreign minister, and Mohsen Rafiqdust, the minister of Revolutionary Guards, accompanied by a politico-military delegation, paid a visit to the SPLAJ from 28 to 30 April 1986 to express the solidarity and the support of the Islamic Iranian revolution and the Iranian people for the Jamahiriyah people against the failed American aggression.

The delegation visited the sites of the bombing of the civilian quarters and inspected the harm caused by the treacherous aggression to children, women, and the aged. The delegation also saw for itself the debris of the planes shot down by the Libyan air defenses, proving the steadfastness and efficacy of the Libyan Arab resistance, which confronted the aggression with valour and determination.

Out of the responsibilities of Libya and Iran as two Islamic revolutions for supporting the Arab and Islamic masses, and for checking the 10th crusading campaign waged by the United States and its allies, the two sides affirm the following:

1. The American aggression on the Jamahiriyah is nothing more than a 10th crusading war led by the United States and Europe and the Zionist enemy against Islam and the Muslims. This is clearly evident by the statement of Reagan at the start of the aggression that "the raids on Libya were directed against Al-Qadhdhafi in his capacity as an Islamic extremist." This statement affirms the objectives and dimensions of the crusading aggression.

2. This tenth crusading campaign will, with full force, be confronted by Libya and Iran, which will mobilize one billion Muslims and embroil them in this battle (?in defense) of their fate, sanctity, and their existence. If this war is waged, it will be an all-out war and not confined to Libya and Iran. It will stretch from the Eastern part of the Muslim world to its Western part. The Islamic revolutions in Libya and Iran are able to lead the Muslims in confronting this crusading campaign. Proceeding from this, the two sides are warning America and Europe against the repercussions of this campaign. They stress that just as when the Muslims won the previous crusading war, the Islamic masses will be able to achieve victory in the tenth crusading war. When Libya and Iran are stressing this, they mean what they are saying.

3. The two sides warn America against any new aggression on the Jamahiriyah and stress that any aggression against the Jamahiriyah will be resisted by Libya and Iran, and by the Islamic masses throughout the Islamic world. They also warn the European countries against any submission to American terrorism and threats. These countries should cancel the aggressive measures which they have taken agaisnt Libya. Otherwise, they will be held responsible for the consequences. At the same time, the industrialized countries will shoulder any consequences resulting from imposing political and economic measures against Libya under American pressure and terrorism.

4. Libya and Iran reject the accusation of terror and confirm that Reagan and some of his allies are criminals and killers of children, and that the Black House is the bastion of official terror in the world, and that the Islamic masses are the victims of the American-Atlanticist-Zionist terror, which is represented in political, economic, informationist, psychological, and military terror, and confirmed by the starvation imposed on these masses, and that in confrontation of this terror the whole Islamic land will erupt like a volcano in order to destroy the supports of aggression and its perpetrators.

5. The Zionist-American Marshall plan that was promoted by the Zionist enemy and America, and that is today adopted by the industrial states, is nothing but another crusade in an economic form. It is a plan being financed by the funds of the Arab and Islamic oil, and America has resorted to it after its plans for the confrontation and subjugation of the Islamic popular revolutions failed. This imperialist-Zionist plan is aimed at the tightening of control over the region and will end up making it subordinate to America, and this is another economic crusade working for hte economic invasion of the region and subjecting it to the influence of America and its allies, and hindering the growth and escalation of revolution in it.

6. The Islamic masses all over the Islamic world, from East to West, are requested to kindle their Jihad fervor in order to confront the 10th crusade being led by America and supported by Europe and the Zionist enemy, because the target of this campaign is their religion, sanctity, civilization, existence, and resources. In response to this campaign, the Islamic masses should not accept any restriction or custodianship which prevents them from carrying out their sacred duty: Jihad, revolutiuon and martyrdom.

7. The Libyan side confirms its principled attitudes to the war imposed by the fascist regime in Iraq on the Islamic Republic of Iran. Also, the Iranian side confirms its respect for the sovereignty of neighboring Arab states, and denies any expansionist ambitions in the land of Iraq or others, and adheres to the respect of the will of the Muslim Arab people in Iraq to determine its future by itself in accordance with its political, social, and ideological choices. Tripoli, 20 Sh‘aban 1395 AH, corresponding to 30 April 1986

UN Delegate Discusses Terms for Dialogue With U.S.

PM010936 London AL-MAJALLAH in Arabic
30 Apr-6 May 86 pp 15,16

[Telephone interview with Libyan UN delegate Dr ‘Abd al-Salam al-Turayki by Salih Qallab in New York; date not given]

[Excerpt] [Qallab] There is talk about mediation between the Jamhiriyah and the United States. Is this mediation true and are you prepared for reconciliation with Washington?
[Al-Turayki] The Libyan Jamahiryah firmly believes in dialogue; it is prepared for it now as it was prepared for it before. But the United States does not want dialogue; it has chosen confrontation and used aircraft and bombs instead of dialogue. Once again I say that we are prepared for dialogue at any moment provided the United States halts its campaign against us.

[Qallab] Is halting the campaign a precondition by you?
[Al-Turayki] We believe that dialogue, to be successful and to ensure results, calls for the halting of all U.S. measures against us and an end to the military buildup near our territorial waters.

[Qallab] But are you prepared for dialogue?
[Al-Turayki] We are against escalation and for pacification, but it takes two to tango. The United States should reciprocate our desire, but it has chosen the language of escalation, preferring it to the language of dialogue. For this reason we are determined to defend our people and confront the campaign which Washington is waging against us.

[Qallab] What new U.S. escalation do you mean? Are you expecting a new raid?
[Al-Turayki] U.S. fleets are still close to our territorial waters, U.S. aircraft are intercepting civilian aircraft bound for our airports, and Reagan's threats are still continuing.

[Qallab] It is known that Europe has changed its previous stands toward you. Were you surprised by these European stands?
[Al-Turayki] Yes, the European attitude changed as a result of U.S. pressure. France, for example, recently received threats of a U.S economic boycott. We believe that by adopting this attitude Europe acted contrary to its peoples' interests.

[Qallab] What about the Arab summit?
[Al-Turayki] We wonder: If the Arab summit does not meet now when will it meet?

[Qallab] What is impeding holding this summit?
[Al-Turayki] The obstacles lie in the dispute over whether it is going to be an ordinary or extraordinary summit. In our view the summit must be held urgently. And when the Arab kings and presidents meet they can include on the agenda whatever topics they want to discuss.

[Qallab] It appears that after the raid on Libya the United States is trying to open the Syrian file. What sort of strike do you expect against Syria?
[Al-Turayki] We say that there are no direct problems between us and the United States. The problem as far as we are concerned is the Palestinian problem. We reject the premise that the United States should consider killing one individual in some place as terror while it is supporting Israel in killing and terrorizing a whole people, the Palestinian people. For this reason I believe that Syria will be a principal target because its stands are identical with our stands on the Palestinian problem.

[Qallab] But of what nature will the expected strike against Syria be?
[Al-Turayki] I believe that in addition to organizing internal terrorist operations against Syria, the United States will move Israel toward launching a military aggression against Syria.

JANA on Failure of Foreign Ministers Meeting

[Text] JANA has learned that the Arab foreign ministers meeting in Fes has failed to reach agreement on the convening of the Arab summit conference in [words indistinct]. The ministers failed to reach agreement on the agenda and the venue of the conference.

Commenting on this, the JANA Arab affairs editor said: This terrible failure expresses the inability of the Arab regimes and governments to confront America, the enemy of the Arabs, and its NATO and Zionist allies. Thus, the Arab masses have no alternative but to (?liquidate) these governments and regimes [words indistinct] the enemies of their existence who are seeking to destroy them. These governments and regimes have proved that they are unable to [words indistinct] to take a unified stand against the American-NATO crusade of aggression that is directed against the entire Arab nation.

Foreign Minister Delays ‘Working’ Visit to USSR

GF011754 Abu Dhabi AL-ITTIHAD AL-USBU'I in Arabic
1 May 86 pp 1,22

[Text] Moscow — Diplomatic sources have said that a visit by the Libyan secretary of the General Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison to the USSR has been delayed due to the Arab foreign ministers' conference which began its meetings to prepare for the extraordinary Arab summit concerning the U.S. aggression against Libya.

The sources have affirmed that the visit is not official as was declared but a working visit in which Kamil Hasan Mansur will lead the Libyan side to the joint Libyan-USSR governmental consultative committee. The committee was formed during the summit meeting between Mu‘ammar al-Qadhdhafi and Gorbachev late in 1985 when Mansur was minister of planning. This committee was formed to follow up all agreements and complete and sign that which was not agreed upon during Al-Qadhdhafi's visit, especially the importing of Soviet arms to Libya. Talks on this matter were suspended due to some differences between the two sides, including differences over the missiles which Libya received.

The sources added that recently Moscow, particularly after the U.S. air piracy against Libya, was obliged to dispatch (Katushev), chairman of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations [name and title as published], to Tripoli last month where he held negotiations with Libyan officials on Libya's military demands and his country's readiness to fulfill these demands in the shortest possible time. He also delivered a special message, the first of its kind, from Gorbachev to Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi on the same issue. (Katushev), while in Tripoli, agreed to the convening of the joint governmental consultative committee soon in Moscow for the signing of an arms sales contract, as well as the signing of a consular protocol and other trade, economic, scientific, and technical agreements.

Mansur will probably visit Moscow after the conclusion of the extraordinary Arab summit.

SUDAN

Agreement Reached on Forming National Government

JN021117 Khartoum SUNA in English 1035 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 2 (SUNA) — An agreement was reached by the national Al-Ummah Party and the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP) on the formation of a national government comprising in addition to Al-Ummah and DUP, the Islamic National Front, the Sudanese National Party and the southern political parties beside the uprising forces, reliable sources at Al-Ummah and DUP parties told the daily AL-AYYAM issued here today.

Moreover the meetings stipulates selection of an independent person to chair the state Supreme Council, the paper reported quoting the same sources. AL-AYYAM pinpointed that the current Transitional Military Council Chairman Gen. retired, Siwar al-Dhahab might be chosen as president of the Supremacy Council.

On the other hand, the agreement stipulated the distribution of the ministerial offices as 6 offices to be allocated for AL-UMMAH party which include justice, finance, education, energy, health and industry, in addition tothe premier which will be posted by al-Sadiq al-Mahdi. The DUP will assume the post of deputy premier and other four offices of trade, foreign, interior and information ministers. The Islamic National Front will take 3 posts and the 3 other posts will be allocated for southern parties while one post will be allocated for the Sudanese National Party, the sources said to the daily AL-AYYAM. The daily AL-AYYAM further outweighed [as received] the Ministry of Defence to be allocated for an independent character from inside the Peoples' Armed Forces.

INF Official on National Government

JN011125 Khartoum SUNA in English 1025 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 1 (SUNA) — The Islamic National Front (INF) acknowledges that the current circumstances in the country necessitate the setting up of a strong national government.

But the Islamic National Front's envision for such a government is far away from that of the Ummah and the Democratic Unionist (DUP) parties, the (INF) Politbureau Secretary Ahmad 'Abd al-Rahman Muhammad said. He further elaborated that the (INF) proposed government should be effective harmonious coherent and formed of the political forces that have considerable weight in the Constituent Assembly (parliament).

The upcoming government should be based on a charter tackling all citizens essential issues Muhammad asserted, affirming that the (INF) would abide by the national commitment to the national unity. The (INF) pledges in case of the failure of the current efforts to set up a national government to carry out a responsible and honest new role in the opposition Muhammad concluded his statement to AL-AYYAM daily issued here Thursday [1 May].

NP Chief Wants INC, SCP in Government

JN011128 Khartoum SUNA in English 1020 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Khartoum May 1 (SUNA) — Sudanese National Party (SNP) Chairman Philip 'Abbas Ghabbush called for the participation of the Islamic National Front and Sudanese Communist Party in the upcoming government. In a press statement to SUNA Ghabbush said the formation of a national unity government is baseless because of the differences in the political area. The current situation in the country is in need for a national government comprising all political powers to satisfy the peoples demands and interests.

Southern Representation Demanded

JN011750 Khartoum SUNA in English 1715 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, May 1 (SUNA) — The secretary general of the Sudanese African People's Congress Organization (SAPCO), a southern political party, has demanded the representation of the southerners by the one-third of the constitutional corporations about to be formed. In a press statement released here today, SAPCO secretary general said his party, SANU, the Federal Party and the Progressive People's Party (P.P.P.) which have 21 deputies in the Constituent Assembly, will coordinate with each other for the right of the southern area. SAPC secretary general urged the northern political factions to represent the southern parties, saying the representation is a democratic right.

SAPCO will adopt decentralization in governing Sudan, but it will not be a price for implementation of Islamic sharia law, he added. The secretary general of SAPCO called for holding the constitutional conference to achieve stability in the country.

Anya Nya II Seeks Role

JN021039 Khartoum SUNA in English 1010 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 2 May (SUNA) — The Anya Nya II critisized Thursday [1 May] what it described as concentration of the northern parties on SPLM activities as regards their attempts to solve the south Sudan problem. Speaking to SUNA here yesterday member of Anya Nya Executive Committee Hoth Luak warned from the negligence of Anya Nya role saying that this would lead to the complication of the problem.

Anya Nya is ready to realize peace in south Sudan in collaboration with the northern political parties he added. Luak reaffirmed that the solution of south Sudan's problem was not confined to Garangs attitude adding that the incoming government should not agree to the admittance of Garang's supporter to the new government. He said that the results of the recent elections in the south were not accurate where some election officers attempted to impede the elections process in some areas there in pretext of security instability.

He noted that the call for the south unification in one region should be determined by the citizens themselves following the attainment of peace there.

Siwar al-Dhahab Interviewed on Summit, Ethiopia

GF011116 Manama WAKH in Arabic 0920 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Al-Shariqah, 1 May (WAKH) — General 'Abd al-Rahman Siwar al-Dhahab, chairman of the Transitional Military Council [TMC] in Sudan has stated that the emergency Arab summit must not be restricted to the discussion of the U.S. aggression against Libya, but must also deal with other issues, such as the Iraq-Iran war, the Palestinian issue, and other necessary issues.

In an interview published today in the Al-Shariqah newspaper AL-KHALIJ, General Siwar Al-Dhahab stated that Sudan's stand would be clear and specific in supporting these issues. He affirmed his country's condemnation of the U.S. aggression against Libya and said that although relations with the United States continue, it has reduced the number of its diplomats in Sudan on the pretext that the situation there is not reassuring following the incident in which a U.S. diplomat was wounded in Sudan.

On the issue of the integration between Egypt and Sudan, General Siwar al-Dhahab noted that there is an old agreement between the two countries which provides for the establishment of joint committees which, after holding meetings, would submit their recommendations on the possible future of integration. He added that the decision of the Council of Ministers to suspend some integration organs in Sudan resulted from the fact that the brothers in Egypt suspended some of these same organs, but that this does not mean that integration would go through a period of freezing. He said however, that there are studied proposals which would be dealt with by the future government to follow the best method to achieve integration and to determine what the two peoples want from it.

Concerning Sudan's relations with Ethiopia, the TMC chairman said: It is clear during this period that Ethiopia's response has not been on the level that we had hoped for. Perhaps it has its reasons. However, for our part, we see no strong reasons to prevent the restoration of good relations with Ethiopia and on the fine level for which we hope. General Siwar al-Dhahab stated that he would accept the post of chairman of the Sudanese Sovereignty Council if the various political forces are unanimous in nominating him for it.

Siwar al-Dhahab Delivers May Day Address

JN011204 Khartoum SUNA in English 1023 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Khartoum May 1, (SUNA) — Chairman of the caretaker military council Gen. Siwar al-Dhahab has reiterated that the trade union movement is the corner-stone in attaining social and economic progress. In an address he delivered yesterday marking the anniversary of the workers day Gen. Siwar al-Dhahab said that the occasion coincides with the new Sudanese democratic experiment. He noted that the trade union work should be based on unity and solidarity in a bid to realize the interests of the workers.

Gen Siwar al-Dhahab commended the consciousness of the Sudanese trade union movement as regards the challenges facing Sudan. He indicated that victory and achievement could be realized through faithfulness and self-denied. He called on the trade union movement to create suitable means for doubling production and legalizing work relations. He greeted the martyrs of the workers trade union in Sudan.

Bomb Threat Received at Prime Minister's Office

JN021104 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1010 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 2 May (SUNA) — The newspaper AL-AYYAM said today that Prime Minister Dr al-Jazuli Daf'allah's office was evacuated yesterday following a telephone call from a person claiming he was Brigadier General 'Ali Yusuf of military intelligence. He warned that there was a bomb at the prime minister's office and that he would arrive in 10 minutes to defuse it. Dr al-Jazuli Daf'allah was getting ready to receive U.S. ambassador in Khartoum Hume Alexander Horan. Following the telephone call, a team from the police criminal laboratory in the capital inspected the prime minister's offices and conducted a thorough search for the alleged bomb.

It is noteworthy that the telephone call came half an hour before the meeting with the U.S. ambassador. The meeting was held in the senior guests' hall. The secretary who answered the call asserted that that it came from a place where there is a microwave network. The criminal laboratory team has explained that preliminary investigatiosn disclosed that an officer named Brig Gen 'Ali Yusuf does not exist in the Armed Forces or the police. AL-AYYAM says that preliminary investigations revealed that only the Armed Forces and some higher state bodies have a microwave apparatus, and that this will help narrow the suspects in the investigations.

Army,'Friendly Forces' Capture Rebel Base

JN021100 Khartoum SUNA in English 1030 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Khartoum, 2 May (SUNA) — An authoritative source at the Army's General Command told SUNA that the Army and friendly forces have recently captured a major rebel supply base in the Upper Nile Province near the Ethiopian border after three days of fighting.

The source said the friendly forces had captured the base located in a place called (Bolting) in collaboration with the government troops. He said after three days of fighting the friendly forces swept the rebels base killing a number of Garang troops and the survivors fled inside Ethiopia. The source said the base comprises large stores for weapons ammunitions logistics machineries and heavy artillery. He said food supplies and military logistic were delivered to the base directly from inside Ethiopia by trucks and air.

The source did not say when the base was captured but he said the friendly forces had captured two jeeps mounted with anti-tank 106mm, large quantities of arms, ammunition, different kinds of landmines, equipment and machineries.

On the other hand, confirmed reports said that the forces of Sultan Isma'il had facilitated the withdrawal of government troops from Fashala. it was conducted according to the (word indistinct] of the Army General Command.

Prime Minister Summarizes Oil Slump Impact

LD011948 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 1339 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Tunis, 1 May (KUNA) — Tunisian Prime Minister and Interior Minister [as received] Mohamed Mzali announced here today that the losses incurred by the budget in his country due to the recent slump in oil prices reached 200 million Tunisian dinars, that is about $270 million.

In a speech to a mass rally on the occasion of May Day he admitted that his government is facing economic difficulties both at the internal and external levels due to the obstacles raised by some European states in the path of Tunisian exports on the one hand, and due to the rise in the prices of raw materials imported by Tunisia from international markets on the other, in addition to the drop in prices of Tunisian oil and phosphoric acid.

He pointed out that the deficit in Tunisian trade with the EEC is of the order of 650 million Tunisian dinars, that is about $1 billion. He said: "Tunisia is suffering from the international economic jungle law, and from the international economic crisis which is almost stifling."

He affirmed, however, that his government has been able to mitigate the economic difficulties faced by his country through fruitful cooperation with the fraternal Arab states and with other friendly states by opening up new markets for Tunisian products in these states. He underlined in this context that his government has been able to find new markets for Tunisian farm produce in the Arab Gulf states, and that it began exporting cement to Spain recently.

Mr Mzali urged Tunisians to show solidarity with the government to face up to the economic difficulties, while announcing that his government has decided to grant as of today a 10 dinar-a-month allowance to family men with four children or more. It has also decided to grant financial assistance to some 80,000 peasant families as of next July, and this assistance will constitute a continuous income for them. He said that his government has also decided to increase the allowances for widows and orphans, and pensioneers' salaries.

Sources Say Tunisia Wants To Withdraw From OAPEC

LD020852 Kuwait KUNA in Arabic 0824 GMT 2 May 86

[Excerpt] Kuwait, 2 May (KUNA) — High-level Arab oil sources here today disclosed that Tunisia recently officially put forward a request to withdraw from the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries, OAPEC, after being a member for 3 years only and that this request will be submitted to the Ministerial Council of the Organization to be held here this Tuesday. The sources informed KUNA that Tunisia requested withdrawal from membership of the organization giving the excuse "that it owns oil of little significance, a matter which does not require remaining in the organization."

ETHIOPIA

Chairman Mengistu Haile Mariam May Day Speech

EA012303 Addis Ababa Domestic Service in Amharic
0626 GMT 1 May 86

[May Day Speech by PMAC Chairman Mengistu Haile Mariam at Revolution Square in Addis Ababa — live]

[Text] Dear workers on all fronts of the struggle, farmers, intelligentsia, members of our revolutionary forces, all the true sons of mother Ethiopia, honored guests, and dear comrades: It is with great happiness that I say congratulations on this May Day. This day commemorates the call for struggle of international workers who are the moving force behind work, which is the human deed for the consolidation of the identity, development, and prosperity of mankind.

This time last year our main concern was the implementation of the plan drafted by our party to withstand the very serious natural disaster that affected our motherland and compatriots. In this respect we have been able to consolidate results that have secured for us an international reputation as well through the rapid activities of our people in all spheres and directions. We have saved the lives of numerous numbers of our compatriots. We have [helped] establish many of them at a level from which they can lead better lives. Though the number of compatriots who require partial or full assistance is not insignificant even now, it is believed that our people and those who helped us have lighter consciences, since that horrifying shadow that hung over our compatriots has been lifted. Encouraged by the results achieved, we are confident that we will gradually enable our affected compatriots to become self sufficient with additional help from within the country and from abroad.

My dear compatriots, we celebrate this current international workers day with satisfaction over the tasks we have accomplished in various sectors, which will contribute greatly to our development, and in anticipation of our plans for the future, which herald bright hopes. It is known that our current principal historical mission is to establish the People's Democratic Republic of Ethiopia. In this respect the primary and basic issue is the drafting of the Constitution on which our country will be administered in the future. The commission entrusted by decree with the responsibility for preparing this historically important document has prepared the draft to be discussed by the people.

Therefore, one of our upcoming important national issues will be the discussion held on the draft Constitution by the people of Ethiopia. The Constitution is a crucial issue that will give a legal foundation to important issues that required the sweat and blood of numerous citizens and which will guarantee our future development and popular goals. Therefore, It must be regarded with reverence and a feeling of deep national responsibility. Since the Constitution will henceforth be the source governing all common or individual situations, rights, and duties, it is the obligation of all workers to properly utilize the right they have been given beforehand to discuss the Constitution. Under the Constitution the working people of Ethiopia will ensure their direct assumption of power for the first time in the history of the country. It will be historically important, since the People's Democratic Republic of Ethiopia will be established and administered by it.

The draft Constitution will be enhanced and shaped by public discussion and will finally be legalized by the resolution of the people. On the basis of this Constitution, a people's democratic government will be formed through election by the people and a historical transformation where the people will fully implement their power will be made. In order to properly value the sacrifices made to fulfill the new popular political system and enable the people to directly consolidate power, it is necessary to go back and delve deeply into the origins and goals of the revolution. The goal of our revolution was not to take power out of the hands of the rulers of the feudal system and hand it over to those who could easilyassume power, but to hand it over to the working people who have been oppressed. Even so, it was necessary to handle the situation carefully due to the competition permitted to people barred from political participation by feudals, capitalists and petit bourgeoisie, who disguised their form and were eager. [as heard]

Due to this situation, it took us this much time to develop the consciousness of the working people and coordinate their strength through organization. Therefore, we have today been able to reach the eve of the period in which we are going to establish a government with the true people's power of workers, farmers, and other workers of our country. This government will be one in which the equality and common prosperity of all the country's workers and nationalities will be assured.

The goal of our revolution was not to topple a system of exploitation and replace it with another similar system of sharp exploiters in the name of democracy. It still is not. Our revolution's clear and sincere goal is to ensure the ownership of power and the supremacy of the working people. Thus, it became necessary to defend against repeated attacks from internal and external reaction and international imperialism. It is clear that [it is the same] today because of our genuine popular stand. Even so, as we are currently in an extremely decisive historical era, we shall continue along our path without being distracted. According to our pledge at the inception of the revolution, we will make all the necessary sacrifices until the worker, farmer, and all the working people qualify to directly hold power. [applause]

Dear Compatriots, as history proves, the key question in any revolution is the question of power. This issue becomes crucial to the public when power is transferred from one class to another. The takeover of power within a limited class, between groups who differ only in form, will not be decisive, since it will not result in a change of content. Its implementation cannot be revolution. In this respect, when the situation in our country is analyzed it is clear to all that the situation in our country is a metamorphosis which transferred power from feudals and imperialist lackeys to the working people. Therefore, it has required major sacrifices.

While the question of power is a primary and decisive issue in the progress of a revolution, it should not be regarded as the final goal. That is why the revolution has been focusing on organizing the country's economic and social affairs based on the desires and aims of the people. In this respect, it has been possible to create a promising situation through the special emphasis placed by our party and revolutionary government on the natural calamity that has recently wreaked havoc on us.

As for the results of the new life embarked upon by our citizens, we have moved through the resettlement program, which is one of our methods of permanently dealing with the drought; the results of the program can be readily seen today. Today our resettlement villages, like other villages, are hives of productive activity. The settlers are supporting themselves, according to the prevailing situation, through their active joint and individual efforts to free themselves from governmental assistance. In particular, they are expected to become fully self-sufficient next year. It is a fact that the continuous contribution of the workers of various organizations and departments who have rallied alongside the settlers is crucial for the realization of this goal.

Today our party's cadres and various professionals in resettlement areas are working between 13 and 16 hours a day. If the necessary goods and services are provided, there is no reason why our compatriots will not be fully self sufficient in terms of food next year. In the name of our party, government, and all the people, I thank all those who are making relentless efforts in the resettlement areas. [applause] The new work ethic being developed around resettlement areas is exemplary and should serve as a lesson to many parts of our country.

Besides the resettlement activity, the activities being carried out in farming in general are also highly valued. The farmers' efforts, especially in some parts of our country, to keep the land from lying idle and to increase production are very encouraging. Even though the irrigated farming embarked upon by harnessing the rivers still needs to be extended, one can say that nevertheless it has opened a new chapter in freeing our country's farming stage by stage, from the problems of nature.

Efforts demonstrated by the workers in towns to be creative in increasing production and in the work they have embarked upon to produce spare parts economically is one aspect of a new culture; this aspect should be encouraged and intensified for further productivity. In general, the workers' development efforts, both in the urban and rural areas, are being strengthened further.

Nevertheless, in view of the struggle that sill confronts us in our efforts to satisfy even our basic necessities and in view of the evident situation we are in, we need without question to redouble our efforts and step up our efforts. As I have tried to state at various times, since our problems emanate basically from our backwardness, we cannot get rid of them through efforts in just one period or through just the improvements of one or two productive seasons. In order to free oneself from backwardness, it is necessary to extend scientific and technological benefits to the rural areas so as to make the farmer not just self-sufficient but also to ensure that he produces enough to meet the needs of the urban people and produces all that is necessary for industrial development. In order to raise agricultural productivity to this stage, it is imperative that research work be expanded and strengthened and that scientific agricultural methods, as well as tractors and various other modern agricultural services, be available to the farmer. There is no alternative to expanding irrigation services in order to free farming from the problems of nature and to make it productive.

It is clear that unless we make efforts in this way, to free our farming from backwardness, we shall not be free from the pressures of climatic changes. Our country's climatic condition has shown some improvement since last year, and hence we are now in a better situation. So far this year the brief periods of rainfall have been sufficient, except in the Red Sea area and the western frontiers of the country. Even though we cannot be totally certain, from what we can observe now it is expected that the coming rains will be satisfactory. Nevertheless, as we can observe from our previous experiences, it is not possible to accurately predict that the climatic conditions in the coming years will always be satisfactory. Hence, we must make more efforts this year to make full use of this good opportunity. Special efforts need to be made in each area in order to store as much rain water as possible.

We need to realize that when the efforts made by each area to help itself are added up at the national level, the results will be very great. Hence, unless each area does not facilitate and create conditions for self-assistance, there will be no reliable alternative whereby we can become self-sufficient at the national level. It is necessary to placeemphasis on backyard farming and livestock rearing within this activity of self-assistance embarked upon by each area. Dear comrades, as is known, one of the programs we have embarked upon in order to change the lives of the rural people is the gathering of the peasants in villgaes.

As we have tried to inform the people at every opportunity, this program has extensive and fundamental aims and objectives. First, as anyone can observe, one of the objectives of the villages program is to facilitate conditions whereby peasants who have been living on widely scattered farms can help each other in eliminating their social problems and where they can jointly obtain government support. This is also one of the solutions for freeing our country from backwardness by properly implementing science and technology in the rural areas. As long as we say we are going to build socialism in our country then it is important to properly plan needs, production, and distribution and there is no alternative but to make the rural areas the beneficiaries of this.

In any social system, increasing productivity requires progress toward specialization. The habit of each individual trying to produce only for his own needs is one type of behavior in a backward production system. So, in order to be freed from this situation and strengthen agricultural productivity, each area should concentrate on the product which it can best produce. The gathering of peasants into villages is one of the principal conditions necessary in order to study and plan each area's production focus, make it benefit from modern technology, and make the peasant not just self-sufficient, but allow him to produce enough for national consumption.

The peasant program, when its social benefits are viewed, facilitates a situation for providing clean water for both man and animals, health services, schools, roads, banks, modern storage facilities, warehouses, retail shops for industrial products, and modern agricultural equipment.

I want to take this opportunity to point out that the government is cooperating with the peasants and making great efforts to fulfill these needs. These services, as a result of their nature, cannot be provided just for each individual but require joint usage, and hence the gathering of people in one area is decisive for their distribution. Concerning water in particular, even though great changes have been made during the revolutionary years, today water is still a basic question in the rural areas. Hence, coordinated efforts are being made to provide adequate water to those peasants and their livestock who have been gathered in villages. The problems that our mothers and sisters face as a result of shortages of mills is clear. Since it is not beyond our country's capacity to change the face of the rural area, we will facilitate conditions whereby the problems of those peasants gathered in villages can be solved urgently. The formulation of a credit policy conducive to providing technological products which increase productivity is imperative. In this respect, special consideration has been given to the peasant in the credit policy which has been formulated in a new manner.

In this new credit policy, in order to support the peasants' efforts to increase productivity, the interest rates for fertilizers, seeds, and agricultural equipment will be reduced from the average of 9 to 12 percent to about 5 percent. [applause] A system has been formulated whereby the peasants' share in the country's annual credit plan will increase in accordance with the peasants' contribution to the economy.

Comrades: Even though there have been improvements, one problem that we have not satisfactorily solved is the problem of the exchange of goods and the spiralling costs. Better efforts have been made this year to provide industrial products through cooperatives to the rural area. Retail prices of any industrial product charged by state and individual traders differ by a factor of three or four, and it is not difficult to see that steps taken to improve the [word indistinct] of the government sector have brought about better conditions for the peasants. Even though great efforts have been made to formulate a system whereby the peasants' produce is available to the workers under government pricing, the result has not been as satisfactory as expected. The workers', and in general the urban dwellers' purchasing power has not improved much. There are many steps which need to be taken to strengthen government trade organizations in order to solve the problems in the area of the exchange and distribution of goods.

In regard to improving workers' living standards, the exchange and distribution of goods is given special emphasis. There is no alternative but to increase mass participation in retail business in addition to strengthening and expanding government trade organizations and increasing their role. The people's system will prevail in the retail business when the workers come together and establish consumer cooperatives in the cities, rural areas, residential, and business areas; directly participate in the task of exchange and distribution; and when their power to provide goods for themselves and by themselves is strengthened.

The consumer cooperatives will not be built from scratch but on the basis of the existing people's shops through better organization. Consumer cooperatives are public organizations which will be established by residents of a given area voluntarily by coordinating their skills and finances. Their main objective will be to provide the members with the industrial and agricultural produce they need at appropriate prices. In order to bring this about, a policy has been prepared to follow up and strengthen activities to establish consumer cooperatives in towns and rural areas and the government has facilitated conditions whereby this problem will be alleviated.

One of the main issues which needs to be emphasized in improving the lives of the salaried workers is the alleviation of the existing problem of salary payment. Studies have been undertaken to solve this problem inherited from the previous system. The main focus of this research is to adjust the disorganized salary system in a scientific manner. It will help formulate methods whereby the complexity, difficulty, and nature of work in the economy will be taken into consideration in order to create a system in which there is equal pay for equal work and payment according to capability and the nature of the work.

Another aim of the salary review is to regulate ways whereby salary increases are tied to workers' productivity, whereby each organization can minimize its overhead and produce quality products for additional profit while also providing various incentives to workers. In short, the aim of the salary study is to change the disorganized old system and establish a system whereby the workers' living standards increase in line with productivity. Conditions will be created whereby this study is completed within a short time and is implemented.

The other sector that will be given more attention is the recently established housing policy which is aimed at improving the lives of urban working people. The major task will be implementing this policy properly. Since the objective of the policy falls within the context of the construction of a new society, that is the improvement of the living standards of the working masses, concrete steps have been taken to enable the working people to participate in getting low cost housing. Hence, the country's policy on loans through the activities of the housing cooperatives has reduced the interest on housing loans to 4.5 percent in order to encourage and assist housing construction. [applause]

In addition to this, the price of cement has been reduced. In line with this policy on housing, continuous steps to help assist the expansion of housing construction will be taken. What remains is for the working people to take this opportunity and help themselves; everyone should work for the expansion of the housing cooperatives.

Beloved Compatriots: As I have tried to explain on various occasions, it is of paramount importance to understand our present situation and thus to create a favorable situation for the enhancement of the development of our country in order to speed up our economic and social development. In line with this, we have stressed the need to develop the habit of living thriftily in accordance with our country's resources. In this respect, various steps have been taken to avoid a [high] standard of living and to diminish the supply of consumer commodities which are beyond our means such as dress fashions and vehicles. These steps are making a substantial contribution toward relieving the pressure and making continuous use of local products. Even though it is possible to give a detailed account of the advantages of these steps, it will suffice to point out the results achieved through the control of the use of government vehicles and the rationing of fuel.

The steps taken since March 1984 to enable government vehicles and in particular fuel to be used only for official purposes has not only reduced the wear and tear on government vehicles but it has brought great advantages in the saving of fuel. In this respect, in the past 9 months, since fuel rationing was implemented from 1 April 1984 to 7 January 1985, 33.5 million liters of fuel or 34 million birr, has been saved compared to the previous year. [applause]

This saving is very important for it has been achieved at a time when a large quantity of fuel has been needed for the additional vehicles brought into our country to assist our drought-stricken compatriots who have been affected due to the imbalance of weather conditions evident in our country. Many development activities have been carried out in resettling our compatriots in the various fertile parts of our country. What we can learn from this very limited experience is that if every citizen and every government and public organization gives the proper and sincere attention to the development of his beloved motherland by its citizens, it is possible to achieve great results in a short time. Therefore, by utilizing our time, let us struggle to rid ourselves of our problems, above all to avoid being aid recipients, and to occupy a respectable place in the international community.

Working people of Ethiopia, as I have tried to explain earlier, our desire and effort is to be free of backwardness and draw closer, as quickly as possible, to a better life. This is our sincere unwavering stand, even though our struggle is also with our enemies who are opponents of our identity and development. Therefore, we must not be lax in this respect as well. As we have learned from experience gained over the last years, as soon as we near a step toward our popular goal, our enemies will not hesitate to try and block us with everything in their power. Even now it is clear that our enemies are sleepless in the face of the fact that we are on the eve of establishing the people's democratic republic, under which the working people will ensure their supremacy and which will occupy a unique spot in our country's history. Therefore, I would like to remind all citizens that in addition to the obligations being shouldered by the revolutionary forces, they will have to be more alert and prepared to thwart any enemy activity.

Even so, we will not deny our hand of peace to those who come seeking peace. We will stand alongside those from near and far who stand for the honorable aims of mutual well being, peace, and prosperity.

In the spirit of this international workers honorable celebrations, we would like to express our solidarity with those struggling for their identity and freedom in any part of the world. In particular those people dying in the struggle for justice in Africa, Asia, the Middle East, and Latin America and all those throughout the world struggling for peace, democracy, social development, and socialism. [applause]

May international proletarianism live forever. The People's Democratic Republic of Ethiopia will be established through our struggle. Thank you. [applause]

President Daniel arap Moi Delivers May Day Speech

EA020903 Nairobi Domestic Service in English
1038 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] His Excellency President Daniel arap Moi today called on all firms except for shops and restaurants to implement the 5-day working week. The president said that Saturday was too short for any meaningful work to be done while some workers needed the day for worship. President Moi was addressing a mammoth crowd of workers at the Nyayo National Stadium in Nairobi when he led the nation in marking the Labor Day.

The president further stated that he refused to go to the coronation of the king of Swaziland last week because he could not sit together or talk to prime minister P. Botha of South Africa. He said that Botha and his government were unacceptable until all the people of South Africa were allowed to live in complete freedom and their human dignity respected. President Moi said Botha should release black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela and other nationalists and implement a new constitution which guaranteed the freedom of all races in South Africa. He said the situation where Botha picked only a few people of his own choice was mere whitewash designed to hoodwink the international community.

Touching on the functions of the Kenya Industrial Court, President Moi announced that the government will take action to amend the relevant laws to provide for additional jurists in order to strengthen the court. The president noted that this would further hasten the settlement of industrial disputes. And paying tribute to the Industrial Court for its good work over the years, President Moi said it was uniquely a Kenyan institution. Kenya was acknowledged as a country with one of the most practical labor legislation and effective machinery for the settlement of industrial disputes he added. The president pointed out that industrial peace was a fundamental requirement for the success of Kenya's economic development that should continue to be maintaiend and in which both workers and employers had a stake.

Touching on the forthcoming trade union elections in the country, President Moi noted that Kenyan workers looked forward to electing representatives who are both able and determined to lead them in harnessing their efforts into more productive activities for the best of all. He said the elections of the right leadership in the labor movement was of special significance especially now that the country has just launched a blueprint on the strategy for a renewed growth of the economy for the rest of the century.

The president observed that while higher salaries were necessary, workers' representatives needed to look into more dynamic ways of improving the welfare of the their workers. These included calling for housing schemes for workers and seeking ways for them to participate more actively in the ownership of the enterprises they worked for, he advised.

On unemployment, President Moi said that the trade union movement had a crucial role to play in alleviating the problem.

Noting that one of the solutions was to strike a realistic balance between the resources used to reward those already employed and the amount of investment to create further employment opportunities for those entering the labor market every year, he stressed that every Kenyan had an important part to play in increasing productivity by utilizing the resources at the country's disposal more efficiently and producing goods and services at cheaper costs. This way there would be higher savings for further investment he said. Noting that unemployment must be viewed together with the problem of high population growth, the president said the government would continue to give the necessary support and incentives to the agriculture, informal [as heard], and manufacturing sectors for domestic and export markets in an effort to generate job opportunities.

On retirement benefits President Moi told the workers that the government was deeply concerned with the delays that workers experienced in obtaining payments from the National Social Security Fund, NSSF. Workers should be glad to know that in addition to the proposed amendments to the NSSF Act to be discussed in Parliament this year, the government has introduced management procedures to enable workers to be paid their dues without delay.

The president, who paid tribute to the dynamism and determination of Kenyan workers which had enabled the country to achieve rapid growth, reminded Kenyans that they should not allow the stable foundation to be destroyed by a few selfish and evil minded individuals.

THE STANDARD Reports 37 Killed in Mara Region Ambush

EA010839 Nairobi THE STANDARD in English
1 May 86 p 24

["37 Killed in Ambush," by THE STANDARD reporter]

[Text] Thirty-seven people were killed and others injured in a bloody encounter between Gibaso villagers of Tarime and a group of other people who were tracking cattle rustlers in Mara region.

The weekend killings were narrated by the Serengeti District commissioner, Lieutenant Colonel Laban Makunege, who said the victims were ambushed as they were walking towards Gibaso Village from Bunchanchari Village, where some 60 head of cattle were stolen. They had set out to follow the foot marks of the rustlers.

Guns, spears, bows, and arrows were used in the ambush, killing 37 people and wounding others. No reasons for the ambush were given. About half of the victims were identified by early this week, and the police were meanwhile busy trying to keep the peace in the area following the incident.

Cattle rustling is a major problem in the region and has frequently led to violence. Two years ago 46 people were killed in a similar clash between local militia, villagers, and cattle thieves.

SOMALIA

President Barre Addresses Rally on Eve of May Day

EA011200 Mogadishu Domestic Service in Somali
0530 GMT 1 May 86

[Speech by Somali President Challe Mohamed Siad Barre at a rally on the eve of May Day in Merca — recorded]

[Text] Good day, comrades. [Applause] for some time now, there has been a campaign to create confusion among the Somali people. A protracted war has been waged against our people, a war which aims to divide the people along tribal lines. A war which aims to create confusion in the minds of the Somali people, a war on our economy. You all know who has been behind that dirty war: it is colonialists of course.

At what level were the Somali people during the birth of our revolution? What were they at that time? What achievements had they made then? The truth is, all these vehicles you see here today were not there. People had to use military vehicles when it came to travelling to attend [celebrations]. It is obvious that once the people collectively use their energy and brains, the result attained is clear beyond any doubt.

El Challe, prior to this rally, El Challe was an orientation center. We have all gone through this center at one time or another. Youth, workers, farmers, cooperators, nomads, pastoralists, and the rest have all been through this center. We made this center a headquarters at which our people could be turned into revolutionaries. The center, where our people receivedideological education and political education, also served as a health institution where the sick were treated.

Having said that, on the significance of May Day — which we are celebrating today — for all Somali workers, be they members of a trade union or otherwise, today they vividly said no to revisionists; no to misguided elements. Despite the fact that we are hungary, we will continue with our revolution to liberate ourselves from imperialism. In the name of Allah I can say that the Somali citizens are a free people. [applause] In the name Allah, the General Federation of Somali Trade Unions is an independent union. The Somali workers who do not belong to any union are also independent.

The oppression we were subjected to for the past 9 years, the lies we were told in these difficult years have been unbearable. We were brainwashed; our economy was ruined; we suffered all sorts of sabotage; I can assure you that to date they have not given up their ploys. They are continuing with the struggle, day and night. All those who are taking part in this rally and others who are taking part in similar rallies elsewhere in the SDR are committed to achieving economic, political, and social advancement. Those opposed to the achievements of the above mentioned goals are the elements opposed to any development. Believe me they are doomed. You, the progressive forces, will triumph. [applause] I am a witness to the crimes they have committed, and I know what your intentions are. I know that those destructive elements are the ones who ruined what you have labored so hard to build.

Let me turn again to this, to Labor Day. When we resolved to manage our own affairs, we said that the workers are the backbone of the Somali people in respect to their own development. The workers play a principal role in the country's life. When I said that the worker is the backbone of the nation, I meant that if someone breaks his backbone, he cannot work. In view of that, no nation therefore can attain its goals if its workers are not a committed group. The antidesertification campaign which culminated in this rally was indeed a very important undertaking. Afforestation is part of our economic development because if we do not halt the encroachment of the desert the result will be catastrophic.

Our previous work in that direction has borne fruit.

Today, that area which was once a desert, is today the home of some beautiful wildlife. I mean big game. That area was transformed by workers' muscles. The work you have done today is of great importance. Thank you very much. I once again thank you in the name of the Somali people. This is the greatest war that you have waged against starvation, against our enemies, against the revisionists, and the detractors of our progress; a war against loitering and weak characters.

In 17 years, all that we have accomplished is not visible to us but only our true friends can tell you the truth. We have achieved miracles in all directions. May I ask you one question? In those 9 years had it not been for the problems we encountered, I think today we could have made great strides in every direction. Today we could have obtained self-sufficiency in our food requirements, we could have eradicated disease and poverty. We are just about to eradicate illiteracy. We have withstood all the problems with courage and dedication which few could match. You all know that we have resolved to reidentify our enemies, identify our capabilities, nationality, and unity. We have resolved to correct mistakes we inherited and to awaken from sleep, and endeavor to be more successful than we have so far been. We have resolved to develop our economy, aim for higher goals, increase our self-confidence, to refuse to be divided, and to fight tribalism from all directions, and to combat corruption, nepotism, and injustice. That is what the new party action program is all about.

The true enemies of the Somalis are illiteracy, hunger, disease, and imperialism. Imperialists are working hard to see that they distract us from our goals. The enemy has to be identified and eliminated. We have to distinguish our friends from our enemies. We can only achieve our objectives by being united and by redoubling our efforts in obtaining our objectives. We all have to collectively eradicate all bad elements in our society.

We have been endeavoring to avoid being beggars and being dependent on someone else. It is an ugly thing indeed. We said in those days that the Somali nation's flag should be flying high. But the Somali flag could fly high only if the treasury is in a healthy position. I mean when it is in a position to meet the requirements of the masses, in all sectors of our life. But my dear citizens, if the government went broke, all those requirements could never be met.

Taxes play a very vital role in the development of every nation. All those fellows you see going around collecting taxes are doing so for your own interest. Tax evaders have to be fought everywhere. There can be no excuse for nonpayment of taxes. People have to be educated about the importance of taxes and their payment.

You are all aware that we met with the Ethiopian leader Colonel Mengistu Haile Mariam in Djibouti, I told you before and I am repeating it again today. I told him that we have been enemies for centuries and that although God has created us, he is in the Horn of Africa, and that since none of us would ever leave this region, I said that it would have been a healthy idea for both countries to divert the huge sums of money they are spending on armaments to development and thus enhance development and obtain a permanent solution to the age old and thorny issue of the Horn of Africa conflict. I wish all the workers great success. Good luck, and thank you.

President Mwinyi Delivers May Day Address

EA012059 Dar es Salaam Domestic Service in Swahili
0852 GMT 1 May 86

[Speech by President Ali Hassan Mwinyi at May Day celebrations at the national stadium in Dar es Salaam — live]

[Excerpts] Ndugu workers and Ndugu citizens. First of all I wish to thank all Tanzanian workers and wish them blessings for the future. Secondly, I wish, on your behalf, to thank Dar es Salaam regional leaders for their generous welcome and agreement to host this year's May Day celebrations.

Ndugu chairman [of the Union of Tanzania Workers], for the last 6 months our economy has entered a very difficult period due to a multitude of factors. Among these factors is the rapid increase [as heard] in the price of oil which consumes a very large portion of our national income. The increased oil prices [as heard] have caused Western industrialized nations to greatly increase the prices of their products to ensure that they are not left behind in the evil race of increasing prices. And as if that blow was not enough, the industrialized nations have plotted to reduce the prices of goods produced by Third World farmers. In such circumstances our economic crisis will continue to worsen. We do not expect the situation to change for the better in the coming 18 months.

Citizens, I beg you, let us continue tightening our belts. My hope is that as darkness continues to loom so does the brightness of the morning dawn and ultimately the sun's heat continues to get nearer. [applause] A combination of the factors I have just listed, in addition to a decrease in our cash crop production, has greatly reduced our ability to acquire foreign exchange. And due to a lack of foreign exchange we are unable to import spare parts and raw materials to meet the demands of our factories. The result of this situation is a lack of essential requirements in our factories and shops, a fact that has produced the phenomena of racketeering, smuggling, and exorbitant prices.

The high prices do not pose a problem to either a racketeer or a smuggler, against whom, citizens, we must cooperate in fighting. The high prices constitute a problem and a very heavy burden to ordinary and faithful citizens, particularly to those in the lower income bracket. The worker's salary today is like a goat'stail, it is too short, you cannot even use it to whisk away a fly that has settled on you. That is the case of the worker's salaries. It is a problem. In spite of all that, our workers have shown maturity. They have endured patiently in a civilized manner. Their gentlemanly behavior is exemplary. This stems from their awareness of the situation of their country, Let me, then, commiserate with and congratulate all the workers at the same time.

I would expect a government official who is sufficiently knowledgeable about the condition of his fellow workers today to use this opportunity to declare an increase in salaries [applause]. Unfortunately brother workers it cannot be done, since there is a presidential commission chaired by Ndugu Nsekela responsible for consulting the government before such a decision is made. The government, brothers, is patiently awaiting the commission's report. The government intends to raise the salaries of the lowest paid in accordance with the country's abilities. Similarly, those in the middle and higher brackets will have some tax increases or reductions. But what I can say here today is this: Let us continue to endure, because there is always a silver lining. Mwalimu Nyerere once said: You cannot cook your food until the water boils, so let us wait until the water boils.

The major thing to think about before we consider reducing costs of industrial production is stepping up agricultural production to beyond or at least up to the level it was at before. Statistics show, for example, that food production has been decreasing year by year, while the consumer population is rapidly increasing. If we start with corn production, for example, the statistics tell us this crop has fallen from 222,500 tons in 1978 to just 89,000 tons in 1984/85. Rice has fallen from 60,800 tons in 1971 to 25,000 tons. Wheat has fallen from 56,000 tons in 1971 to just 33,000 tons in 1984/85. The same story applies to cash crops. Coffee fell to only 49,000 tons in 1984/81. Cotton also fell to only 51,000 from 72,200 tons in 1972/73. Tea also fell to 16,800 tons as opposed to 18,500 tons in 1977/78. Cashew nuts did not just fall, but collapsed from 143,000 tons in 1972/73 to 32,000 tons the year before last. Tobacco fell from 19,600 tons in 1977 to 13,000 tons last year. As for sisal, the situation defies description: This crop fell from 230,000 tons in 1964 to just 6,000 tons in recent years.

Brother citizens, these are our sources. One is food crops and the other cash crops to get foreign reserves to buy our requirements. These sources, as the statistics show, are drying up. The more they dry up, the greater our problems. All such things as higher prices, racketeering, hoarding are the results of our present state. Brother workers: Salary increases under present circumstances will not cure our ills.

We must abandon the idea of living as if we were a rich nation so long as we are in such a state. We must learn to curb expenditures, including those on production and even on services. We have to abandon the habit of being extravagant with our resources. We must be vigilant and feel pained when national assets are squandered.

The government, in cooperation with the people, is determined to put its weight behind three things: agriculture, transport, and industry. In cooperation with the people, the government will put a great deal of weight behind food production and commerce; all the ministries are under special instruction to ensure that their work will promote agriculture. For agriculture to progress to the required levels in our country and for cash crops to reach the ports for export, the transport sector will be given special priority. You know that the importance of roads and transport for the country is analogous to the arteries of the body. Deterioration of the transport sector means the deterioration of all economic development and is even a threat to life.

Another matter is the revival of our industries. Cash crops yeild foreign reserves, which help us obtain inputs and raw materials to enable us to produce enough to satisfy our daily needs such as sugar, soap, cement, corrugated iron sheets, cloth, hoes, and so on. To achieve all this we need devoted farmers and also workers determined to do their duty with devotion and patriotism. I would like to commend this motto to all farmers and workers: Let us live this year of 1986 with the determination to achieve our goals.

The history of workers over the period of many centuries has been linked with the liberation struggle. Workers organizations have been formed to defend the interests of workers against the exploitation and scornful attitudes of capitalists, feudalists, and colonialists. The areas of operation of the capitalists, feudalists, and colonialists have shrunk in the world, but they have not been completely eliminated. Our colleagues in South Africa and Namibia continue to be victims of such a plight. It is our duty on a day like this to remember them. Last year the chairman said: To persecute is sinful but to agree to be persecuted is even more sinful. Our brothers in South Africa seem to have heard this and now refuse to be persecuted. They have decided to face up to their persecutors [applause] without fear and without concern to their life. Now open struggle has been ignited in South Africa. The Boers' homes and the Boers' friends' homes are on fire. The patriots have resolved to fight for their rights, regardless of dangers to life. The number of those who sacrificed their lives now exceeds 1,500. They have given up their lives to liberate their country and assert their dignity. The Boers have increased their cruel and brutal acts but the cruelty of the unjust always fails against those who are fighting for their rights. Right cannot be vanquished by injustice. In a struggle right always wins. Recent history has demonstrated the truth of this. The injustice in Mozambique, Angola, Zimbabwe, and other colonies of the Portuguese yielded when right appeared in those territories. This struggle now continues in South Africa. The Boers continue with their cruelty, killings, and now they even practise trickery and deceit. But everybody knows these are the last kicks of the dying one. For this reason the workers of Tanzania support all liberation movements in Namibia, Western Sahara, Palestine, and South Africa. [applause]

We assure these friends of ours that we are with them morally and materially at all times until they attain victory – luta continua.

Now this story is a lesson to human beings. Those who are very powerful and very rich should not use the wealth or the power to crush the weak and the small ones. [applause] Recent events remind us that there are superpowers that do exactly this. Recently, Libya was bombed and many people died, some of them little children and women who had nothing to with the conflict. At the same time, that very same state aids vicious opposition rebels in Nicaragua to overthrow their government. The same state supports the traitor Savimbi to bring down the lawful government of Angola. The same state is enabling South Africa to be arrogantly working for the destabilization of its neighbors. Had the government of such a great power been under believers [as heard] we would have expected something different. We advise it strongly, we strongly advise that this course be abandoned — this course frightens us, the little ones.

Mr Chairman, today is the workers day and I want to conclude these words of mine by wishing the workers much goodness and blessings and much activity in the coming days.

Joint Commission Meeting With Rwanda Opens 30 Apr

EA302337 Dar es Salaam External Service in English
1600 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Dar es Salaam — Tanzania has pledged total commitment to the transportation of Rwandan goods as a means of maintaining the good relations between the two countries. The pledge was made by the minister for communications and works, Ndugu Mustafa Nyanganyi, when addressing the opening session of the 10th joint Tanzania-Rwanda commission in Dar es Salaam today. Ndugu Nyanganyi noted that Tanzania was fully aware of the problem of transportation facing land-locked Rwanda and that the government would try to help solve the problem. The minister, who was leading Tanzania's delegation to the talks, also urged the two countries to aim at closer economic integration and increase trade as an effective means of promoting economic growth and development. Rwanda's delegation to the talks is being led by the country's foreign minister, Mr Francois Ngarukiyintwali.

In the meantime, the prime minister and first vice president, Ndugu Joseph Warioba, has urged [words indistinct] and promotion of mutual cooperation between Tanzania and Rwanda be encouraged. Ndugu Warioba was speaking during talks with Mr Ngarukiyintwali, who called on him in his office in Dar es Salaam today.

Minister Cited on Relations

EA011545 Dakar PANA in English 1250 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpt] The Tanzanian minister for communications and works called for the review of previous action programs in agriculture, education, culture, information, tourism, and nature conservation and set new ones. He, however, cautioned that in carrying out the plan, the two countries' economic viability should be taken into account. The minister, who heads the Tanzania delegation at the meeting, commended the achievements attained by the security committee in demography and immigration and appealed for tough measures against anti-Rwanda/Tanzania elements by disarming them through strict observance of existing laws and regulations.

Meanwhile, the Rwandan Government has hailed Tanzania's firm commitment in promoting the objectives of the Organization of African Unity and the interests of Third World countries. Speaking at a dinner hosted by the foreign minister, Benjamin Mkapa, on Tuesday night, the Rwandan foreign minister, Francois Ngarukiyintwali, said that Rwanda highly appreciated Tanzania's contribution to the OAU and to the liberation struggle in southern Africa. The Rwandan foreign minister said his country was determined to foster friendly relations with neighboring countries and that friendly bilateral relations between the two countries would be strengthened.

Kisekka Addresses Nation; Museveni 'on Safari'

EA011120 Kampala Domestic Service in English
0847 GMT 01 May 86

[Address to the nation by Prime Minister Dr Samson Kisekka on Labor Day — live]

[Excerpts] My fellow workers, Your Excellencies, ladies, and gentlemen: Before I address the nation I am bringing an apology from the president himself that he has been unable to attend this morning. He is on a big duty in the country. He is on safari. He thought that he would be on time [as heard] to come and address the nation. So he asked me to address you.

Now before I read what he wanted me to say, will just get one or two comments about the National Organization of Trade Unions [NOTU]. First of all I want everybody in the country to know that the commission of enquiry into corruption and mismanagement of government and parastatal employees of whatever, maybe is already gazetted. So there is no question about that. NOTU must note that, that we are not interested in corruption. And, two, instead of including police and army in your organization, why do you forget the coffee producers? You know, whose (?trade) covers 80 to 90 percent of Uganda's economy. [Words indistinct] the common man. So this you must also note.

As for Foreign Exchange Allocation Committee, the Immigration Board, the present education system is being looked into. And lastly the government vigorously condemns the inhuman treatment and exploitation of workers irrespective of their color and [words indistinct].

There has been a total breakdown in the rule of law. The government of the NRM is determined to restore the rule of law as enshrined in the 10-point program. May I address an appeal to you all, workers and all Ugandans in your various walks of life not to take law into your own hands, because this will only spell doom for our population. The workers should avoid wildcat strikes, since there is an established machinery for resolving industrial dispute. Employers likewise should make a deliberate effort to ensure that disputes are resolved amicably.

The government is however aware that some labor legislation needs to be re-examined. The government will embark on an exhaustive re-examination of these laws within the framework of the social and economic policies of the NRM. The government is also aware of the widespread underemployment in the rural and urban areas. To overcome some of these negative trends the government proposes to reactivate the employment service in the Ministry of Labor to mobilize the necessary human resources. To this end government welcomes the (?ILO) and the UN Development Program-sponsored special public work program which is one of the methods for generation [of] mass employment. Besides Karamoja and Kapchora, the government has extended the program to other areas of the country, such as the Luwero triangle and will soon move to Arua District and other areas which were badly affected during the liberation struggle, wish to thank all the donor countries and international agencies which have supported and continue to support this program.

Ladies and gentlemen, the armed struggle is over. We have now embarked on the road to political, social, and economic recovery. It is my deepest conviction that workers and employers are well placed to play their role to achieve this objective. My clarion call on this day is: Let us all unite to harness our resources in the noble mission of restoring this nation to its long deserved prosperity. Thank you.

Angola Seeks Pressure on U.S. To Stop Aid to UNITA
AB301531 Dakar PANA in French 1120 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Brazzaville, 30 Apr (ACI/PANA) — The Angolan delegation to the seventh ordinary congress of the Congolese Trade Union Confederation (CSC) now taking place in Brazzaville has asked Congo to apply pressure on the United States in order to compel it to stop all aid to UNITA (armed opposition in Angola).

In his speech on Tuesday, the 4th day of the congress which will end on Wednesday, the leader of the Angolan delegation violently criticized the American aid to UNITA. This aid, he said, is going to enable this puppet movement to perpetrate the assassination of the populations and to destroy Angola's economic infrastructure.

It was recalled that UNITA's leader, Jonas Savimbi, was received last January in Washington by President Ronald Reagan with all the honors due to a head of state. According to the Angolan representative, this support turns the United States into a country which undertakes actions of "state terrorism" in order to destabilize nations which have freely chosen their destinies. He praised the bravery of the People's Armed Forces for the Liberation of Angola (FAPLA) which, in southern Angola, recently shot down two of the three American-made planes belonging to UNITA.

IMF Conditions for Debt Rescheduling Accepted
AB301841 Paris AFP in French 1635 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Brazzaville, 30 Apr (AFP) — Congo has accepted the IMF's tutelage for the rescheduling of its debt, it was announced on Tuesday evening by Mr Lekoundzou Itihi, the minister of finance.

In return for this acceptance, the IMF will sponsor [Congo's] negotiations with the Paris Club for the debt it owes to states and the London Club for its debt owed to commerical banks, stated the minister in his address to the seventh congress of the sole Congolese Trade Union Confederation — the CSC, currently in session in the capital since Saturday — which was rebroadcast by the national radio, "The Voice of the Congolese Revolution." It will be recalled that an IMF mission visited Brazzaville at the beginning of this month. Mr Lekoundzou added that the rescheduling of Congo's debt is an important step in the redress of the country's financial balance and that the IMF has approved "the structural adjustment program" adopted last year which aims at reducing state budget by 50 percent.

Congo's debt servcing, which currently stands at about 159 billion CFA per year, might be reduced to about 40 billion, according to the general view in the capital.

Kengo wa Dondo Receives Senegalese President's Envoy
AB281752 Kinshasa AZAP in French 1400 GMT 28 Apr 86

[Text] Kinshasa, 28 Apr (AZAP) — The first state commissioner, Kengo wa Dondo, today at the Council Building received El Hadj Sam Wagne, Senegalese President Abdou Diouf's special envoy, who delivered to him a written message from President Diouf to his [Zairian] counterpart and brother, Marshal Mobutu Sese Seko. On the occasion, Mr Wagne expressed the Senegalese people's sincere friendship with and esteem for President Mobutu.

Mr Wagne, who is the International Federation of Twinned Towns and Cities delegate for Africa and the Middle East, declared that he has come to solicit intercommunal collaboration from Zairian municipalities. In this context, the Federation has reserved financial means for Zaire for the construction of low-cost housing for the people.

This program, he said, is in line with the objectives fixed for the 7-year term of office of the MPR founding chairman. Businessmen are prepared to cooperate among themselves in order to make this program a success, he added.

[Words indistinct] in this regard, the delegate of the International Federation of Twinned Cities will hold consultations with the governor of Kinshasa to whom he will make suggestions concerning sanitation and the construction of low-cost housing.

Earlier, he congratulated Citizen Kengo wa Dondo for the renewed confidence that the MPR founding chairman and president of the Republic expressed in him by reappointing him the executive coordinator of the MPR party-state. He also lauded the statesmanship of President Mobutu who, he stressed, has made the Zairian people regain their dignity.

The Senegalese president's special envoy was accompanied to the Council Building by Papa Abdou Cisse, Senegal's ambassador to Zaire.

Soviet Journalists Conclude One-Week Visit

0615 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] At the invitation of the Beninese Journalists Association, AJB, a delegation of the USSR Union of Journalists has just completed a 1-week visit to our country. The delegation, which was led by our colleague Vladimir (Turajev), held many talks with AJB officials and information professionals in our country. The visit enabled the Soviet journalists to hold fruitful discussions on many current developments. Our Soviet colleagues were also able to acquaint themselves with the practice of journalism in our country.

Furthermore, an AJB delegation which held direct talks with the Soviet team on cooperation between the AJB and the USSR Union of Journalists worked out an exchange program with their Soviet counterparts. This will help strengthen the bonds between the two unions. Speaking to Comrade Frejus Bouko, Comrade Vladimir (Turajev) took stock of the visit of his delegation to our country shortly before their departure.

[Begin (Turajev) in Russian fading into French translation] Within the framework of the relations between the associations of journalists of both countries, the USSR Union of Journalists will do its utmost to grant the necessary assistance to the AJB to enable Beninese journalists to improve their professional expertise and their political knowledge so that they can better serve the People's Revolution Party of Benin and the noble cause that it is pursuing.

We are taking back very good memories of our visit here, especially of our talks with Beninese officials. We held discussions with our Beninese colleagues on a number of very concrete questions in the field of cooperation. We agreed to pursue our program of exchanges of delegations; we also examined modalities for training assistance by the USSR Union of Journalists to the AJB. This will be carried out in two ways: First, Beninese students will be sent to the USSR for training; second, Soviet specialists will be sent to Benin to provide short training sessions. [Text] African delegates to the Third International Conference of the African-Soviet Friendship Association held in Moscow have approved that the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean, especially the Island of Diego Garcia must be made nuclear-free zones. The delegates also recommended that Africa should remain a free zone for all nuclear tests.

The president of the Ghana-Soviet Friendship Society, Mr Johnny Hansen, stated this on his return to Accra after leading a 2-man delegation to the conference. He said the conference discussed, among other things, how African countries can strengthen relations with the Soviet Union, and the possibility of eliminating nuclear war. Mr Hansen said the conference condemned the United States for its persistent refusal to comply with the Soviet request to ban nuclear tests. Furthermore, the conference condemned the recent U.S. air raid on Libya.

While in the Soviet Union, the delegation met Ghanaian students there and briefed them on the economic and political development in the country. The delegation also held talks with officials of the Soviet Ministry of Culture and Tourism on areas in which the two countries can cooperate.

The delegation was met on arrival at the airport by the Soviet Ambassador to Ghana, Mr V.M. Semenov.

Kountche Comments on Visits to Gabon, Togo

AB011045 Niamey Domestic Service in French
1200 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] General Seyni Kountche, chairman of the Supreme Military Council and head of state, returned to Niamey late in the morning following his working and friendly visits to Gabon and Togo. The head of state was met by the Prime Minister, Hamid Algabid; the chief of staff of the Niger Armed Forces, Colonel Ali Seybou; members of the Supreme Military Council and the government; the Entente Council Water Supply ministers; and the dean of the diplomatic corps. The head of state later spoke to the press about his working and friendly visits to Gabon and Togo.

[Begin recording] [Kountche] My last visit to Gabon, that is to Libreville, was, I think, in 1983. At that time we laid a new foundation for our cooperation based on a certain number of economic similarities between Gabon and Niger. As you are aware, the world is currently facing a different economic situation due tothe fluctuation of the dollar, but especially because of energy problems, particularly oil. As I said in my message to the nation on (?15) April, these two phenomena have had repercussions on our economy.

Also, although we do not share borders with Gabon, we both belong to certain institutions, so it is altogether normal for us to meet regularly in order to discuss current issues.

We are aware of the role being played by Gabon, and by President Bongo in particular, who with his counterparts from the Congo, and even the current OAU chairman, have been striving to seek a solution to the Chadian problem, a problem which concerns and interests us directly.

Concerning Togo, I think I need to mention how important our personal relations are. Also, Lome constitutes [words indistinct] on our African Continent, just like Gabon, on the eve of major meetings in the subregion. I think it is almost time for the ECOWAS and OAU summits, and even that of the Nonaligned Movement. It is therefore timely for us heads of state to meet to discuss our common concerns, and especially to determine in what context the economic crisis, which has been worsening, can be placed; and to find measures to take either individually or collectively within these institutions in order to face this crisis or crises.

[Unidentified reporter] Mr President, Gabon and Niger are both producers and exporters of uranium. Have the two countries adopted a concerted and joint action, as the fall in the dollar and oil prices will certainly affect uranium prices?

[Kountche] It is obvious that this was one of topics of my talks with President Bongo. Even if Gabon does not produce as much uranium as Niger, we are both interested in knowing the future of uranium production and prices. Added to that is one of the key elements of the Gabonese economy, oil. Even if Niger is not yet an oil producer, nothing proves that Niger does not have any oil deposits. This means that in fact ... [changes thought] meanwhile you know that the board of governors of our two companies, the Air Region Mining Company and the Akouta Mining Company will meet next month, that is, in May. The fall in crude oil prices and the fall in he dollar will surely affect uranium, a raw material which constitutes an important element in our economy. I must add that views from all quarters are welcome before we meet our partners to discuss the consequences of either phonomenon on production in 1986 or 1987 and the consequences on production by both firms in 1986.

[Reporter] One last question, Mr President. We have been informed that Gabon is trying to exercise better control over foreigners on its territory. Have any measures been taken concerning our nationals in that country?

[Kountche] Fortunately for Niger, I think there are less than 500 Niger nationals living in Gabon. It is a matter of sovereignty. Each country has the right to take the measures it deems appropriate for tackling this issue. Therefore the future of Niger nationals living in Gabon is not one of our preoccupations. Our ambassador to Nigeria, who is accredited to Gabon as well, will visit Gabon very soon. Meanwhile last week I met our fellow countrymen of the Samaria [youth development groups] who attended the festival and they told me about our nationals in Gabon, so our ambassador will go to Gabon to enable Niger nationals there to comply with the new immigration laws. I think that today or tomorrow a new group of Niger nationals will arrive at the Niger-Libya border. This will bring the total of returnees from that country to nearly 7,000. This is not the result of an expulsion order. We began last week to receive Niger nationals who have been living illegally at Tamaransett [words indistinct]. This is to say that both here and there the rule is to remain within one's sovereign borders. [end recording]

President Babangida Addresses Workers on May Day

AB011010 Lagos Domestic Service in English
0600 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] As Nigerian workers along with their counterparts in various other countries of the world celebrate Labor Day today, President Ibrahim Babangida has called on them to rededicate themselves to the national challenge of revitalizing the economy.

In nationwide broadcast this morning to mark May Day, President Babangida enjoined Nigerian workers to increase their productivity, and to participate more effectively in the national march toward an era of social justice. He emphasized that the government will want to see a new attitude in the labor movement for the benefit of the country. The administration, the president said, recognized the trade unions as a vital part of the country's socioeconomic structure and had demonstrated this by inviting leaders of the Nigeria Labor Congress [NLC] to participate in the formulation of this year's budget. General Babangida commended the NLC for its suggestions, which he said was valuable in formulating the administration's economic policies, and for its cooperation in working out acceptable distribution of levies and sacrifices dictated by the economic emergency.

The president spoke of the administration's commitment to an environment which encourages workers not merely to raise productivity, but also to share in the fruits of their labor. It is in line with this policy that government abolished taxation on retirement gratuities of workers and allowed collective bargaining on fringe benefits to minimize hardships resulting from the economic emergency.

President Babangida also drew the attention of workers to the need for national vigilance. He noted that since the trade unions cover public and private sector organizations, workers were in a strong position to fight corruption, nepotism and other evils affecting national life. Those who use their positions to undermine the nation's economy should be exposed. To fail in that duty, in the words of the president, is to condone greed, sabotage, and the perpetuation of social justice [as heard].

President Babangida also warned that the administration would not tolerate any breach of the country's laws by any commercial organization, as any such breach will be regarded as economic sabotage.

Niger President Kountche Concludes Visit, Comments

[Excerpts] His Excellency General Seyni Kountche, head of state of Niger, this morning concluded his friendly and working visit to Togo. President Kountche left Lome shortly after 0900 after holding a last discussion this morning at the Distinguished Guest's Residence with his brother and friend, General Gnassingbe Eyadema. It was after this last discussion that the founding chairman of the RPT [Rally of the Togolese People] accompanied our illustrious guest to the Lome Tokoin Airport for his departure. Shortly before his departure from Lome, the Niger head of state, General Seyni Kountche, made the following statement to the press:

[Begin Kountche recording] First of all, I would like to express to the Togolese people, their leaders and in particular to President

Eyadema, the sincere thanks of my delegation for the welcome that was accorded us during our brief visit to Togo. Since the last summit in Yamoussoukro [West African Economic Community summit] — I think that was on 17 January — and which was devoted to reconciliation between Mali and Burkina Faso, President Eyadema and myself had not had the opportunity to meet each other again. It has become a habit, whenever our schedules permit us, to meet to examine the political and in particular the economic situation of our subregion, in view of our relations both on the bilateral plane as well as within the framework of our common institutions. This meeting also came on the eve of the major African summits, like those of ECOWAS, the OAU and even the Nonaligned Movement. These meetings will be held not so much within the context of the atmosphere of peace, but in particular within the context of the economic crisis in spite of the fact that we, the non-oil-producing countries, are already accustomed to the economic situation. Now, we continue to witness the fluctuation of the dollar and the fall in the (?price) of oil. Either of these two phenomena must have consequences for our weak economies.

I have just spoken about the exceptional character of our relations, not only at the level of the leaders of Togo and Niger, but also between the two peoples. Our aim has always been not only to seek ways and means to consolidate these ties and strengthen this solidarity but also to put our heads together and see how we can bolster this complementarity, knowing full well that Niger is a landlocked country that needs — and has always received — the assistance of Togo which is a natural outlet for our country. We are now returning home, after a visit to Gabon. There is an African proverb — commonly used in Togo as well as in Niger — which says that the foot follows the heart's call. [end recording]

Economic Cooperation Talks With FRG Conclude

0615 GMT 1 May 86

[Excerpt] The Togo-FRG negotiations on the 1986-87 economic cooperation program were rounded off yesterday by a press conference, the signing of a report by the two parties, and a final communique that defined the areas in which the FRG intends to give assistance to Togo, particularly in terms of financial and technical cooperation.

Under technical cooperation, a sum of DM (?28) million, about 4.34 billion CFA francs, has been provided. The major operations will be in the areas of cottage industry, regional planning, animal production, development of the forestry economy, and wood production. Also within the framework of technical cooperation, the FRG, in order to ensure a replacement of expatriate officials, is making available to Togo 20 scholarships for 1986.

Under financial cooperation, DM 45 million, about 6.95 billion CFA francs, will be used for road construction in rural areas, water supply for Dapango, rehabiliation of the Kpime hydroelectric station, sea erosion control by means of reinforcement of the Kpeme warf, and construction of prefabricated bridges in rural areas.

Five-Nation Summit Issues 'Final Communique'

MB301752 Luanda Domestic Service in Portuguese 1240 GMT 30 Apr 86

["Final communique" of the sixth summit of the presidents of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe, issued in Luanda on 29 April]

[Text] A meeting of the heads of state of the People's Republic of Angola, Republic of Cape Verde, Republic of Guinea-Bissau, People's Republic of Mozambique, and the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe was held in Luanda from 28 to 29 April 1986. The heads of state were accompanied by important delegations.

The heads of state paid heartfelt homage to the memory of Olof Palme, prime minister of Sweden, and deplored his recent assassination, which deprived the world of an eminent political personality dedicated to the cause of peace and friendship among all peoples.

At the opening session, Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos, president of the People's Republic of Angola and Manuel Pinto da Costa of the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe made important speeches which inspired the conference and paid special homage to Eduardo Mondlane, Amilcar Cabral, and Agostinho Neto, who are all heroes of the five fraternal peoples. They also paid homage to the combatants who have continued to spill their blood in defense of national sovereignty and territorial integrity. The heads of state highlighted various efforts and hardships endured by the five in the struggle against underdevelopment and in raising their peoples' standard of living of their peoples despite the serious economic crisis confronting developing countries.

They condemned the global strategy of international imperialism aimed at asphyxiating the economies of the countries of the so-called Third World through price manipulation of basic commodities.

After approving an agenda, the heads of state assessed the report on the activities of the ministerial commission introduced by the coordinating minister and evaluated activities effected in the context of cooperation among the five countries. The heads of state congratulated each other for efforts to develop privileged cooperative relations. They noted that the war situation imposed on the People's Republic of Angola and the People's Republic of Mozambique, as well as the natural disasters, have created obstacles to the desired development of cooperation among the five.

The summit approved the report of the ministerial commission and the plan of action for 1986-87 and reaffirmed, among other things, the following guidelines:

a. To increase economic cooperation. The existing potential and capacities in each one of the countries must be fully utilized for their mutual benefit.

b. To give special attention to the increase of trade, the rational and joint use of transportation to strengthen other areas of cooperation, the continuation of studies aimed at establishing joint financial institutions, and to strengthen cooperation in information and health.

c. Direct involvement of nation organizations in enterprises and the economic entities in wide-ranging activities. An efficient (?implementation) of this depends on mutual understanding of existing realities.

d. Continuation of joint efforts in training cadres by rational-ly utilizing existing resources in various fields and promoting the creation of new joint training centers.

The heads of state stressed the growing importance of political and diplomatic cooperation and emphasized the need to adopt more systematic and strengthened consultations among the five at an international level. Accordingly, they reaffirmed the pressing need to introduce Portuguese as a working language in the OAU. Thus, they instructed the coordinating minister to approach the OAUsecretariat with a view to rapidly achieving this aim.

The presidents exchanged views about the economic, political, and social situation in each of the five countries and stressed the importance of developing cooperation among the five as a way of providing mutual assistance to national efforts with a view to strengthening hard-won independence.

The heads of state made a profound assessment of burning issues in the international situation and paid special attention to the explosive situation prevailing in southern Africa. This issue was dealt with in a special document — the Luanda Declaration.

The five reiterated their historic support for the just struggles of the Namibian and South African peoples. They reaffirmed their solidarity with SWAPO and the ANC. The five demanded the unconditional release of Nelson Mandela and the South African patriots detained by the South African regime.

The five reiterated their militant solidarity with the struggle of the Saharan people under the leadership of the Polisario Front, their sole and legitimate representative. They stressed that the solution of the problem depends on the application of OAU Resolution 104 and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and the Nonaligned Movement. In this regard, the presidents were pleased with the efforts made by the OAU chairman and the UN secretary general to apply those resolutions, and called upon them to continue their efforts to find a just and final solution for the conflict in Western Sahara.

On the Chadian issue, the five hailed the actions of the OAU chairman and the president of the People's Republic of the Congo in search of peace and national reconciliation in that fraternal country in accordance with Resolution 143 adopted at the 21st OAU summit. They deplored the failure to hold a meeting between main warring factions, scheduled for the People's Republic of the Congo in March 1986.

On the East Timor issue, the five heads of state reiterated their unconditional suport for the struggle of the Maubere people for self-determination and independence and for the Revolutionary Front for East Timor Indpendence [Fretilin] peace initiative. They condemned once again the annexation of that territory by Indonesia. The five exhorted Portugal to fully assume its historic, moral, and judicial responsibilities and to start negotiations with Fretilin. They encouraged the UN secretary general to continue efforts to find a just and final solution to the issue on the basis of the Resolution 5730 of the UN General Assembly, and reiterated the importance of holding an international conference of solidarity with the East Timor people.

The heads of state noted with grave concern the current situation in the Middle East, resulting from Israel's aggressive and expansionist policy. They reiterated their unwavering solidarity with the Palestinian people led by its sole and legitimate representative, the PLO, in the struggle for their inalienable national rights. They spoke once again in favor of holding an international conference on peace in the Middle East with the participation of all interested parties, including the PLO.

The five heads of state condemned the hideous practice of terrorism and they denounced particularly the irresponsibility of certain states which support and promote these actions and use them as an instrument of their policies.

The presidents expressed their deep concern over increasing tension in Central America and the Caribbean due to U.S. intervention and interference in the internal affairs of the countries in the region, particularly Nicaragua. They hailed the Contadora Group's peace initiatives as an important step in establishing peace and tranquility in the region.

They analyzed the situation in the Mediterranean area and vehemently condemned threats and pressures against Libya which culminated with the 15 April 1986 aggression by the American Air Force against Tripoli and Banghazi in flagrant violation of the UN Charter and the principles of modern international law, and they reiterated their unwavering solidarity with the Libyan people and government.

The heads of state underlined once again the causes of the international economic crisis and emphasized the need to establish a new international economic order which would be more just and equitable and to promote development and (?stable) cooperation among peoples. On the special session of the UN General Assembly on the Africa's economic situation to be held in New York from 27-31 May, the heads of states expressed their wish to participate actively in its proceedings. They also launched an appeal to the international community to attend that special session at the highest level as a means of support for Africa in the search of concrete solutions in view of the worsening of the continent's economic and social situation.

The presidents noted that the increased manufacture of weapons capable of massive destruction further aggravates the present world situation characterized by an unbridled arms race, which has extended from outer space to the seabeds, thus increasing the danger of a war threatening the very existence of humanity. In this context, they expressed their conviction that universal peace and security must be secured through a complete and general disarmament within the UN framework and they have launched an appeal to nationswith nuclear power to adopt concrete measures so that outer space and the seabed would be used only for peaceful means. In their concern to eliminate nuclear weapons and the massive destruction systems, the five heads of state reiterated their firm support for the creation of a nuclear-free zone in the Indian Ocean and its continuing status as a peace zone. They defended similar initiatives in other parts of the world in the belief that their fulfillment would contribute to the security of all peoples and nations. The heads of state reiterate once again their deep conviction that vast human resources and material means used in the unbridled arms race could contribute to eliminating underdevelopment affecting a large part of our planet. Accordingly the heads of state support the resumption of disarmament talks between the USSR and the United States, and they appeal to both parties to continue the dialogue with a view to signing agreements effectively reducing and progressively eliminating massive destruction systems.

They reiterated their total adherence to the objectives and principles of the UN charter and stressed the importance of that organization as an unparalleled forum for resolving problems particularly those linked to international peace, security, and development. The heads of state underlined the importance of the nonalignment policy to create a new, equitable system in international political and economic relations. They expressed their satisfaction for the success of the eighth Nonaligned Movement ministerial summit held in Luanda from 2 to 7 September 1985. On this issue, they noted that this summit has particularly contributed to strengthening the unity of the movement and to increasing participation in the struggle against imperialism, neocolonialism, racism, and apartheid. The summit expressed its total support for the decisions of the Luanda ministerial meeting and for the holding of the eight summit of the Nonaligned Movement heads of state and governments to be held in the fraternal Republic of Zimbabwe. The heads of state hailed the June Luanda SADCC summit and reiterated their firm support of the economic liberation process in southern Africa, which runs counter to the hegemonic [word indistinct] designs of the racist Pretoria regime in this region.

The five reiterated their support for and solidarity with the Frontline States in their struggle for peace and stability in southern Africa and against the warlike and racist policy of the Pretoria regime.

(?At the end of the meeting), the heads of state congratulated the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe through its president, Comrade Dr Manuel Pinto da Costa, for its invaluable contribution in developing fraternal cooperation ties among the five countries during the period of Sao Tome and Principe's chairmanship. The presidents expressed their deep satisfaction with the success of the proceedings of the summit of the heads of state of Angola, Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, and Sao Tome and Principe for encouraging prospects for the multiform cooperation to be developed between the five peoples and governments. They hailed the militant and fraternal atmosphere of this summit as well as the usual frankness, trust, and mutual understanding that dominated the debates as proof of the special links that unite the five.

The heads of state announced that the seventh summit of the five Portuguese-speaking African countries will be held in Maputo, People's Republic of Mozambique, in 1987. The heads of State from the Republic of Cape Verde, the Republic of Guinea-Bissau, the People's Republic of Mozambique, and the Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe expressed their deep thanks to the Angolan people, to the MPLA-Labor Party, to the government of the People's Republic of Angola, through its president, Comrade Jose Eduardo dos Santos, for the warm, fraternal, and generous hospitality that they received as well as the members of their delegations. The president of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau, Comrade Joao Bernardo Vieira, expressed on behalf of his counterparts his thanks at the closing session.

[Text] Windhoek, May 2, SAPA — A South African Air Force Dakota has made an emergency landing in northern SWA/Namibia after being hit by anti-aircraft fire, the SWABC reported in Windhoek today. A spokesman for SAAF headquarters in Pretoria said the incident had happened near Okanguazi in the north of Kaokoland yesterday. No one was injured and damage was slight. The aircraft which was flying from Opuma and made its emergency landing at Ondangua. Follow-up operations were underway, the report said. Further details were not immediately available.

Government Bans Public Meetings Until 12 May

MB301655 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1447 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Windhoek, April 30, SAPA — The Herstigte Nasionale Party [Reformed National Party, HNP] has called off a meeting due to be addressed by the HNP leader, Mr Jaap Marais, in Windhoek tomorrow night. The move follows a ban in terms of the Riotous Assemblies Act on public meetings in the Windhoek Magisterial District from today until May 12.

The prohibition of meetings was announced by the SWA-/Namibian transitional government in a statement last night. The leader of the HNP in SWA/Namibia, Mr Sarel Becker, said his party had decided to postpone the meeting until a date after the prohibition had expires. He said the HNP had its reservations about the ban on public gatherings. "There is not such a situation of restiveness (onrustigheid) in Windhoek that would justify the prohibition," Mr Becker said. "On the contrary, there is not nearly the same situation (of unrest) here as there is in South Africa."

Announcing the prohibition on meetings, the SWA/Namibian transitional cabinet said it had "reason to fear that the public pecae could be seriously threatened by such gatherings". The statement did not elaborate, but it was believed the ban was in connection with Cassinga Day, observed by SWAPO in commemoration of people who died in a South African military raid on a SWAPO camp in southern Angola on May 4, 1978.

Meanwhile, a government spokesman said today the prohibition would affect the planned HNP meeting, but a two-day conference would go ahead of parties, including SWAPO, opposed to the present dispensation in SWA/Namibia. The conference, held under the auspices of the Council of Churches in Namibia and scheduled to end today, was meeting in closed session on invitation only, and was not covered by the ban, the official spokesman said.

SOUTH AFRICA

2.5 Million Reportedly Observe National Stayaway

MB011914 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1858 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Up to 2.5 million students and workers throughout the country today staged a stayaway in commemoration of international labour day, May Day, in one of the strongest demonstrations of black solidarity yet seen in South Africa. Estimates from student and worker organisations vary considerably with those of the government and employer organisations, but the head of an academic group who monitored the stayaway today, Prof Eddie Webster, of the University of the Witwatersrand, said the figure could be as high as 2.5 million. Meetings and rallies were held throughout the country, most of them indoor, as several outdoor meetings had been banned yesterday by magisterial orders in terms of the Internal Security Act.

The associated Chambers of Commerce (ASSOCOM) said absentee figures ranged between 70 and 100 per cent countrywide. The only areas not significantly affected were the urban regions of the Orange Free State. Figures for the homeland areas were indeterminate, but one labour expert said he had information that "at least several thousand" were affected. Trains, buses, and taxis which normally transport millions of workers to the "white" urban areas were almost completely empty as student, civic, and worker organisations held meetings to commemorate the 100th anniversary of May Day.

In Durban, about 60,000 people attended the launch of the Inkatha-backed United Workers Union of SA (UWUSA), addressed by Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, chief minister of KwaZulu, at Kings Park. In his speech, Chief Buthelezi said May Day was an extremely important event in the "liberation struggle" now being waged in South Africa. He said, however, trade unions were now to a large extent being exploited by "unscrupulous politicians" for their own ends, advocating socialism and sanctions contrary to the mandates they had been given by their members.

At another meeting held by the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) at the nearby Curries Fountain, general secretary of COSATU, Mr Jay Naidoo, said the free enterprise system which UWUSA was supporting gave employers the freedom to pay "starvation wages and the freedom of the government to withold rights from black people." "We are opposed to money coming into the country to prop up the system of apartheid that oppresses us and the army which kill us," Mr Naidoo said, addressing about 10,000 workers and students.

Spokesmen for the National Union of Mineworkers (NUM) and the Chamber of Mines were at loggerheads today in estimates as to the number of workers involved in the stayaway at mines countrywide — the country's largest source of income. Mr Marcel Golding, press officer for the NUM, said reports coming in from their shaft stewards today indicated there was at least a 60 percent stayaway involving about 270,000 workers. He said the strike — to call for May Day as a public holiday — had affected 10 regions in the country and involved 46 gold and coal mines as well as other establishments. A spokesman for the Chamber of Mines, Mr John Imrie, said it was difficult to assess the number of workers who had taken part in the stayaway, but added that the NUM estimates were "way out of line." He said the strike was "only partially successful" and claimed that out of the 470,000 workers employed by the chamber only about 20,000 stayed away.

A spokesman for Rand Mines said out of their workforce total of 90,000 miners, only 3000 had stayed away. Mr Golding denied this, saying "the extent of the strike demonstrated widespread union support and workers' demands for May Day as a public holiday." He said there had been "strong" police and mine security action and added that 19 workers had been injured at Libanon mine, seven at Kloof and three at Doornfontein.

Besides the two mass rallies held in Durban, there were rallies in Orlando Stadium Soweto, attended by about 25,000 people, one in Kimberly, attended by about 5000, and one at Witbank, attended by about 30,000, according to NUM estimates. There was also a COSATU rally at Wadley stadium in Pietermaritzburg, which drew about 20,000 people.

A spokesman for PUTCO [Public Utility Transport Corporation] bus company — the country's largest bus service — said most of their drivers had not shown up for work today on the Reef. ASSOCOM's Mr Vincent Brett said transport difficulties had swelled the number of stayaways. "Without doubt this is the biggest nationwide stayaway ever," he said.

Apart from businesses, most black and coloured schools were deserted.

Winnie Mandela Speaks in Soweto

MB011959 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1921 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Soweto, May 1, SAPA — Mrs Winnie Mandela today slammed newspapers which had "blown out of proportion" her statement about the "necklace and box of matches," and said she owed no apology to the government. "I don't owe any apology to the racist regime nor THE STAR, nor THE CITIZEN but only my people," she told about 30,000 people who thronged the Orlando Stadium for the May Day rally. "We belong to disciplined organisations," she said, "and people know when it is right to defend ourselves with matches," said Mrs Mandela, wife of imprisoned black nationalist leader, Nelson Mandela. "Blacks have no AK-47's and the enemy is armed to the teeth."

Mrs Mandela was scheduled to appear at a May Day rally in Durban but was held back due to a car accident in which a relative of hers was involved. Instead, she sent a message of solidarity with the workers.

She told the crowd at the stadium that they "were the power" and should "share in the spoils of the country."

Discusses Role of Violence

MB020430 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2254 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Mrs Winnie Mandela, wife of jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, today spelt out her stand on violence at a May Day rally in Soweto, reports an early edition of tomorrow's edition of the BUSINESS DAY. She was addressing a crowd of about 30,000 at Orlando Stadium.

Mrs Mandela said blacks would be called upon to defend themselves — but not with the "necklace" nor a matchstick. "I said to you when the right time comes, you will be called upon to fire back, not with the necklace or a matchstick, because we cannot match the might of Pretoria. You will be called upon to close ranks and prepare against a total onslaught. I said to you Pretoria has driven you to a state where you must declare 1986 a year of liberation," she said. Mrs Mandela said she did not have to apologise for her utterings at a Kagiso meeting about three weeks ago. She was misunderstood by some of the media which had quoted her out of context before she had concluded her speech.

She was loudly applauded when she told the crowd: "You must all have been aware of the hysteria expressed by the white racists recently by the mention of the weapon — the necklace. The panicking racists said I had promoted and advocated violence when I had not. Blacks will be called upon to fight back like Pretoria does today, but we will do so in a disciplined manner," she said. "I know of no white racist who has been a victim of the necklace. I said to you we have no AK-47's but our enemies are armed to the teeth."

When Mrs Mandela — wearing a black outfit, a hat, and a green blouse — arrived at the stadium, the rally was disrupted for almost 30 minutes when people flocked onto the pitch singing freedom songs.

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — Mrs Winnie Mandela was prevented from attending the COSATU [Congress of South African Trade Unions] rally at Curries Fountain here today because of a car accident involving a member of her family, according to a message she sent to the organisers of the rally.

Her message read: "Hundreds of millions of workers throughout the world are at one with you today. Governments throughout the world have declared this day to be a public holiday. This government is one of the few that does not recognise this day to be a public holiday. You are here today, have in fact declared it to be a public holiday. This day is a day of tribute to the sweat and toil of the workers around the world and here in South Africa where so many workers have given their lives to fight tyranny and oppression. I am sad that I could not be with you personally but I am proud to be associated with this rally," she said.

She said that if Nelson Mandela was free today he would be here at Curries Fountain and not anywhere else. She said that if other political prisoners serving sentences with her husband were free they would also be at Curries Fountain.

Teargas Fired in Soweto

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Police fired teargas twice on a crowd of about 30,000 people at Soweto's Orlando Stadium today during a rally to commemorate May Day. The canisters were doused with water and the rally continued after the organisers appealed for calm. At least one woman, who was overcome by the teargas, had to be treated by a Red Cross team.

The rally, organised by the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), had until that stage been without incident, with those attending listening to speeches and singing freedom songs. The incidents happened towards the end of the rally and, as the people filed out of the stadium the situation appeared tense as a riot police contingent that had massed outside since mroning was reinforced by more police and Defence Force personnel. A few people coming from the rally were seen being arrested and put into police vehicles.

Buses which ahd brought delegates from other parts of the Witwatersrand and other areas were followed by police vehicles until they were out of Soweto. Two buses carrying delegates, mostly whites from the University of the Witwatersrand, were also followed by police until they left. One of several buses carrying people from Springs was stopped by the police and impounded at Orlando police station. The passengers were stranded for about an hour until the bus was allowed to continue on its journey.

Students Injured by SADF

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1 SAPA — Several Witwatersrand University students were injured today when SADF members attacked their bus as they drove out of Soweto after attending a May Day rally there. The soldiers allegedly broke the from doors ofthe bus and fired teargas canisters more than once. Panic-striken students — black and white — broke emergency exit windows to escape and several of them were cut by glass. A number of students collapsed in the bus after failing to escape ther fumes and had to be dragged outside by fellow students, a student spokesman, Miss Liz Walker, told SAPA tonigh. Three casspirs, carrying at least 30 armed soldiers, were present when the incident occured just outside Diepkloof, she said.

SADF Explains Attack

MB020820 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0818 GMT
2 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 2, SAPA — The SADF today reacted to claims by University of the Witwatersrand students that they were teargassed in their bus in Soweto yesterday after attending a May Day rally in the black area. A statement by the Defence Forces public relations director said the allegations had been investigated.

The SADF version of events said the students had been chanting anti-SADF slogans and displaying banned literature. "At about 1635 on May 1 a Defence Force patrol was stationary at a petrol station in the Diepkloof area when a bus carrying white and black passengers crossed the intersection. Black power salutes were given, ANC pamphlets were displayed, anti-Defence Force slogans were shouted and cold drink cans were thrown in the direction of the soldiers," the SADF statement said. "The patrol followed the bus. A second bus pulled in behind the patrol. The passengers in this bus were acting in a similar manner to those in the first bus. The patrol carried out an immediate road-block using two buffel military vehicles intending to search the bus and passengers for banned literature. As the troops approached the bus, the passengers closed the doors and the soldiers forced them open. The passengers were asked to get out of the bus. Only about 14 obeyed this request. A tear smoke canister was then thrown through the left rear window. The passengers then kicked out the two rear windows and a number of the side windows and exited through them. The medical orderly with the patrol offered to assist anyone who required help. This offer was rejected. Members of the SA police arrived on the scene, made notes and left. The passengers got back onto the bus, still shouitng slogans. The patrol followed the two buses out of Soweto. While the bus was moving out of the area, the passengers kicked out another two windows. ANC literature found on the bus before it left was confiscated by the patrol."

The students yesterday claimed many were injured — cut by glass as they broke through emergency exits to get out the teargassed bus.

Buthelezi Addresses Durban Rally

MB010930 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0843 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — The formation of the United Workers Union of SA (UWUSA) and the celebration of May Day were extremely important events in the "liberation struggle" now being waged in South Africa, Inkatha leader Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi said today in remarks prepared for delivery. Addressing a mass May Day inauguration rally organised by UWUSA, Chief Buthelezi said May Day had throughout the world become a day on which people protest agaisnt oppression and deprivation, both economic and political. While blacks were still politically emasculated, in the economy their bargaining power had risen, and this was largely due to unionisation.

However, Chief Buthelezi, said trade unions were to a large extent now being exploited by unscrupulous politicians for their own ends, advocating socialism and sanctions contrary to the mandates they had been given by theri members. Referring to the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) who have been involved in a bitter war of words with Inkatha over the formation of UWUSA (United Workers of South Africa), [as received] Chief Buthelezi sadi UWUSA had only been formed after disaffected members of COSATU had on their own initiative approached him. "They wanted to form their own union which they felt would serve the interests of the workers and the poorest of the poor better than COSATU."

With regard to COSATU'S pro-disinvestment stance, the KwaZulu chief minister said if he believed disinvestment would topple the present government, then most blacks would support it. But in fact, all that would result would be an economic nosedive with the "oppressive" regime still intact. "It is we blacks who are always bit hardest the moment the economic situation deteriorates, as is the case now."

Chief Buthelezi denied that UWUSA was a tool of Inkatha, or that it was a "capitalist" union. "UWUSA is a workers union. It consists of people who abhor apartheid for the scourge that it is. While members believe in negotiations on the factory floor and also in a negotiated future, they are as impatient and as angry as anyone of us as a result of the continuing existence of apartheid and oppressive rule in South Africa." Chief Buthelezi also warned that if blacks were not given an entry into the free enterprise system, such a system would have no future in a "liberated" South Africa. But despite the handicaps of free enterprise, he said he knew of no other system that could create as many jobs for the country's burgeoning population.

Referring to the sensitive issue of strikes, he said the right to strike was a worker's prerogative. However this should only be done when negotiations were exhausted, and workers should be wary of those abusing the strike option to further destabilise the economy. "The economy of South Africa belongs to all her people. It is grossly irresponsible to do things that will ruin it on behalf of people who want to achieve just that. Once the economy is ruined, it is almost impossible to restore it to its normal state in a generation or two. Whoever rules South Africa in another decade or two will need the wealth which can only be created through a stable economy. Let's not destroy the future of our children and of their children's children."

COSATU Criticizes UWUSA

MB012007 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1934 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — Speakers at the Curries Fountain meeting stressed the need for worker unity, and slammed the formation of the new Inkatha union, saying it would set back the workers struggle. Addressing over 10,000 people, COSATU's [Congress of South African Trade Unions) vice-president, Mr Chris Dlamini, said the formation of UWUSA [United Workers Union of South Africa], was counter-productive for workers whose strength lay in speaking with a united voice. He said the emergence of UWUSA would weaken this voice "when we were waging our struggles at Frametex and Sarmcol, where was this union and its backers" he asked. "We have been struggling for worker unity against a government which believes in divide and rule, yet now UWUSA's backers are coming with a new divide and rule union for the workers." COSATU's general-secretary, Mr Jay Naidoo, said that free enterprise which UWUSA was supporting meant the freedom of the bosses to pay starvation wages and the freedom of the government to withold rights from black people. He said the formation of UWUSA had been prompted by opposition to COSATU rather than because the workers needed or wanted it.

A helicopter carrying Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi on his way to and from the UWUSA rally circled over the Curries Fountain meeting, prompting COSATU speakers to ask where UWUSA got its funds from. The helicopter had "UWUSA" was written on it in huge letters.

As the crowd spilled from the stadium there were moments of tension, with COSATU marshalls forming a buffer between heavily armed members of the South African Police and Defense Force, directing people to the buses. Several roads leading into white suburbs were blocked off by manned military vehicles, to prevent workers using the roads and ensure they used the most direct route to bus ranks and stations.

Durban Stayaways Reported

MB020446 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2214 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — Workers in many industrial and businesses in Durban heeded the call by trade unions to stayaway today to mark May Day. Production was disrupted at all BTR-Dunlop plants in Durban and Ladysmith as workers decided to stayaway, but the group's BTR-Sarmcol plant at Howick was operating normally, a spokesman for Dunlop reported. The giant Toyota motor assembly plant at Prospecton was shut down, but a spokesman for the company said the plant was closed for two days because of "short-time." Kingsgate clothing factory in Durban, which employs about 1000 workers, and the company's Hammersdale factory, were also closed today. Home deliveries of milk were also disrupted as Clover workers failed to turn up. Mr Eric Hornby, Clover's divisional general manager, said only the home delivery service had been affected.

PUTCO [Public Utility Transport Corporation], reported that they were operating from all depots but there had been a noticeable drop in passengers on some routes. A spokesman for Durban's electricity department said they had a 60 per cent staff turn out, but at the Alice Street depot about 50 workers arrived for work this morning but decided to take a day's leave. Mrs Julia Murray, a spokesman for the parks recreation and beaches department, said that about 20 per cent of the staff decided to take a day's leave today but the department's functioning had not been affected.

Most Indian-owned shops and cafes in the Grey Street complex were closed at midday in response to a call by the Natal Indian Congress in a show of solidarity with workers. A spokesman for Bakers Ltd, the largest bread suppliers, said there had been a large number of absenteeism among their black workers. They were only doing limited deliveries.

Police Say Durban Rallies 'Quiet'

MB020736 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0734 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 2, SAPA — Police in Durban were happy at the way things went off at two major May Day rallies yesterday, which were attended by more than 80,000 people. A police spokesman said today that apart from minor incidents, everything was quiet.

Early yesterday, police confiscated two hauls of petrol bombs — one of which was found in a bus parked near Curries Fountain, venue for the Congress of South African Trade Unions May Day rally. Twenty four petrol bombs and five litres of petrol were confiscated. At KwMashu, police stopped a car and found 19 petrol bombs. Five people were arrested. Two people were arrested in Chesterville in connection with intimidation. It is alleged they were trying to stop people going to work.

A spokesman for the Durban city police said traffic was congested outside Kings Park after the huge UWUSA (United Workers Union of South Africa) rally there. There was a shortage of buses after a few Indian bus-drivers abandoned their vehicles and ran away, but none of them were intimidated or hurt. Apparently the drivers panicked. By 5pm, however, almost all of the crowd at Kings Park had cleared. A spokesman for PUTCO [Public Utility Transport Corporation] said a number of their buses were working in the area and there had been no incidents. Durban police said two buses were stoned at the Swinton Road bus rand yesterday afternoon and their windows smashed.

A group of youths reportedly wnent on the rampage at Berea road station in the afternoon. Major Charl du Toit, liaison officer for railways police in Natal said he believed the youths were COSATU (Congress of South African Trade Union) supporters. Brigadier M. Mouton, head of the railway police in Natal, said "it was not much of an incident. It was just a rowdy group." He confirmed that they were brought under control by railways police.

Police Intervene in Port Elizabeth

MB011722 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1631 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Police did not allow members of the Congress of Unions of South Africa [CUSA] affiliates to hold a May Day rally in the Dan Que Que Stadium, Port Elizabeth, today. Mr Phiroshaw Camay, general secretary of CUSA, said: "The police forced workers to disperse but there appeared to be no disturbances." In Springs, East Rand, he said, there was a "police and army presence" when 3000 to 4000 CUSA workers held a commemorative rally. Asked for comment, a police spokesman requested a telex of the SAPA story before he would say anything.

Police Deny Action at Stadium

MB021005 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0956 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Police did not take any action at the Dan Que Que stadium in Port Elizabeth yesterday, the SAP said today in response to claims they had prevented a May Day rally taking place there. Affiliates of the Congress of Unions of South Africa [CUSA] were unable to hold a May Day rally in the stadium due to police interference. Mr Phiroshaw Camay, general secretary of CUSA, claimed yesterday. "The police forced workers to disperse but there appeared to be no disturbances," he said.

A police statement today said the SAP did not take any action at the stadium yesterday. "As far as we are aware, no such rally was held at the stadium," the SAP statement said.

Port Elizabeth Stayaway To Continue

MB011133 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1119 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Port Elizabeth, May 1, SAPA — Today's May Day work stoppage has been extended by blacks in Port Elizabeth until Monday. A May Day rally, banned by Port Elizabeth's chief magistrate, Mr D.F.M Smith, has now been called for 10am on Monday. The extension of the stayaway was announced in thousands of pamphlets, printed in Xhosa and English, distributed today through the city's black townships. The pamphlets was issued by the May Day co-ordinating committee representing the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), the United Democratic Front (UDF) and the Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA).

It was headed: "Bannings won't stop us." It read: "Yesterday the co-ordinating committee received a last minute banning order informing them that the rally that was to be held at the old active transport hall in Perl Road has been banned. This response is a clear indication that the state does not respect and serve the interests of the people who are producing the wealth of the country and the community at large."

The co-ordinating committee said the workers demanded the immediate lifting of the banning order so that workers could celebrate what has become a symbol of workers' unity, May Day, peacefully. Monday's rally is due to be held at the active transport building in Korsten. At a meeting of the co-ordinating committee consisting of all representatives of the different unions held last night, the following decisions were taken:

— Unions concerned jointly adopted a resolution that if the state resorted to such underhand tactics as banning orders, workers would stage a total stayaway on Friday.
— That this action will be repeated until the workers are able to hold their May Day celebrations. Since the banning order prevents meeting until Saturday, workers are forced to stay away on Monday. This is not a request or a plea, but a firm and clear directive from the workers — That workers will only collect their wages on Friday between 12 and 3pm. Workers shall not go to collect wages before 12 pm.
— That the shops in the townships and north end areas will be open tomorrow.

Extension of Stayaway Called Off

MB020443 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2156 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Port Elizabeth, May 1, SAPA — The threatened prolonged May Day work stoppage was tonight called off at an emergency meeting of community and labour organisations. The organisations called on all African workers in Port Elizabeth to return to work tomorrow, setting aside a previous call to extend the total work stoppage. According to Mr Henry Fazzie, regional president of the United Democratic Front (UDF), representatives of all major labour and community organizations voted unanimously to halt the stoppage. Mr Fazzie said the meeting was called after the circulation of false pamphlets, purporting to have been issued by various community organizatiomu, led to "total confusion."

Executives of the May Day co-ordinating committee — representing COSATU [Congress of South African Trade Union], the UDF and the Council of Unions of South Africa (CUSA) — the Port Elizabeth Black Civic Organisation (PEBCO) and various affiliate groups attended the meeting at an undisclosed venue in Port Elizabeth. It was decided not to adhere to the prolonged stayaway threatened by the May Day co-ordinating committee after a planned mass rally to commemorate International Labour Day was banned on Wednesday by Port Elizabeth's acting chief magistrate, Mr D.F.M. Smith.

30 Percent Cape Town Workers Absent

MB011321 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1312 GMT 1 May 86

[Text]Cape Town, May 1, SAPA — Essential municipal services in Cape Town are being maintained although about 30 percent of the City Council workforce has taken leave today to mark May Day. The town clerk, Dr Stan Evans, said the council granted leave to 4700 employees today and some housing offices in the outlying areas have been closed, SABC Radio News reports. A spokesman for the Bellville and Parow municipalities said however the stayaway there was negligible.

The director of the Cape Town Chamber of Commerce, Mr Alan Lighton, said the commercial sector has not generally been affected by the call for a stayaway to mark May Day. All businesses were open with the majority of their staff members at work. Mr Lighton said that from reports received it would appear that a high proportion of black employees had stayed away from work today. A major construction company said that only 25 per cent of its black staff were not at work today but a survey of building sites in the city has revealed that little activity is in progress.

No black pupils are attending classes in the Western Cape today. The deputy director of education and training, Mr Piet Scheepers, said there was no answer to telephone calls to schools under his control in the western Cape this morning. The coloured education department was still busy with a survey but it would appear that very few pupils attended school today. Telephone calls to only a few schools were answered and there were pupils at only one school where a few teachers had reported for duty.

Public transport which was reported to be near normal early this morning, dropped heavily after daylight and many buses and trains were running almost empty.

From Nyanga, residents reported the stayaway as being "very effective." They said buses were almost empty and taxis were not running

A survey of industries in and around Cape Town showed that between 10 per cent and 80 per cent of their workforce were affected. The call appeared to have been heeded mostly by black workers while industries employing coloured workers exclusively reported full or nearly full attendance. One construction company reported 60 out of 200 workers present and brick manufacturers said absenteeism ranged from negligible to about 50 per cent.

Five Arrested in Cape Town

MB011253 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1213 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 1, SAPA — Four men and a white woman are being held by police under the Internal Security Act after police had to use teargas to disperse a crowd of about 200 in Protea Raod, Brackenfell, this morning. SABC Radio News reports a police spokesman said workers at the Everite factory had begun marching towards the station where they were told to turn back and disperse. When they refused teargas was used and five people were arrested.

'Scores' Injured, 66 Arrested

MB020439 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2140 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 1, SAPA — Scores of people were injured and at least 66 people arrested as troops and police broke up four Congress of South African Trade Unions [COSATU] May Day rallies throughout the western Cape yesterday. At least one young man of about 25 was seriously injured as running battles between police and residents continued in Nyanga and Guguletu last night. An ambulance worker said the man was shot through the back.

In Nyanga East, scores of people were hurt when police and troops opened fire with repeated volleys of teargas and over 2000 people, including many children and pensioners, stampeded out of three tiny entrances to the Zolani centre. The rally, which began at 1.30pm, was peaceful throughout. It was only minutes before security forces opened fire that one rock was thrown at a casspir as about 150 youths marched up to a line of police and troops. The youths were given two minutes to disperse as security forces — who parked about 100m from the hall throughout the rally — knelt in a line in the road, aiming rifles, shotguns and teargas launchers at the crowd. Less than half the teargas canisters were aimed at the youths. Most of the canisters appeared to be fired straight at the hall and several went over the roof and into the courtyard where about 1000 older people were seated. A mad panic ensued and a number of children and old people were trampled underfoot. Teargas was so thick it was impossible to see more than a few metres, and over 50 people, mainly pensioners, simply lay on the ground crying, retching and calling for water. Outside, people ran madly for safety, and in the rush, Mrs Nonkululeko Mkethi, 35, of KTC, fell and her ankle snapped. She lay screaming on the ground, her ankle hanging at right angles to her leg, the bone shattered, a member of at St Johns emergency team who treated her said.

In Mbekweni, at least 59 residents were arrested after police sealed off the township and then fired teargas to disperse angry groups of people police prevented from holding a mass rally at the township stadium. A pall of tearsmoke hung over the township after police dispersed hundreds of people at the Mbekweni Baptist Church hall where a packed report-back meeting was held after an initial spate of arrests. Pandemonium ensued as gas spread in the hall. Several people were injured by canisters.

Newspaper reporters saw a large police truck holding 58 men women and youths parked for several hours in the sun outside the Paarl police station yesterday afternoon. Independent township sources claimed an identical truck, full of people, plus several van loads of residents were ferried from the township earlier. They said well over 100 people were arrested. Miss Lizzie Phike, an executive member of COSATU and national organizer for the Food and Canning Workers Union, was arrested at the Paarl police station charge office after an altercation with policemen.

Teargas billowed over Bonteheuwel late yesterday during a running street battle between police and workers and youths. More than 50 police and troops, in a convoy of seven casspirs and buffles and five patrol vans, fired scores of teargas canisters and rubber bullets. At about 4.30pm, soon after the end of the rally — attended by about 2500 people — the security force convoy confronted a group of about 200 chanting workers and youths. When the group refused to disperse after an order police charged and people scattered in all directions.

Students Rally in Guguletu

MB010539 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2300 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 30, SAPA — More than 2,000 pupils from the black and coloured townships today held a mass May Day rally in Guguletu to demonstrate support for the community and "unity among ourselves." It is the first time coloured pupils have gathered at a black township venue in such large numbers and the rally was hailed by SRC [Students Representatives Councils] members as "a milestone for student organisation in the Western Cape." The rally featured music, plays and gumboot dancers — all with applause and shouts of "viva students" and "amandla ngawethu" (power is ours).

After the four-hour meeting, however, a casspir and police van parked on a field next to the apostolic church hall, where the meeting was held, was stoned by pupils. An empty city tramways bus was also stoned along NY1.

Virtually all schools in the black townships were deserted as pupils streamed to the church hall from about 9am and were joined by busloads of pupils from Belgravia and Rylands high schools and a delegation from Alexander Sinton in Athlone. SRC leaders of the schools present described the rally as "a significant success for the joining of forces of all black pupils."

Johannesburg Workers Observe Day

MB011529 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1441 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, Sapa — Several small businesses in the city centre were closed today as almost Johannesburg's black workers stayed away from work. Chainstores employed housewives and scholars to carry out tasks left vacant by black workers. Perishables were ordered yesterday as shops prepared for disruption of deliveries on May Day, but some small fastfood outlets ran out of bread and other items, although they had reportedly made allowances for less trade than usual. Fast food outlets also served "cut rations" as staff stayed at home, with many regular items not on the menu today. Businesses in the city relying mainly on black shoppers were closed, as were other smaller stores such as men's outfitters which is believed to belong to Indian traders.

There were also few commuters from townships to the city. PUTCO [Public Utilities Transport Corporation] bus company said its services in the Transvaal had almost stopped. Trains from the black residenial areas, which are usually crowded, were empty today. At lunch hour the central Rissik Street post office had only a few white customers — instead of the usual long and daunting queue.

Police in the riot blue uniforms patrolled the streets on foot in groups of two or three. Traffic helicopter pilots this morning said the highway from Soweto to Johannesburg CBD [Central Business District] was almost deserted.

UDF's Sisulu Speaks at Rally

MB010549 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0017 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, April 30, SAPA — The national president of the United Democratic Front (UDF), Mrs Albertina Sisulu, tonight accused the government of "creating vigilantes" to kill people in black townships. Addressing about 1,200 people at a May Day rally, organised by the Transvaal Indian Congress, she said black people had pinned the government against the wall. "They (the government) don't know what to do, they are confused," Mrs Sisulu told the cheering, singing crowd, Who had earlier given her a standing ovation.

Accusing the government of being "the terrorist", she said black people who had protested peacefully against the pass laws in Sharpville in 1960 had been shot as had students in Soweto in 1976. "It is trying to buy time. Its time has expired. The government knows it and has therefore created vigilantes to kill people in the townships." Mrs Sisulu charged the government was "killing black children because it knows they are the prime ministers of tomorrow." She called on the youth to strengthen "street committees in the townships. That is the only way to isolate those who are being bought out by the government to use children to fight against thier parents, brothers and sister."

She also praised Dr Van Zyl Slabbert for resigning from Parliament. "His resignation shattered the myth of the role of Parliament. It makes clear that Parliament as it is presently constituted is totally irrelevant to the politics of fundamental change in this country."

She also said the scrapping of the pass laws would make no difference because black people "will have to produce" the new ID document anyway.

GWU Officials Reportedly Detained

MB020439 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2051 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, May 1, SAPA — Two senior trade unionists and three workers from the Everite factory in Brackenfell were believed to have been detained this morning on their way to a May Day rally in Bellville South. The general secretary of the General Workers Union (GWU), Mr Msokoli Quotole, GWU organiser Mrs Rae Lazarus, Mr B. Tshambuluka, Mr C. Gqabu and Mr B. Mnyaka are being held under the Internal Security Act, according to GWU's assistant branch secretary in Cape Town, Miss Di Cooper. Miss Cooper said the union had been able to talk to the detainees who said they had been arrested on their way to Brackenfell station. The three workers were part of a crowd of workers walking from the Everite hostle to the station.

Miss Cooper said she was told that the workers were stopped by police and told to turn back to the hostel. Police then fired teargas to disperse the crowd. "The officials decided to go back but the police then arrested them and three of the workers," Miss Cooper said. Miss Cooper described the arrests as "a highly provocative attempt to harass the union and prevent it from operating."

SABC Radio News reported today that the five were detained after police used teargas to disperse a crowd of about 200 in Protea Road, Brackenfell. Police comment on the incident was unavailable tonight.

Three Wounded in Vaal Township

MB011553 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1504 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — Three people were allegedly wounded today when police fired birdshot at spectators at a May Day rally in the Vaal township of Bophelong. A spokesman for the Vaal Civic Association [VCA] said today one person was shot in the leg and two others were hurt, though not seriously, when police dispersed the group. Police then "hijacked" the ambulance carrying the injured to hospital, the spokesman claimed.

Over 8,000 people attend the May Day Rally organised by the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), the VCA the Vaal Students' Congress and local organisations, he said. Police fired teargas into the hall where the meeting was being held. "Some elderly people were trapped inside there and others almost lost consciousness as there was no one to attend to them," he said. People managed to get back in to the hall and help them later.

Police remained in the area and troops were on the outskirts of the township, the spokesman said. He added he was dodging birdshot pellets as he spoke on the telephone.

A spokesman for the Police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria said police fired birdshot and tearsmoke to disperse a "relatively large group" who gathered and threw stones. The spokesman said police arrested five people. One man was wounded and another sustained a cut from wire when he ran away. No "live" or rubber bullets were used. The spokesman said he knew nothing about the alleged "hijacking" of the ambulance.

Police Deny Stopping Mine Unrest

[Text] Johannesburg, May 1, SAPA — A spokesman for the Police Directorate of Public Relations in Pretoria said today police were not involved in the halting of unrest last night at Libanon Gold Mine in Westonaria. "The police did not act at any of those mines (in the area) last night or today," he said.

The National Union of Mineworkers [NUM] and management said police were called to the mine yesterday evening and were withdrawn today. NUM claimed 25 miners were hurt in unrest. A spokesman for the Goldfields-owned mine said 13 people were injured. Five, he said were injured by rubber bullets fired by mine security officials and eight by intimidators.

Radio Freedom Urges Exposure of Buthelezi

MB292100 Lusaka Radio Freedom in English 1800 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The situation in our country is becoming explosive. The people, especially the blacks, are being massacred in their struggle for a change in South Africa. We say the only solution for this critical situation in our country is the dismantling of the apartheid system, transfer of political and economic power into the hands of the majority, and equal sharing of the wealth of the country. The message is loud and clear, but the white minority regime has resorted to barbaric terrorism in answer to these just demands of the people.

The killing and maiming of innocent and unarmed people is a daily occurrence in the black townships in South Africa. How long will this continue? The black people in South Africa are stateless in the land of their birth and are treated like wild animals. The imposition or the lifting of the state of emergency in some parts of the country meant no difference as the situation continues unabated. The townships are teeming with SADF and SAP personnel. Wide-ranging powers have been extended to soldiers and police while the SAP and the SADF has broad powers in areas under the state of emergency. Some measures have been extended to the army, South African death squads in any part of the country to suppress the masses. It is the black people who suffer the most. Victims of the present-day fascism termed apartheid, and the number of deaths and detentions continue to rise.

The racist white minority government is using all methods of survival in a bid to maintain this criminal system of apartheid. Not only has the regime engaged the army and the police, but also makes use of its agents and puppets to suppress the ever-rising wave of resistence. Some of the press coverage of events in South Africa was the use of misleading term black-on-black violence. [sentence as heard]. The activities of puppets like Gatsha Buthelezi and his Inkatha are known to our people. Many of our people, members of democratic organizations in the country, have had clashes and some lost their lives at the hands of Inkatha angels of death in Natal and other places. This black-on-black term was a misrepresentation of developments in which police and other enemy agents attacked people in their resistence to apartheid.

Fellow workers, let us unite and strengthen our trade union movement. Today we are faced with yet another onslaught by the enemy agent, the stooge and puppet Gatsha Buthelezi, groomed by the West and the minority regime. Gatsha's occupation has been to oppose the people and their progressive organizations in their resistence to the inhuman system of apartheid. Unity of our people has never been more important than now. The people, in compliance with the demands of each phase of the struggle, become more and more united. This was noted with the birth of the United Democratic Front [UDF]. It is an undeniable truth that the UDF, the largest nonracial democratic organization in South Africa, has been a nightmare to Gatsha Buthelezi. Today as our people further united, COSATU [Congress of South African Trade Unions] was born which is a federation of all progressive workers unions in the country. Serving the interests of his masters, Buthelezi is extending his divisive activities and this time directed against the workers by announcing the formation of his UWUSA, United Workers Union of South Africa, on the very International Workers Day. It is clear that this is aimed against COSATU since Gatsha Buthelezi has never wasted time to refer to it as a branch of the ANC, even before the Botha regime could say it.

We are oppressed and exploited by a minority in the land of our birth. We are calling for sanctions and disinvestment in South Africa, which help to prop up the apartheid regime. Gatsha has been parading around the world as an agent for this repressive apartheid system, preaching against sanctions and for investment. As a paid agent of the Pretoria regime, he cannot serve his masters better by announcing the formation of his UWUSA which will be proinvestment and the free enterprise system in South Africa. This is aimed at destroying the trade union movement and entrenching further exploitation of the toiling masses. It is a extension and a front of his terrorist Inkatha and therefore has to be dealt with in a manner it deserves.

As we are preparing for this centenary of May Day to make it a paid public holiday, we should also fight against this divisive act of Gatsha Buthelezi. Let us expose his treacherous activities that betray our march to freedom. Let us boycott the launching of his organisation on May Day and place Gatsha where he belongs. Forward to May Day as a paid holiday! Forward to a free nonracial and democratic South Africa! An injury to one is an injury to all!

Conscientious Objector Arrested at ECC Meeting

MB302044 Johannesburg SAPA in English 2349 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Excerpt] Johannesburg, April 29, SAPA — The End Conscription Campaigns (EEC) peace rally at the Johannesburg City Hall started on a dramatic note this evening when one of the scheduled speakers, conscientious objector Mr Philip Wilkinson, was arrested in the foyer by plain-clothes military policemen. Mr Wilkinson, a Port Elizabeth butcher who was due to reprot for a three-month military camp yesterday, was "forcibly" taken away, according to ECC spokesmen. They said the policemen refused to identify themselves or produce a warrant for the arrest.

A Defence Force spokesman in Pretoria said: "In terms of the Defence Act, white male South African citizens are obliged to render service. A man who fails to render service can be charged under the relevant section of the Defence Act by a court of law, or court martial. Once a man fails to report for service he can be arrested and normal legal procedures are followed." The spokesmen said the other charges made by the ECC were being investigated.

ECC, Tutu Condemn Arrest

MB302048 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1032 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] Johannesburg April 30, SAPA — The End Conscription Campaign was "appalled by the brutality" of the arrest of Mr Philip Wilkinson, a Port Elizabeth conscientious objector who was arrested at an ECC meeting at the Johannesburg City Hall last night, the ECC said in a statement today. "He was forcibly removed from our meeting last night, bundled into a van and driven off at high speed. The manner of his arrest by military police has to be condemned," the statement said. "It was a display of gross force and showed a disrespect for the legitimately held views of a conscientious objector. Philip at no time resisted arrest. He had in fact made himself available to the military police through the offices of his lawyer. This kind of underhanded and disrespectful action must stop. It is time for all in our country to give respect to the conscientious objector. We call for Philip's recognition by the authorities as a conscientous objector and not as a criminal."

Meanwhile, the bishop of Johannesburg, Bishop Desmond Tutu, said in statement on Mr Wilkinsons' arrest :

"We live in a crazy country. How people of his standing can be apprehended so quickly, yet vigilantes and others are to go scot-free I am puzzled. I have high regard for him and many other young people like him who are paying so heavily for what they believe in."

Tutu Addresses Cape Town ECC Gathering 30 April

MB010611 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0554 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Cape Town, April 30, SAPA — The government's reform initiatives were no more than ad hoc adjustments to apartheid and no longer interested blacks, the Anglican archbishop-elect of Cape Town, Bishop Desmond Tutu, said today. Speaking at an End Conscription Campaign meeting, he said blacks were now only interested in political power. The government should dismantle apartheid and not attempt to reform it. "You cannot reform a Frankenstein, you can only destroy it."

He said the pass laws had affected the lives of millions of blacks and the government should be commended for eventually abolishing the measures. "You would have expected there to have been great jubilation in the townships but all the removal met was silence. Blacks are no longer interested in ad hoc adjustmetns to apartheid which are made grudgingly and reluctantly."

He said there were, however, signs of hope that South Africa could eventually be a united and peaceful country. It was encouraging to see young whites who had the courage to become conscientious objectors in the face of ostracism and severe penalities.

A further sign of hope was that white Afrikaners had held talks with the ANC against the wishes of the state president and Afrikaner youth were begining to question the government.

The funeral of the late PFP MPC [Progressive Federal Party member of provincial council] for Walmer, Mrs Molly Blackburn, which was attended by about 20,000 people, mostly black, showed that South Africa did have a future. But there could be no future without justice and there could be no justice with apartheid. "Without apartheid, outdated or updated, all South Africans would want to defend their motherland and there would be no need for conscription. There would be no need to destabilise neighbouring countries and no need for a tricameral Parliament."

He said South Africans could only be free if they were together. He said violence, including the use of petrol bombs and "necklaces", had to be condemned but it should be remembered that its primary cause was apartheid and those who upheld it. Blacks regarded the polcie as their enemies and that was bad for any country. There was so much evidence of torture by the police that it could no longer be ignored, and this was unacceptable in a country that purported to uphold civilised standards. There was also evidence that police had taken part in vigilante attacks in Alexandra township near Johannesburg and some had been identified as members of "marauding squads" by residents. He said it was strange that when attacks from so-called leftist organisations took place, the police were efficient in arresting those responsible but right-wing vigilante violence always went unsolved.

Bishop Tutu received several standing ovations from the capacity crowd at the Cape Town city hall.

Tutu, Others To March on Klerksdorp Prison

MB020857 Umtata Capital Radio in English 0800 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Archbishop-elect of southern Africa Desmond Tutu is expected to take part on a march to Klerksdorp prison today. Bishop Tutu is to be joined by other Anglican clergy members in a march to the prison where Bishop Siegisbert Ndwandwe is being held. Bishop Ndwandwe was detained a week ago, shortly after his home was petrol bombed. Officials in Pretoria say the clergyman was being held in terms of the Internal Security Act. However, it has been not disclosed for what reason he was picked up.

Le Grange Responds to Parliamentary Questions

Assesses SAP Racial Parity

MB300913 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1911 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] House of Representatives, April 29, SAPA — There was no promotion ceiling for any member of the SA police, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, said today. Replying to the debate on his budget vote, he said there was "absolute parity" between members of all races in the force on promotion, salries and opportunities. "I personally see 47,000 members of the force. I don't differentiate between them."

The recent promotion of six members — two coloureds, one Indian and three blacks — to the rank of colonel proved this. If any non-white SAP member proved of such "outstanding merit" that he deserved promotion above the rank of colonel, he "will be promoted as far as I'm concerned".

Other points made by the minister in his reply were that:

— The government had decided every effort should be made to increase the number of police stations and the minister of finance has been instructed by the cabinet to find way of financing them;
— There had been many requests to pay police reservists an allowance, but the reservists, proud of the fact that they had rendered their services free of charge for so many years, had said this would be an insult. This was not to say an allowance might not one day be paid. There was a strong group within the reservists who were in favour of an allowance;

— Consideration was being given to paying the policemen who guarded MP's homes the same additional allowance as members of the guard unit that protected, among other things, government buildings such as Parliament;
— Unrest damage to the homes and property of policemen in the past 18 months was more than R2 million. In addition, many members of policemen's families had been injured.
Mr Le Grange gave an assurance that SAP members would be compensated for such loses. Large amounts had already been paid out, including for items like curtains.

UK Envoy Misquoted on Torture

MB301908 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1647 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] House of Assembly, Apr 30, SAPA — Comments by South Africa's ambassador to Britain, Dr Dennis Worrall, on the torture of detainees in the republic had been incorrently quoted in local newspapers, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, said today. Replying to points raised during the debate on his budget vote, he said he was in possession of a tape recording of the British television programme in which Dr Worral appeared. The recording showed Dr Worral had been misquoted, and MPs were welcome to listen to it.

Newspaper reports quoted Dr Worral as saying there had been torture of detainees in South Africa, including of some children, but that the situation was not as bad as alleged.

Rejects Report on Police Torture

MB300617 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] The minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, says allegations in a report by researchers of the University of Cape Town that 83 percent of detainees interviewed had been tortured by the police are totally untrue. Speaking during the debate of his budget vote in the House of Assembly, Mr Le Grange said that the report by the University's Criminology Institute was subjective, unscientific, prejudiced, and contained unfounded statistical assumptions. He said that this department had studied the report and that further particulars about it would be released soon. The minister said that only about 14 percent of detainees had lodged complaints about the police since the Intrnal Security Act was promulgated. He said that during the partial state of emergency 310 complaints had been received. In only two instances had the attorney general deemed it necessary to prosecute.

Referring to funerals of victims of the unrest, Mr Le Grange said that restrictions on such gatherings would be strictly enforced in future. He said that the police had had enough of the way in which funerals degenerated into political gatherings.

Funeral Conditions To Be Enforced

MB301652 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1632 GMT 30 Apr 86

[Text] House of Assembly, Apr 30, SAPA — Conditions placed on the holdings of funerals of unrest victims would be enforced by the security forces, the minister of law and order, Mr Louis le Grange, said today. Replying to points raised during the debate on his budget vote, he said funerals were "nothing else but political meetings" at which the Soviet and ANC flags were displayed, intimidation took place and people "run alongside the coffin with wooden AK-47s".

He was asked by Mr David Dalling (PFP [Progressive Federal Party] Sandton) whether it was preferable to have the conditions enforced, which could lead to the loss of lives, or to allow the funerals to go ahead unchecked. "It will not be allowed to happen. These conditions are not unenforceable, and they will be enforced by the security forces. We have now had enough," Mr Le Grange said.

He said Mrs Helen Suzman (PFP Houghton) always spoke of police excesses but never mentioned attacks on members of the force. By so soing, she acted as "a mouthpiece for the ANC, the UDF, [United Democratic Front] the communists and all such organisations". Mr Le Grange was ordered by the chairman of committees, Dr Helgard van Rensburg, to withdraw the remark, which he did.

He said he had repeatedly stated that he would not tolerate any illegal acts by SAP members and that strict action would be taken against offenders. However, he could quote at length from statistics of attacks on policemen and their families. For instance, Mr Le Grange said, from September 1984 to April this year, the homes of 807 SAP members had been attacked, and damage estimated at R2,200,000 had been caused. During the same period, 33 members of the security forces had been killed in unrest and 584 injured. Ten SAP members had died so far this year. From January 1 to April 29, there had been 71 stone-throwing attacks on the homes of black, off-duty policemen, while 50 of their private vehicles had been damaged and 11 policemen had been stoned. During the same period, there had been 51 arson attacks on the homes of SAP members and 53 such attacks on their private vehicles. SAP members' homes had been petrol-bombed 164 times and subjected to handgrenade attacks seven times, while five shooting incidents had taken place at SAP residences.

"That is the sort of violence that is directed against members of the police. Do you also want me to tell you about the children of SAP members who can't go to school in safety any more and have to take correspondence courses or attend school in Ciskei and Transkei?" There had also been "propaganda attacks" on policemen, who had been urged to resign, sabotage euqipment and installations, and disrupt transport services.

Mrs Suzman presented "a one-sided view" Mr Le Grange said, and should try to strike a balance between the actions of the police and the assault on them.

KwaNdebele Will Not Budge on Independence Decision

MB292057 Johannesburg Domestic Service in English 1900 GMT 29 Apr 86

[Text] The chief minister of KwaNdebele, Mr Simon Skosana, says his government cannot repeal its decision to accept independence. He said it would mean that his government had failed in its mission.

Rightwing Leader Warns Against 'Black Communists'

AB010750 Paris AFP in English 0730 GMT 1 Apr 86

[Excerpts] Pretoria, May 1 (AFP) — Extremist rightwing leader Eugene Terre'blanche warned Wednesday that if the South African Government gave in to "black communists" or withheld elections for the white minority his movement would take over "with force".

Mr Terre'blanche, leader of the quasi-military Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (AWB-Afrikaner Resistance Movement) was speaking at a rally of more than 3,000 cheering supporters in the city hall of South Africa's capital here. It was the largest show of force this year by the AWB and its Brandwag (Sentinel) vigilant-type force, whose support has mushroomed as black protest against the apartheid system of segregation has increased. The city hall was bedecked with the swastika-like flags of the AWB and hundreds of Brandwag attired in their khaki uniforms, some with pistols strapped to their legs, joined the crowd in cheering their leader. At the Pretoria meeting the rightwing whites called for stronger military force to quell black unrest.

Mr Terre'blanche lashed out at South Africa's tri-cameral parliamentary system launched in 1984, whereby coloured (mixed raced people) and Indians were given representation with whites in separate and segregated chambers of Parliament. The 73 percent black majority was, however, excluded from a Parliamentary say, although President Pieter Botha has indicated that it will soon be given representation in Parliament.

Hundreds spilled out into the Pretoria streets with loudspeakers booming Mr Terre'blanche's accusations that the white minority government was capitulating to the black majority with its policy of gradual reform of the apartheid system.

Anti-Semitic literature was distributed at the door of the hall and young blond girl, aged about 10, read an anti-Semitic poem before the meeting.

Mr Terre'blanche, a charismatic speaker who mixes poetic idiom from the Bible with his racist rhetoric, warned the outlawed African National Congress (ANC) which is fighting to overthrow the government, that the "Afrikaners have formed a laager".

The AWB believes the Dutch and French Huguenot-descended Afrikaners — the majority group among the whites — are a "chosen people". Mr Terre'blanche said: "Whites are in the majority in Africa because God is on their side" he warned the government that if it carried on giving concessions to the black people the AWB would be "unable to contain the fury of whites" against it.

Coloured and Indian members of Parliament this week called for the banning of the AWB, but some government sources fear this would make them martyrs and might promote them in the same way that banning of movements like the ANC did among the blacks. The AWB leader warned that the ultimate conflict in South Africa would be between the AWB and the ANC. The AWB claims to have a large membership in the 47,000-strong South African police, although police are banned from being members. It is also believed to be recruiting whites from the South African army.

Arms Cache Discovered Near Pietermaritzburg

MB010921 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0911 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Durban, May 1, SAPA — A young Pietermaritzburg boy lost part of a finger and thumb when a limpet mine detonator he found in a large terrorist arm cache exploded late yesterday. Ten-year-old Mziyekayise Mpisi and several other children had taken home explosive devices they found while looking for a lost football near a field in Plessislaer near Imbali township.

Last night police were understood to be going from house to house in an effort to recover all the explosives. When police searched the area where the children had been playing, they found 18 grenades, 18 grenade detonators, three mini limpet mines, two limpet mine detonators, two electric detonators, three mechanical detonators, seven hand grenade devices, an AK-47 magazine full of bullets, 29.9mm pistol rounds and 39 AK-47 7.62mm rounds, a spokesman in Pretoria said.

A relative who lives at Mziyekayise's home said the boy had returned from football with a detonator and was playing with it inside the house. "My wife told him to play outside and just as he left the house the thing went off," he said. "I took him to hospital." He said Mziyekayise's right hand was badly injured and he was cut on the head, legs, and feet. "They must have thought they were something nice to play with. Later the police were going round taking the bombs from the children."

A spokesman said "both the area and the case" were being investigated.

Policeman, Youth Die in Wattville Incident

MB011944 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1936 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 1, SAPA — Two people, one a police constable, died in an incident of unrest in Wattville, today, police said. A spokesman for the Police Public Relations Division in Pretoria said about 50 youths victimised the resident of a house in Wattville, on the east Rand, today. He said that the group had learned that a black policeman, Const E.E. Ntuku, was hidden in a wardrobe by a woman who had locked him in it. "They managed to break it open and the constable fatally wounded one youth with shots from his duty pistol," he said. "They dragged the constable outside and necklaced him," he added. Const Ntuku died as a result of burn injuries.

Black Policeman Killed in Eersterus 2 May

MB020953 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0952 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 2, SAPA — A black police constable was shot dead in Eersterus east of Pretoria last night. The policeman was attached to police headquarters in Pretoria and his name will be released as soon as his next-of-kin have been informed. A police spokesman said the constable was fatally wounded in the chest in an Eersterus street. Two men were later arrested in connection with the killing.

Police Issue Unrest Situation Reports

2 PM, 1 May

MB011352 Johannesburg SAPA in English 1345 GMT 1 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 1, SAPA — Following is interim statement by SA Police Public Relations Division at 2pm:

"The following incidents of unrest were reported during this morning:

"At Sibongile, in northern Natal, police arrested three men when they barricaded a road.

"At Mbekweni, near Paarl, shots were fired at an SAP vehicle. No one was injured. In the same area, police arrested 22 men and seven women when a police vehiclewas stoned.

"At Khutsong near Bothaville in the northern OFS [Orange Free State], a private vehicle was set alight and extensively damaged. In the same area, a councillor's home was set alight and a number of houses were stoned. Police fired tear smoke and shotguns to disperse these mobs. Three men and a youth were later admitted to hospital with shotgun wounds.

"At White River in the eastern Transvaal, a transport services vehicle was destroyed when it was set alight.

"At Enjendini near Barberton, two private vehicles were extensively damaged when they were petrol bombed.

"At Thandukukhaya, near Piet Retief, a black man attacked an SADF member with an axe. He was disarmed and arrested.

"Near Dube railway station, Soweto, two passenger coaches were destroyed when they were set alight. Also in Soweto, police arrested two men when they stoned a police vehicle.

"At Tembisa on the east Rand, two private homes and two beerhalls and a number of vehicles were damaged by arsonists. A youth was fatally wounded when police fired at a mob attacking one of the beerhalls. In the same area, a youth was arrested when he placed barricades in a road. A number of shots were fired at a police vehicle. No one was injured.

"At Doornfontein gold mine near Carltonville, two vehicles were extensively damaged by stonethrowers.

"At Bekkersdal near Westonaria, a police vehicle was petrol bombed. Police warded off the attack with shotgun fire. A woman was injured. In the same area, a piece of metal was hurled at a police vehicle. The youth responsible was wounded and arrested when police fired a shotgun round.

"At Pienaars Trust in the eastern Transvaal, a police vehicle was petrolbombed and extensively damaged.

"At Maukeng near Kroonstad, private vehicles and buses were stoned. A youth was arrested following one of these incidents. In the same area, police arrested four men for intimidation. A woman was hospitalised as a result of an assault by intimidators.

"At Balfour on the east Rand, two buses and a shop were damaged by stonethrowers.

"At Watville near Benoni, police fired on a man who was intimidating other blacks. He was injured and arrested.

"At Sebokeng, near Vanderbijlpark, taxi drivers were intimidated. Two men were arrested by the police.

"At Brackenfell in the western province, a mob of blacks marched through the white residential area. They were dispersed with tear smoke. Three men and a white woman were arrested.

"At Kabokweni near Graskop in the eastern Transvaal, a private vehicle was extensively damaged when it was set alight. Ten men were arrested in connection with this incident. In the same area the body of a youth bearing evidence of shotgun wounds was found. It is possible that he was wounded in confrontation with police on 1986-04-30 (yesterday).

"At Tswelang near Wolmaransstad, a mob numbering over 3,000 stoned a SAP vehicle, causing extensive damage. Police dispersed their attackers with shotgun and rifle fire, wounding three men, one seriously. In the same area, considerable damage was caused to a policeman's home when it was petrolbombed.

"At Thanga near Drie Koppies in the eastern Transvaal, two men were arrested when they stoned SAP members."

End report.

2 May

MB020733 Johannesburg SAPA in English 0731 GMT 2 May 86

[Text] Pretoria, May 2, SAPA — Following is SAP unrest situation report to 8am today:

"The following incidents of unrest were reported overnight:

"At Tembisa on the East Rand, a front end loader, a private vehicle and a school were extensively damaged when they were set alight. In the same area, a youth was arrested when he threw a petrol bomb at a police vehicle.

"At Actonville near Benoni, a black man who reported at the police station that he had been shot, died before it could be established who was responsible. The body of another black man, also with bullet wounds, was later found by the police. At this stage, it is not known whether these incidents are unrest-related.

"In the same area a man was wounded and arrested when police fired a shotgun round to disperse a mob which stoned their vehicle.

"At Heldemoed near Allanridge in the OFS [Orange Free State], police arrested 21 men and 33 women when they attended an illegal gathering.

"At Tokoza near Germiston, a private vehicle was extensively damaged when it was set alight. One youth was arrested in connection with this incident.

"In the Driehoek industrial area, Germiston, private vehicles were stoned. Police fired shotgun rounds to disperse the mob, fatally wounding a man and wounding and arresting two others.

"At Galeshewe near Kimberly, a number of stonethrowing incidents occurred. Police arrested a youth following one of these incidents.

Press Comments on Current Issues, Problems

[Editorial Report] NP Women's Meeting

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans on 28 April reports on page 6 a National Party [NP] women's meeting in Worcester in the Cape. The women's seminar agreed that there was a need for "grey" residential areas for those who wished to live there, but that not all residential areas should be classified as such. The seminar agreed that all recognised leaders should be invited to future political negotiations provided they foreswore violence as a means of bringing about change. Constitutional Development and Planning Minister Chris Heunis, when asked for his reaction to the seminar, said it was necessary for women to come to the fore at times like the present. The fight against the revolutionaries would be won or lost in the streets, the kitchen, and the factory, and the women could help to create better relations. On the future of group areas, Mr Heunis said it was strange that whites and coloreds lived together on farms, in cities and towns, and in servants' quarters were part of residences, yet there was opposition to the scrapping of group areas.

Editorial on AWB

In an editorial on page 10, the newspaper says : "With the taking over of the National Party meeting at Brits by the Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging [AWB] and the violent scenes thereafter, South Africa's political clock was turned back many years." Radicalism, it says can be fatal in South Africa today. This country is seeing gruesome acts among the black community every day, committed under the umbrella of leftwing radicalism. And now, the AWB, by its actions at Brits, has loaded the sterile conflict among the Afrikaners with emotion. The country very badly needs cool heads at the present time, it says.

CITIZEN on Settlement

Johannesburg THE CITIZEN in English for 30 April says in an editorial on page 6 that "amidst reports of terror and counterterror in the townships, threatned May Day strikes and general unrest, there are some favourable developments," among them the lifting of influx control and pass laws and the favorable reception abroad. Noting reports that the Commonwealth Emminent Persons Group [EPG] has drawn up a "peace package" for a negotiated settlement in South Africa and Foreign Minister Pik Botha's comment that there were "high hopes" the EPG could pay a meaningful role in promoting dialogue, the editorial says "nobody would deny the EPG the chance to contribute towards a settlement if that is at all possible. But it should not be the Kissinger-type settlement that finished off the whites in Rhodesia."

ANC Rejection of Botha Call

Johannesburg THE STAR in English for 30 April reports on the front page that an ANC spokesman in London says President

Botha's call for noncommunist ANC members to return and negotiate "cannot be taken seriously." " 'This ploy of Botha's implying he is prepared to entertain negotiations with some members and not other members is meaningless.' " " 'It is nonsense to talk about negotiations when Nelson Mandela and a whole lot of other persons are in prison and the laws of the country are such that they do not permit any democratic functioning by the people,' " the spokesman said.

Verwoerdburg Opens CBD, Cinemas

Another front page report says that the Verwoerdburg town council voted unanimously to declare the central business district [CBD] a free trading area. All cinemas in the town have also been opened to all races.

Boraine Calls on MPs To Resign

THE STAR reports on page 3 that former Progressive Federal Party [PFP] member of Parliament Dr Alex Boraine called on those working within the tricameral Parliament to resign. Addressing an End Conscription Campaign rally in Johannesburg, Dr Boraine said the tricameral Parliament system "should be destroyed and people functioning within it should realise that it was discredited and begin moving out." He said South Africa has passed the time when a small group of people could form a "new just government" within the existing tricameral system and challenged " 'those in the so-called coloured and Indian chambers to recognise that they are standing on dangerous ground.' "

Protest Over KwaNdebele Independence

A report on page 7 says that fresh protests have broken out among KwaNdebele residents against the proposed independence of their homeland. The rejection of the proposed independence was voiced by "thousands" of villagers during a meeting convened recently by the paramount chief of the Ndebele tribe.

Alexandra Leader on Attacks

Another page 7 report quotes the chairman of the Alexandra Action Committee as telling a press conference that continued attacks on antiapartheid activists would not crush community organization in Alexandra. He said the attacks were meant "to destroy community structures which had been operating since December last year as an alternative to statutory bodies such as the community councils and the police.

Mayfair Pamphlets

THE STAR reports on page 9 that nonwhite residents of Mayfair are "too scared of 'victimisation' to protest against right-wing pamphlets being circulated in the area." The pamphlets are sent by the Mayfair Residents and Ratepayers Association and demand that the white section of Mayfair remain white. Part of Mayfair has been declared an Indian group area.

STAR on Need for 'Cool Heads'

THE STAR says in a page 16 editorial that cool heads will be needed the next few days when political tension is high and plans are formed to observe May Day. May Day is "no day for a provocative show of force" and the police have made a sensible start by announcing they will provide protection for people who wish to go to work but otherwise will keep a low profile. Black organizations must also ensure discipline. "If May Day beocmes an excuse for a rampage, for mindless acts of violence, then it will defeat its own pruposes and promote a backlash. That would be in no one's interest."

Black View of Reform

In "My View" column on the same page Allister Sparks says the "minimal" black response to the abolishing of the pass laws "is a startling illustration of the Government's total loss of credibility in the black community." "There has been too much gradualism," Sparks says. "An avalanche of words for every millimeter's movement of the great glacier itself, until meaning has been swept away and reality has to be measured with a micrometer screw." There is probably nothing the government could do now to win the approval of the black majority. They want it to go, all of it, including white minority rule, so "their minds are tending to concentrate on the central issue to the exclusion of the minutiae of change which are the stuff of white politics." Quoting the constitutional development and planning minister as saying there can be no reparations for victims of the pass laws sicne the slaves were not compensated when slavery was abolished, Sparks says "at least the slaves were freed — which is one kind of reparation that could be made to those black politicians and their parties who were outlawed for what is now implicitly acknowledged to have been a legitimate protest against a vexatious system."

BEELD on Violence

Johannesburg BEELD in Afrikaans of 30 April says in an editorial on page 8 that this week Law and Order Minister Le Grange painted a gloomy picture of the escalation of violence in South Africa. "Is this what the future will increasingly hold for us? Hopefully not, and perhaps it can be avoided if everyone does his share. Unfortunately there are too many signs that people on the left and people on the right of the political spectrum have developed an immunity to violence." The editorial says it would be naive and shortsighted to think that there is no other way for us but to defend particular values and norms but by violence. But that is not the same as choosing violence as a first option before other possibilities have been exhausted. All those who have the country's interests at heart, the paper says, should avoid violence rather than help it along.

Editorial on House Debate

In a second editorial the paper says that an event taking place in the House of Representatives this week is in sharp contrast to the intolerance, obstinacy, and even unreasonableness which characterizes present political debate in the country. The calm reasoning and debate over national matters which occurred in this chamber during the state president's budget vote deserves more than passing reference. "Most of all, the debate was characterized by calm and a spirit of mutual trust and respect. From this it would indeed seem that much progress has been made along the road of consensus politics, as opposed to the yelling and letting off of steam in the politics of the past." This, the paper says, gives hope for the future.

Regional Solutions Considered

In his "Political BEELD" column on page 8, Piet Muller says President Botha has said that apartheid is outdated, and that several other government officials have said the same thing. No right thinking person should still question the government's seriousness over reform. The government, he says, underlined its intentions recently by accepting a single citizenship for all and the abolition of the pass laws, and announcing other far-reaching measures. And yet, says Muller, it seems that all these changes have made little impression on the international community or on blacks. All announcements are greeted by a "yes, but...," and this is especially so about the "yes, but what about the Group Areas Act?". The government, he says, is confronted with a dilemma; whatever it does is not accepted. "It is clear that expectations are increasing at a faster pace than government is able to reform. There is only one way in which the government can again get a firm hold of the reform initiative: it shoud announce as soon as possible what its plans are on how blacks are eventually going to be represented in central government." But, says Muller, so far no one has come up with a plan for black participation in central government. A plan is needed reconciling the political aspirations of different groups. A middle ground will have to be found. But what is a solution to one part of the country will not necessarily be accepted in another part. For example, he says, the Group Areas Act could be abolished in some parts of the country immediately with no problem, while in other parts the situation is so radical that abolition of this act might lead to serious political unrest. "This is why the negotiations between Natal and the government of KwaZulu are so important; here is an earnest attempt to resolve the problems of a particular region on a regional basis." Only when we have regional solutions, he says, will we be in a position to propose an acceptable solution for representation in the central government.

Debate on Munsieville

Johannesburg DIE VADERLAND in Afrikaans of 29 April reports on page 4 that the town council of Krugersdorp still wants the township of Munsieville moved and plans to ask the state president to visit the town himself and see for himself "what the true position is." This decision was taken at the council's monthly meeting during which the state president's ruling that Munsieville remain was discussed. The deputy chairman of the management committee, Arrie van Wyk, said he believed the president did not have all the facts of the situation when he made his ruling not to move the township. " 'Politically, it would be better if Munsieville remained where it is, but economically the upgrading of the township is not possible. The money would be much better spent if we built houses for blacks where there would be no friction', he said."

University of North Boycott

"University of the North students yesterday started a week-long boycott of lectures to mourn the death in police custody of United Democratic Front [UDF] leader Mr Peter Nchabaleng," Mathatha Tsedu reports on the front page of Johannesburg SOWETAN in English on 30 April. A student mass meeting also resolved that all students should attend Nchabaleng's funeral. "Meanwhile, as Sekhukhuneland prepares for the Ncabaleng funeral, reports from the area said a heavy build-up of security forces was evident."

Call To Ignore May Day

"Hundreds of pamphlets calling on workers to ignore calls for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of May Day tomorrow have been distributed in the townships by an organisation named the Sebokeng Residents Committee," the paper reports on page 2. The pamphlets, "which have been dismissed as the work of right-wingers," list the government's achievements in ending discrimination.

Bekkersdal 'Feud'

"A feud between pupils in Bekkersdal township near Randfontein disrupted schooling for more than a week, sources disclosed yesterday," Mandla Ndlazi reports on the same page. A community leader said the "feud was caused by political differences of pupils who are members of the Azanian Students Movement (AZASM) and those who belonged to the UDF-affiliate Mohlakeng Youth Congress (MOYCO)."

Four Said Killed at Funeral

The SOWETAN reports on page 3 that a Tembisa resident who as involved in organizing the funeral or Metal and Allied Workers Union member Mpumelelo Kortman has claimed that four people were shot dead during the funeral when police opened fire on a crowd of 20,000 mourners who were marching to the cemetary. However, a spokesman for the police Public Relations Directorate said " 'that claim is not true.' "

SOWETAN on Baragwanath Hospital

Commenting on the planned " 'drastic action' " by Baragwanath hospital officials against nurses who went on strike last year, the SOWETAN says in an editorial on page 4 that this comes at "the most inopportune moment." "We appeal to the hospital authorities to let sleeping dogs lie. Things are chaotic on the whole, and having problems at the hospital would be the last straw to break our backs."

Families 'Terrorized'

"Two Bophelong, Vanderbijlpark, families have been terrorised by unknown people who assaulted their children and pointed firearms at them while searching their homes," Joshua Raboroko reports on page 5. "The families claimed in statements to their lawyers that they were put under a 'virtual siege' as about 20 black and white men travelling in many cars ransacked their properties." One woman whose house was searched said the men wanted to know the whereabouts of her son, who is a political activist. She also said she recognized two of the black men as policemen.
